IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF GEORGIA
ATLANTA DIVISION
Civil Action No. 8311

WALLACE BUTTS, Plaintiff,

versus

CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY, Defendant.

COMPLAINT—Filed March 25, 1963

Now comes Wallace Butts, as plaintiff, and names the Curtis Publishing Company as defendant, and for complaint says:

1.

Jurisdiction of this Court is founded on diversity of citizenship and amount. Plaintiff is a resident and citizen of the State of Georgia, residing in the City of Athens, Clark County, Georgia. The defendant is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal place of business in the City of Philadelphia. Defendant maintains an office and place of business at 805 Peachtree Street, N. E., Atlanta, Georgia, at which place service of this complaint may be perfected. The matter in controversy exceeds, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum of $10,000.00.

Plaintiff claims damages from the defendant in the amount of Ten Million ($10,000,000.00) Dollars, as a result of a certain libelous publication by defendant as hereinafter alleged.

3.

Plaintiff has been engaged in the football coaching profession for approximately 35 years. Plaintiff began his coaching career in Madison, Georgia as head coach of Madison Agricultural and Mechanical School. After spending four years at Madison, plaintiff became football coach at Georgia Military College in Milledgeville, Georgia where, after remaining three years, he went to Louisville, Kentucky where he coached Louisville Male High for a period of three years. In 1938 plaintiff became assistant coach at the University of Georgia under Coach Joel Hunt and in the following year was elevated as head coach of the Georgia Bulldogs, which position he held until 1961 at which time he became Athletic Director of the University of Georgia.

4.

Plaintiff, during his career, has enjoyed a national reputation as a successful and respected member of the coaching profession and has been accorded many honors among which was his election in 1959 as president of the Football Coaches Association, a national organization of football coaches throughout America. Upon invitation he has coached the College All Stars, the Blue-Grey All Star Game and the North-South All Star Game. Plaintiff has during his career been widely sought as a speaker and lec- [fol. 21] turer at clinics, banquets and other such public gatherings throughout the United States. In addition, plaintiff has been approached and offered employment as head football coach by several colleges and professional football teams in the country due entirely to his reputation as a successful member and leader in his profession.

The defendant is engaged in the publishing of several magazines and periodicals, the best known of which is the Saturday Evening Post. The Saturday Evening Post has in years past been the chief and most valuable asset of the defendant due to its vast and impressive circulation and consequent advertising revenue. However, in the last several years the advertising revenues of the Saturday Evening Post have declined radically and drastically to the point that the magazine lost its status as a valuable income producing asset and showed staggering deficits. In an effort to rescue its foundering publication, the defendant elected new directors who in turn elected a new president who in turn made sweeping changes in the editorial staff and management of the Saturday Evening Post.

In an apparent last ditch effort to bolster its sagging circulation, which in turn would increase advertising revenues, the Saturday Evening Post has resorted recently to the publishing and printing of lurid, defamatory and exposé type matter concerning nationally known personalities. All of this is in keeping with its announced new editorial policy as delivered recently through its Vice [fol. 22] President and Director of Editorial Development, Clay Blair, Jr., of " . . . sophisticated muckraking. . . . We are going to provoke people, make them mad."

7.

Specifically, the defendant did wilfully, maliciously and falsely publish a libelous article concerning the plaintiff in its most recent issue bearing date March 23, 1963 entitled, "The Story of a College Football Fix" with sub-title "How Wally Butts and Bear Bryant Rigged a Game Last Fall."

8.

Plaintiff was informed prior to the actual circulation of said article on or about March 18, 1963, that the defendant had under consideration such an article and plaintiff did, through his attorney, under date of March 11, 1963, send a telegram to the defendant, followed by a letter of the same date, advising the defendant that the proposed content of said article was false and that in the interest of fair and accurate reporting, said article be not published. A copy of said telegram and letter, marked respectively Exhibits "A" and "B" are incorporated herein by reference.

In addition, and after said article was published and circulated, plaintiff, on March 18, 1963, pursuant to Georgia Code Section 105-720, requested that the defendant retract and correct the defamatory statements concerning the plaintiff in its said article, which to date defendant has refused to so do or even to reply to said request. A copy [fol. 23] of said telegram marked Exhibit "C" is incorporated herein by reference.

10.

Plaintiff alleges that the publication of said libelous article has caused plaintiff extreme mortification and embarrassment in that same is a direct insult and attack on his honor, character, and integrity as a football coach. As stated in said article, "but careers will be ruined, that is true," plaintiff's career as a member of the football coaching profession has been ruined and destroyed by this scurrilous and contemptible defamation.

11.

The statements and insinuations contained in said article have damaged plaintiff as aforesaid in the following particulars:

(a) Plaintiff is charged in large block letters in the very title and sub-title of the article with being a "rigger and fixer."

(b) In an italicized editorial, plaintiff is charged with being a participant in the greatest and most shocking sports scandal since that of the Chicago White Sox in the 1919 World Series. In the same editorial, plaintiff is relegated to a status worse than that of "disreputable gamblers", a corrupt person who, employed to "educate and to guide young men" betrays or sells out his pupils.

(c) Plaintiff is charged with rigging and fixing the Alabama-Georgia football game with Coach Bryan as a gambling device in order to restore his financial resources.

[fol. 24]

(d) Plaintiff is charged with such a degree of corruptness and foulness that his betrayed players, as a result of plaintiff's alleged deception, fixing and rigging, were forced into the game like "rats in a maze", and "took a frightful physical beating."

(e) Defendant, in a final act of malice, contempt and editorial irresponsibility, closes its article with its definition of plaintiff as a fixer as being one who never leaves open a "chance" by stating "when a fixer works against you, that is the way he likes it."

Plaintiff brings this action and seeks a recovery of Five Million ($5,000,000.00) Dollars in general damages to compensate him for the injury to his peace, happiness and feelings, and in addition thereto sues for Five Million ($5,000,000.00) Dollars in the nature of punitive damages to deter the defendant from repeating this trespass on plaintiff's honor, reputation and integrity.

Plaintiff Demands a Jury Trial.

Wherefore, plaintiff prays that process issue in terms of law, that the defendant be required to come into this Honorable Court and make its answer and that the plaintiff have judgment against the defendant for actual and [fol. 25] punitive damages in the sum of Ten Million ($10,000,000.00) Dollars and costs.

Motion of Plaintiff to Exclude All Evidence Obtained as a Result of the Alleged Intercepted Telephone Conversation—Filed May 3, 1963

This case involves statements made by defendant in an article published under date of March 23, 1963, entitled "The Story of a College Fix," plaintiff asserting said statements to be libelous and defendant asserting them to be true. For the purpose of this motion only, a copy of said article is hereto attached, marked Exhibit "A".

A reading of the article set up as Exhibit "A" states that it is based on an alleged telephone conversation between plaintiff and Paul (Bear) Bryant, intercepted by one George Burnett. If any of said conversation took place as alleged, neither the interception by Burnett nor the use of the information obtained by Burnett or by defendant or anyone was authorized by either party to said conversation, and under the provisions of 47 U.S.C. § 605, no person having received the contents, substance, purport, effect or [fol. 29] meaning thereof, knowing how such information was obtained may divulge or publish the existence, contents, substance, purport, effect or meaning of the same or any part thereof, or use the same or any information therein contained for his own benefit or for the benefit of another not entitled thereto.

If any such conversation took place as alleged by defendant, the use thereof in any manner is prohibited by such statute and, accordingly, plaintiff moves the Court for a ruling that no part of said alleged telephone conversation or any information gained as the result thereof may be used in evidence against plaintiff and that defendant may not on discovery make inquiries concerning the existence of or the contents of said alleged telephone conversation or any facts resulting from the knowledge thereof by defendant.

Plaintiff shows that a ruling at this time will substantially shorten the nature and extent of discovery and the scope of the trial.

[fol. 30]

IN UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

ORDER DENYING PLAINTIFF'S MOTION—Filed May 20, 1963

On May 3, 1963, the plaintiff in the above-styled case filed a motion to exclude all evidence obtained as a result of the alleged intercepted telephone conversation which may be offered in evidence against the plaintiff upon the trial of this case. The plaintiff contends that if any of the said conversation took place as alleged, neither the interception by Burnett nor the use of the information obtained by Burnett or by the defendant or by anyone was authorized by either party to the said conversation, and under the provisions of 47 U.S.C., Section 605, no person having received the contents, substance, purport, effect, or meaning thereof, knowing how such information was obtained, may divulge or publish the existence, contents, substance, purport, effect, or meaning of the same, or any part thereof, or use the same or any information therein contained for his own benefit or for the benefit of another not entitled thereto. The plaintiff believes that, if any such conversation took place as alleged by the defendant, the use of this conversation in any manner is prohibited by the statute.

The defendant has filed its brief in opposition to the plaintiff's motion to exclude evidence relating to this alleged telephone conversation, and contends therein that a ruling at this time would be premature, since neither the Court nor the parties can accurately foresee the precise circumstances in which evidence relating to this conversation might arise, nor the numerous potential sources from which such evidence might be obtained.

[fol. 31] The Court wishes to make it clear that its opinions contained in this order constitute a preliminary ruling for the purposes of facilitating discovery and to serve as an indication of the present thinking of the Court. This is in no way a final ruling on the admissibility of evidence relating to evidence relating to the subject telephone conversation, as that determination will be made upon the trial of this case in August.

The principal thrust of the plaintiff's motion is based upon 47 U.S.C., Section 605, which has been set forth above. A violation of this provision is made criminal by 47 U.S.C., Section 501. It seems to this Court that Congress, through the enactment of this statute, sought to prohibit mechanical tampering with telephone communications by deliberate acts of wire tapping. As Judge Holtzoff said, in United States v. Sullivan, 116 F. Supp. 480, 481:

> "It is obvious from the phraseology of the statute that it was aimed at actions of two types: First, it sought to prohibit a telephone switchboard operator from divulging any conversation that may be overheard, or telegram or radio operator from disclosing the contents of a telegram or radiogram; and Second, it sought to preclude any unauthorized person from surreptitiously attaching some mechanical apparatus to a telephone wire and thereby listening to or otherwise intercepting communications passing over the wire without the knowledge of the parties to the conversation or message as the case may be." (Emphasis supplied)

In United States v. Guller, 101 F. Supp. 176, 178, in holding telephone conversations of the defendant which were [fol. 32] overheard by the eavesdropping of federal agents in an adjoining hotel room admissible over an objection based on Section 605, the District Court emphasized the absence of any physical interference with the communications facilities:

"The interception forbidden by Section 605 of the Communications Act of 1934, 47 U.S.C.A., Section 605, must be by some mechanical interpositions in the transmitting apparatus itself, that is, the interjection of an independent receiving device between the lips of the sender and the ear of the receiver."

In Irvine v. People of the State of California, 347 U.S. 128, 74 S. Ct. 381, 98 L. Ed. 561, the Supreme Court refused to extend the prohibition of Section 605 to electronic interceptions which were not achieved by wiretapping.

In this case, a concealed microphone was installed in the hall of a house, and a hole was bored in the roof of the house, from which wires were strung to transmit to a neighboring garage whatever sounds the microphone might pick up. Officers were posted in the garage to listen. Later, the microphone was placed in a closet where the device remained until its purpose of enabling the officers to overhear incriminating statements was accomplished. Justice Jackson remarked as follows:

"We should note that this is not a conventional instance of 'wire tapping'. Here the apparatus of the officers was not in any way connected with the telephone facilities, there was no interference with the communications system, there was no interception of any message. All that was heard through the microphone [fol. 33] was what an eavesdropper, hidden in the hall, the bedroom, or the closet, might have heard. We do not suppose it is illegal to testify to what another person is heard to say merely because he is saying it into a telephone. We cannot sustain the contention that the conduct or reception of the evidence violated the Federal Communications Act. 48 Stat. 1103, 47 U.S.C., Sec. 605. Cf. Nardone v. United States, 308 U.S. 338; Goldman v. United States, 316 U. S. 129; Schwartz v. Texas, 344 U. S. 199." (Emphasis supplied)

In De Lore v. Smith, 67 Ore. 304, 132 Pac. 521, Judge McNary, of the Supreme Court of Oregon, stated:

"During the progress of the trial, defendant, for the purpose of showing knowledge upon the part of plaintiff of the return of the cattle to Gilcrest, gave testimony to the effect that he overheard a conversation between plaintiff and her daughter wherein the former was told the cows had been re-delivered to Gilcrest. Plaintiff's counsel objected to the testimony for the reason that the witness was an eavesdropper and thereby committed 'an act of gross impropriety and a moral wrong, and a witness testifying to such a conversation could not show any of the elements or conditions which must first be shown in order to admit evidence of such a conversation'. Defendant overheard the conversation, to which objection was made, at a point on the telephone intermediate between the home of plaintiff and her daughter, who is the wife of Gilcrest. In qualifying himself as a witness, defendant stated that by chance he took down the receiver of the telephone [fol. 34] when the parties were engaged in conversation and that he heard the declaration and knew the voices of the parties conversing. Since a time practically concurrent with the use of the telephone as a medium of communication, the Courts have held that a conversation had over the telephone was admissible when the witness could testify he recognized the voice of the party speaking. While the practice of eavesdropping or 'cutting in' on a telephone is most despicable, yet we cannot say as a rule of evidentiary law that the practice of this impropriety disqualifies a person who has qualified himself by testifying he recognized the voice of the speaker. Under the circumstances, the question whether the conversation did take place, its nature, and whether defendant correctly identified the voices engaged in the conversation was a fact for the jury." (Emphasis supplied)

In view of these authorities, it is the preliminary ruling of this Court that evidence relating to the Butts-Bryant telephone conversation is admissible in this civil action. Accordingly, the plaintiff's motion is denied.

The plaintiff has filed with this Court a motion for reconsideration of the Court's order of May 9, 1963, which refused to compel the defendant to answer Interrogatory No. 28 relating to the number of libel suits now pending against the defendant. Inasmuch as the Court has made a thorough study of this point, and has determined that it would be unwise and impractical to bring into this case evidence pertaining to other suits having nothing to do with the issues involved in the case at bar, the plaintiff's motion for reconsideration of the order dated May 9, 1963, is hereby denied.

Order Concerning Motion to Compel Answers to Certain Questions—Filed June 5, 1963

The defendant having filed with this Court a motion to compel answers to certain questions heretofore propounded to the plaintiff by deposition, and the Court having given consideration to the questions propounded by the attorneys for the defendant, and the plaintiff having refused to answer said questions upon advice of counsel, and it appearing to the Court that the answers to these questions propounded might be relevant and material to the issues involved, it is the order of the Court that the plaintiff be required to give answer to the questions propounded by the attorneys for the defendant at a time and place to be mutually agreed upon by the parties.

Upon motion seasonably made by the attorneys for the plaintiff, let the motion to compel and the answers thereto be placed in a sealed envelope and filed in the Clerk's Office of this Court, and the contents of the motion and the answers thereto not be revealed by the Clerk of the Court [fol. 36] or by the defendant except by permission of the Court, such as at the trial under circumstances as this Court specifies, all in accordance with the authority granted under Rule 30(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

AMENDMENT TO DEFENDANT'S ANSWER—Filed July 29, 1963

Now Comes the defendant in the foregoing case and files this, its Amendment to the Answer heretofore filed, and for cause thereof shows to the Court:

1.

At the time the original Answer was filed, defendant made no answer to a part of paragraph 5 of the Complaint, and no answer to paragraph 6 of the Complaint, because simultaneously with the filing of said Answer the defendant filed a Motion to Strike part of paragraph 5 and all of paragraph 6 of the Complaint, which Motion to Strike has since been overruled.

[fol. 37] 2.

Defendant therefore answers that part of paragraph 5 of the Complaint which has not been heretofore answered, by alleging as follows:

5. Defendant admits that it is engaged in the publishing of several magazines and periodicals, the best known of which is The Saturday Evening Post; that The Saturday Evening Post has been and continues to be a valuable asset of the defendant; that beginning in 1960 and continuing until the middle of 1962 the advertising revenues of The Saturday Evening Post, as well as other magazines, declined; that in April 1962, the Board of Directors of defendant was increased from eleven to thirteen in number and two new directors were elected to fill the new directorships; that a new President of defendant was elected by the Board of Directors in July, 1962; and that substantial changes in the editorial staff and management of defendant's magazines, including The Saturday Evening Post, have been made. Defendant denies each and every other averment contained in paragraph 5 of the Complaint.

Answering paragraph 6 of the Complaint which has not been heretofore answered, defendant alleges as follows:

6. Defendant admits that beginning in the latter part of 1962, The Saturday Evening Post adopted an editorial policy of "sophisticated muckraking" in the [fol. 38] sense of printing the truth about the grave dangers facing the country, including the threat from outside the country and the deterioration of moral values within the country. Defendant denies each and every other averment contained in paragraph 6 of the Complaint.

Wherefore, having answered, defendant prays that this, its Amendment, be allowed and made a part of the record in said case.

ORDER REGARDING ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE—
Filed August 1, 1963

The defendant in this case contends that it intends to offer evidence at the trial as to specific acts of misconduct on the part of the plaintiff which fall into two categories. The first category includes acts of dishonesty on the part of the plaintiff in his dealings with the University of Georgia and also certain violations by him of standards of ethics to which the plaintiff is subject by reason of his employment with the University of Georgia, the University being a member of the Southeastern Conference and the National Collegiate Athletic Association. The second category concerning the activities of the plaintiff is that tending to show an illicit and adulterous relationship with a particular woman.

The defendant contends that under Rule 43(a) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure this evidence is admissible in Federal Courts. Rule 43(a) provides that in determining admissibility of evidence where there is a conflict between the State and the Federal rule, the plaintiff is entitled to the benefit of the more favorable rule. Hambrice v. Woolworth, 290 F. 2d 557.

However, on the question with which this Court is concerned and without passing upon the question as to whether the matter is substantive or procedural, it appears that there is no conflict between the Georgia rule and the Federal rule as to the admissibility of the specific acts of misconduct on the part of the plaintiff.

[fol. 40] Under the decision of Cox v. Strickland, 101 Ga. 482, it is held that the filing of a plea of justification in defense to an action of libel puts the plaintiff's character in issue, and the defendant has the right to show that the plaintiff's general character is bad, but cannot, in so doing, go into proof of specific acts or resort to general rumors by hearsay.

Neither under the majority of Federal decisions which this Court has studied would such tests be admissible. See Tribune Association v. Follwell, 107 F. 646; Association v. Schenck, 98 F. 925; Morning Journal Association v. Duke, 128 F. 657.

As was said in the Schenck case, supra, "It is not a defense to a libel or slander that the plaintiff has been guilty of offenses other than those imputed to him, or of offenses of a similar character; and such facts are not competent in mitigation of damages. The only tendency of such proof is to show, not that the plaintiff's reputation is bad, but that it ought to be bad."

As further authority sustaining the admissibility of such evidence, see Wigmore on Evidence, Third Edition, Section 209, where it is stated that the reputed character of the plaintiff in an action of defamation is admissible in mitigation of damages so long as proof of character is made by reputation only, but particular acts of misconduct are irrelevant and such evidence is universally regarded as improper.

However, the defendant, should the plaintiff place his good character in issue, would have the right on cross-examination to go into special facts to ascertain the nature and extent of the knowledge of the witness. Cox v. Strick-[fol. 41] land, 101 Ga. 482; Smith v. State, 91 Ga. App. 360. But in so doing, it is not permissible to prove specific acts, except on cross-examination for the purpose of testing the knowledge of the defendant's witnesses, and except for the purpose of impeaching knowingly false statements made by the defendant himself to the jury or by his witnesses on cross-examination. Sikes v. State, 76 Ga. App. 993; Mimbs v. State, 189 Ga. 189, 192; Green on Evidence, Sec. 138.

Counsel will be governed in the trial of this case by this expression of opinion.

It Is So Ordered.

This the 31st day of July, 1963.

IN UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

PRE-TRIAL ORDER—Filed August 5, 1963

This Pre-Trial Order supersedes the pleadings and shall govern the trial of the case, but this Order, in the interest of justice, will be amended upon motion timely made.

1. In this action jurisdiction of the court is invoked upon [fol. 42] the ground of diversity of citizenship. The jurisdiction of the court is not disputed.

(a) There are no motions now pending in the case.

(b) No further discovery is desired by the parties in advance of trial, except that the defendant desires to take the deposition of Fred Nichols before or during the trial.

2. The names of the parties in the above caption are correct and complete and there is no question of misjoinder or nonjoinder.

3. The jury shall be qualified as to relationship to the parties to the case and to the following as counsel for plaintiff, to-wit:

Henry B. Troutman
Robert S. Sams
William H. Schroder
Allen E. Lockerman
T. M. Smith
Henry B. Troutman, Jr.
T. M. Smith, Jr.
Tench C. Coxe
Harold C. McKenzie, Jr.
Robert L. Pennington

(a) The procedure to be followed concerning questions to be propounded to the jury has been discussed and agreed upon at a previous pre-trial hearing.

4. A summary by plaintiff's counsel of plaintiff's cause of action is as follows:

[fol. 43] Wallace Butts, head coach of the University of Georgia football team from 1939 to 1961 when he became Athletic Director, is suing Curtis Publishing Company claiming that his reputation as a football coach has been damaged by a false and libelous article published in the March 23rd issue of the Saturday Evening Post charging him with having fixed and rigged the 1962 football game between the University of Georgia and the University of Alabama, as a gambling device, by furnishing Georgia's plays, defensive patterns and all the significant secrets possessed by Georgia's football team to Paul Bryant, head football coach of the University of Alabama prior to the game. The plaintiff alleges that he has been damaged by said libelous article in the respects set forth in his complaint to the extent of $5,000,000.00 general damages and $5,000,000.00 punitive damages.

5. A summary of defendant's contentions, including all special defenses, is as follows:

Defendant admits the publication of the article but contends that the statements therein complained of which are of and concerning the plaintiff are true. Defendant denies the conclusions of the plaintiff as to what charges are made by the article. Defendant contends that the article is not libelous per se and denies that the article libeled the plaintiff, and denies that the plaintiff was in the coaching profession at the time of the publication complained of. Defendant denies that plaintiff is entitled to recover any damages by reason of the publication of the article of which plaintiff complains.

6. No further amendments to the pleading are contemplated by the parties.

[fol. 44] 7. The documents likely to be offered in evidence by the parties or of which they have knowledge have been identified at the pre-trial hearing held on July 29, 1963 or on depositions and assigned tentative numbers. It was agreed that some of the documents will be admitted in evidence without objections. The authenticity of most of the documents was agreed upon. It is not intended for this Order to limit either party in the introduction of other documents.

8. Counsel for the parties have furnished each other a list of the probable witnesses to be used at the trial.

9. Various memoranda of authorities by counsel for each party on unusual questions of law involved in the case have heretofore been supplied to the Court.

10. The Court has ruled over objection by counsel for plaintiff that the second defense, as stated in the Answer of the defendant, is a plea of justification. Therefore, the defendant at the trial of this case will have the burden of proving the truth of the statements in the article which are of and concerning the plaintiff and the defendant will introduce its evidence first and will have the opening and concluding arguments.

11. It is estimated that the trial of the case will require approximately two weeks.

This the 5th day of August, 1963.

IN UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL—
Filed August 29, 1963

Now Comes the defendant in the foregoing case and moves the Court to set aside the verdict of the jury returned herein on August 20, 1963, and the judgment entered thereon on the same date, and to grant a new trial on the following grounds, to-wit:

1.

Because of the gross excessiveness of the verdict, awarding $3,000,000 in punitive damages is so exorbitant and flagrantly outrageous that it demonstrates beyond doubt that it is the product of bias and prejudice on the part of the jury and is in such an amount as to shock the conscience of the Court.

2.

That portion of the jury's verdict awarding the plaintiff $3,000,000 punitive damages, violates and abridges and cannot be sustained without violating and abridging the right of freedom of speech and of the press guaranteed by [fol. 47] the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution because:

(a) The amount of such damages rested in the sole discretion of the jury without regard to any standard or limitation which would safeguard or take cognizance of those Constitutional guarantees;

(b) The stated purpose of such damages under the charge was to deter the defendant from repeating the trespass, and to worn others not to commit a like offense, with the result that the award of punitive damages by the jury especially in the amount of $3,000,000, must constitute an attempt by the jury to effect a prior restraint upon future publication by this defendant or by other publishers or both;

(c) Georgia Code Sec. 105-2002, as construed by the Georgia courts, which defines the purpose of punitive damages in a libel action upon Georgia law and which in part served as the basis for the charge on that subject in this action, on its face permits the jury to attempt suppression of future publication by this defendant by an award of punitive damages;

(e) The amount of punitive damages, in the circumstances of this case, was so excessive as to violate and abridge through excessiveness alone, the guarantees of free speech and press.

3.

That portion of the jury's verdict awarding the plaintiff $3,000,000 punitive damages violates and abridges and cannot be sustained without violating and abridging defendant's rights to substantive and procedural due process of law under the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution, because:

(a) The amount of such damages rested in the sole discretion of the jury without regard to any standard or limitation;

(b) The amount of such damages in the circumstances of this case was so excessive as to constitute a deprivation of property without due process of law.

Sec. 105-2002 of the Georgia Code as construed by the courts of Georgia violates and abridges defendant's rights under the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution because the amount of damages which could be imposed under that Section rests in the sole discretion of the jury without regard to any standard or limitation, which damages are imposed ex post facto.

5.

Because evidence indicates that a material witness for the plaintiff testified falsely on a material point, as more fully set forth in affidavits filed with The Honorable Lewis R. Morgan contemporaneously herewith, which affidavits are incorporated herein by reference.

Because the Court erred in refusing to permit counsel for the defendant to examine witness J. D. Bolton and to introduce documentary evidence regarding numerous telephone calls made by the plaintiff between October, 1961 and February 1, 1963, which telephone calls were charged to the University of Georgia in the amount of $2,818.10. Said telephone calls were set forth in a 42-page document identified as defendant's Exhibit 17. Defendant contends that said telephone calls were made to individuals of questionable character, including a woman not his wife, to whom some 300 of said calls were made. That all of said telephone calls were charged to the University of Georgia, though none were in connection with the business of the University. The defendant proposed to show by the witness J. D. Bolton that defendant's Exhibit 17 was prepared by the plaintiff with the help of his secretary and with the help of the witness J. D. Bolton, and that after the list was completed, it was approved by the plaintiff as correct and the plaintiff so stated to J. D. Bolton. Defendant further proposed to show by the witness J. D. Bolton that it was not until after the institution of his litigation that the University officials learned of these telephone charges having been charged to the University of Georgia and that upon subsequent demand of the plaintiff for the payment thereof, the plaintiff agreed that the list was correct and that he would reimburse the University. That thereafter on April 8, 1963, the plaintiff by letter to J. D. Bolton, Comptroller, agreed to make this payment, which letter was identified as defendant's Exhibit 18, and which letter was in the following language:

> "I accept the final figure of $2,818.10 as the correct amount I owe the Athletic Department of the Uni> [fol. 50] versity of Georgia for personal telephone calls charged to that account."

That the Court likewise excluded the foregoing letter from the evidence in said case after the same had been tendered by counsel for the defendant.

Defendant alleges and contends that the exclusion of such evidence and the refusal to permit defendant's counsel to examine J. D. Bolton with respect thereto was harmful and prejudicial to the defendant and constitutes grounds for a new trial.

Because the Court erred in refusing to permit counsel for the defendant to introduce the depositions of George P. Anderson and William Baxter to prove the following facts:

(a) That they were employees of the Phoenix Hotel in Lexington, Kentucky in October, 1960.

(b) That plaintiff charged to the University of Georgia $155.70 of alcoholic and other beverages purchased at said Phoenix Hotel in Lexington, Kentucky from October 21 through October 23, 1960.

(c) That on October 21, 1960, a registration at the Phoenix Hotel in Lexington, Kentucky in the name of "Lindsey, E. C. and wife" was made and was noted to be charged to the University of Georgia.

[fol. 51] In connection with these depositions, defendant's counsel offered to prove that none of the items referred to in (b) above were in connection with the business of the University of Georgia and that the registration referred to in (c) above was, in fact, arranged by the plaintiff for the woman referred to in Paragraph 6 hereof and the bill for her room and other hotel charges was, in fact, charged to the University of Georgia though these were not in connection with any business of the University.

That the refusal of the Court to permit the defendant to introduce said evidence was harmful and prejudicial and constitutes grounds for a new trial.

Because the Court erred in refusing to permit counsel for the defendant to introduce the deposition of the woman referred to in paragraph 6 hereof, and because the Court refused to permit counsel for the defendant to introduce into evidence the deposition of James C. Tracy, an employee of Delta Air Lines, Inc., which depositions were to prove the following facts:

(a) That on January 26, 1962, the woman referred to in paragraph 6 hereof traveled from Miami, Florida, to Orlando, Florida, in the company of the plaintiff, her air line ticket having been purchased by the plaintiff through the use of Air Travel Credit Card No. DLQ 2834 WDL 2 and charged to the University of Georgia Athletic Association.

(b) That on May 9, 1962, a passenger described as "E. C. Smith" traveled via Delta Air Lines from At-[fol. 52] lanta, Georgia, to Miami, Florida, on an air line ticket purchased by plaintiff and charged on Air Travel Credit Card DLQ 2834 WDL 2 to the University of Georgia Athletic Association.

(c) That on July 10, 1962, said woman, in the company of plaintiff, traveled from Atlanta, Georgia, to Miami, Florida, via Delta Air Lines tickets which were purchased by plaintiff through the use of Air Travel Credit Card DLQ 2834 WDL 2 and charged to the University of Georgia Athletic Association.

(d) That on September 19, 1962, a passenger designated as "E. Smith" traveled from Atlanta, Georgia, to Birmingham, Alabama, via Delta Air Lines, Inc., under a ticket purchased by plaintiff and charged on Air Travel Credit Card DLQ 2834 WDL 2 and charged to the University of Georgia Athletic Association.

(e) That on November 7, 1962, a passenger designated as "E. Smith" traveled from Atlanta, Georgia, to Jacksonville, Florida, via Delta Air Lines, Inc., under a ticket purchased by plaintiff and charged on Air Travel Credit Card DLQ 2834 WDL 2 and charged to the University of Georgia Athletic Association.

(f) That on December 27, 1962, plaintiff and a passenger designated as "E. Smith" traveled from Birmingham, Alabama, to Atlanta, Georgia, via Eastern Air Lines, Inc., under tickets purchased by plaintiff and charged to Air Travel Credit Card DLQ 2834 WDL [fol. 53] 2 and charged to the University of Georgia Athletic Association.

(g) That on all of the transportation tickets referred to in subparagraphs (a) through (f) herein the plaintiff signed for the same and authorized them to be charged to the University of Georgia Athletic Association.

(h) That said "E. C. Smith" and "E. Smith", as referred to in subparagraphs (b), (d), (e) and (f) hereof, was in fact the same woman referred to in paragraph 6 of this Motion, and that none of said trips had any connection with business of the University of Georgia Athletic Association.

Defendant alleges and contends that the exclusion of such evidence was harmful and prejudicial to it and constitutes grounds for a new trial.

Because the Court erred in refusing to permit counsel for the defendant to introduce the deposition of the woman referred to in paragraph 6 hereof, which deposition was taken by defendant's counsel on July 17, 1963, and refusing counsel for the defendant permission to call said woman as a witness for the purpose of questioning her as to the following:

(a) That said woman traveled with the plaintiff on numerous occasions, some of which were to football games participated in by the University of Georgia team, that plaintiff visited her in her hotel room, that [fol. 54] on at least two occasions plaintiff was seen drunk in her presence, that plaintiff paid her expenses on said trips and exhibited her to members of the University of Georgia football team, including the trip to Los Angeles, California, for the game between the University of Georgia and the University of Southern California, in 1960; to Lexington, Kentucky, for the game between the University of Georgia and the University of Kentucky, played on October 22, 1960; and the game between the University of Georgia and the University of Alabama in 1962, at which game plaintiff visited in her room at the Guest House Motel in Birmingham, Alabama; that she attended the football game in Jacksonville, Florida, between the University of Georgia and the University of Florida in November, 1962, her expenses having been paid by the plaintiff.

(b) That the plaintiff on a number of occasions during the time he was Athletic Director of the University of Georgia visited the Domino Lounge and the Copa-Cabana night clubs in Atlanta, Georgia, in the company of said woman, at which places liquor was served and floor shows, consisting of so-called strip-teast artists, performed.

(c) That said woman visited plaintiff on numerous occasions in hotel and motel rooms in and around the City of Atlanta, Georgia, including the Atlanta Biltmore, Air Host Inn, Dinkler Plaza, Henry Grady and Piedmont Hotels.

(d) That plaintiff purchased and gave to said woman one 1961 Pontiac convertible, the license tag for which was registered in the name of said woman but the [fol. 55] conditional sales contract recorded in the public records in the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court of Clarke County, Georgia, disclosed the name of the plaintiff as the purchaser thereof.

(e) That on one occasion said woman accompanied plaintiff on a trip to Nassau in The Bahama Islands, on which trip no member of plaintiff's family was present.

Defendant alleges and contends that the exclusion of such evidence was harmful and prejudicial to it and constitutes grounds for a new trial.

Because the Court erred in refusing to permit counsel for the defendant to question witness J. D. Bolton in regard to the embarrassment of some of the University of Georgia officials arising from the recording of a retention title contract for a 1961 Pontiac purchased by the plaintiff and in the name of the plaintiff from Boomershine Motors, Inc., of Atlanta, when said Pontiac was actually purchased for, and the license tag registered in the name of, the woman referred to in paragraph 6 hereof for the year 1962. Defendant's counsel offered to prove by the said J. D. Bolton that he confronted the plaintiff with the fact of this embarrassment and the plaintiff told said Bolton that he had helped finance said automobile for said woman's brother, when, in fact, it was for her.

Defendant alleges and contends that the exclusion of such evidence as hereinbefore referred to was harmful and prejudicial to it and constitutes grounds for a new trial.

11.

Because the Court erred in refusing to permit counsel for the defendant to question witness J. D. Bolton in regard to the embarrassment of some of the officials of the University of Georgia arising from the fact that the plaintiff visited many times with the woman referred to in paragraph 6 hereof in her apartment in Atlanta, Georgia, while he was Coach and Athletic Director of the University of Georgia, making this known to others and causing common gossip to be spread around the community.

Defendant alleges and contends that the exclusion of such evidence as hereinbefore referred to was harmful and prejudicial to it and constitutes grounds for a new trial.

Because the Court erred in refusing to permit counsel for the defendant to examine plaintiff as to the following:

(a) All of the facts and incidents set forth in the paragraphs numbered 6 through 11 of this Motion.

(b) As to the facts that plaintiff testified upon deposition that he did not know any person that goes by the name of "E. C. Lindsey".

(c) That, when confronted by J. D. Bolton, Comptroller of the University of Georgia, with a certain hotel bill described in paragraph 7(c) hereof, the plaintiff directed J. D. Bolton to send that bill to "E. C. Lindsey" at the address known as 50 Biscayne Drive, [fol. 57] N. E., Atlanta, Georgia, Apartment #5, which was, in truth and in fact, the residence address of the woman referred to in paragraph 6 hereof.

(d) His knowledge as to his general reputation in the community and from that knowledge whether or not that reputation was good or bad.

Defendant alleges and contends that the exclusion of such evidence was harmful and prejudicial to it and constitutes grounds for a new trial.

Defendant contends that the evidence referred to in paragraph 6 through 12 of this Motion was relevant, material and admissible for the following reasons, to-wit:

(a) To refute the testimony of the plaintiff that he had never done "anything that would injure the University of Georgia" and to affect the credibility of the plaintiff as a witness.

(b) To refute the allegations in plaintiff's Complaint which pray for punitive damages "to deter the defendant from repeating this trespass on plaintiff's honor, reputation and integrity," it being the contention of the defendant that such evidence tended to show a lack of honor, reputation and integrity on the part of the plaintiff.

(c) To mitigate damages, it being the contention of the defendant that a person guilty of such conduct [fol. 58] would not be a man of such delicate sensitivity who could suffer an injury to his peace, happiness and feelings by the alleged libelous article published by the defendant.

(d) To prove that the plaintiff was a corrupt man as such term was defined by the Court in its charge to mean "depraved, debased or perverted," plaintiff having alleged in his complaint and the plaintiff's counsel having argued to the jury that defendant accused him in the alleged libelous article of being a corrupt person and said portion of the Complaint of defendant having been read to the jury by the Court in its charge.

(e) When the plaintiff in a libel action voluntarily takes the stand as a witness in his own behalf, he may be examined as to any specific acts of misconduct.

Because the Court erred during the trial of the case by declining to permit counsel for defendant to cross-examine the plaintiff on the subject of his refusal on May 3, 1963 (when his deposition was being taken) to answer the following questions:

(a) "Will you tell the reporter what happened, the events that happened, leading up to that termination and how it was handled?" (meaning the termination of plaintiff's relationship as Athletic Director at the University of Georgia in 1963).

(b) "Do you remember whether or not from that [fol. 59] office on September 13, 1962, you put in a telephone call to Coach 'Bear' Bryant?" (meaning the office of Communications International, Inc. in Atlanta, Georgia).

(c) "Coach Butts I show you what has been identified as defendant's Exhibit 3 which consists of seven pages, and ask you if at this conference the original, of which this purports to be a photostat was exhibited to you?" (the conference referred to was that held in Attorney Cook Barwick's office on February 22, 1963, at which time certain officials of the University of Georgia were present, among them Dr. O. C. Aderhold, President, Mr. J. D. Bolton, Comptroller, William C. Hartment, Dr. Harmon Caldwell, Chancellor, and others. The Exhibit 3 referred to was the notes made by George Burnett concerning the alleged telephone conversation between the plaintiff and Coach Paul Bryant).

(d) "Did you, or not, make the statement at that time in the presence of these gentlemen who attended that conference that in substance, these notes shown on this Exhibit 3 were correct?"

(e) "Were you at that time apprised of the substance of George Burnett's story as he had told it to one of the University officials about this alleged telephone conversation?"

(f) "Did you, or not, state to those present at that conference that Burnett's story was substantially correct except that he had misunderstood or misinterpreted the effect of it?"

[fol. 60] (g) "Did you at that time at that conference admit to those present that you had a telephone conversation with Coach 'Bear' Bryan on September 13, 1962, which lasted 16 minutes and 3 seconds?"

(h) "Did you state to those present that George Burnett probably did hear the conversation that went on between you—the alleged conversation between you and Coach 'Bear' Bryant?"

(i) "Were you, or not, handed the original notes prepared by George Burnett on September 13, 1962, concerning the alleged telephone conversation with Coach 'Bear' Bryant?"

(j) "Do you recall in the alleged telephone conversation Coach 'Bear' Bryant stating to you that he would call you on the following Sunday, and, if so, did he actually call you on the following Sunday?"

(k) "At the time of your resignation in 1960, had you heard of any complaints from any of the alumni concerning your personal conduct?"

On May 3, 1963, the deposition of the plaintiff, having been called as an opposite party for cross-examination, was taken by the defendant for purpose of discovery and for use as evidence at the trial.

Counsel for the defendant stated to the plaintiff (while he was on the witness stand and under cross-examination) that he wanted to read the foregoing questions that were propounded to the plaintiff at the time of such deposition [fol. 61] and then ask the plaintiff whether he at that time refused to answer all of said questions.

Defendant contends that it was entitled as a matter of right to demonstrate to the jury the plaintiff's reluctance to relate the facts no matter what his reason might be for such refusal, even though such refusal might have been based on the advice of his counsel. In any event, the defendant contends that it was entitled to show the demeanor of the witness and to show any reluctance on his part to testify, his manner of testifying, the nature of facts under inquiry, and the probability or improbability of his testimony, all of which bears materially on the credibility of the witness, particularly in a case in which the witness is the plaintiff seeking to recover damages in the sum of $10,000,000.

Defendant, therefore, contends that such action on the part of the Court in excluding such evidence was prejudicial error for which a new trial should be granted.

Because the Court erred in failing to instruct the jury as to the provisions of Georgia Code Sec. 38-1806 in accordance with a timely written request, as follows:

> "What credit to impeached witness, question for jury.— When a witness shall be successfully contradicted as to a material matter, his credit as to other matters shall be for the jury, but if a witness shall swear wilfully and knowingly falsely, his testimony shall be disregarded entirely, unless corroborated by circumstances or other unimpeached evidence. The [fol. 62] credit to be given his testimony where impeached for general bad character or for contradictory statements out of court shall be for the jury to determine."

The above Georgia Code section constituted the Defendant's Request to Charge No. 3, which the Court prior to argument of counsel stated that such request would be given substantially as requested.

Defendant contends that said request of said charge was not given as requested, but instead the Court instructed the jury as follows:

"If you believe that any witness has been impeached and thus discredited, it is your exclusive province to give the testimony of that witness such credibility, if any, as you may think it deserves. If a witness is shown knowingly to have testified falsely concerning any material matter, you have a right to distrust such witness' testimony in other particulars. And you may reject all of the testimony of that witness or give it such credibility as you may think it deserves."

This charge was clear error for the Court eliminated entirely any reference to the mandatory provisions of Georgia Code Sec. 38-1806 which require that the jury shall disregard the entire testimony of a witness whom it finds to have testified wilfully and knowingly falsely, unless it shall also find that such testimony was also corroborated by circumstances or other unimpeached evidence.

Because the Court erred in refusing to charge the jury as follows:

"Whenever a party presents himself as a witness and his evidence is contradictory, vague or equivocal, his testimony must be construed most strongly against him."

Counsel for defendant made such request to charge in writing, the same being designated Defendant's Request to Charge No. 6. Defendant contends that such a charge was proper and was adjusted to the evidence in said case for the reason that the plaintiff's testimony in many respects was contradictory, vague and equivocal, and under the circumstances the jury should have been instructed that his testimony should have been construed most strongly against him.

Because the Court erred in refusing to allow counsel for the defendant to question John C. Carmichael, a witness for the plaintiff, concerning a previous conviction on September 19, 1933 for petty larceny in the State of Ohio, said crime involving the stealing of women's purses from theaters. Counsel for defendant had in his possession and presented to the Court a duly authenticated copy of said conviction and record of the said Carmichael.

The Court, in refusing to permit defendant's counsel to examine witness Carmichael in respect to this criminal record, stated that the ground for such refusal was the fact that the offense was committed thirty years ago.

[fol. 64] The failure of the Court to allow counsel for the defendant to question the said Carmichael concerning his previous conviction was prejudicial to the defendant in that it prevented defendant from impeaching said witness of plaintiff by the proof of a crime involving moral turpitude.

Because the Court erred in refusing to allow counsel for the defendant to question John C. Carmichael, a witness for the plaintiff, about, and to introduce into the evidence, the following:

1. An application for a permit for the sale of beer and wine to the City of Atlanta, Georgia, dated July 22, 1940, signed by the said Carmichael, wherein he stated that he had never been convicted or plead guilty to a crime in any court. In fact, the said Carmichael had been convicted in a court in Ohio in 1933, as is set forth in more detail in the preceding paragraph of this Motion.

2. An application for a permit to sell beer, addressed to The Honorable Mayor and General Counsel of the City of Atlanta, Georgia, dated March 12, 1957, signed by the said Carmichael, wherein he stated as follows:

"Have you ever been convicted or plead guilty to a crime in any court? x -

Yes No

If so state the offense and date—1932—But I Was Not Guilty And Was Released."

[fol. 65] In fact, the said Carmichael had been found guilty of the crime in the State of Ohio set forth in more detail in the preceding paragraph of this Motion, and was convicted in the Criminal Court of Fulton County on March 22, 1950 of possessing illegal distilled spirits and alcohol, which latter conviction was admitted by the said Carmichael on the witness stand in this case.

The Court excluded such evidence or the questioning of the witness with respect thereto, but, in excluding the same, the Court did not assign any reason for such ruling. Defendant alleges and contends that such evidence was relevant, material and admissible for the following reasons:

(a) It tended to impeach the witness.

(b) It affected the credibility of the witness.

Defendant, therefore, alleges and contends that the exclusion of such evidence by the Court was harmful and prejudicial to it and constitutes a ground for a new trial.

Because the Court erred in allowing counsel for the plaintiff to examine, over the objection of counsel for the defendant, J. D. Bolton, Hugh Mills and Harold Heckman, all witnesses for the defendant, with respect to whether they knew of the reputation of the plaintiff's witnesses Hartman, Clark, Baird and Trippi, and as to whether or not such witnesses' reputations were good or bad in the community, and whether or not they would believe them on oath. Defendant contends that such questioning of de- [fol. 66] fendant's witnesses was improper when the character and veracity of such of plaintiff's w itnesses had not been brought into issue.

In allowing such questioning by counsel for the plaintiff, the Court relied upon Georgia Code § 38-1804, which Code section defendant contends is not in point or applicable to such ruling.

Defendant further alleges and contends that allowing counsel to question defendant's witnesses in such regard was harmful and prejudicial to the defendant and constitutes a ground for a new trial.

Because the Court erred in excluding the following testimony of George Burnett:

1. As to what Burnett asked the operator and as to the operator's answer to Burnett in regard to the extension number in Tuscaloosa, Alabama, to which Burnett had been connected, upon the ground that such testimony of Burnett was hearsay. Defendant contends and alleges that anything which Burnett himself said previously would not be hearsay, and further that the conversation between Burnett and the operator was reported in the alleged libelous article, the truth of which the defendant had the burden of proving. Such testimony of Burnett was not offered to prove the truth of what the operator said, but rather to prove that his conversation with the operator did take place substantially as reported by the defendant in the alleged libelous article.

[fol. 67] 2. As to what Burnett said to Milton Flack and what Flack said to Burnett when Burnett called Flack after Burnett overheard the conversation between plaintiff and Paul Bryant. Such conversation between Burnett and Flack was reported in the alleged libelous article by the defendant. The Court excluded such testimony by Burnett on hearsay grounds. The defendant alleges and contends that anything said by Burnett previously would not be hearsay and that the entire conversation between Burnett and Flack was admissible not to prove the truth of what Flack said, but rather to prove that such conversation as reported by defendant in such alleged libelous article actually took place.

3. As to Burnett's testimony as to the conversation between Burnett and Bob Edwards on January 4, 1963. Said conversation was reported by defendant in the alleged libelous article. The Court excluded such testimony on hearsay grounds. The defendant alleges and contends that such testimony was not offered to prove the truth of what Edwards said, but rather to prove that such conversation between Burnett and Edwards as reported by defendant in the alleged libelous article, actually took place.

4. As to Burnett's testimony of what took place at a meeting attended by Burnett and certain officials of the University of Georgia in the office of Cook Barwick, attorney for the University of Georgia. The Court excluded such testimony on hearsay grounds. The defendant alleges and contends that the conversations which took place at such meeting in Cook Bar-

[fol. 68] wick's office were reported by it in the alleged libelous article, and that the testimony of Burnett was introduced to prove that such conversations did take place at such meeting, and not to prove the truth of the matter asserted by the participants in the meeting. In addition, defendant alleges and contends that the defendant was entitled to show the extent to which the officials of the University of Georgia questioned and checked upon George Burnett and his story, all of which illustrated the diligence of the defendant in its investigation of the story prior to its publication.

Defendant alleges and contends that the exclusion of such evidence was harmful and prejudicial to defendant and each exclusion is a ground for a new trial.

Because the Court erred in admitting into evidence, over timely objection by defendant's counsel, plaintiff's Exhibits 16 and 17 which are, respectively, a memorandum on unnecessary roughness in college football and a letter from the President of the Football Coaches Association and the Chairman of the Football Rules Committee relating to unwarranted viciousness and brutality in college football.

The defendant contends that these Exhibits were inadmissible on the grounds that these documents were hearsay and were not relevant to any issue involved in this case and on the further ground that no proper foundation was laid for the admissibility of this evidence.

Because of the following errors in plaintiff's counsel's closing arguments to the jury, which, even though not specifically objected to by counsel for the defendant, constitute significant and fundamental errors which the Court may notice without objection and which it may take into consideration in exercising its discretion upon the motion of defendant for a new trial:

(a) Closing argument of Lockerman—

"... I think I likewise have a right to mention to you briefly that I probably have known Wally Butts longer than any man in this case. I was at Mercer University with Wally Butts when he played end on the football team there. He was in some respects a small man in stature, but he had more determination and more power to win than any man that I have ever seen in my life. I would not stand before you in this case today arguing in his behalf if I thought that Wally Butts would not tell you the truth when he raises his hand on this stand and swears to Almighty God that what he is going to tell you is the truth."

Defendant contends that the above argument is objectionable and improper since plaintiff's counsel introduced before the jury his own unsworn testimony as to the credibility of the plaintiff, when the actual evidence in the case was to the effect that plaintiff's reputation was bad and that witnesses would not believe him under oath. In such argument plaintiff's counsel clearly violated the established principle that an attorney in closing argument should not state to the jury his own belief regarding one of the [fol. 70] principal issues in the case, particularly when there was no testimony in the record whatsoever to that effect. This argument was particularly harmful in view of the fact that the Court had previously ruled that character witnesses on behalf of the plaintiff could be cross-examined as to their knowledge of specific instances of misconduct and the plaintiff deliberately failed to call such character witnesses. Thus, the argument of plaintiff's counsel denied defendant the right to an effective cross-examination.

(b) Closing argument of Lockerman—

"... and when that suit was filed the Curtis Publishing Company came into this court and filed its answer to it, and admitted every word in it. Now, since having done that, the Curtis Publishing Company is trying to contradict what it said in its own pleadings in judicio, here in the Court Room."

Defendant contends that the above argument is objectionable and is an improper misstatement of the facts, the same being so crucial that if accepted by the jury a verdict would be demanded for the plaintiff inasmuch as the jury is being told that the defendant admitted that the article is libelous and that the plaintiff was entitled to damages.

(c) Closing argument of Lockerman—

"In this very law suit alone that has been in every paper, every radio station, every television station for months and months and months, and recently hour on the hour, all over the world, they have gotten untold millions of dollars in publicity where the name 'Satur-[fol. 71] day Evening Post' is on the ears and the lips and tongue of all the people in the world.

"These reporters here, all over this Court Room, are sending this out. That is what they want. You could return a verdict for Wally Butts in this case of ten million dollars, and it would be the greatest merchandising bargain the Saturday Evening Post ever got. There is no way of telling—they could not have bought the publicity they have gotten in this case probably for fifty or seventy-five or a hundred million dollars, because it is worldwide, and you try to buy space in magazines, daily papers, radio stations, television stations all over the world where your name is mentioned every hour on the hour, such as this has been, you can't do it for any amount of money, and they have used Wally Butts for that purpose.

"If you should return a verdict in this case, say, for five million dollars, they would think that they had won the greatest victory that could possibly be returned in the case."

Closing argument of Schroder—

"Now, listen to this, gentlemen. 'The final yardstick, we have about six lawsuits pending,' and he later identified those lawsuits as libel suits, 'meaning that we are hitting them where it hurts.' Proud of his libel suits, proud of the publicity, the free advertising he gets from his libel suits.

"Mr. Clay Blair, who wouldn't get on the stand and testify so you could see him, had this to say when his [fol. 72] deposition was taken, at page 44, which we read. 'I was not being facetious when I used the phrase "sophisticated muckraking". I meant it then and I mean it now.' Their type of sophisticated muckraking is this article here where they can get a mere germ of an idea that they know will sell and will cause people to get hit where it hurts them, and result in a libel suit with a $100,000,000 worth of free advertising to them, and that is what they want. I will show you why that is what they want.

"Mr. Clay Blair, again, 'I changed the image of the Post. He said that the March 23 issue—that is the one with Butts' story in it— is a step in the right direction. This issue takes up twenty-five percent toward the goal of the magazine that I envision.'

"Gentlemen, if that is just twenty-five percent, that type of story toward the goal he envisions, what can we look for or hope to look for when that is multiplied four times.

"He says, Mr. Clay Blair, 'The Post advertising revenues fell from one hundred six million dollars in 1960 to eighty-six million in 1961, and to about sixty-six million in 1962. I did not like that trend dropping twenty million dollars from a one hundred six in 1960 to eighty-six in 1961 and again to sixty-two million in 1962.'

"That is when they changed the image. They have got to get those advertising revenues up, and I say that is the worse kind of libel that you can have. A [fol. 73] newspaper can print a libel because someone has given it some information that turned out to be inaccurate but when you go out and buy a libel—and they paid over $9,000 for this story, which will show here in the voucher, paid $9,000 for it—and did the reporting job that they did, they knew what they were getting, and they have it. One million dollars of free advertising."

"I say, gentlemen, this is the time we have got to get them. A hundred million dollars in advertising, would ten percent of that be fair to Wally Butts for what they have done to him? Would a fifty percent assessment on each of the twenty-three million issues which they wrote about him there, would that be a strain or a burden on them?"

The defendant contends that this line or argument, so heavily emphasized by both of plaintiff's counsel, was clearly improper and prejudicial since it injected into the case assertions wholly unsubstantiated by any evidence whatsoever. For example, it was boldly asserted that the defendant received the benefit of $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 of free advertising solely because of this case; that it suggests a wholly improper measure of damages for consideration by the jury (that they might determine damages on the basis of some percentage of the wholly unsubstantiated assertions to the effect that the defendant had somehow directly profited from the notoriety attributable to the subject proceedings. The manner in which his argument was presented (for example, relatively indirectly by Lockerman on Friday followed by a direct and unqualified assertion by Schroder on Monday), seems almost calculated [fol. 74] to deceive the jury into thinking that the assertions made were in fact true. The statements by Schroder were calculated to confuse the jury into correlating the alleged free advertising with the admitted substantial decline of advertising revenues, facts of which were introduced into evidence in the case over the objection of the defendant, and instilled in the jury the impression unsupported by any evidence that the defendant had profited in an astronomical amount by the notoriety incident to the trial.

(d) Closing argument of Schroder—

"Somebody has got to stop them. There is no law against it, and the only way that type of, as I call it, yellow journalism can be stopped is to let the Saturday Evening Post know that it is not going to get away with it today, tomorrow, or any more hereafter, and the only way their lesson can be brought home to them, gentlemen, is to hit them where it hurts them, and the only thing they know is money."

"I am looking to you for my protection. Heavens knows, if you let them out of this case for five million dollars or less, and boy, it's been worth it to them, I may be next, because they are not going to stop with that. You may be next; my wife; my children; or yourself. We have got to stop them now, and you are the only twelve in the world that can stop them."

Defendant contends that the above argument is wholly improper not only as attempting to unduly arouse the prej- [fol. 75] udice and passion of the jury, but also as injecting and suggesting a wholly improper consideration with respect to the measure of damages. The Georgia law does not authorize punitive damages to deter the defendant from repeating the alleged trespass against anyone other than the plaintiff.

(e) Closing argument of Lockerman—

"I am sorry that I may have appeared to have gotten right emotional about this matter. I am emotional about it. I am mad about it. There are just thousands and thousands of people who are mad about it too, and I believe that in your deliberations and in your final verdict that you are going to return the kind of verdict that will help restore Wally Butts as he should be restored in the eyes of the world."

Closing argument of Schroder—

"... They don't care about Butts. They wouldn't care about you or about me. They are just one stp in the direction they are aiming."

"... They write about human beings; they killed him, his wife, his three lovely daughters. What do they care? They have got money; getting money for it."

[fol. 76] "... I think it would teach them that we don't have that kind of journalism down here, and we don't want it down here, and we don't want it to spread from 666 Fifth Avenue any further than that building right now."

Defendant contends that the above arguments are clearly objectionable as improperly appealing to the prejudices and passions of the jurors to the obvious injury and harm of the defendant.

(f) Closing argument of Schroder—

"... I have lived in agony with this man since I got the first notice that this was what was going to happen this Post article was coming out. I have seen him deteriorating ever since it came out, and I have lived in agony along with him, and it may be that the personal firsthand knowledge that I have had since almost living with him and his family every day, I may have said some things or done some things or conducted myself in some manner that was displeasing to you. All I can say, I have done my best, and if I have done any of those things, don't hold it against Wally Butts."

Defendant contends that the above argument not only constitutes testimony by plaintiff's counsel, but also involves an improper and prejudicial attempt by argument to inject into the minds of the jurors allegations not specifically covered by the evidence.

(g) Closing argument of Lockerman—

"Mr. Cody is a fine lawyer. I respect him very much, I know that in this case that he is being persuaded by the Curtis Publishing Company, his client in the mat[fol. 77] ter, in which he necessarily must avoid discussing the real issues."

"He [Mr. Cody] has seen fit to talk to you about anything except the truth of those charges."

Closing argument of Schroder—

"I want to begin by taking up where the Saturday Evening Post lawyer ended Friday." . . . Throughout that argument not two minutes were devoted to the merits of the case; not two minutes were devoted to the plea of justification, that is to say, that what is in that article published by the Saturday Evening Post is true."

Defendant contends that the above argument was improper, offensive and irrelevant and immaterial to any of the issues in the case and interjected personalities, thereby appealing to the prejudices and passions of the jurors.

Defendant, therefore, contends that all of the above arguments on the part of plaintiff's counsel were prejudicial and harmful to the defendant and constitute errors for which a new trial should be granted.

Because of the following errors in the Court's charge, which errors, even though not specifically objected to by counsel for the defendant, constitute significant errors which the Court may notice without objection and which [fol. 78] it may take into consideration in exercising its discretion upon this motion of defendant for a new trial:

(a) In giving the following charge in regard to punitive damages:

"The purpose of punitive damages is to deter the defendant from a repetition of the offense and is a warning to others not to commit a like offense. It is intended to protect the community and has an expression of ethical indignation, although the plaintiff receives the award."

The defendant contends that such charge is not a correct statement of the Georgia law of punitive damages in that punitive damages can only be given to deter the wrongdoer from repeating the trespass upon the plaintiff and not as a deterrent to third persons, nor can punitive damages be awarded for the protection of the community in general, but only for the protection of the plaintiff. Such charge was not anticipated by the defendant in that the plaintiff had requested a charge correctly stating the Georgia law of punitive damages and the Court stated that such charge was to be given substantially as requested by plaintiff, nor were such damages prayed for in plaintiff's complaint.

(b) In giving the following charge to the jury:

"Before you would be authorized to find punitive damages under the Georgia law, you must first determine that the plaintiff, Wallace Butts, is entitled to recover general damages. However, if you decide to award punitive damages, the sum you award need have [fol. 79] no relationship to any amount that you may award for general damages. It may be greater or it may be less. That is a matter which rests in your sole discretion."

Defendant contends that the law requires that there must be a relationship between the general damages and the punitive damages which the jury is authorized to award the plaintiff.

(c) In giving the following charge to the jury:

"A defendant may show that it acted without malice and that there was neither actual malice nor any circumstances from which malice may be inferred. In a word, a defendant is permitted to show that, in publishing this article, it in good faith relied upon certain matters which had come to its attention. And if the jury accepts this as credible, this would go in mitigation of punitive damages."

Defendant contends that such charge is erroneous in that the impression was thereby conveyed to the jury that absence of actual malice would merely mitigate punitive damages, whereas the Georgia law is clearly that, in the absence of actual malice, no punitive damages can be awarded.

(d) The often repeated language in the charge to the effect that the defendant had the burden of proving the "statements in the article" to be true (there are seven repetitions of this in the charge) and the inconsistency of such language with the part of the charge dealing with substantial truth and the sting of the libel.

[fol. 80] Defendant contends that such confused the jury as to whether or not the defendant had the burden of proving the accuracy of all of the statements in the article, particularly since the Court failed to charge the defendant's request #8, which request was to the effect that defendant need not prove the truth of any statements made about anyone other than the plaintiff.

(e) By charging the jury as follows:

"I charge you that the law presumes that the plaintiff has a good reputation, and when a defamatory statement is made against him, the law presumes he has sustained injury to that reputation and to his feelings."

Defendant contends that the above charge was erroneous for the following reasons:

(i) That when evidence of bad character or reputation of the plaintiff is introduced, there is no longer a presumption that the plaintiff has a good reputation.

(ii) That the Court has not in the above quoted portion of the charge, nor in any other portion of the charge, clearly instructed the jury that the presumption of good reputation can be rebutted.

(iii) That the Court has not in the above quoted portion of the charge, nor in any other portion of the charge, clearly instructed the jury that the question of whether or not the plaintiff has a good reputation was for the jury in this case.

[fol. 81] Defendant, therefore, contends that such errors in the Court's charge were prejudicial and harmful to the defendant and constitute errors for which a new trial should be granted.

Because the Court erred in charging the jury, over objection by the defendant, the following:

(a) That the alleged libelous article was libelous per se, as follows:

"Under the law of Georgia, if the publication was libelous per se, and I charge you that this article was libelous per se, and the law will presume that anyone so libeled must have suffered damage. In such case, no measure of damages can be prescribed, except through the enlightened consciences of impartial jurors."

Defendant contends that the article is not libelous per se.

(b) That the article was libelous per se as being a charge made with reference to the profession of the plaintiff and that the plaintiff was engaged in a profession at the time of the publication of the alleged libelous article, as follows:

"I charge you that under Georgia law, a written publication which affects one injuriously in his trade or calling, such as the plaintiff Butts' coaching profession in this case under consideration, and contains imputations against his honesty and integrity, and [fol. 82] which would, as its natural and probable consequence, occasion pecuniary loss, constitutes a cause of action and is libelous per se, and the rule follows to such damages as must be presumed to proximately and necessarily result from such a publication.

"I charge you that the words 'libelous per se' in this case mean words of such character that a presumption of the law arises therefrom that a party has been degraded in his business or professional reputation."

The defendant contends that the plaintiff was not in a profession at the time of the publication of the article.

Because the verdict is contrary to law and to the evidence in this case in that the plaintiff's complaint is clearly an action for alleged damages to his professional reputation and has been so construed by the Court, and by plaintiff's counsel, but the evidence at the trial showed without contradiction that the plaintiff was not engaged in a profession at the time of the publication of said alleged libelous article. Since plaintiff has not shown that he was engaged in a profession at the time of publication, the article was not libelous per se and due to the plaintiff's failure to allege or to prove special damages, a verdict in his favor for any amount whatsoever is not authorized and, therefore, the verdict was contrary to law and to the evidence introduced in the case and a new trial should be granted.

[fol. 83] Defendant reserves the right to amend this Motion with permission of the Court and to add additional grounds thereof after the Official Record is filed by the court reporter.

In addition to the foregoing Motion, the defendant moves the Court to enlarge the time for filing additional affidavits and documents under Rule 59(c), which affidavits and documents may further substantiate the grounds for any part of the foregoing Motion.

Wherefore, defendant prays that a new trial be granted in said case on any one or all of the grounds hereinbefore stated.

Request is hereby made for an oral argument on this Motion.

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR JUDGMENT NOTWITHSTANDING THE VERDICT—Filed August 29, 1963

Defendant moves the Court to set aside the verdict entered in the above-entitled action on August 20, 1963, and the judgment entered thereon on the same date, and to enter judgment in accordance with defendant's motion for directed verdict.

Defendant's motion for directed verdict should have been granted because the plaintiff's action is clearly one for alleged damages to his professional reputation and his complaint has been so construed by the Court and by plaintiff's counsel, but the evidence at the trial showed, without contradiction, that the plaintiff was not engaged in a profession at the time the alleged libelous article was published. Since plaintiff has not shown that he was engaged in a profession at the time of publication, the article was not libelous per se and due to the plaintiff's failure to allege or to prove special damages, a verdict in his favor for any amount is not authorized and, therefore, the defendant's motion for a directed verdict should have been [fol. 85] granted, and this motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict should be granted.

IN UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

ORDER DENYING DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR JUDGMENT NOTWITHSTANDING THE VERDICT—Filed January 14, 1964

The defendant herein has filed a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, contending in said motion that the plaintiff is not entitled to any recovery since the evidence established without contradiction that he was not, at the time of the publication of the charge complained of, in the profession of a football coach, and because he neither claimed nor offered evidence of any special damage incurred by him as a result of the publication.

It was the ruling of this Court at the time of trial, and the jury was so instructed, that "a written publication [fol. 86] which affects one injuriously in his trade or calling, such as the plaintiff Butts' coaching profession in this case under consideration, and contains imputations against his honesty and integrity, and which would, as its natural and probable consequence, occasion pecuniary loss, constitutes a cause of action and is libelous per se."

There is a strong thread running throughout the trial of this case and the many hearings which preceded the trial that this article was being held by this Court to be libelous per se for the reason that it degraded him in his business or professional reputation. The plaintiff and defendant discuss at length in their respctive briefs whether the article would have been libelous per se even if plaintiff had not been engaged in his profession at the moment of libel. There is overwhelming authority to the effect that this would in fact be the case; Weatherholt v. Howard, 143 Ga. 41; Estes v. Sterchi Bros. Stores, Inc., 50 Ga. App. 619, 179 S. E. 222; numerous other decisions and treatises. However, the Court is prepared to stand squarely on the issue of the article's having hurt him in his profession as the basis for the ruling of libelous per se.

The plaintiff's name was synonymous with University of Georgia football for some 25 years. He had served as President of the American Football Coaches Association; he was one of the few coaches to be selected to serve on the important Rules Committee; he was admittedly widely known and respected as a successful coach and as an eminent authority in the sport of football. Can it be sincerely argued by the defendant that this man, who is in his mid-fifties, is not injured legally in the eyes of the football world, simply because he had not officially occupied a position of employment in this field for a period of six to eight weeks? Future employment quite probably would have [fol. 87] occurred, and in what capacity other than that to which he had given his whole life?

Law is perverted from its proper function when it multiplies impediments to justice without the warrant of clear necessity. By the rigid technicalities sought to be imposed by the defendant, the plaintiff, caught in a mesh of procedural and technical complexities, is told there is only one way out of them, and that is to have filed his lawsuit a few days earlier, while still listed on the employment rolls of The University of Georgia, prior to the publication of the subject article.

Because of that omission, it being of course impossible to do, he is to be left ensnared in the web—the processes of the law, so it is said, being impotent to set him free.

This Court does not believe that paths to justice are so few and narrow. I think we should hesitate quite a long time before committing our procedure to so sterile a conclusion.

Accordingly, the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is denied.

This the 14th day of January, 1964.

Lewis R. Morgan, United States District Judge.

OPINION AND ORDER GRANTING MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL—

The jury in this libel action returned a verdict for general damages against the defendant in the sum of $60,000.00 and for punitive damages in the sum of $3,000,000.00.

The defendant moves, under Rule 59 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, 28 U.S.C.A., to set aside the verdict for damages principally upon the ground of excessiveness, as set out in Ground 1 of the defendant's motion. Apart from defendant's contention that the verdict is excessive, the defendant sets out 23 other grounds in its motion for a new trial (Ground 5 of defendant's motion having been abandoned).

The cause of action by plaintiff arose by virtue of an article published by defendant in its March 23, 1963, issue of the Saturday Evening Post, said article having been principally written by one Frank Graham, Jr., but with assistance from others employed by the defendant. The article was entitled "The Story of a College Football Fix", with the subtitle "How Wally Butts and Bear Bryant Rigged a Game Last Fall". The article concerned alleged information on Georgia plays given by Butts to Coach Bryant relating to the Alabama-Georgia football game played in Birmingham, Alabama, in September, 1962.

The article charged Butts with being corrupt and with betraying his players, and that the players were forced into the game like "rats in a maze" and "took a frightful physical beating". The article charged, in an italicized [fol. 89] editorial, Butts, along with Coach Bryant, with being a participant in the greatest and most shocking sports scandal since that of the Chicago White Sox in the 1919 World Series. In the same editorial Butts was relegated to a status worse than that of "disreputable gamblers", and a corrupt person who, employed to "educate and guide young men", betrays or sells out his pupils.

Plaintiff Butts had been Head Football Coach at the University of Georgia from 1939 until 1961, at which time he became Athletic Director. As a member of his profession, he had been president of the Football Coaches Association, and by invitation had coached the College All-Stars, the Blue-Gray All Star Game, and the North-South All Star Game. Butts had been a lecturer and speaker at clinics and banquets throughout the United States. Testimony adduced was that plaintiff had been offered employment by several college and professional football teams in the country and was negotiating with a Texas professional team when the article was published, but thereafter negotiations were discontinued.

Evidence was introduced that on March 18, 1963, Butts, through his atorney, notified the Curtis Publishing Company that the article was false and advised that the article not be published; and that thereafter, pursuant to Georgia law, Butts requested a retraction from Curtis, which was refused. It was admitted on the trial that one of Butts' daughters had telephoned long distance to a Saturday Evening Post official with a plea that the article be withheld from publication. The evidence of plaintiff showed that plaintiff was capable of earning a minimum of $12,000.00 per annum from his football activities, but that since the publication, all prior negotiations had been terminated. [fol. 90] The defendant filed its answer of justification and plead that the statements in the article were true. The defendant thus assumed the burden of proving the truth of the article. See Cox v. Strickland, 101 Ga. 482.

Curtis Publishing Company based its defense on certain notes taken by one George Burnett who made such notes to a telephone conversation alleged to have been overheard between Coach Bear Bryant, of the University of Alabama, and Butts, as Athletic Director of the University of Georgia, on a morning in September, a few days prior to the Alabama-Georgia Game. By some mechanical defect, Burnett was connected by telephone to the conversation. These rough notes were kept by Burnett and revealed to Head Coach Johnny Griffith, of the University of Georgia, in late December, 1962, or early January, 1963. Curtis paid Burnett consideration for the story after the Alabama, lawyers, who were defending Curtis in a libel suit brought by Coach Bryant because of another article in the Saturday Evening Post.

The evidence presented showed that Frank Graham, Jr., the author of the article, and Davis Thomas, Senior Editor of the Saturday Evening Post, knew that Burnett had been convicted of "bad check writing". No representative of the Post looked at the notes before the article was published. According to Coach Griffith of Georgia, defendant's witness, "a good number of Burnett's notes were incorrect and didn't even apply to anything Georgia had." No effort was made by the Post to view the actual game film, although the Sports Editor of the Post, one Roger Kann, considered that necessary.

[fol. 91] Inserted in the article were the following direct quotations, which were subsequently denied under oath by the parties quoted:

(1) Graham wrote that Burnett had told him that Larry Rakestraw, Georgia quarterback, placed his feet in a certain position while on offense, thereby tipping off the defensive team as to whether the Georgia play would be a run or a pass. Burnett later testified under oath that he had not told Graham any such thing.

(2) Mickey Babb, another Georgia football player, specifically denied the quotation in the article attributed to him pertaining to knowledge by the Alabama team of the Georgia formations and plays. Babb was quoted in the article as saying the Alabama players knew Georgia's key play (eighty-eight pop) and knew when Georgia would use it. Babb testified Georgia had no "eighty-eight pop" play. This was confirmed by Coach Johnny Griffith.

(3) Sam Richwine, the Georgia trainer, specifically and categorically denied the quotation in the article attributed to him, which was also to the effect that Alabama knew Georgia's plays.

(4) Coach Johnny Griffith categorically denied three separate and distinct quotations in the article that were attributed to him.

(5) There were many other instances in which the individual, credited by Graham as giving Graham certain information which was included in the article, [fol. 92] categorically denied under oath that any such information had been furnished.

Frank Graham, Jr., author of the article, and Charles Davis Thomas, the Managing Editor of the Saturday Evening Post, testified by deposition that they both knew that after the article was published plaintiff Butts' career would be ruined. The author of the article, Frank Graham, Jr., testified by deposition at the trial. Curtis' Editor-in-Chief, Clay Blair, Jr., and its Senior Editor, Davis Thomas, were present in court but testified by deposition. Furman Bisher, of Atlanta, who was paid to assist in the preparation of the article, testified by deposition.

The article was clearly defamatory and extremely so. The Saturday Evening Post had a circulation in excess of 6 million copies per issue. It claims readers of 22 million. Butts was unquestionably one of the leading figures in the national football picture. The jury was warranted in concluding from the foregoing incidents and the persistent and continuing attitude of the officers and agents of the defendant that there was a wanton or reckless indifference of plaintiff's rights. The guilt of the defendant was so clearly established by the evidence in the case so as to have left the jury no choice but to find the defendant liable.

This Court does not feel that the award of $60,000.00 for actual damages was excessive. The evidence showed plaintiff to be a man in his fifties, and that his earnings from his profession had been a minimum of $12,000.00 per annum.

The Court must now consider the amount of punitive damages awarded. What is the nature of punitive damages [fol. 93] and for what purpose do we allow their imposition? The law of Georgia provides that in every tort there may be aggravating circumstances, either in the act or the intention, and in that event the jury may give additional damages to deter the wrongdoers from repeating the trespass. Sec. 105-2002, Georgia Code Annotated, 1933.

This Court, however, is greatly concerned with the size of the verdict as to punitive damages. An examination has been made of many cases and the awards made throughout the several jurisdictions of the United States, both in the Federal and State Courts. As far as this Court can ascertain, the largest award ever sustained for punitive damages by the Appellate Courts was an award of $175,000.00 in the case of Reynolds v. Pegler, 123 F. Supp. 36, 223 F. 2d 429. Since the award in the case at hand, the New York Supreme Court, Appellate Division, October Term, in the case of Faulk v. Aware, Inc., and Hartnett, has reduced the award of punitive damages in the amount of $2,500,000.00 to $150,000.00. The award for punitive damages in the case under consideration is more than seventeen times larger than the highest award for punitive damages ever sustained. Reynolds v. Pegler, supra.

True, fixing the amount of damages is primarily in the province of the jury, and it has been said, with respect to libel cases, "the jury is generally considered to be the Supreme arbiter on the question of damages". Lynch v. New York Times Company, 171 A.D. 399, 401. The Court, if possible, should try to avoid invading that field. However, a Court may not stand by idly when it is apparent that a verdict is excessive. In Sunray Oil Corporation v. Allbritton, 188 F. 2d 751 (5 Cir. 1951), Judge Hutcheson emphasized that a district judge has a duty to grant a new [fol. 94] trial, not only when the jury's verdict is excessive as a matter of law, but also where "it is larger in amount than the judge thinks it justly ought to be". Thus, he said:

> "Whether, in the opinion of the district judge, a verdict is excessive as a matter of fact, that is, though not contrary to right reason and, therefore not excessive as a matter of law, it is larger in amount than the judge thinks it justly ought to be, or is excessive as a matter of law, that is, is so monstrous or inordinate in amount as to find no support in right reason, he has the same power, the same duty, in the one case as in the other to relieve against the excessiveness by granting a new trial or requiring a remittitur in lieu."

As was held by the late Judge Parker in the case of Virginian Railway Company v. Armentrout, 166 F. 2d 400, 408:

> "The power and duty of the trial judge to set aside the verdict under such circumstances is well established, the exercise of the power being regarded as not in derogation of the right of trial by jury but one of the historic safeguards of that right. * * *
> "To the federal trial judge, the law gives ample power to see that justice is done in causes pending before him; and the responsibility attendant upon such power is his in full measure. While according due respect to the findings of the jury, he should not hesitate to set aside their verdict and grant a new trial in any case where the ends of justice so require."

[fol. 95] In accordance with the cases cited above, this Court feels it is its duty to keep a verdict for punitive damages within reasonable bounds considering the purpose to be achieved as well as the corporate defendant's wanton or reckless indifference to the plaintiff's rights. In observance of such duty, this Court concludes that the award for punitive damages in this case was grossly excessive. It is the Court's considered opinion that the maximum sum for punitive damages that should have been awarded against Curtis Publishing Company should be $400,000.00.

Movant's Grounds 2, 3, and 4 assert that the right given by Section 105-2002, Georgia Code Annotated, 1933, to a jury to grant punitive damages violates the rights guaranteed by the Federal Constitution to freedom of speech and press and to substantive and procedural due process. These contentions are without merit. However, these constitutional questions are raised for the first time by this motion. No constitutional question concerning the statute was ever raised by movant's pleadings. The contention that a State statute is unconstitutional is an affirmative defense and must be so pleaded in defendant's answer. Kewanee Oil & Gas Company v. Mosshamer, 58 F. 2d 711, 712; White Cleaners and Dyers v. Hughes, 7 F. Supp. 1017 (D.C. La. 1934, 3 judges).

Movant's Ground 5 has been expressly withdrawn by defendant.

Grounds 6 through 13 of defendant's motion contend that error was committed in excluding certain evidence as to specific acts of misconduct by plaintiff, defendant contending that this evidence should have been permitted for the purpose of impeachment and in mitigation of damages. The [fol. 96] first consideration is Section 38-202, Georgia Code Annotated, 1933, which provides as follows:

> "The general character of the parties, and especially their conduct in other transactions, are irrelevant matter, unless the nature of the action involves such character and renders necessary or proper the investigation of such conduct."

The defendant contends that under Rule 43(a) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, this evidence is admissible in Federal Court. Rule 43(a) provides that in determining admissibility of evidence whether there is a conflict between the State and the Federal rule, the plaintiff is entitled to the benefit of the more favorable rule. Hambrice v. F. W. Woolworth Company, 290 F. 2d 557.

However, on the question with which this Court is concerned and without passing upon the question as to whether the matter is substantive or procedural, it appears that there is no conflict between the Georgia rule and the Federal rule as to the admissibility of the specific acts of misconduct on the part of the plaintiff.

Under the decision of Cox v. Strickland, 101 Ga. 482, it is held that the filing of a plea of justification in defense to an action of libel put the plaintiff's character in issue, and a defendant has a right to show that the plaintiff's general character is bad, but cannot, in so doing, go into the proof of specific acts or resort to general rumors by hearsay.

Neither under the majority of federal decisions which this Court has studied would such tests be admissible. See [fol. 97] Tribune Association v. Follwell, 107 F. 646; Sun Printing & Publishing Association v. Schenck, 98 F. 925; Morning Journal Association v. Duke, 128 F. 657.

As was said in the Schenck case, supra:

> "It is not a defense to a libel or slander that the plaintiff has been guilty of offenses other than those imputed to him, or of offenses of a similar character; and such facts are not competent in mitigation of damages. The only tendency of such proof is to show, not that the plaintiff's reputation is bad, but that it ought to be bad."

As further authority sustaining the inadmissibility of such evidence, see Wigmore on Evidence, 3d Edition, Section 209, where it is stated that the reputed character of the plaintiff in an action of defamation is admissible in mitigation of damages so long as proof of character is made by reputation only; but particular acts of misconduct are irrelevant and such evidence is universally regarded as improper. Pertinent to this issue is the statement of Richards, C. B., in the case of Jones v. Stevens, 11 Price 235, 265:

> "I cannot . . . allow defendants to impeach all the transactions of a man's life who may have occasion to seek redress in courts of justice and throw on him the difficulty of showing a uniform propriety of conduct during all his existence. It would be impossible for any man to come prepared to meet such a charge."

[fol. 98] Movant contends that this Court erred in refusing to charge Section 38-1806 of the 1933 Georgia Code Annotated. There was no showing that any witness wilfully and knowingly testified falsely, and this Court charged generally on the subject of impeachment. See Smaha v. George, 195 Ga. 412.

Ground 15 of defendant's motion is without merit. Ground 16 of movant's motion is without merit. See Smaha v. George, supra; and Branan v. LaGrange Truck Lines, Inc., 94 Ga. App. 829.

Grounds 17 and 18 of defendant's motion contend error in exeluding evidence tending to impeach witness John Carmichael. Such evidence was offered by defendant to show that witness Carmichael had been convicted in 1933 while witness was a minor in Ohio. The Court, in its discretion, refused to admit such evidence because of the lapse of time. See Goddard v. United States, 131 F. 2d 220; Sinclair Refining Company v. Southern Coast Corporation, 195 F. 2d 626.

The alleged false statements for the purpose of obtaining licenses were inadmissible. A witness cannot be impeached by proving contradictory statements previously made by him as to matters not relevant to his testimony and to the case. Grant v. Hart, 197 Ga. 662; Haynes v. Phillips, 67 Ga.

App. 574. Both grounds 17 and 18 of the defendant's motion are without merit.

Grounds 19, 20, and 21 do not merit the granting of a motion for a new trial on any of the grounds as set forth. [fol. 99] Ground 22 of defendant's motion for a new trial asserts error because of arguments of plaintiff's counsel in the closing remarks to the jury. No objection nor complaint was ever raised to any portion of plaintiff's counsel's argument to the jury, although separate arguments were made by counsel for both parties on separate days of the trial.

Arguments were begun on Friday by both counsel and completed on Monday. Much of the argument of which complaint is now made was offered on Friday, and yet on the following Monday, no objection was raised on this portion of counsel's summation. Counsel for defendant consisted of numerous counsel, and yet exception was only made on the filing of this motion. It is an elementary principle of federal law that a new trial will not be granted where a party seeks to raise for the first time, on a motion for a new trial, that opposing counsel was guilty of misconduct in his argument to the jury, where such conduct was not excepted to during the trial. See Travelers Insurance Company v. Bell, 5 Cir. 1951, 188 F. 2d 725; Thomson v. Boles, 123 F. 2d 487; Hobart v. O'Brien, 243 F. 2d 735; Uhl v. Echols Transfer Company, 5 Cir. 1956, 238 F. 2d 760. For the reasons stated above, Ground 22 of defendant's motion is without merit.

Grounds 23 (a) (b) (c) (d) and (e) of defendant's motion for a new trial complained of errors in the Court's instructions to the jury. The instructions complained of in these grounds of defendant's motion were not objected to at the trial of the case. Rule 51 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provides in part as follows:

> "No party may assign as error the giving or the failure to give an instruction unless he objects thereto [fol. 100] before the jury retires to consider its verdict, stating distinctly the matter to which he objects and the grounds of his objection. Opportunity shall be given to make the objection out of the hearing of the jury."

Opportunity was afforded counsel for defendant to make such objections before the jury was permitted to consider its verdict. Under the above-cited rule, the defendant may not now complain. See also Pruett v. Marshall, 5 Cir. 1960, 283 F. 2d 436; Williams v. National Surety Corporation, 5 Cir. 1958, 257 F. 2d 771; Moore v. Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, Inc., 5 Cir. 1955, 223 F. 2d 214.

Defendant's contention based on Ground 24 of the defendant's motion for a new trial is without merit for the reasons stated in this Court's ruling on defendant's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict this day filed with the Clerk of the Court.

All the grounds set out in defendant's motion for a new trial, excepting Ground 1, are denied for the reasons stated above.

As to the first ground of the defendant's motion for a new trial, a federal trial court has authority to determine whether a verdict is excessive and to grant either a new trial or to require a remittitur. State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Company v. Scott, 5 Cir. 1962, 198 F. 2d 152.

An order in compliance with this opinion will be filed this date.

NOTICE OF PLAINTIFF'S CROSS APPEAL—

The jury's verdict in this case of $3,000,000.00 punitive damages and $60,000.00 general damages for the plaintiff was entered as the judgment of the district court by order dated August 20, 1963. By order entered January 13, 1964 on defendant's motion for new trial the district court ruled that the punitive damages awarded plaintiff by the jury was excessive and that a new trial would be granted defendant unless plaintiff, within 20 days, remitted in writing filed with the Clerk all the punitive damages awarded above the sum of $400,000.00, leaving the $60,000.00 for general damages undisturbed.

Plaintiff, Wallace Butts, having neither the financial nor physical resources to conduct a second trial and faced with either remitting $2,600,000.00 of the punitive damages or having a new trial granted, yielded to the mandate of the district court and remitted in writing, filed with the clerk January 20, 1964 all punitive damages awarded by the jury above the sum of $400,000.00. Thereafter, on January 22, 1964 the district court set aside the judgment for plaintiff for $3,060,000.00 entered on August 20, 1963 and substituted in lieu thereof judgment for the plaintiff against the defendant in the sum of $460,000.00.

From said judgment of the District Court the defendant Curtis Publishing Company filed its notice of appeal in the Clerk's office on January 24, 1964, thereby recording its intention to refuse to accept the District Court's $2,600,000.00 reduction.

[fol. 108] Feeling that the sword should cut both ways, and in order that the action of the District Court in requiring plaintiff to consent to a reduction of the verdict in the amount of $2,600,000.00 as a condition to the denial of defendant's motion for new trial may be reviewed, notice is hereby given that Wallace Butts, plaintiff in the above entitled action, hereby cross-appeals to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit from that part of the order of the District Court entered in this cause on January 22, 1964 which set aside the judgment for plaintiff in the amount of $3,060,000.00 entered August 20, 1963 and substituted in lieu thereof judgment for plaintiff in the amount of $460,000.00, and gives notice of his intention to ask the Circuit Court of Appeals to restore the original award or in the alternative, to fix an amount in excess of that established by the trial court which would be fair and reasonable under the facts of the case.

Notice of Amendment of Plaintiff's Cross Appeal— Filed February 24, 1964

Wallace Butts, plaintiff in the above entitled action, heretofore filed in this Court under date of January 30, 1964 his notice of plaintiff's cross appeal to the judgment of the district court dated January 22, 1964 in order that the action of the district court in requiring plaintiff to consent to a reduction of $2,600,000 of the jury's verdict as a condition to the denial of defendant's motion for new trial may be reviewed by the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit in connection with the defendant's appeal to said Court from the district court's judgment of January 22, 1964.

Now comes Wallace Butts the said plaintiff in the above entitled action and within thirty (30) days from the date of the district court's judgment of January 22, 1964 gives notice of this his amendment to his said notice of cross appeal, for consideration and review by the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit of the pretrial ruling of the district court as made by said court on July 29, 1963 that the second defense of the defendant, Curtis Publishing Company, as set out in its answer to plaintiff's complaint, was a valid plea of justification. A consideration and review of said ruling of the district court regarding the defendant's alleged plea of justification is sought by plaintiff only in the event the decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit reverses the judgment of the district court and sends the case back for a new trial; [fol. 110] otherwise, a review and consideration of the district court's said ruling regarding the defendant's alleged plea of justification is not sought.

I instruct you that when read in its entirety, the court construes the article complained of in the Saturday Evening Post as charging plaintiff as being corrupt and with rigging and fixing the 1962 Alabama-Georgia football game, which statements tend to injure the plaintiff in his trade, occupation or business. I, therefore, charge you that the article complained of is libelous per se, that is, libelous on its face as a matter of law. I further charge you that, if the defendant does not prove the truth of said charges to your [fol. 113] satisfaction by a legal preponderance of the evidence, you must return a verdict for the plaintiff in the amount of damages to which, under all the circumstances shown by the evidence, you find he is entitled.

In addition to seeking general damages, the plaintiff is also seeking to recover $5,000,000 as punitive damages to deter Curtis Publishing Co. from repeating the alleged injury to his honor, reputation and integrity in the future. I charge you that under the law of Georgia, there may be aggravating circumstances in every tort, either in the act or in the intention of the defendant. If you find the defendant has failed to prove the truth of the article and if you also find that there are such aggravating circumstances, then you would be authorized to award to the plaintiff, in addition to such such as you may award for general damages, if any, additional damages to deter the defendant from repeating the trespass to the plaintiff.

On the question of punitive damages, as on the question of general damages, the law prescribes no set way in which such damages shall be computed. You should bear in mind that the purpose of such punitive damages is to deter a defendant from repeating the alleged wrong to the plaintiff. You would be authorized to consider in this connection the wealth of the defendant, if such fact appears from the evi- [fol. 114] dence. You may also consider whether or not the defendant has sustained the burden of proving its claim that the statements made of and concerning the plaintiff were truthful, and if you find that the defendant has not sustained that burden, then you are authorized to consider this an aggravating circumstance.

I further charge you that actual malice is an aggravating circumstance, and upon proof thereof, punitive damages may be awarded to deter the wrongdoer.

IN UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

PRE-TRIALS AND TRIALS—RULE 10—Filed February 22, 1962

(a) Preliminary pre-trial orders may be entered from time to time, including the time of hearing of motions. No civil case shall be tried however, until a final pre-trial order has been entered by the Court defining the issues to be tried and embracing (by reference or otherwise) all previous preliminary pre-trial orders.

(b) Plaintiff's counsel shall complete all discovery desired within a period of four months after answer is filed or shall apply to the Court for an extension of such time. When discovery is completed and the case ready for [fol. 115] trial plaintiff's counsel shall so certify to the Court and the case (if not already assigned for pre-trial by the Court) will be set down for pre-trial hearing.

(c) At a time not less than fifteen days prior to the date set for pre-trial hearing, plaintiff's counsel must have a pre-trial conference with opposing counsel, at which all of the terms of a final pre-trial order shall be discussed and, within ten days following said conference, plaintiff's counsel shall file with the Court a proposed pre-trial order covering all matters referred to in this Local Rule of Court, the appendix attached thereto, and as further ordered by the Court. Upon request by either party the Court will cause such preliminary pre-trial conference between counsel to be held at the court house at a time fixed by the Court, at which time a partial or a complete pre-trial order may then be entered. Stipulations may be made by counsel subject to be withdrawn by a time certain, and any stipulation made by counsel will, upon good cause shown to the Court, be permitted to be withdrawn.

(d) The proposed pre-trial order prepared by counsel and submitted to the Court at the time of pre-trial hearing, or prior thereto, shall include among other things the following:

All motions filed but not disposed of; all questions regarding jurisdiction of the Court; whether the appointment of a special master should be made; qualification of the jury and the number of jurors required; documentary evidence to be introduced by each party and objections thereto; amendments to the pleadings; the matter of witnesses; depositions to be put in evidence and objections thereto; citation of authorities by any party regarding evidence, [fol. 116] procedural or substantive law; estimated length of trial and request for special assignments; efforts by counsel to settle the case; form of the verdict and separation of issues for trial.

(e) In negligence suits such other matters shall be covered as contained in appendix to this Rule and by Orders of Court.

(f) The pretrial hearing shall be attended by attorneys who will actually try the case or, upon approval by the court, by some other attorney of record who is authorized to define the issues and to make stipulations. Non-resident counsel may request of the Court a special assignment for pre-trial hearing.

(g) The final pre-trial order shall be made pursuant to Rule 16 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, to Rule 44½ of the Admiralty Rules, to Orders of the Court, and to Local Rules of the Court and all amendments thereto.

(h) The case shall be tried pursuant to such pre-trial order and unless otherwise directed by the Court, no issues in behalf of the plaintiff or defendant will be considered on the trial unless contained in said pre-trial order, but, upon motion timely made by either party the terms of the pre-trial order will be amended in the interest of justice.

(i) The final pre-trial order shall make reference to the charge of the Court to be given on the trial of the case, in so far as the same may be considered at that stage of the case. Requests to charge however, shall be prepared in triplicate by counsel, each request on a separate sheet of [fol. 117] paper and numbered serially, and one copy shall be delivered to the Court and one copy served on opposing counsel at or before the time of opening of the trial, together with citation of authorities in connection therewith.

IN UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

PRE-TRIAL CONFERENCE—July 8, 1963

Mr. Schroder: Well, Your Honor, the direct—wait a minute, that is going to bring up another thing. We are going to—whether this answer that has been filed is a plea—really a plea of justification or is a joinder of the general issue, that will determine who goes first. If it is a plea of justification, which I don't think it is, but if it is and is so construed by the Court, I think the defendant has admitted a prima facie case; it is up to him to grab the ball and travel from there.

The Court: I thought we had been over that.

Mr. Schroder: We discussed it in your office at one time when it came up, you know; we were there discussing something else, and there was—

The Court: You mean by justification, the truth, of course?

Mr. Schroder: I am talking about a plea of justification as that term is used in Georgia law and in general law.

The Court: Well, that means they are pleading that it was true.

Mr. Schroder: No—well, yes, sir. In order to plea—enter [fol. 121] a plea of justification, they have to, in effect, admit a prima facie case. Now, a plea of truth is entirely different. That joins the issue. But the burden is still on me. A plea of justification, they admit, number one, that they published an article—

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: —which was—with malice, which defamed my client and which was false. They have admitted in a plea of justification the complaint and everything in the complaint and every innuendo and insinuation that the complaint says was complained of in that article.

The Court: I don't think they admitted everything in your complaint. I think the substance of their answer is that they say that the article which they published is true.

Mr. Schroder: But that is—that is not a plea of justification, though. Now, I am prepared to argue and I am prepared to submit a memorandum on it, because I know I am on sound ground.

There is a real big difference between a plea of justification and a plea of truth.

The Court: His second defense filed is that the Defendant avers that the statements in the article complained of, which are of and concerning the plaintiff, are true.

[fol. 122] Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir; that is a simple plea of truth.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: That joins the issue. I say it is false; he says it is true.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: The burden is still on me to prove it is false.

The Court: You mean the allegations in the article?

Mr. Schroder: The burden is on me to prove the allegations of my petition.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: Now, that is one thing. But, now, if, as we were talking about the other day, if, in effect, this is a plea of justification, it admits everything I have said in my complaint, and I have got authorities to substantiate it. He admits a prima facie case, and he proceeds then with the burden of proof, so he puts up his case.

Let me give Your Honor the benefit of just a few authorities on this.

[fol. 123] The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Cody: This is as plain a plea of justification as can be filed, and that is that they published this article and they state that the article is true, and—

* * * * * * *

The Court: Mr. Cody, I think this is a plea of justification. If it is not, I will let somebody else correct it, but that is all I can see.

Mr. Smith: Our basic problem is, we think there is a difference between a plea of truth and a plea of justification, and they say it is one and the same.

The Court: I think it is one and the same.

Mr. Smith: Well, that is it; that is it.

The Court: All right, sir. I stand to be corrected.

Mr. Schroder: Well, don't let the record indicate that we have agreed.

[fol. 124] The Court: No; I am not.

IN UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

PRE-TRIAL CONFERENCE—July 8, 1963

Mr. Cody: There is no limitation on Cross-examination.

Mr. Schroder: I think there is a Code section on that.

The Court: That is the reason I was bringing it up. I am in doubt.

Mr. Schroder: 38-202; "The general character of the parties, and especially their conduct in other transactions, are irrelevant matters, unless the nature of the case involves such character—" that is not the one I was talking about. 1804, I believe it is.

The Court: Code Section 13-1804? That's right.

Mr. Schroder: That is the one. I don't see where I have gotten it written down.

The Court: "Where witness called by defendant testifies to his good character from general reputation, it is allow[fol. 125] able, on cross-examination, for witness to testify to his having heard of specific instances of conduct tending to disprove witness' estimate of defendant's character."

Likewise, you could—

Mr. Cody: That is 1804 you are reading from?

Mr. Schroder: That is 1804?

The Court: Yes, sir; and that is the case—the case is 70 Georgia Appeals 431. "Where witness called by defendant testifies to his good character from general reputation, it is allowable, on cross-examination, for witness to testify to his having heard of specific instances of conduct tending to disprove the witness' estimate of defendant's character." So, likewise, I am assuming—say you put up his bad character, if such. Could Mr. Cody—likewise, would Mr. Schroder be—would it be admissible for Mr. Schroder to question him about acts of good character? I am just guessing.

Mr. Schroder: I would think it would go both ways. Had you known so and so, or have you heard so and so.

Mr. Cody: Oh, yes; you get into hearsay which is inadmissible.

Mr. Schroder: That is what the section says.

[fol. 126] Mr. Cody: Yes; both ways. And by the same token I have that same right of cross-examination when we get into that field if he puts up evidence of good character.

The Court: That is another point that has been bothering me.

Mr. Schroder: We come back to an unfortunate play of words in these decisions, because what we are talking about in a libel suit—

The Court: Is good character.

Mr. Schroder: No; is not the damage to a man's character but damage to his reputation, and that is entirely different from his character. A character is what he is; and reputation is what other people think he is.

The Court: Well, say reputation. Couldn't you question him in regard, didn't he do so and so? Did you know he contributed so much to the Boys' Club?

Mr. Schroder: Had you known that, would that affect your estimate as to his reputation?

The Court: That's right.

[fol. 127] Mr. Schroder: I think it works both ways, although I admit I am not—I don't have any—

The Court: I have read some of these Georgia cases on that.

Mr. Cody: I think Cox against Strickland in 101 Georgia answers pretty well that problem.

Mr. Schroder: Yes; that is a leading case; no question about it.

The Court: What does it say? I have read Cox vs. Strickland, but not on that.

Mr. Cody: Plaintiff, under the general rule, has the right on cross-examination of going into special facts to ascertain the nature and extent of the knowledge of the witness. Where a plaintiff's character is in issue, he has a right to sustain it by proof of his general character if he can.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: Now, that covers both sides of it.

The Court: All right. Suppose he puts Coach Butts on the stand. You would not be permitted to ask him any questions in regard to specific acts, would you?

[fol. 128] Mr. Cody: Oh, yes.

Mr. Schroder: I doubt that.

Mr. Cody: You are getting into another field now.

The Court: No, sir.

Mr. Schroder: No, sir; that is the same field.

The Court: That is the same field.

Mr. Cody: On the question of reputation and character, yes; I will answer it as to character; yes.

Mr. Joiner: Your Honor, isn't that Code Section now confined by the very words of it to cross-examination of witnesses who testify as to the character of other witnesses for the purpose of impeaching the witnesses, and not—

The Court: Here is the first sentence in that Code Section. "A witness may be impeached by evidence as to his general bad character." I assume that Coach Butts will go on the stand.

[fol. 129] Mr. Schroder: (Nods head in affirmative.)

The Court: Can the defendant attempt to impeach Coach Butts by evidence of immoral acts or something?

Mr. Cody: On the subject of impeachment, you are getting into a different field. We were not talking about impeachment of a witness when you first raised this point. You were talking about cross-examination of a witness who testified as to good character.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: That is a different point.

The Court: Well, both of those points I want to raise.

Mr. Lockerman: Let's do talk about the ones you raised, whether or not he can go into specific acts if Butts is put on the stand.

The Court: Or if any witness is put on the stand.

Mr. Cody: I don't think a party can testify as to his own good reputation.

[fol. 130] Mr. Lockerman: I don't either.

The Court: I didn't mean that. Suppose we have got character witnesses on both sides.

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

The Court: You would be permitted to question the witnesses about the good character in regard to certain specific acts: had you known this, would your opinion still be the same?

Mr. Cody: Right, right. He has the same privilege with respect to any witness that I put on the stand that would testify to the bad character.

Mr. Lockerman: You could only ask him the general questions as to reputation, the witnesses you put on.

The Court: Have you known Coach Butts? How long have you known him? Do you know his general character and reputation in the community in which he lives? Is it good or bad? Right there he stops.

Mr. Schroder: No, no. Would you believe him under oath?

The Court: We are talking about reputation now.

[fol. 131] Mr. Schroder: That is what I am talking about.

Mr. Cody: No; you are behind.

Mr. Lockerman: And he stops right there.

The Court: That's right.

Mr. Lockerman: Now, if they testified that his reputation was bad—

The Court: Bad.

Mr. Lockerman: —he can't go into any specific acts.

The Court: That's right.

Mr. Lockerman: Now, we, on the other hand, in cross-examining him, assuming that we did cross-examine him, we could ask him if he knew about good deeds.

The Court: Philanthropic deeds, and enumerate them.

[fol. 132] Mr. Lockerman: That's right. After he testified to that, assuming that he would, whether he did or did not, whether it would make any difference in his opinion as to his reputation. Of course, Mr. Cody cannot go back into this.

The Court: That ends that.

Mr. Lockerman: That ends that.

The Court: That's right; that is his reputation.

Mr. Lockerman: That's right. Now, if, in the testimony of Butts when he is put on the stand and under cross-examination by Mr. Cody—

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Lockerman: —can Mr. Cody ask Mr. Butts anything about specific acts of conduct on his part?

The Court: Now, that is getting into—

Mr. Schroder: Getting into the guts of it.

[fol. 133] The Court: That is getting into the character of it, as to his veracity as a witness.

Mr. Strubing: That's right.

Mr. Cody: That's right. You are getting away from character now.

Mr. Schroder: After all, the Georgia Code Section says that libel is an injury not to character but a libel is an injury to reputation. There is a difference.

The Court: Yes, sir; but what I am driving at, suppose the defendant, in an effort to impeach his character as to his veracity and so forth, can he be asked specific acts?

Mr. Schroder: No more so than we could other witnesses, I don't think. Somewhere there ought to be some authority.

Mr. Cody: There is plenty of it.

Mr. Schroder: Let's have it.

Mr. Cody: 130 Federal, page 24.

Mr. Schroder: 130 what?

[fol. 134] Mr. Cody: Best against Kessler.

Mr. Schroder: Give me the citation, please.

Mr. Cody: 130 Federal, page 24.

Mr. Schroder: Seventh Circuit?

Mr. Cody: Case in the Seventh Circuit.

Mr. Smith: Is that a Federal 2d or—

The Court: Federal?

Mr. Cody: Just Federal.

Mr. Lockerman: Not Federal 2d? Its so long ago.

Mr. Cody: That is a situation where the plaintiff testified in his own behalf, goes to his credibility as a witness. Bear in mind, we haven't come to the question of impeachment yet, because on the subject of impeachment we have got three Code Sections in Georgia, three specific Code [fol. 135] Sections that deal with impeachment. Only some phases of this case come within the provision of those sections.

The Court: All right; what is it? 38-1804. What is the other?

Mr. Schroder: 1804—38-1804.

Mr. Cody: Let me give you the Code Sections on impeachment. 38-1801, 1802, and 1803.

The Court: 38-1801, 1802, and 1803.

Mr. Cody: Let me read you this last section. "A witness may be impeached by contradictory statements previously made by him as to matters relevant to his testimony and to the case. Before contradictory statements may be proved against him, (unless they are written statements made under oath in connection with some judicial proceedings) the time, place, person, and circumstances attending the former statement shall be called to his mind with as much certainty as possible; and if in writing, the same shall be shown to him, or read in his hearing, if in existence; and to lay this foundation, he may be recalled at any time. When thus impeached, he may be sustained by proof of general good character, the effect of the evidence to be determined by the jury." Now, I want to state to the court here and now in unmistakable terms that a lot of statements have been made in this case in which I expect to apply the rule of impeachment, and when you do and prove previous contradictory statements or any of the [fol. 136] other impeaching qualities referred to in any one of the three Code Sections, specific acts or conduct, when they become applicable, I intend to take advantage of it.

The Court: I am basing this on some of the questions that have been propounded. Say you ask Coach Butts, had he made a statement or did he make a statement that he did call Coach Bryant and make these certain statements which are set out in the allegations—

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

The Court: —and he denies them. Then how could any of those specific acts about which you propounded questions in regard to a night at the Phoenix Motel in Lexington, Kentucky, how could that be admissible?

Mr. Cody: Because the jury may not believe him under oath, because he has testified both ways under oath. It's got a lot to do with the case; as a matter of fact, it gets almost down to the guts of the case.

Mr. Schroder: Say that again, please.

The Court: You want me to ask the question again?

[fol. 137] Mr. Schroder: I didn't get the answer except he says it gets down to the guts of the case. What is the reasoning of it?

Mr. Cody: Suppose he testifies under oath—well, he has already testified by deposition, which is under oath. Suppose there are a lot of misstatements in there.

The Court: Of course, you can question him about his deposition.

Mr. Cody: Well, that is impeachment.

Mr. Smith: What is relevant about his being in the Phoenix Motel?

Mr. Schroder: Well, that is—I can't—I can't answer that at the moment.

The Court: I am not questioning the—what I am saying is—

Mr. Cody: I am not going to disclose my entire case.

The Court: How could that—have you got any authority for how that could be?

Mr. Cody: I have got the authority of this Code Section, when a man testifies under oath.

[fol. 138] The Court: Oh, yes; I know you can show that he made various, certain contradictory statements before, but how can you show that he might have had a woman at the Phoenix Motel, or whatever it might have been, how would that be relevant?

Mr. Cody: It could become relevant in several different points of view. If he won't tell the truth about it, the jury has got a right to say he might not tell the truth about anything. That is how you impeach a witness. In the final analysis—

The Court: Yes, sir; I can see where your proposition is whether he admitted this telephone call or not, or if he did, but I can't see the relevancy of specific acts with some woman, if that is what eventually comes up, and I am basing it on some of your depositions.

Mr. Joiner: Is Your Honor referring to specific acts, are you limiting it now to impeachment?

Mr. Schroder: No.

Mr. Joiner: Or just generally.

Mr. Schroder: The man is on the stand—

[fol. 139] The Court: The man is on the stand, Coach Butts is on the stand; you are questioning him, and you ask him about statements he made to Griffith or whoever it was that he admitted doing this, or if he did, I am assuming that would be relevant, but what about the fact if he spent a night with a woman before the Georgia-Alabama game, how could that be relevant? I am basing it on the nature of the depositions that were propounded.

Mr. Cody: Well, a witness may be impeached by proving the contrary to the facts to which he has already testified.

Mr. Lockerman: Relevant facts only.

The Court: It has to be relevant facts to the issue.

Mr. Cody: A witness may be impeached by disproving the facts testified to by him.

The Court: That's right. I go with you there. That is in regard to the statement, say, he made to Coach Griffith or some other coach; I don't know. How about whether he spent the night in the Tutwiler Hotel with some woman before the Georgia-Alabama Game?

Mr. Cody: I say it is relevant to his competency as a witness, his credibility as a witness.

[fol. 140] Mr. Schroder: Under what Code Section?

Mr. Cody: 1803.

Mr. Joiner: Your Honor, you have got numerous statements by this plaintiff to the effect that he has never done anything disloyal.

The Court: Well, I don't know that that is disloyal. I am not willing to take judicial—

Mr. Joiner: Well, Your Honor, I think—

Mr. Cody: I can give you an actual illustration of being disloyal to his team, carrying a woman around with him, with the team, of this character. You don't think that that is material?

The Court: I don't think it is a proper thing to do, but I don't know—I can't see—

. . . . . .

Mr. Joiner: Your Honor, on this point of disloyalty, I realize at first it might not seem to be relevant, but it is very definitely relevant to this case for this reason. He had made a number of statements that he has done no act of [fol. 141] disloyalty. Also he has made the statement that he has faithfully carried out the trust that has been given to him in the guidance and education of young men. Now, it is certainly relevant to show in this case, if in fact there is evidence to this effect, that he has betrayed that trust by carrying a woman with him on football trips, that he has been disloyal to the University of Georgia by charging them, without any justification or authorization whatsoever, for the expenses of her room and transportation, and other things. There is no question but that under numerous cases that evidence of similar acts which go to prove motive or intent are admissible. It doesn't make any difference whether they are acts of specific misconduct or acts that are not of specific misconduct. It is a question of motive and intent. They are always admissible.

The Court: How are you going to prove that—say you prove he took a woman to the Georgia-Alabama game and stayed at the Tutwiler Hotel. How is that any evidence of disloyalty?

Mr. Joiner: We can show further it was charged to the University of Georgia, it would be fraud and deceit to the University.

The Court: Well, now, we can't get into trying that case.

Mr. Joiner: It would be an evidence of his intent, and it would refute his statement that he has never done anything disloyal.

[fol. 142] Mr. Schroder: He has got to prove fraud and deceit. As soon as that was brought to his attention, he paid it. That is not fraud. You have got to prove fraud if you are going to do that.

Mr. Joiner: Assuming we are able to prove the fraud.

Mr. Schroder: I still don't think it would be relevant. I might illegally charge parking to the Government or taxi-fare, when technically I wasn't supposed to do it, and sometimes you have to make refunds. I know, because—

Mr. Joiner: If it is a question of technical error, it should be excluded. If it is shown it was done knowingly and willfully, it is certainly evidence of motive and intent on the part of the plaintiff. He testified his motive and intent on giving this information was nothing disloyal to the University of Georgia, and his motive and intent in this telephone conversation, which presumably they will admit that the telephone conversation took place and that football was discussed, but the motive and intent of the plaintiff in talking to Coach Bryant was not one of the disloyalty.

The Court: We are getting off carrying a woman to the Tutwiler Hotel before the Georgia-Alabama game. I don't know what the rules and regulations are. I imagine they are pretty liberal. I know they are in—what do you call it—proselyting. I know they are there.

Mr. Bondurant: The spelling is a little different, but I think it is close.

[fol. 143] Mr. Strubing: Excuse me.

The Court: I am sorry; I thought it would be well—

Mr. Schroder: You going back to the office?

Mr. Strubing: Going back to Philadelphia.

Mr. Schroder: Good to have seen you.

The Court: I can't—unless you can show me something, I don't believe that those particular acts—I didn't know that was your theory. I thought your theory on that was showing his reputation, and I didn't think that was admissible.

Mr. Cody: There is no question but what it would be admissible on reputation on cross-examination, not on direct examination, of a witness.

Mr. Lockerman: Not cross-examination of Butts.

The Court: If they put his character in evidence, if they do put his character in evidence, then, on what we just discussed, I would be inclined to think they could ask the witness about specific acts.

[fol. 144]

TRANSCRIPT OF PRE-TRIAL CONFERENCE—July 29, 1963

The Court: I will be frank with you, as far as I can see I think it is a plea of justification, but I think it is libelous per se.

Mr. Cody: It might be, but it depends on—it depends on what the evidence is, Judge. If you base it on the man's business at the time the publication took place, I don't know—

The Court: I don't believe, Mr. Cody, I will admit that that case—I don't believe that fact that a man is temporarily out of work, if he has been engaged in something for thirty-five years and he is temporarily out of hazardous occupation for six weeks or two months, I don't think—

Mr. Schroder: I didn't mean it that way. You are absolutely right about that part of it, because you were taking it in its literal sense. What I mean to say was that if the evidence shows he has given up this business, and that is what I claim it will show, and would change the question of whether or not—

Mr. Schroder: There is evidence—

Mr. Cody: —it is libelous per se. A man could spend fifty years in a particular business and get out of it completely, and then somebody comes along and libels him, just because it had something—it had some connection with the business which he was in for fifty years, it doesn't make it [fol. 145] libelous per se. The evidence might be such in this case that it will be libelous per se.

* * * * * * *

The Court: Well, I think in fairness to both parties I should—I stand to be corrected by the Court above, but I think it is a plea of justification, and I will rule to that effect.

Mr. Cody: Now, Judge, the next—

The Court: If you want me to rule in the courtroom—we have got the records here; you make your points now where you can certainly protect your record.

Mr. Schroder: If it will be understood that I do here and now and will hereafter except to that, there is no need for me to make it any other time.

The Court: It will be in the record; that will be the ruling of the Court.

Mr. Cody: I think the next most important point in this case is whether or not, for any reason, specific acts of misconduct of this Plaintiff are admissible in evidence. I am not talking about the question of character witnesses now [fol. 146] and cross-examination. I think everybody pretty well agrees what the law is on that.

Cox Against Strickland is about as clear as it can be, but there are a half dozen reasons why acts of—specific acts of misconduct are admissible in this case, and I am going to ask Mr. Joiner to speak briefly on that point, because, as I view this case, it is one of the most important points in the case. We have been—we are charged in this complaint with having libeled this Plaintiff ten million dollars, and we have got a right under those circumstances and under the—under the circumstances as alleged in this complaint to bring in certain acts. Some of it are in mitigation of damages, doesn't go directly to the question of liability, and I will let Mr. Joiner, he has a brief before him.

I think we ought to give Mr. Schroder a copy.

Mr. Schroder: That would be nice.

The Court: The only case I can find on that question is the case someone cited here before, and I believe it was Kessler versus Best or Best versus Kessler, an old Federal Court decision back in 133 Federal—not Federal 2d—and I shepardized that case, and I can't find anything on the point; I mean, I can't find where it has been cited.

Mr. Cody: Is that the mitigation of damages case?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: Here is my point—

[fol. 147] The Court: Have we got the 133 up here?

Mr. Joiner: 130, I believe it is, Your Honor.

Mr. Cody: Let me make one point.

The Court: Let me talk to Professor Kirby at Vanderbilt Law School; maybe he can help us.

The Court: This is Professor James Kirby of Vanderbilt Law School.

Mr. Schroder: Kirby?

The Court: Yes. He is the counselor for the Southeastern Conference, and they have requested that he sit in on the hearing, just have a seat inside the bar.

Mr. Schroder: I have no objection.

Mr. Cody: No.

The Court: There is no objection, Professor.

[fol. 148] The Court: He said he is a special counsel for the Southeastern Conference.

Mr. Schroder: Maybe he can help us; maybe he will bring some law with him.

The Court: I don't know whether these professors of law will do you any good.

Mr. Joiner: Judge, Homer said he didn't think you have the 130 Federal here. I have a copy.

The Court: I have read the case. In that case—

Mr. Joiner: I think you will find, Judge, from reading the cases that we have cited in our memorandum in the light of this petition that there are a good many other reasons other than mitigation of damages.

The Court: What would be other reasons?

Mr. Cody: Well, let me give you—pick up the article. We have got four or five different reasons set forth. Give him the substance of it.

Mr. Joiner: I think the first thing to consider is just briefly the Federal rule on evidence. There are four rules [fol. 149] that have been established by recent Fifth Circuit—by recent decisions of the Fifth Circuit. The first is the question of admissibility as procedural and not substantive. Federal Courts are not required to follow State Law.

Second is that in determining the admissibility of evidence the Federal Court is not bound by State Court rule that is less liberal than another rule which the Federal Court might be free to adopt.

The next rule is the Federal Rule concerning evidence, is one of admissibility and not exclusion. Of course, that comes from a plain reading of Rule 43.

And then the last one, and this is very important, although Rule 43(a) specifies three categories of evidence which shall be admitted in Federal Courts, it does not prohibit the receipt of probative evidence outside these three categories. Those cases are Monarch Insurance Company versus Stack(?), Dallas County versus Commercial Union, and Hamby versus Commercial Union, and Hamby versus Woolworth, all recent Fifth Circuit cases.

The first purpose for which this evidence would be admissible would be in cross-examination of the Plaintiff's character witnesses, if the Plaintiff does offer any character witnesses, and we filed a previous brief on that point. I think we pretty well covered it.

The Court: You covered that.

Mr. Joiner: The second is that specific acts of misconduct may be inquired into on the cross-examination of the Plaintiff in order to test the credibility of the Plaintiff, and, in this connection, the case of Best versus Kessler, which Your Honor has referred to, is pertinent.

Now, in that case—

[fol. 150] The Court: I thought that case was on mitigation of damages.

Mr. Joiner: Yes, sir, Your Honor, it is; but it is also on this point in this sense. The evidence, you will recall in Best versus Kessler was admitted and the objection was not excluding the evidence but was on a charge which limited the evidence to this one ground, the credibility of the plaintiff. There was no objection to the admissibility of the evidence for that purpose, and so the case does not rule specifically on that, but the dictum in the case clearly states that it was admissible for the purpose of credibility of the witness, and also, this, of course, indicates a decision by a District Judge to the effect that it is admissible for the purpose of credibility.

The Seventh Circuit went on to say it is admissible in litigation of damages, and the District Court erred in limiting it to strictly credibility and not allowing it on the mitigation of damages.

Also a recent Fifth Circuit case has some pertinence, the case of Delpit versus Nocuba Shipping Company. Although it is not a libel case, it does deal with some of the same types of misconduct that we are concerned with in this case. This was a case in which—

Mr. Lockerman: What is the citation?

Mr. Joiner: It is in the brief; 302 Fed. 2d. 835.

A longshoreman brought an action to recover for injuries received as a result of the alleged unseaworthiness of a vessel. He was allowed, that is the counsel for the [fol. 151] Defendant, in cross-examining the Plaintiff, to go into his former common law wife and children by his former common law wife, and the Court said, although this testimony may perhaps have had a slightly prejudicial influence, it was properly admitted in an attempt to show an inconsistency with a prior declaration by the Plaintiff and thereby impeach his credibility.

Of course, we would have to have some inconsistency, but it is our position there will be some inconsistencies, and this testimony would be relevant to show the inconsistencies in prior statements of the Plaintiff. That covers that category.

The next one gets into mitigation of damages. We have three separate cases of mitigation of damages. The first is different from evidence for the purpose of showing that the Defendant has a bad reputation. That is Best versus Kessler. The first phase is that such evidence is admissible for the purpose of showing that the Plaintiff is not a man of delicate sensitivity.

In this case the Plaintiff has brought his action, and I am quoting now from the complaint, for the injury to his peace, happiness and feelings. Now, that is a different element of his damages from injury to his reputation. Having tendered this issue, then any evidence which tends to show that the man is not delicately sensitive is pertinent because it shows that he was not injured to the same extent, his feelings were not injured to the same extent as would be true with a more sensitive man. In this case citing the case of Wamsley versus Kopczynski—

Mr. Schroder: Who?

[fol. 152] Mr. Joiner: Wamsley versus Kopczynski, it looks like, and they are talking about this same type of evidence.

"This evidence was potent; it means much viewed in the light of other evidence in the case. Such a character as it was intended to portray is not usually delicately sensitive, nor easily injured to any great extent. The jury might have taken that view, and have determined that mere nominal damages would in their judgment suffice."

The Court: That is on the question of mitigation of damages?

Mr. Joiner: Yes, sir; but it is a different phase of mitigation than just the reputation itself.

Mr. Schroder: Is that a Federal case?

Mr. Joiner: No; that is a New York case.

Then, there was a Georgia case in 31 Ga. 309, which does not specifically hold such evidence to be admitted for the purpose of showing the man is of not delicate sensitivity, but I believe that the inference is present in that case.

And there is the case, a Southwestern case, and I believe that is a Texas case; also another New York case, and finally a case from the District Court in Massachusetts dealing with an analogous situation, not specific acts of misconduct but acts of prior abuse, giving and taking abuse. That was Mayor Curley, and Mayor Curley had given on any number of occasions, given the type of abuse he was [fol. 153] suing for, and this also received that type of abuse. The Court held that evidence of this was pertinent as bearing on the sensitivity of the feelings of the Plaintiff in the case.

We come down now to the second phase of the mitigation and that is that this evidence is admissible for the purpose of showing the Plaintiff is not a man of integrity. In paragraph 12 of his complaint the Plaintiff states that his action is for a trespass upon his integrity. Integrity is defined by Webster's New International Dictionary as "Moral soundness; honesty; freedom from corrupting influence or practice; especially strictness in the fulfillment of contracts, the discharge of agencies, trusts and the like."

In the brief we cite a number of cases that adopt the same definition of integrity.

Now, while the case of Best versus Kessler talks expressly about mitigation of reputation, I think that it has a very definite bearing on this issue of integrity, because the charge there was made with reference to the man's business. He was charged with dishonesty and clandestine activity in connection with the business transactions, and I believe that reading the holding of the case, although the word "Integrity" is not mentioned specifically, would indicate that that case stands for the proposition that such evidence would also be admissible on the question of integrity.

We come now to the question of mitigation in general, showing the man's character or reputation was injured or was not good before the libel. The same thing that you would argue where there was proper damage to an automobile prior to the collision, out of which the case arises. The simple logical argument is that it had previously been damaged, and so the subsequent damage is not as great as it would have been if the—there had been no previous damage.

[fol. 154] The Court: All that is true, but doesn't the Georgia code limit you on character as to the form of questions?

Mr. Lockerman: Yes, sir.

Mr. Joiner: I think the Georgia code is limited strictly to character evidence for the purpose of impeaching a witness. I don't think it goes any further than that, but even if it does, under the Federal rule we are entitled to the more liberal rule, and the fact that Georgia Courts exclude it would not cause it to be excluded in this case.

The Court: When the Circuit Court of Appeals passes on this case—I am sure they will one way or the other—isn't the question going to be on the substantive law of Georgia?

Mr. Joiner: No, sir. Cite Monarch Insurance Company versus Spach, Dallas County versus Commercial Union Assurance Company—well, those two cases are recent Fifth Circuit cases.

The question of admissibility of evidence is procedural and not substantive, and, therefore, Federal Courts are not, under the case of Erie versus Tompkins, bound to follow State law.

Mr. Schroder: That is a different situation; that is a different thing. This is brought under a statute of Georgia, under a libel law of Georgia. Ordinarily, I think, whether it gets to be a question of whether something is hearsay or not hearsay, the rule you just read I think applies.

[fol. 155] The Court: The only difference in this case and the State Court is that the—it is in the Federal Court by virtue of diversity of citizenship. As I understand the law it is incumbent on me to try a case as it would be tried in the State Court, as far as admissibility of evidence and so forth.

Mr. Joiner: These three cases are directly contrary to that view.

Mr. Cody: That is not correct, Judge. You have got a false impression there.

The Court: Well, some statements that I have read are it is correct. Maybe you have got some recent ones.

Mr. Joiner: These are all leading cases and are cited by Moore as being leading cases on this point.

Mr. Cody: On the definition of libel; yes; that would be true but not as to the admissibility of evidence.

The Court: On recovery of damages?

Mr. Cody: Well, I think on damages it would be substantive law.

The Court: Of Georgia?

[fol. 156] Mr. Cody: Yes.

Mr. Joiner: But this Monarch Insurance Company case, I believe, is the first case which was passed on the points, and it specifically holds that admissibility of evidence is procedural and not substantive, and Federal Courts and diversity cases—

Mr. Cody: Is that that decision rendered by Judge Wisdom?

Mr. Joiner: Yes; I believe it is.

Mr. Cody: They go into a lot of detail in that case, Judge, about the admissibility of evidence. And also the other rule that in determining the admissibility of evidence in Federal Courts, the Federal Court is not bound by a State Court rule that is less liberal than another rule which the Federal Court would be free to adopt.

And then, of course, under 43(a) the plain reading of the rule itself, and its applicability in diversity cases, is that the Federal rule concerning evidence is one of admissibility and not exclusion, and, therefore, where there is a conflict between a State and Federal rule, the Plaintiff is, under Rule 43, entitled to the benefit of the more favorable rule, and these cases that I cite indicate "More favorable" means "More liberal".

The Court: You mean Federal cases?

[fol. 157] Mr. Joiner: Yes, sir. These Fifth Circuit cases are entitled to be admitted. So, no Georgia case has any pertinency in determining this issue, unless the Georgia case bears on admissibility or unless the Georgia case excludes it and the Federal rule also excludes it. But the very fact it is excluded by a Georgia case would not exclude it in a diversity action in the Federal Court.

The Court: Your contention is that the rules here should be the same as it is in the Kessler versus Best or Best versus Kessler?

Mr. Cody: Right.

The Court: In other words, in that case, as I recall it, had some question about the business dealings and somebody suing somebody for libel; they raised the question in that, hadn't he had an affair with a Spanish actress or something like that?

Mr. Cody: That's right.

Mr. Joiner: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: Here is—go ahead.

Mr. Joiner: Another category, which, as far as I am able to determine, is unquestioned in any jurisdiction, on the [fol. 158] laws—on the facts, we have got a difference probably on facts. In Paragraph 11(b) Plaintiff complains the article charges him with being a corrupt person, which it does not. Now, from reading the complaint, the only—

The Court: You admit it is libelous per se?

Mr. Joiner: No, sir; no, sir. I admit it charges him with being a corrupt person—

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Joiner: —but on that point, from the case of Morris versus Evans in 22 Ga. App., if mere fraud, dishonesty, immorality or vice be imputed, no action lies without proof of special damages, so to charge a person with being corrupt is not in and of itself libelous per se.

The Court: If it affects him in his business it is, though.

Mr. Joiner: Yes, sir; if it is made with reference to his trade or profession.

The Court: This is made—I mean, the whole article is based on his profession as a coach.

[fol. 159] Mr. Joiner: But this Supreme Court case seems to be right in point on that, unless he is engaged in the profession at the time of the libel.

The Court: I mean, in fairness to you, I am not inclined to—I mean, the interim period of six weeks, the fact that he had resigned from the athletic directorship and so forth, I believe as far as the petition alleges—

Mr. Joiner: I agree with you so far as the petition alleges.

The Court: I think it is libelous per se.

Mr. Joiner: I mean, the petition doesn't show he is not any longer in the profession, but this case does not make any distinction as to time.

The Court: We can check the record in the case to see what the distinction was, but it is apparent from the case that we have the same situation, that a person was out of business for a little while and went right back into business.

The Court: That is the case in the 50 Ga.

Mr. Joiner: No, sir. This case right here, 143 Ga.
[fol. 160] Mr. Cody: 143, Ga., isn't it?
Mr. Joiner: Yes, sir.
Mr. Cody: The Weatherholt case.
Mr. Joiner: The 5th Headnote covers this point. The Plaintiff in this case was in business and went out of business, and was libeled, and went apparently right back into business, and they said since he was not in business at the time of the libel he could not recover, in the absence of proof of special damages. If he can show special damages—
Mr. Joiner: He is not pleading special damages.
The Court: He is not pleading special damages.
Mr. Joiner: No, sir; but if he can show special damages, that is another question.

The Court: I say, if it could be shown that he did that, and that he used it and he did not repay it under such circumstances, he had to be called on for it, wouldn't your circumstances go into, even at that, would it be admissible.
[fol. 161] Mr. Schroder: No, sir. I am saying it would not be admissible. It could not possibly be admissible. We are suing, as you read there a moment ago, for the damage they have done to him in his chosen profession.
The Court: Yes, sir.
Mr. Schroder: And that is what the suit is based on.
The Court: Well, if the suit is brought on the basis as a football coach, Georgia Courts have even held that you can be defamatory to a farmer, that that is included—I know it covers football.
Mr. Joiner: But that the issue—
The Court: That is what he has got in his petition, his reputation as a successful coach and leader of the coaching profession.
Mr. Cody: You are assuming, of course, that the evidence will fully justify all of that. Your judgment now as to what you intend to do would be tempered with what the evidence is on that?

The Court: Yes, sir.

[fol. 162] Mr. Cody: You could—because on this particular point it does turn on what the evidence eventually will be.

The Court: What I am saying is this. The fact that he was out of it six weeks and during this six-week interval this article appeared, between February 28 and March 23, I don't think it should affect him as far as—

Mr. Cody: Okay.

The Court: 143 Ga., nevertheless, to the contra—

Mr. Joiner: There might be a difference if the evidence shows he definitely left the athletic field forever prior to the publication of this article.

The Court: Well, I assume you are not going to show that from what the petition says.

Mr. Schroder: That's right.

Mr. Joiner: I think it would be a question.

The Court: If he says, "I got out of the coaching profession, I never intended to go back, and as far as I am con-

[fol. 163] cerned I was through with the coaching profession," I think your 143 Ga. might apply, but unless it was—

Mr. Cody: We will hold that part of it in abeyance; I understand Your Honor's ruling.

* * * * * * * *

Mr. Schroder: The petition in this case was deliberately drawn so as to confine it to his reputation in his profession. Misconduct, which you are speaking of, hasn't anything to do with the profession.

Mr. Cody: Look at your punitive damages situation.

Mr. Schroder: Sir?

Mr. Cody: Look at your punitive damage situation.

Mr. Schroder: Like I say, if there is any misunderstanding as to what that means, then we will redraw that part of it. We were tracking the punitive damages statute, or trying to; maybe we did embellish it a little bit.

[fol. 164] HUGH FLEMMING, called as a witness on behalf of the defendant, after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. You are Mr. Hugh Fleming?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. I believe you have been sworn as a witness, have you not, Mr. Fleming?
A. I have.
Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Fleming?
A. At the present time I am residing in Athens.
Q. What is your business connection?
A. I am with Southern Bell Telephone Company.
Q. Were you at one time manager of the Athens branch?
A. I was district manager in Athens until July 1st.
Q. And then you moved to Atlanta?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Although you still maintain your residence at Athens?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Mr. Fleming, in response to a subpoena, did you bring with you a toll ticket—
A. Yes, sir.
Q. —of your company with reference to a telephone call, long-distance telephone call that took place on September the 13th?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Will you let me see that, sir?
A. Those are copies attached.

[fol. 165] Mr. Cody: I'd like to have this identified as Defendant's Exhibit No. 13.

The Clerk: 13; yes, sir. Defendant's Exhibit No. 13 is a toll ticket.

Mr. Cody: Yes.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Fleming, is this long-distance toll ticket on an IBM card?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which would be difficult for a layman to interpret; is that a correct statement?

A. Some parts of it; yes, sir.

Q. Would you be kind enough to tell us what that card discloses?

A. Well, this card indicates that on September the 13th a call was placed to Tuscaloosa, Alabama, to telephone number 752-7441. It shows that it was placed by Wallace Butts and indicates that it was placed to Paul B-r-i-n-c-e.

Q. Is that spelling legible, the latter part of it? Are you having difficulty trying to find out who that is?

A. It appears very legible to me; yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Fleming—

[fol. 166] Mr. Schroder: I didn't hear the answer.

The Court: He said it appeared legible to him. But how was the name spelled?

The Witness: B-r-i-n-c-e.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Fleming, what time did that call—what time does that toll ticket show the call was made?

A. This indicates this call was made at 10:29 a.m.

Q. On September 13?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 1962?

A. My ticket has no indication of the year on it, sir. It was billed during October of '62, but the ticket itself here does not carry the year.

Q. You don't maintain your records back of one year, do you?

A. We maintain them for a period of twelve months normally; yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Fleming, on the back of that card or toll ticket, did you have some symbols indicating the time consumed in that particular call?

A. Yes, sir; we have.

Q. Could you interpret for the jury what that first circular symbol means?

A. Well, the first circular symbol on the back indicates the time that the call was established.

Q. What about the second one?

A. The second one indicates the number of minutes that the call lasted.

[fol. 167] Q. And the third one?

A. Indicates the number of seconds that the call lasted.

Q. How many minutes and how many seconds was it?

A. This shows fifteen minutes and two seconds.

Q. Does it—does the toll ticket show who the call was charged to?

A. The call—the ticket indicates the call was billed on a credit card number—card number 543-4531A-K35.

Q. Have you checked your records to see whose credit card that was?

A. No, sir; I haven't.

Q. Do you know that telephone was billed, what telephone number was billed for that call?

A. Yes, sir. This was billed to telephone number 543-4351.

Q. In Athens?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whose number that is?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whose is it?

A. That is the telephone at the University, the athletic association.

The Court: Did you say the University of Georgia Athletic Association or the University of Georgia?

The Witness: It is the University of Georgia Athletic Association.

[fol. 168] By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Fleming, did you bring with you a toll ticket indicating a call from Tuscaloosa to Athens?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you let me see that a minute?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: Will you identify these as No. 14?

The Clerk: Yes, sir. Defendant's Exhibit No. 14 for identification is a toll ticket.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Will you interpret for the jury what this toll ticket discloses? Give us the date of it first.

A. The date shown on this one is September the 16th.

Q. 1962?

A. Again I do not have the year indicated on this ticket.

Q. Yes, sir.

The Court: When was it billed?

The Witness: Frankly, sir, I don't know. This one was billed in Alabama.

[fol. 169] Mr. Cody: That is supplied by another deposition, Your Honor.

The Witness: And I did not have it.

The Court: I was ahead of you.

Mr. Cody: That information is in another deposition.

The Witness: This was a call that was placed to Athens, Georgia, from Tuscaloosa. The telephone Li 6-0262. It shows that it was a personal call to Coach Wallace Butts.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Does it disclose the length of time that the call consumed?

A. Yes, sir. This one shows the conversation lasted sixty-seven minutes.

Q. And that is September 16?

A. September 16th; yes, sir.

Q. Let me have that just a minute. Would you mind leaving these exhibits with the Court until the completion of this case?

A. Mr. Cody, that would sure be up to the Court. These records should remain in our custody. We have copies of them if they would suffice; I'd like to leave those.

[fol. 170] The Court: Is there any objection to supplant these with photostatic copies?

Mr. Schroder: Of course not.

Mr. Cody: Very well. I have one or two more questions to ask Mr. Fleming.

The Court: All right, sir. They will be substituted with photostatic copies. They will have to remain here and the photostats can be made here.

Mr. Cody: We have photostats. He's made them for us.

The Court: All right, sir, go ahead.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Fleming, are these records kept in the ordinary course of business of your company? Is it customary to maintain records of this type in the course of your business?

A. Yes, sir; it is.

Q. Is this the type permanent record that is made in connection with a long-distance call by your company?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 171] Mr. Cody: Did I give you a copy of the other one? You have both?

Mr. Schroder: I have two.

Mr. Lockerman: Do you remember what those exhibit numbers are?

Mr. Cody: I think we'd better mark the copies, ma'am. This would be 14.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. On this last exhibit No. 14, Mr. Fleming, what was the—what was the time of that call? When was it established, the connection?

A. This call was just about eight minutes of nine in the evening.

Q. Are the symbols on the back of these toll cards stamped by machine?

A. Yes, sir. They are stamped by a Calculagraph machine.

Q. That is an automatic machine that records the timing?

A. Right.

Q. Did I give you back the first ticket?

Now, let's see if we have the exhibits. This will be No. 13.

The Clerk: There are two of these.

[fol. 172] Mr. Cody: I believe that's all.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Mr. Fleming, of course you have no idea what the content of either one of these telephone conversations consisted of, do you?

A. No, sir; I have not.

Q. Is there any way to find out by the telephone company or from the telephone company?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you bring with you, Mr. Fleming, records of the following long-distance calls which were charged to the credit card of Coach Wallace Butts? I will read this list off, and you let me know if you brought them in, please, sir. October the 30th to Coach Ray Graves of the University of Florida; December the 14th, Coach 'Rabbit' Smith, Palatka; December 21, John Rauch, who was at

Did you bring any of those other records?

A. No, sir; I don't have those.

Q. All right, sir. Your answer is you don't have them with you?

A. I don't have them with me is right.

The Court: Did you subpoena them?

Mr. Schroder: No, sir, I didn't subpoena them.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Schroder: I thought they were going to have all the ones here that were there. I didn't understand what was in the subpoena, what was called for by the subpoena. I have never seen the subpoena.

The Court: Do you want it?

Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir. But—he is going to have three or four days; would it be too much trouble if I give you this list?

[fol. 175] The Witness: I can get them; yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: I'd appreciate it very much.

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Schroder: You are here in Atlanta, are you, Mr. Fleming?

The Witness: I am in Atlanta. These are in Athens, but I can get them.

Mr. Schroder: Would it be all right if I have this reproduced and given to Mr. Fleming to get me these calls that I have listed here?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: Thank you, sir. I will do that within tomorrow, Your Honor. That's all.

The Court: Anything further from Mr. Fleming?

Mr. Cody: Nothing further.

[fol. 176] The Court: All right, sir, you may step down. Can Mr. Fleming be excused except insofar as obtaining those other records is concerned?

Mr. Schroder: Yes, Your Honor.

Mr. Lockerman: Wait just a second.

Mr. Schroder: I believe I subpoenaed you to bring some records from another area here.

The Court: That's all right—

Mr. Schroder: Can he give those to me so he would not have to come back tomorrow to identify them?

The Court: I thought you wanted him to come back with these other records.

Mr. Schroder: Not as a witness necessarily, but to deliver them.

The Court: He would have to identify the other records, would he not?

Mr. Schroder: Bring them all back tomorrow; is that right?

[fol. 177] The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Cody: Let me ask Mr. Fleming one more question.

The Court: All right, sir.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. On these toll tickets, Mr. Fleming, the Calculagraph record that appears on the back as to the time element, is that when the parties start talking or when the first effort is made to try to get the call through?

A. The time of the call you are speaking of now?
Q. Yes.
A. It is stamped at the time you start talking.

GEORGE BURNETT called as a witness on behalf of the defendant, after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. You have been sworn, Mr. Burnett?
A. Yes.
Q. Your name is Mr. George Burnett?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where do you live, Mr. Burnett?
[fol. 178] A. 3550 Durden Drive in Atlanta.
Q. How long have you lived in Atlanta?
A. Since December, 1957.
Q. Mr. Burnett, I show you what has been identified in this case as the Defendant's Exhibit No. 12. Will you take a look at that, please, sir, and hold it just a minute. Is that a record which you personally made?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. That your handwriting?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How many pages are there to that Exhibit?
A. Seven.
Q. Do you remember the circumstances under which that Exhibit was made?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Will you explain that to the jury?
A. On September the 13th I was in an office on Eleventh Street, in Atlanta of the Institute of Oral Hygiene. I was attempting to call to business associates by contacting them through an office of the Communications International which is located in the Rhodes-Haverty Building, and as I kept dialing the number, it was busy. Knowing that they had two lines coming into the office, I continued every twenty or thirty seconds to try to get in, and after four or five attempts there was some funny noises and electronic sounds, and the next thing I heard was an operator's voice talking to someone. It was evident it was into an open circuit, because you could hear the background noises. And I heard the operator say, "Coach Bryant is out on the field but is on his way to the phone," and asked a party she identified as Coach Butts, "Do you want to hold or do you [fol. 179] want him to return the call?" Coach Butts said, "I will hold." And within a matter of a minute a man's voice came on the line; the operator identified him. He said, "Hello, Wally." And Coach Butts said, "Hello, 'Bear.'" And they started talking.

I realized very quickly at the outset that this was a football talk, and Coach Butts began giving information to Coach Bryant about plays that Georgia was using, both offensively and defensively.

Mr. Schroder: Just a moment, Your Honor.

The Court: Just a minute.

Mr. Cody: Don't go into that.

The Court: I don't believe there is any objection made, but I will—

Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir; there is an objection made, and I would like for the jury, to be instructed.

The Court: What was the objection?

Mr. Schroder: That there were certain plays given over the phone, I think before he can identify a play, there is a conclusion on his part.

[fol. 180] Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

The Court: Yes, sir; I think it is a conclusion, and I sustain the objection to it.

Mr. Cody: I stopped him.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. How long had they talked before you started taking notes, Mr. Burnett?

A. Probably a minute or a minute and a half.

Q. What was the first statement, if any, that you recall that was made by either party?

A. To each other?

Q. Yes.

A. They said, "Hello."

Q. What's that?

A. They said, "Hello" to each other.

Q. What next?

A. Coach Bryant's first statement was, "Do you have anything for me?" And Coach Butts said, "Yes." And then they started talking.

Q. Look at your notes there, Mr. Burnett; you can refresh your recollection. Will you explain to the jury, if this does refresh your recollection, as to what was said, explain to the jury what you heard, and in doing so you can refer to your notes.

A. Well, as I have said before, I don't remember the exact words of those notes now. I do know the first page [fol. 181] I wrote 'Bear' Bryant's name down and Wally Butts' name down, and the words that Reismueller was the greatest in history. I do know—I do recall that Coach Butts told Coach Bryant that Reismueller was the best they ever had at Georgia in the history of Georgia.

Q. Do you know—did you know at the time whether or not Georgia had any such player as that?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Do you know whether or not the spelling on your memorandum there is correct?

A. I wrote it as it sounded; I don't know.

Q. You wrote it R-e-i-s—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —m-u-e-l-l-e-r?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Turn to the next page, Mr. Burnett. Does the reference to Rakestraw mean anything to you or bring back any recollection of what was said about him?

A. He—this was written not actually as it was said. He said, "Rakestraw goes to the right, evidently is a man in motion." I don't remember; I wrote: "Rakestraw to the right."

Q. I am not asking you to explain the method of play; I am just trying to get you to explain to the jury if you remember what was said about Rakestraw.

A. That this one play that Rakestraw went to the right and on an optional left pass, if they can block the man on the corner, if not, they would keep running. If they can block the man on the corner, they keep running; if not, they pass.

Q. You were writing what you heard?

A. I was writing as I could get the words.

[fol. 182] Q. Do you understand what that means?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Take the next note that you have.

A. Well, he said—I wrote down "Well-disciplined ball club—added two coaches." It was said at this time that this was of no thanks to Johnny Griffith, "we have added two coaches." What that meant I had no way of knowing.

Q. What did it mean to you?

A. It didn't mean anything to me actually. I asked one of my associates—

The Court: That would be hearsay.

Mr. Cody: Don't go into that.

The Witness: Sorry.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Did you know that Georgia had added two coaches?

A. No, sir.

Q. I believe you said that the order in which these pages are clipped together now are not necessarily the order in which you made these notes?

A. That is right.

Q. You don't remember the words in which they were taken?

A. No; I don't. I know that this was the first page because I wrote the two parties' name on it, and I wrote the last page because this was the end of the conversation [fol. 183] where I wrote the time and the date and the last note.

Q. Turn over to the next page, the first item.

A. You want me to read it?

Q. Is that an abbreviation of what was said? If it is, tell the jury what the entire conversation was on this point or any other one in the notes.

A. I don't remember all of the incidental conversation pertaining—as I said, I was writing these as they were talking, therefore I missed some of the conversation as I was writing. It said, "On side guard pulls on sweep."

Q. Do you remember anything else that was said about that?

A. No, sir.

Q. What about the next item?

A. "Don't overshift." Whether this was in relation to the fact of the on side guard pulling, I don't recall; it came immediately after this.

Q. What about the next item?

A. He made the remark that Woodward—

The Court: Who made the remark?

The Witness: I'm sorry; Coach Butts told Coach Bryant that Woodward commits himself fast on pass defense, and he was the safety man; I wrote this one, "Woodward commits fast—safety man."

By Mr. Cody:

Q. There is a dash after the word "fast"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Anything else said about that?

[fol. 184] A. No, sir.

Q. What about the next item?

A. As I wrote it, it says, "Weak defense, anybody except Blackburn." He made the remark the pass defense was weak, pass to anybody and anybody's direction except Blackburn, that he was strong on pass defense.

Q. Did you know that Georgia had a player by the name of Blackburn?

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Do you know anything about the Georgia team?

A. No, sir; I had not followed the Georgia team by names, and I didn't know the people involved.

Q. Have you ever seen Georgia play?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know very much about football yourself?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You play in high school?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Play anywhere else?

A. Freshman year of college, just on the squad my freshman year, and the war broke out.

Q. Did you later learn there was a Blackburn on the Georgia team?

A. No, sir; I don't remember that I ever learned there was anybody named Blackburn on the team. It still doesn't mean anything to me.

Q. Turn over to the next page, Mr. Burnett. What is the next item?

A. It says, "Baer slot right, split right end out."

Q. Does that mean anything to you?

A. I have since been told—

[fol. 185] Mr. Schroder: Your Honor—

Mr. Cody: Don't go into what anybody told you.

The Court: I sustain the objection.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Did you know at the time what that meant?

A. "Slot right" was a term I wasn't acquainted with.

Q. I notice you spelled "Bear" B-a-e-r?

A. I wrote it as I heard it.
Q. Is that what it sounded like to you?
A. That is what it sounded like to me.
Q. Did you find out later who that referred to?
A. Yes, sir; I was told—

Mr. Schroder: Same objection.
The Court: Sustain the objection. Don't lead him into hearsay, Mr. Cody.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Let's go to the next item, Mr. Burnett.
A. The next one says "Long count, left half in motion." I wrote this, and I cannot recollect what it was in reference to, whether—I did not draw a line after the first one I read. Evidently this was all part of sequence as I was writing.
Q. Were you trying to write down everything you heard?
[fol. 186] A. I was trying to catch as much of it as I could; yes, sir.
Q. What about that next item?
A. It says, "Best since Trippi," and I wrote the word "Porterfield." He made the remark that Porterfield was the best back since Trippi.
Q. Did you know Porterfield?
A. No, sir; I knew—
Q. Did you know Georgia had a player by that name?
A. No, sir; I did not.
Q. This is still all in your handwriting.
A. Yes, sir; it is.
Q. I say "handwriting"; it is your—
A. It is a combination of printing and writing. I print more than I write.
Q. Turn over to the next page, Mr. Burnett. What is the next item?
A. It says "Baer on a hook on goal line."
Q. Did that mean anything to you?

A. No, sir; it didn't. I wrote it; he said that when they are on the goal line that "Baer" goes on a hook, and I didn't have the slightest idea what he meant on a hook.

Q. What about that next item?

A. "Slot to right ends normal (3 yards)." He made the remark this was the formation they used until they get down to the—close to the goal line, that they play a slot to the right and the ends are normal, split out about three yards.

Q. Did that mean anything to you?

A. Well, the "ends out 3 yards" did. As I say, the "slot" is—was new to me; I didn't understand what a "slot" was.

Q. What about the next item?

[fol. 187] A. It says, "Right halfback on fly," and then it says, "Left halfback, quarterback gives to left half, left guard pulling blocks on corner."

Q. What does all that mean, if you know?

A. Well, to me it meant a—

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor, I don't think that—

Mr. Cody: I withdraw that.

The Court: I don't think, Mr. Cody, what his interpretation was is admissible. I sustain the objection.

Mr. Cody: I withdraw that.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Was anything else said on that subject other than what you wrote down on that item?

A. I don't recall specifically.

Q. Now, turn over to the next page; take the first item there.

A. "Slot or wide slot till goal line."

Q. Do you remember anything else that was said on that subject?

A. This is where he said they used this slot or a wide slot until they get down to the goal line.

Q. What about that next item?

A. "Can't quick kick." I wrote there just the three words. This was in response to a question. Coach Bryant asked him, "How about quick kicks?" And he said, "Don't be worried about—" Coach Butts said, "Don't be worried about [fol. 188] quick kicks; they haven't got anybody that can."

Q. Let's get to this next item.

A. You want me to read it?

Q. Read that.

A. "Slot right, right half on fly, screen to him."

Q. Do you remember anything that was said amplifying that statement?

A. He just made that statement.

Q. What about that next item?

A. I wrote down "29-0 series" and "Baer catches everything they throw." He put this in the form of a statement to Coach Bryant, "You remember my old 29-0 series." They used that. And "Baer catches everything they throw," he referred to it as their 29-0.

Q. Turn over; anything else you heard with reference to that particular item?

A. No, sir.

• • • • • • •

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Burnett, I will return these notes to you. Do you recall where we were when we adjourned?

The Court: The Court Reporter can read it back.

Mr. Cody: I remember now.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Turn over to the next page, Mr. Burnett. Read that item.

Q. Do you remember anything that was said about that other than what you wrote down?

A. No, sir; I don't remember anything else other than that.

Q. What about the next item?

A. The next item says, "Drop end off, contain with tackle." This was a Georgia defensive play. I wrote down "Georgia (defense)" and drew an arrow from "Georgia," that Georgia drops the end off and contain with a tackle.

Q. What about the next item?

A. You want me to read it as it is?

Q. Read it.

A. It says "Give Wally ring Sunday," and then I wrote "641 Athletic Office, 10:04 a.m., September 13, 1962, Jackson 5-3520."

Q. Let's back up there just a minute. Who was going to ring who Sunday?

A. Coach Bryant asked Coach Butts, "Will you be home, 'Wally?'" And he said, "Yes, I will." And he said, "I will give you a ring Sunday." And he said, "All right." And they hung up.

Q. What is this "641"?

A. The operator stayed—I stayed on the line. I didn't hang the phone up immediately, and the operator came on and asked me—asked—

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor, please, I don't think that he ought to go into any conversation.

Mr. Cody: Don't go into that.

[fol. 190] The Court: Yes, sir; that would be hearsay; I sustain the objection.

The Witness: I asked the operator to what number—

Mr. Lockerman: I don't think he ought to go into that conversation, Your Honor.

Mr. Cody: Don't go into that.

The Court: I sustain the objection.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. This "10:40 a.m.," that is the time?

A. This was the time the call was completed. I looked at my watch and wrote down the time.

Q. And the date?

A. And the date.

Q. September 13, 1962?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is that number at the bottom?

A. This is the number I was trying to get, Jackson 5-3536 was the Communications International Office.

Q. Before we get off of this particular call, Mr. Burnett, who was it doing most of the talking?

A. Coach Butts was.

Q. Do you recall whether or not this information was or this discussion was in question-and-answer form?

A. Some of it was; yes, sir.

[fol. 191] Q. And some not?

A. Some not.

Q. Was it given with some hesitation or reluctance?

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor, please, I don't think he ought to try to interpret—

The Court: Yes, sir; that is a conclusion; I sustain the objection.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. What did you do with the notes, Mr. Burnett? What happened after this conversation took place as far as you were concerned?

A. I hung up the phone and sat there for about twenty or thirty seconds, and then I picked the phone up and called the Communications International Office, and it was answered by Mr. Milton Flack.

Q. What did he say?

A. And I asked Milton—

The Court: That is hearsay; I will let him state he called Milton Flack, but anything he might have asked him would be hearsay.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. What number did you call him at?

A. JAckson 5-3536.

Q. That is the one you had been trying to get?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long had you known Wallace Butts?

A. I didn't really know Coach Butts. I had met him on [fol. 192] one occasion. I had never actually—I didn't actually know him.

Q. Did he have some connection with the same company for which you work?

A. He was on the Board of Directors.

Q. When did you have occasion to contact Bob Edwards, if you did?

A. This wasn't until January the 4th that I talked to him about this.

Q. Who is Bob Edwards?

A. He is a division manager for our company.

Q. Where does he live?

A. In St. Simons, Georgia.

Q. Did he go to the University of Georgia, if you know?

A. Yes; he did.

Q. Was he a football player?

A. He played football; I don't know how much football he played with Georgia.

Q. Did you contact him about these notes? Did you tell him about this conversation, and, if so, tell me—tell the jury what you told Bob Edwards.

A. On the 4th of January we had just had a two-day—

Mr. Schroder: If it please the Court, I think any conversation between this witness and some third party would be pure hearsay.

The Court: Yes, sir; I sustain the objection.

[fol. 193] By Mr. Cody:

Q. Did you later meet with Bob Edwards and Coach Griffith?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where?

A. At the Biltmore Hotel.

Q. When was that?

A. On Thursday, January the 7th, during the week of the Coaches' conference.

Q. Did you—what did you do with the notes on that day?

A. Gave them to Coach Griffith.

Q. Have you had the notes since that day?

A. No, sir; not until right now.

Q. You know what he did with them?

A. Turned them over to the Athletic Association.

Q. You have had—you have had no control, no possession over those notes since?

A. No, sir.

Q. Up until today?

A. That's right.

Q. Mr. Burnett, did you—did you later have a meeting with the University officials?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About what date was that?

A. It was about—not quite—about a week after I met with Johnny Griffith. This was one, as I remember right, Thursday, the following week, about the twenty-fourth of January.

Q. I am not trying to pin you down to the exact date, but I want to get it as close as I can. About the 24th of January?

A. About the 24th of January.

Q. That would be 1963?

A. Yes, sir; this year.

[fol. 194] Q. Do you know if they had the notes with them at that meeting?

A. Yes; they did. I was shown the notes at that time.

Q. Who was at that meeting?

A. It was in the office of Mr. Cook Barwick, and present with Mr. Barwick was Dr. Aderhold and—who is president of the University, and a Mr. Bolton, who is on the athletic committee and Bob Edwards and myself.

Q. Mr. Barwick, the gentleman sitting at this table?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that the only meeting you had with the University officials?

A. No, sir; I had subsequent meetings after this, two or three, if I remember right.

Q. Do you know the purpose of that meeting?

A. Do I know—

Q. Yes.

A. —or did I know?

Q. Did you know the purpose of it?

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, if he knew the purpose it would have to be told to him by some other party.

The Court: Yes, sir; I think that would be a conclusion also; I sustain the objection.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. When was the second meeting that you had with the University officials?

[fol. 195] A. About a week later in Mr. Barwick's office, approximately a week or ten days later.

Q. At that first meeting did you or not sign an affidavit?

A. No; I did not on the first meeting.

Q. Did you give them permission to take a lie detector test?

A. Yes.

Q. When were you first asked to take—to make an affidavit?

A. At that same meeting.

Q. And that was given subsequent to the meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you—did you sign it in Mr. Barwick's office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you say the date of the second meeting was with the University officials?

A. About a week or ten days, as I remember, after the first time I met them.

Q. Were you requested at that meeting—
A. Yes, sir.
Q. —to take a lie detector test?
A. I was.

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor, please, I don't think he ought to go into the conversation at that meeting.

The Court: You can ask him whether he made an affidavit at that meeting; I sustain the objection.

[fol. 196] By Mr. Cody:

Q. Did you take a lie detector test at that meeting?
A. Not at that meeting.
Q. When was that?
A. I took the lie detector test during the first week of February about 4:30 in the afternoon.
Q. Who gave you that test?
A. A Mr. McManus or McMain.
Q. Did you go to him in response to the request that had been made of you?
A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: That request would be hearsay.
The Court: Yes, sir; I sustain the objection.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. After the affidavit was signed, Mr. Burnett, who did you give it to?
A. Mr. Barwick.
Q. Getting back to this telephone conversation for the moment of September the 13th, did you hear any mention made of any ticket sales?
A. No, sir.
Q. What about rule changes?
A. No, sir.

Mr. Schroder: What was that last question?
Mr. Cody: Rule changes.
[fol. 197] Mr. Schroder: Oh.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Did you hear any mention made of any financial investments?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you hear any mention made of a concern called Commercial Enterprises Incorporated?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Cody: I believe that is all for the moment, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, sir. Go ahead, Mr. Schroder.

Mr. Schroder: Please the Court, would it be out of order for me to inquire as to your idea of adjournment—for adjournment today?

The Court: If it is all right with counsel and the jury, I think we can run to 4:30 unless you—I am here, I can conduct it as long as you wish. We'll go ahead; we will run for twenty-five or thirty more minutes.

Mr. Schroder: Whenever it will be, I will not finish today.

The Court: I presume Mr. Cody will have some further questions on direct. If we don't finish with him, that is all right. We will go ahead right now.

[fol. 198] Cross examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Mr. Burnett, on September 13, 1962, it is your testimony, is it not, that you were in the office there on Eleventh Street of a concern known as Oral Hygiene, Inc.?

A. No, sir; Institute of Oral Hygiene.

Q. Institute of Oral Hygiene, Inc.?

A. No, sir; it was not a corporation.

Q. Who was your—was anyone associated with you in that business?

A. John Carmichael and Mr. Milton Flack.

Q. To what extent was John Carmichael an associate of yours in that business?

A. He was—he had an exclusive sales contract with a company called Sterilray, Incorporated, to merchandise a toothbrush sterilizer, an electronic toothbrush sterilizer.

Q. Was he the one that put the money into the business there known as the Institute of Oral Hygiene?

A. Yes; he was. Yes; he was.

Q. At the time he made his investment in that business, is it or not true that you and he were employees or associated with Foundation Life?

A. Yes.

Q. And the two of you took a leave of absence from Foundation Life to go into this sales agency handling the sterile toothbrush?

A. Yes.

Q. How long had you all been in that business after you left Foundation Life before September 13, 1962?

A. About two months at the most.

[fol. 199] Q. You have referred to the fact that a man named Milton Flack also had an interest in the Oral Hygiene—Institute of Oral Hygiene?

A. His interest was because he was the president of the Sterilray Corporation with which we had a sales contract.

Q. Did he have an office there in the space on Eleventh Street?

A. No; he did not.

Q. Did anyone—any gentleman or any man have any office space there other than you and John Carmichael?

A. No.

Q. On September 13, 1962, you say that you arrived at that office in the morning?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Mr. Carmichael at the office that morning?

A. No; he was not.

Q. Was he customarily at that office before you arrived?

A. Most of the time, yes.

Q. And when you got there on this particular morning you missed him and you tried to reach him over the telephone?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. You tried him at his home?

A. I recall I did.

Q. And you then tried him at this downtown International Communications office space in the building across the street here?

A. Yes.

Q. You did not know at that time that Milton Flack was in that office?

[fol. 200] A. No; I did not.

Q. Did you know where Milton Flack was at that time?

A. No; I did not.

Q. It was your idea, though, that you were calling only John Carmichael?

A. Either John or Milton. We check in with each other at that phone.

Q. You had no intention, then, of calling Carmichael only when you called the office of Communications International?

A. I was trying to locate either Mr. Carmichael or Mr. Flack to find out where Mr. Carmichael was.

Q. It was Mr. Carmichael you were looking for?

A. This was my intent; yes, sir.

Q. And your testimony is that in your efforts to dial the Communications International office you became connected in with this telephone conversation that you have talked about on direct examination.

A. Yes.

Q. Was there anyone in the office there at the time that you dialed the number?

A. No, sir; there wasn't.

Q. John Carmichael came in later?

A. Yes; he did.

Q. Did you ever get in touch with John Carmichael over any telephone, or did he just come into the office there where you were?

A. He just came into the office.

Q. After the telephone conversation was over and the parties had hung up, the parties hung up that you were listening to?

[fol. 201] A. Yes.

Q. And you said the line stayed open?

A. Yes.

Q. And you did have a conversation with the telephone operator?

A. Yes.

Q. You later, shortly after you hung up, I believe, the testimony is that you telephoned Communications International again?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, the notes that you were discussing with Mr. Cody that you say you took at the time this telephone conversation was being listened in on by you, you discussed the contents of those notes later with Mr. John Carmichael?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. And after your discussion of those notes and with what you had heard between the two parties on the phone with Carmichael, you then later on in the afternoon discussed those with Mr. Flack?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You discussed them first with Carmichael alone?

A. Yes.

Q. And then later in the afternoon you ran into or Mr. Flack came by; is that correct?

A. He came by the office.

Q. And you at that time talked about them in the office of both Mr. Flack and Mr. Carmichael?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right, sir. After talking with Mr. Flack and Mr. Carmichael, the three of you decided to just forget the whole thing?

[fol. 202] A. This is right. It was Mr. Carmichael's advice, that we forget about it.

Q. Did Mr. Flack advise you also to just forget about the whole thing?

A. Yes; he agreed with Mr. Carmichael.

Q. All right, sir. And you did proceed to forget about the whole thing?

A. I tried to; yes.

Q. You took the notes, as you called them, to your home and hid them away?

A. I just put them in a box in a dresser drawer.

Q. And you did not, or did you, discuss anything about this with anybody from September the 13th until—with some other party until, I think you said, January the 4th?

A. I don't recall discussing it with anyone or mentioning it to anyone.

Q. Don't you think you would have recalled it if you did?

A. I think I would have.

Q. There is nothing magic about January the 4th; you are recalling you discussed it at that time?

A. What do you mean "magic"? I don't understand.

Q. There is nothing about January the 4th that would make you remember discussing it on that day—

A. That fact that we—

Q. —and yet not before that?

A. The fact that we had a meeting at the office, Mr. Schroder, and at the end of the meeting I was sitting in the office with Mr. Edwards, and we got into general conversation with each other, being close friends; I distinctly remember that day.

Q. All right, sir.

[fol. 203] A. I don't recall discussing this with anyone else in between.

Q. All right, sir. Now, you have indicated that in this conversation that you were listening to some reference being made to a telephone call that was to be placed by the two parties, or shall we say by one of the parties to the other party on a following Sunday—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —September the 16th?

A. Right.

Q. That is all that you remember? Certainly your notes don't show anything about what was to be said at that conversation, do they?

A. No. Mr. Schroder, several times in the conversation Coach Bryant would ask questions, and Coach Butts said "I don't know." And a couple of times Coach Bryant said "Can you find out?" And he said, "I will try." And they ended up the conversation with—by him saying, "Will you be home Sunday, Wally?" And he said, "Yes." He said, "I will give you a call then."

Q. Do you remember having made the statement that you did not hear Coach Bryant tell Coach Butts that Coach Bryant wanted to wait until after Coach Butts had seen the last week scrimmage before renewing the conversation next Sunday?

A. That wasn't mentioned.

The Court: What are you reading from, Mr. Schroder?

Mr. Schroder: A statement that was made.

[fol. 204] The Court: In the deposition?

Mr. Schroder: It was a statement that was made by—a statement made by the witness before Gene Cook. He said the statement was not made, so I don't have any problem. It would have been a previous contradictory statement if he said no, he didn't say it.

The Court: We don't want to get into Mr. Cook.

Mr. Schroder: Mr. Cook's report has nothing to do with this case; I understand that.

The Court: Go ahead.

Mr. Schroder: That report has nothing to do with this trial, even mentioning it. That is the reason I didn't identify it.

The Court: All right, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. It is your testimony today, Mr. Burnett, that there was nothing said in the telephone conversation to which you were listening that would even intimate that Coach

Butts was to be called by Coach Bryant after Coach Butts had had an opportunity to observe the last week of scrimmage?

[fol. 205] A. Well, all I know, Coach Bryant asked him would he be home on Sunday, and Coach Butts said he would, and he said, "Fine, I will give you a call then." And that is all I heard him say about the telephone call.

Q. Your answer to my question, then, would be there was no intimation of that?

A. Of a scrimmage, no.

Q. Thank you, sir. In the conversation that you say you overheard between Coach Butts and Coach Bryant, was there any mention made of gambling?

A. No.

Q. Was there any mention made of either party betting on the outcome of the game?

A. None at all.

Q. Was there any mention made about how many points one team might be favored over the other to win by?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any mention made about betting on odds?

A. No, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, did either Coach Bryant or Coach Butts say anything in that conversation that you say you overheard to indicate that what they were discussing was to be done or not done in the Georgia-Alabama game coming up the following Saturday?

A. You will have to say that again; I don't understand what you are saying.

Q. In this conversation that you were listening in on, I want you to state to the jury and to the Court whether or not either Coach Butts or Coach Bryant, in relation to anything they might have been talking about, said that this [fol. 206] was to be done or used or that this was not to be done or not used in the forthcoming game between the University of Georgia and Alabama?

A. Well, Mr. Schroder, Coach Bryant asked the question at the onset, "Do you have anything for me, Wally?" and Coach Butts proceeded to give plays of the team—

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please—

A. (By the witness) —of the plays that would be used.

Mr. Schroder: Just a moment. The answer is not responsive, and it is a conclusion when he says he gave plays. Plays definitely are a conclusion by the witness as to what—

Mr. Cody: He hasn't finished.

The Court: Aren't you asking for an interpretation yourself, Mr. Schroder, which I have previously ruled out?

Mr. Cody: I think he ought to let him answer the question, Your Honor, and not stop him in the middle of an answer.

Mr. Schroder: I have no objection to him answering the question.

The Witness: Coach Butts proceeded to give the plays that I was—that I wrote down at the time, and at no time in the conversation did Coach Bryant ever mention any- [fol. 207] thing about Alabama plays, and the two teams were playing each other a week later.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. The question, Mr. Burnett, is simply this—well, let me ask you this. Do you remember when your deposition was taken in the office of your lawyer, Mr. Howard?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On June 3, 1963?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Being present were myself and Mr. Lockerman and Mr. Smith for Coach Butts, and Mr. Bondurant for the Post?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You remember at that time this question being asked you?

A. I don't remember the particular question.

Q. I haven't asked it.

The Court: He is going to relate the question to you.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Question: "Was there anything said by either party directly that what they were talking about was to be done or not done in the Alabama-Georgia game, or did you just conclude that?" Do you remember giving this answer—

A. I imagine I probably concluded it. They didn't—he didn't say they were going to do this Saturday in the Alabama game, no.

Q. In other words, what you have stated is a conclusion on your part?

[fol. 208] A. I imagine so; yes, sir.

Q. Was there anything at all in the conversation that you say you overheard which does not appear in your notes that you attach any significance to, or do your notes contain—when you say "plays"—

A. There were things—

Mr. Cody: Your Honor, that calls for a conclusion. He has testified to the facts as he knows them.

The Court: I believe Mr. Schroder asked him in his question, was there anything that he remembered that wasn't in his notes that he could testify to.

Mr. Schroder: That's right.

Mr. Cody: He has already testified the thing—

The Witness: There are a lot of things I can't testify because I can't remember them in detail.

The Court: Just a moment.

The Witness: I'm sorry.

The Court: I think he is entitled to go further and ask him is there anything further in his notes—not in his notes [fol. 209] to which he can testify. I think that is proper cross-examination.

Mr. Cody: Anything else besides what he has testified to; yes. I didn't direct my objection towards that.

The Court: What did you direct your objection to?

Mr. Cody: He said, was there anything in the notes—in the conversation that he heard other than what is in those notes. That is the substance of his question. He has already testified to things that have taken place in the conversation.

The Court: Yes, sir; but I don't know whether he has testified to everything.

Mr. Cody: He hasn't. Now, if he will ask him—if his question is directed towards what else—

The Court: I think that is what his question was. Ask your question again, Mr. Schroder.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Mr. Burnett, you say that you made certain notes of what you consider to be significant that was discussed in the telephone conversation that you were listening in to; is that correct?

[fol. 210] A. No, sir; not exactly. I was taking notes, Mr. Schroder, as they were talking. What was significant and what was insignificant at the time I had no way of knowing. I was writing the notes as fast as I could, but not taking shorthand, abbreviating when I could. There were things that were said as I was writing that I didn't catch all of it and didn't write down.

Q. Will you now, please, sir, state to the Court and jury what you remember being discussed between the two parties that is not included in your notes?

A. Other than what I have already testified to I can't remember.

Q. You have testified today to everything you remember?

A. That I can possibly remember.

Q. That you remember hearing in that telephone conversation?

A. That I can remember; yes, sir.

Q. When you were discussing this on January the 4th, over three months after September 13, 1962, did you at that time have in your possession the notes which you have in your hand there now?

A. No; I did not.

Q. You did not then when you were talking to Bob Edwards about them have the notes with you?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever shown those notes to Bob Edwards?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. When did you show them to Bob Edwards?

A. Just prior to going down to see Mr. Griffith, Coach Griffith.

[fol. 211] Q. You went down to see Coach Griffith at the request of Bob Edwards?

A. Yes.

Q. You went down to see Coach Griffith on January the 14th, 1963.

A. No, sir; it was—I think it was around the 14th. It was during the week of the Coaches' Conference, 17th or 18th; it was during that week; it was in the second week after I had talked to Bob.

Q. Well, if I stated the meeting took place on January 4, 1963, at the Biltmore, according to the information of others, you would not say I was wrong, would you?

A. No, sir; as I say, I don't remember the exact dates. They were during the week of the Coaches' Conference, the second to the last day.

Q. My point is really not as closely connected with the date of January 24th as it is with this. You did not show those notes which you have in your hands now, or any copy of those notes to Bob Edwards until within—until a matter of two weeks after you first talked to him about it on January the 4th?

A. This is right.

Q. In the Saturday Evening Post article—before I—let me withdraw that question, please. When Frank Graham, Jr. was in Atlanta, you met him, did you not?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. Did he hold himself out as being a representative of the Saturday Evening Post when you were talking with him?

A. I was introduced to him as a writer representing the Post; yes, sir.

[fol. 212] Q. Well, you knew when you were talking to him who you were talking to?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you were talking to Frank Graham, did you have your notes with you?

A. No; I did not.

Q. You were talking to him purely from recollection?

A. Memory; yes.

Q. Memory. Now, he was here in February, 1963?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About February the 21st?

A. Right.

Q. Did you tell him you didn't have your notes?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you make it plain to him you were speaking solely from your memory?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When he was here, was there an agreement reached as to what you were selling your story to the Post for?

A. No, sir; I wasn't selling my story to the Post.

Q. Well, did you receive money for it, sir?

A. Later I did.

Q. Was it understood when he left here that he was to pay money for it?

A. Not to me; no, sir.

Q. Did you receive money for it?

A. Later; yes, sir.

Q. How much money did you receive for it?

A. Five thousand dollars.

[fol. 213] Q. To your knowledge did you ever send to Frank Graham the notes that you are holding in your hand there before he wrote his article and the Saturday Evening Post published that article?

A. No; I did not.

Q. The article, therefore, was published without the benefit of your notes?

A. That is true, as far as I know.

Q. The first sentence in the article, relying upon your memory, I believe, is an error in that it starts out with even the wrong date for this alleged interception of the telephone conversation, does it not?

A. I don't know, Mr. Schroder; you will have to read the first sentence.

Q. The first sentence is: "On Friday morning, September 14, 1962, an insurance salesman in Atlanta, Georgia, named George Burnett picked up the telephone and dialed the number." That is not true?

A. No; it was Thursday, January the 13th.

Q. Yes, sir. You mean September?

A. I mean, September the 13th.

Q. At the—do you know whether Mr. Graham asked to look at any film of the game while he was here?

A. No; I don't.

Q. Did you, in a discussion did you hear any discussion between him and anyone else in your presence about his sports editor wanting him to check the film?

A. No, sir.

The Court: Aren't we getting into hearsay here? Now, I excluded hearsay over here. If you are going into the con- [fol. 214] versation with others I am going to let Mr. Cody get back into it.

Mr. Schroder: Your Honor, this is Mr. Graham of the Saturday Evening Post.

The Court: Yes, sir; I know it is Mr. Graham, but any conversation with Mr. Graham—

Mr. Schroder: Would be inadmissible against the Post? That is their man talking.

The Court: You can question Mr. Graham, but this is hearsay insofar as Mr. Burnett is concerned. Go ahead. There is no objection.

Mr. Schroder: Burnett is not a party. This is the Post's agent making the—

The Court: Go ahead; there is no objection.

Mr. Schroder: All right.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. At the time that Mr. Graham was in Atlanta, on how many occasions did you see him?

A. Three times.

[fol. 215] Q. That would have been some—about February the 21st?

A. 22nd.

Q. 22nd? Have you seen Mr. Graham since February 21st or 22nd?

A. I saw him on February 23rd also.

Q. That was the same trip, though, that he was here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you seen Mr. Graham since he left Atlanta—

A. No, sir.

Q. —on that trip?

A. No.

Q. Have you talked with Mr. Graham at all since he was here on that trip?

A. No, sir; I have not.

Q. Did Mr. Graham submit to you or did anyone in connection with the Saturday Evening Post submit for you to correct this article that they published in March, March the 23rd?

Mr. Cody: Your Honor—

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: —he is getting into a subject that is not covered in direct examination, and I think the rule of this Court, the Rules of Civil Procedure provide that cross-examination is limited to the subject matter of direct examination.

[fol. 216] The Court: I am assuming he is going into this for the purpose of punitive damages.

Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir; it is.

The Court: And I think it is a question of whether or not there would be any negligence or disregard in checking the article. I will let him ask that question. Overrule the objection.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Did you hear the last question? Do you remember what it was?

A. Was I asked about the article prior to it being published? Is that it?

Q. Did anyone connected with the Saturday Evening Post send to you a copy of the article before it was finally published by the Saturday Evening Post?

A. No.

Q. Did anyone connected with the Post talk with you about the accuracy of the statements appearing in the article that were attributed to you?

A. No.

Q. The Post article has been read previously today. Now, I want to ask you about this which appears right in the first column which has been attributed to you, and I want to ask you if you told Mr. Frank Graham that this was so, and to put it in the article. This is quoting you; I am in the first column, quote: "Butts also said"—now, [fol. 217] this is relating what you told Graham you overheard on September the 13th, 1962. "Butts also said that Rakestraw (Georgia quarterback Larry Rakestraw) tipped off what he was going to do by the way he held his feet. If one foot was behind the other it meant that he would drop back to pass. If they were together it meant he was setting himself to spin and hand off." Did you tell Mr. Graham that you heard Coach Butts make that statement to Coach Bryant?

A. No, sir; I didn't.

Q. That is an inaccurate quotation, a misquotation on his part that he has attributed to you?

Mr. Cody: Your Honor, he is arguing this case now, and I want to—

The Court: I think you can ask him did you tell him that.

Mr. Cody: And I want to, again, insist on my objection that he is getting into a subject matter that was not covered by the direct examination, and I think the Rules provide he is limited.

The Court: I think he can cover that.

Mr. Cody: I understand Your Honor's ruling, but I want to make my objection.

[fol. 218] Mr. Schroder: To make the record perfectly clear on this, Your Honor, I intend to prove by this witness and others that the article is replete with misquotations and inaccuracies, and I am doing that for the sole purpose of showing how reckless the Saturday Evening Post was in publishing this article.

The Court: What he is objecting to is arguing the case, Mr. Schroder. I think you can ask him did he tell him that, and I think his answer was no. But your other question, I think, was properly objectionable. Go ahead, sir. I will permit the line of questioning. I think it is proper.

Mr. Schroder: As I understand, then, the record does show that Mr. Burnett did not say to Graham the quotation that Graham put in the article that related to the position of the quarterback's feet.

The Court: Rakestraw.

Mr. Schroder: Rakestraw.

The Court: All right. Was there any mention of Rakestraw in the conversation as you purportedly heard it?

The Witness: Nothing about the feet; no, sir. This I [fol. 219] didn't know anything about. I didn't say anything to Mr. Graham about Mr. Rakestraw's feet.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Now, in the article published on March 23, in the second column on page 81, the following appears: "Burnett knew—" I am quoting from the article— "Burnett knew, too, that Butts recently had been involved in a disastrous speculation in Florida orange groves." Did you say that to Mr. Graham?

A. Mr. Schroder, I don't recall using those words, "it was a disastrous speculation." I made the remark that I knew Coach Butts had been in an orange grove speculation in Florida that didn't prove too successful. Now, I don't know I used the word "disastrous" or not.

Q. The word you used was "had not been too successful"?

A. Right.

Q. But you did not tell him that it was "a disastrous speculation?"

A. I may have; I don't remember using the word "disastrous."

Q. On page 82, column 2, at the bottom, the following I will quote from the article. "Griffith—" meaning Johnny Griffith "—went to University officials, told them what he knew, and said that he would resign if Butts was permitted to remain in his job." Did you give that information to Frank Graham?

A. No. I told Mr. Graham that at the time Coach Griffith was given the information in the hotel and shown the notes, that he made the remark that "we knew something had happened," that somebody had given away their plays; "sold them out" is the words.

[fol. 220] Mr. Schroder: Your Honor, that is not responsive to the question.

The Witness: I am getting to it. You asked me about what Coach Griffith said, Mr. Schroder. Coach Griffith made the remark to Bob Edwards and I, said if something like this was allowed to happen in football he wanted out of it and he would resign, and that he was going to take this to the athletic officials, and if it wasn't straightened out he would resign.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Let me ask you if you remember this question being asked you when your deposition was taken and you were under oath at that time too, weren't you?

A. Yes; I was.

Q. All right. Question: "The same article in the Post states this on page 82: 'Griffith went to University officials, told them what he knew, and said that he would resign if Butts was permitted to remain in his job.' Do you know where the writer of the article, Frank Graham, got that piece of information?" Your answer: "No, sir; I don't."

A. The answer is I don't; I don't know where he got it as far as going to the officials was concerned, Mr. Schroder.

Q. Is that your explanation of the answer you gave a moment ago?

A. Is what?

Q. Is what I just read, is that a true answer?

A. I said I don't know that Mr. Griffith told the officials this; no. He made the remark—

Q. The question—

A. He made the remark to Mr. Edwards and I if this [fol. 221] were allowed to continue in football he was going to get out of it.

Q. Was Mr. Graham present when he said that?

A. When Mr. Griffith said it?

Q. Was Mr. Graham, the author of the article, present?

A. I told him this.

Q. That Griffith was going to resign?

A. No, sir; Mr. Griffith had stated if this could happen in football he wouldn't have any part of it.

Q. Did you hear Mr.—did you tell Mr. Graham Mr. Griffith went to University officials and told them what he knew and said he would resign if Butts was permitted to stay on?

A. No, sir.

Q. That is the simple question I asked you to start with.

A. All right, sir.

Q. All right, sir. It was your information—do you know of anyone else supposed to have overheard this conversation?

A. Which conversation, the telephone or the one with Johnny Griffith?

Q. The telephone conversation?

A. No, sir; I don't.

Q. Did you say anything to the Saturday Evening Post about this being the story of a college—I mean, a fixed football game?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you say anything to the Saturday Evening Post that this was a rigged football game?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you say anything to the Saturday Evening Post about this game having been thrown?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 222] Q. Did you say anything to the Saturday Evening Post about this having been a sell-out?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you say anything to the Saturday Evening Post about Coach Bryant and Coach Butts being corrupt men?

A. No, sir.

Q. When you met with Mr. Cook Barwick seated here the first time, the statement which you made in his presence and in the presence of those others that you have identified here, that statement was recorded, was it not?

A. Yes; it was.

Q. That is the first time you had met Mr. Cook Barwick, was it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was the first time you had met Mr. Aderhold?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the other gentleman named Mr. Bolton?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was the first time you had indicated any knowledge at all of the matters that you have testified here to today to any one of those three?

A. Yes; it is.

Q. Mr. Barwick asked you some questions, numerous questions at that time, didn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. One of those questions was: Did you have any sort of record, wasn't it?

A. Yes; he did.

Q. And you answered him that you did not, didn't you?

A. That's right.

Q. But you told him to go ahead and investigate?

[fol. 223] A. Yes, sir.

Q. And later it turned up that there was a record, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is when you testified a moment ago or at some time during the proceedings that they begin questioning you about that or what was in the article, excuse me, started questioning you about that, and you became alarmed or became frightened, and said, "Am I on trial?"

A. That is what is in the Post article.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is all true, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any reason for your denying that you had any record when you first talked to the University of Georgia people and Mr. Barwick about this matter?

A. Other than I didn't want to get involved in it if I didn't have to. I wasn't under oath; I was just answering direct questions.

Q. You don't mean by that you are free with the truth when you are not under oath?

A. I am not indicating anything of the kind.

Q. The reason you said you didn't have a record, you didn't want to get involved and weren't under oath?

A. I didn't say "involved". I didn't want to get—start public announcement about some problems that I had had that I have since paid my debt on.

Q. Your friend, Milton Flack, did he get paid anything in connection with this story by the Saturday Evening Post?

A. I don't know.

[fol. 224] Mr. Cody: Your Honor, I think that that—that would come from someone else.

The Court: He can state if he doesn't know; that is a proper answer.

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, I have the voucher issued by the Saturday Evening Post, if there is any doubt about it.

Mr. Cody: Go ahead.

The Court: He can ask Mr. Flack or whoever.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. You don't know?

A. I don't know the particulars involved in any payment to Mr. Flack; no; something about him getting some money to not talk about the story.

Q. All right, sir. The lawyer who was representing you and probably—is Mr. Pierre Howard still representing you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was paid a fee by you?

A. Yes; he was.

Q. A thousand dollars?

A. That's right.

Q. Do you know what that was for? What did you pay him a thousand dollars for?

A. For legal advice and legal fees.

[fol. 225] Q. In connection with this story?

A. In connection with the work he was doing for me.

Q. In connection with this story?

A. Representing me in the things I knew were going to come from this; not from the story, no; not for any part in the story. This was legal fees.

Q. Did you owe him any fees for any services that he had rendered you before you got involved with him in this so-called story?

The Court: How could that be admissible here?

Mr. Cody: I think he knows, Your Honor.

Mr. Schroder: I have him on cross-examination.

The Court: You have him on cross-examination; I don't think that is admissible unless you can show me a reason why it should be. I don't think it should be. I mean, something that might have taken place before, some contract he might have in some other case, I don't think that would be admissible.

Mr. Schroder: The contention is and can be proved that the thousand dollar payment was for services rendered in this story and this story alone which I indicated at the outset, if it please the Court, and I am so contending, this was sort of what we lawyers call on a contingent basis. "I will pay you a thousand dollars now and if your story, [fol. 226] after I get to talking to you, is reproduced, I will then pay you three thousand dollars."

The Court: I thought we were on Mr. Pierre Howard's fee.

Mr. Schroder: We are. He was in the middle of this representing both parties.

The Court: He can testify as to what he paid Mr. Howard.

Mr. Schroder: That is all I was asking.

The Court: He testified five thousand dollars. Anything else?

Mr. Schroder: About payments, no, sir; nothing further with him on payment.

The Court: All right, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. The Saturday Evening Post article makes the statement that you did record all that you heard in connection with the telephone conversation that you were listening in on; that is inaccurate, is it not? On page 81, the bottom, column 1, "Some of the jargon stranger still, but he recorded all that he heard."

A. No, sir; I have already testified that I didn't—couldn't get it all written down. There were some other [fol. 227] things, and I was abbreviating and making sentences short as I was copying it down.

* * * * * * * *

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. During the examination yesterday, Mr. Burnett, we were referring, I believe, to the fact that the office there on Eleventh Street of the business known as the Institute of Oral Hygiene was—the business owned by John Carmichael?

A. Yes; it was.

Q. And you had known John Carmichael for how many years before you went to work for him?

A. Approximately two years.

Q. About two years?

A. Yes.

Q. And during the time that you knew Mr. Carmichael and before you left and went with him to the Institute of Oral Hygiene he was with you at the Foundation Life?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he your boss at the Foundation Life?

A. He was my district manager.

Q. That is what I meant; he was your superior?

A. I reported to him.

Q. You and John Carmichael were fairly friendly or good friends?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The office there on Eleventh Street had—did it have a private office in it?

A. Yes; it had one—one private office which was Mr. Carmichael's office.

Q. Now, it was in Mr. Carmichael's office, was it not, that you were listening in on this telephone conversation?

[fol. 228] A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were seated at Mr. Carmichael's desk?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, during the course of this listening in by you on this telephone conversation, did Mr. Carmichael come in?

A. No; he did not.

Q. You are sure that he did not come in before you were through?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you see the—you were in the private office, you say?

A. Yes; I was.

Q. Did you see into and through the agency room which was immediately adjacent to that office?

A. No; I could not.

Q. Would it be your testimony, then, that Mr. Carmichael could not have been in the agency room, being a place that you could not see?

A. I didn't hear anyone come in. He did not come in the private office, and I would have heard him, I am sure, come in the front door. He did come in subsequently with a paper sack with two cups of coffee in it.

Q. You and Carmichael—this was how long after you say that you finished?

A. Some, approximately an hour to an hour and a half.

Q. You and he have talked about this incident on many occasions?

A. Not on many occasions.

Q. On several occasions?

A. Several; yes.

Q. And you do know that he has since told you that he was in the office when you were?

[fol. 229] A. No; he has not told me this.

Q. But you know he has told this?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But your testimony is that he was not there?

A. That is right.

Q. And you say now that it was an hour or an hour and a half after that?

A. Approximately.

Q. It could not have been thirty minutes?

A. It could have been anywhere from thirty minutes to an hour and a half.

Q. All right, sir. When you were on the telephone and heard these two voices, you knew at that time that you were listening to two people talk on their telephones and that you were not intended to be listening, didn't you?

A. I realized that.

Q. But you did continue to listen in anyway, didn't you?

A. That's right; that's right.

Q. The testimony, I believe, yesterday by you indicated that the party being called was not at that time near the phone but was out on the field?

A. That is what I heard a female voice say.

Q. That Coach Bryant was out on the field?

A. This was the words that she used.

Q. Well, don't—this was in the morning that you were listening in on this call?

A. Yes; it was.

Q. Well, don't you know, as a matter of fact, that there was no practice in the morning, football practice?

A. I don't know as a matter of fact when they practiced, Mr. Schröder.

Q. Well, this was the coach that you were talking about, [fol. 230] that you have just referred to, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the field was the practice field, was it not?

A. I have no idea.

Q. Didn't you at one time say it was the practice field?

A. I don't recall. I said the practice field; I may have used the word "practice field"; I don't remember.

Q. Well, you are a former football player; you know what the word "practice field" means, don't you?

A. Yes.

Q. That is where football players, during football season, practice, isn't it?

A. This is true.

Q. When Carmichael and you had your discussion about what you say you overheard, the remark was made, was it not, that, "well, if there's anything wrong about this, let's bet on the outcome?"

A. No; this remark was not made.

Q. When was the remark made about betting on the game?

A. The only remark about betting was made, said, "If you are going to bet, which way would you bet?"

Q. All right, sir, I will buy that. Who made the remark, "If we want to bet on the game, which team would we bet on?"

A. I don't recall. As I remember, Mr. Carmichael said to me, "How would you know if they were going to go for a high score or a low score with this intimation if you were going to bet on it?" There was never any serious discussion by any of the three of us about betting on the football game.

[fol. 231] Q. And that was because you told them that you wouldn't know yourself which way the teams were going?

A. No, sir; I didn't say this.

Q. What did you say, sir?

A. The three of us agreed on this; I don't know which one prefaced it first, but the three of us agreed who would know.

Q. Who would know? And that was based upon what you say that you heard one coach tell the other on the telephone?

A. That's right.

Q. All right, sir. And insofar as the three of you were concerned, you were the only one that heard—overheard anything that was said on that telephone?

A. That's right.

Q. The first time that you discussed this incident with your lawyer, Mr. Howard, was when?

A. On the 21st of February.

Q. On the 21st of February, 1963?

A. '63.

Q. That was in the morning or in the afternoon?

A. In the late afternoon.

Q. The Saturday Evening Post representatives were in Atlanta on that very day, were they not?

A. Yes; they were.

Q. As a matter of fact, they had come in on the—on February the 20th, hadn't they?

A. I have no idea when they came in.

Q. But Mr. Howard told you they were here?

A. Yes; he did.

Q. You knew they were here?

A. Late that afternoon when I went to his office and told him what had happened.

[fol. 232] Q. They were already here when you first—when you say you first told him—

A. Yes.

Q. About the incident?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what they were here for?

A. Haven't the slightest idea.

Q. They didn't discuss it with you while they were here?

A. No; they did not.

Q. Did you talk to them at all?

A. With whom?

Q. The Saturday Evening Post people.

A. Yes; I did.

Q. What did you all talk about?

A. About the story and what I had overhead, and the fact that I was a little disturbed at my last meeting in Mr. Barwick's office, and that I decided I wanted this story told and told in the way it happened, and my story about my bad checks, as is in the Post article, to be told before I was maligned.

Q. Then they were here to get your story?

A. I have no idea why they were here, Mr. Schroder.

Q. Did you discuss anything with them other than your so-called story? Did you discuss business with them of oral hygiene?

A. Mr. Schroder, when I went to Mr. Howard's office and told Mr. Howard what had happened—

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, may he answer my question?

[fol. 233] The Court: I think we can clarify it a little bit. He is talking one thing and you are talking another. Why don't you ask him when he first told him?

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. When did you first talk to the people from the Saturday Evening Post?

A. Friday evening, about 7:00 or 7:—about 7:00 o'clock Thursday evening on the 21st, about 7:00 o'clock, at their motel is the first time I met the Post people and told them the story.

Q. And their motel was here in Atlanta?

A. Yes, sir; it was.

Q. And did you discuss with them business in general, or did you discuss with them just this so-called story?

A. I discussed with them just this story.

Q. All right, sir.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. How did they know you knew about the story? How did they know about the story?

A. Mr. Howard told me that Mr. Beddow and the Saturday Evening Post people were in town and this would be some people to talk to who would be willing to listen to a story if I wanted to give them one. I decided, Judge, on his advice that it was time for me to get this story out before people were trying to malign me totally in a different way, and he said he knew they were in town [fol. 234] and would be willing to listen, and he called them and made an appointment for me, and we went to the motel.

Q. May I clarify something? Had you talked to Mr. Howard before?

A. No, sir.

Q. How did he know what you knew about this story?

A. He didn't until I walked into his office.

Q. That afternoon?

A. Yes, sir. He had heard the story from Mr. Carmichael before, but I didn't know he had heard the story.

The Court: I didn't connect it up. I didn't mean to interrupt your line of questioning.

Mr. Schroder: I thank you for the help.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. The people that you talked to at the motel were Frank Graham, Jr.?

A. Yes; that was one of them.

Q. Who subsequently wrote the story?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Supposedly based on information that you gave him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Also present in Atlanta that time with Mr. Graham was the Saturday Evening Post lawyer in Birmingham representing the Post in the libel suit that Coach Bryant [fol. 235] had filed against them maybe a month before this?

A. That's right.

Q. His name was Mr. Beddow? He was over here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With Mr. Graham?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. There was also from Birmingham a private investigator who was working on the Byrant against the Post lawsuit in Birmingham that had been filed some months before all this came up, a Mr. Bodecker?

A. I met a Mr. Bodecker; I didn't know who he was or his connection.

Q. He was with Mr.—

A. He was with Mr. Beddow.

Q. He was with Mr. Beddow, the Birmingham lawyer?

A. Right.

Q. And you stayed there in the room at the, I believe you said, the Heart of Atlanta Motel?

A. Yes; it was the Heart of Atlanta.

Q. And that was Mr. Frank Graham's room?

A. I don't know whose room it was.

Q. Well, you stayed there with these gentlemen for some minutes or some period of time that evening?

A. About an hour to an hour and a half, as I recall.

Q. And you then met with Mr. Graham again the following day?

A. Yes; the following morning at Mr. Howard's office.

Q. And how long did you meet with them on that occasion?

A. We were together about another hour or two in Mr. Howard's office.

[fol. 236] Q. Did you see Mr. Graham later that afternoon?

A. No, sir; I don't recall seeing him at all that afternoon.

Q. Did you see anyone else hired or working for the Post that afternoon?

A. No; I did not.

Q. That would have been the 22nd?

A. Right.

Q. Then the next day did you see Mr. Graham?

A. I saw Mr. Graham the next morning very briefly again in Mr. Howard's office.

Q. In Mr. Howard's office?

A. Right.

Q. That was the 23rd?

A. That was the 23rd.

Q. And I believe your testimony yesterday was that you have not, since the 23rd, seen Mr. Graham?

A. Well, this is true, but the afternoon of the 23rd I drove him to the airport and spent some three and a half hours at the airport waiting for his plane and talking with him.

Q. All right, sir. He had not written any story then to your knowledge, had he?

A. No.

Q. Since you last saw him on February 23rd at the Atlanta Airport, have you seen him or talked with him in any—with respect to anything?

A. I have not seen him and I don't recall that I have talked with him. I have received a letter from him, but I have not talked with him or seen him.

Q. Did your letter pertain to this story before or something he was putting in the story before he published it?

A. No, sir; he was forwarding to me a letter from a [fol. 237] television station in Indiana regarding an article; this was after the article was published.

Q. Your testimony is, then, that you have had no communication with Frank Graham other than the letter that you have just told us about since he left here February the 23rd?

A. That is true.

Q. I don't know whether I asked you this yesterday or not, but have you had any communication of any sort with anyone else employed by the Saturday Evening Post after February the 23rd and before this magazine was published in this issue of March 23?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Schroder: If it please the Court, the article has been tendered and, I believe, admitted in evidence.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: This witness has already testified yesterday about a quotation that he did not give the author which the author indicated in the article that he did give to him, and in order to make it photographic, so to speak, for the jury, I have had that article, the entire article blown up, and I would like the permission of the Court to have it unraveled and placed here where they can—

The Court: You mean you are—

[fol. 238] Mr. Schroder: I will state in my place it is authentic.

The Court: You are just going to blow it up?

Mr. Schroder: I had it blown up by the Atlanta Blueprint Company.

Mr. Cody: I don't think it is proper, Your Honor; the article itself is in evidence; I don't know.

The Court: Would you object to it being demonstrative?

Mr. Cody: I don't know what he is apt to do with it.

Mr. Schroder: This is the article forming the basis of this libel suit. There are inaccuracies in it, and I think it ought to be here where the jury can see it when the witnesses testify on the stand about the manner in which they have been misquoted, where the jury can see right here in front of them what the misquotations are, what the inaccuracies are, and have it vividly clear here before it or rather than have them memorize it or pass out copies to them.

Mr. Cody: I think that is entirely improper, Your Honor, what he is undertaking to do.

[fol. 239] The Court: I don't know whether it is or not.

Mr. Cody: He is undertaking to re-emphasize some errors they made in the article.

The Court: Of course, the whole gist of the whole case is whether or not the facts, statements contained in the article are true.

Mr. Cody: That's true. Well, he has pointed out—he has pointed out and has a right to point out any error in the article, but not to emphasize it or re-emphasize it. He has already pointed out certain errors. It is already in evidence.

The Court: I will let him do it. Let me see it. I don't know what you have got there, but—

Mr. Schroder: That is the last of it. I will hand Your Honor the first one.

The Court: Sir?

Mr. Schroder: Please hand His Honor that.

The Court: I brought my copy this morning.

[fol. 240] Mr. Schroder: In the first column—this is the first column, and each column is on separate cardboard.

The Court: Where are you going to put those, Mr. Schroder?

Mr. Schroder: Well, insofar as this one is concerned I would show this to the witness and have him mark this entire paragraph here where it reads—where it reads, "Butts also said Rakestraw tipped off what he was going to do," and on down to the bottom.

The Court: Of course, that can't go out with the jury.

Mr. Schroder: I understand that; the article itself will be out with the jury.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: It's already in evidence. I don't know what—

The Court: Well, he wants it where the jury can see it instead of passing it around. I will let it in. I will let you demonstrate with it, but it is not going out with the jury.

Mr. Schroder: I understand that, sir.

[fol. 241] The Court: All right, sir. Are you through with this witness?

Mr. Schroder: I was going to ask him to step down here, if he will.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Yesterday you testified—can you see this all right, sir?

A. Uh-huh (affirmative).

Q. That this quotation which I shall now read to you, "Butts also said that Rakestraw (Georgia quarterback Larry Rakestraw) tipped off what he going to do by the way he held his feet. If one foot was behind the other it meant he would drop back to pass. If they were together it meant he was setting himself to spin and hand off." Is that what I have just read, was that—that is a quotation that the author said you said to him. Did you tell the author that?

A. No; I didn't.

Q. I see. Will you mark that with a pencil, please?

A. Mark it in what way?

Q. With a parenthesis and put your initials there.

A. What am I signing to?

Q. You don't have to sign it.

A. Initialling it means what?

The Court: You just go ahead and initial it, Mr. Burnett.

The Witness: All right, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Just what I read, make it kind of heavy, will you.

[fol. 242] In the article there is a quotation appearing on the second page near the bottom of the second column on that page which reads, quote, and this purports to be something that you told the author that Johnny Griffith in turn had told you at the meeting you attended with Johnny Griffith at the Biltmore, the quote that is attributed to you reads, "'We knew somebody had given our plays to Alabama,' Griffith told him,"—"him" being you—"and maybe a couple of other teams we played to, but we had no idea it was Wally Butts."

The Court: Didn't you go over that yesterday?

Mr. Schroder: Not what I am going to ask him now.

Mr. Cody: It is purely repetitious, Your Honor.

Mr. Schroder: Not what I am going to ask him now.

Mr. Cody: It is repetitious, Your Honor.

The Court: Let me ask—let him ask his question, and don't you answer until after I rule on it.

The Witness: All right, sir.

[fol. 243] By Mr. Schroder:

Q. You know, do you not, as a matter of fact that Johnny Griffith has denied telling you that?

The Court: That is not a proper question anyway, Mr. Schroder. I don't think Mr. Griffith's testimony is in evidence yet, and I don't think—

Mr. Schroder: I will wait until—

Mr. Cody: He is going to testify.

The Court: My recollection yesterday was that he went into an explanation as to what he said; well, you heard the testimony; I don't want to repeat it.

Mr. Cody: I want to make one other point, Your Honor, for the record.

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Cody: I think I know the purpose for which he is undertaking to emphasize this evidence. We have been over this question at pre-trial procedure. There's been no such documents as any—enlargement of a portion of this article, but to—[fol. 244] Mr. Schroder: Well, that is the article, Your Honor, that he himself has introduced.

The Court: I am going to let you put that in, Mr. Schroder; I have already ruled on that. What I was concerned with was the question you were repeating.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Let me ask you this, Mr. Burnett. These notes that—

Mr. Schroder: Have they been introduced in evidence yet? Are they up here?

Mr. Cody: Your Honor, I'd like to get these notes introduced. I've been carrying some of them around and I am afraid I will lose them.

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Cody: Those two telephone calls that were identified yesterday—let me have those right there.

The Court: What is the number?

[fol. 245] The Clerk: No. 12.

Mr. Cody: 12, 13, and 14.

The Court: All right, sir, any objections to the notes which have been tendered?

Mr. Schroder: I do not want to give the Court the impression if I say that I have no objection that I am admitting that they are authentic.

The Court: You are not admitting what is contained in the evidence, but you have got no objection to the notes—

Mr. Schroder: That is, they have been identified.

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Cody: I'd like, while we are on the subject, I'd like to introduce in evidence the notes; they have already been identified by exhibits number, the two toll tickets that were identified yesterday by Mr. Fleming.

Mr. Schroder: I have no objection.

[fol. 246] The Court: All right, sir, what are their numbers?

The Clerk: 13 and 14.
The Court: All right, let 12, 13 and 14 be admitted.

(Whereupon Defendant's Exhibits Nos. 12, 13 and 14 were admitted into evidence.)

The Court: Is that over objection?
Mr. Schroder: No, sir.
The Court: All right, sir.
Mr. Schroder: No, sir.
The Court: All right, without objection.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. In connection with these notes that have been identified and admitted in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 12, your testimony yesterday was that every time that you heard the man that you described as Coach Butts talk to the other party, Coach Bryant, he always referred to him [fol. 247] or called him "Bear" throughout the conversation?

A. One time at the beginning he said "Coach" and most of the time he called him "Bear".

Q. Did he ever call him "Paul"?

A. I don't recall; he may have, Mr. Schroder.

Q. But your recollection today, and as you have indicated on your notes there, was that he was calling him "Bear" certainly a greater majority of the time?

A. Most of the time; yes.

Q. When he wasn't calling him "Coach"?

A. Yes.

Q. You testified yesterday, I believe, that the second notation on Page 1, reading "Reismueller, greatest in history," that that was said by Coach Butts in this form, he is the greatest in the history of the University of Georgia?

A. He said he was the greatest lineman they have had in the history of the University; yes, sir.

Q. And the lad was what, a sophomore?

A. I don't know.

Q. You didn't know then that he had never even played in a varsity game?

A. No, sir.

Q. You being a former football player—turn to Page 2, looking at the last note, reading, "well-disciplined ball club"; what in your experience as a football player does that mean, "well-disciplined ball club"?

A. Well, Mr. Schroder, it means exactly what it says. It was a well-disciplined ball club.

Q. I don't understand it myself; would you amplify it a little bit, clarify what it means to you.

A. Well, Mr. Schroder, a well-disciplined ball club means one that responds well, I imagine, to instruction, and listens and doesn't fool around with horseplay, and attends to [fol. 248] business. I imagine this is what being disciplined means.

Q. I see. And the statement was made that the Georgia team in September, 1962, was, as described here, a well-disciplined ball club?

A. Yes, sir. But you are taking it out of context. It was part of a statement. He said, "They have a well-disciplined ball club, but this is no thanks to Johnny Griffith, because they had added two coaches." This is one entire statement.

Q. Yes, sir. But I was referring to the discipline part without regard to who was responsible for it being disciplined or who might be responsible for it not being disciplined.

A. I appreciate that.

The Court: Let's don't argue between witness and counsel. Let's go ahead with the evidence.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. The notation on the top of Page 3, "On side guard pulls on sweep"; what position did you play when you were in football?

A. I played guard.

Q. What, to you, is a sweep?

A. An end run.

Q. That is around the end?

A. Yes.

Q. A sweep around the end?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what was the "on side guard pulls" mean?

A. That means that the guard on the side on which you are running pulls out to lead interference. If you are going to run to the right, the right guard pulls; if you are [fol. 249] going to run to the left, the left guard pulls.

Q. When you say "leading interference", leading the way for the ball carrier to go around the end?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The next note reading "don't overshift". I recall you saying that that had to do with some defensive maneuver.

A. No, sir; I didn't say that.

Q. Well, I'm sorry; I didn't mean to misquote you. What was it you said?

A. I said I wrote this down by itself. I don't recall whether it had anything to do with the play above or not. The statement was made by Coach Butts to Coach Bryant, "Don't overshift," telling him not to overshift.

Q. Not to overshift what; offensively or defensively?

A. His defense.

Q. His defense?

A. His defense.

Q. Of course, you don't know that overshifting is a principal part of every defense of every team?

A. I don't know what?

Q. Overshifting is a principal part of every defense of every team that plays football?

A. Overshifting?

Q. Yes.

A. No; I don't know that overshifting—

Q. You don't—

A. —is a principal part of defense. I'm sorry.

Q. And you are a football fan?

A. Yes; I am a football fan. If you overshift you are in trouble, Mr. Schroder.

Q. Explain that to me, please, sir.

A. You shift yourself out of position, I imagine.

[fol. 250] Q. Well, not what you imagine; I mean, just tell me about this overshifting and how it gets you into trouble.

A. Well, you can overshift on a spread formation and they will go the other way on you, and you are in trouble.

Q. What is a spread formation?

A. When the teams are all spread out, the offense is all spread out.

Q. You mean great distances are between the offensive players?

A. That's right.

Q. And your description of overshifting is that if you overshifted in that sort of a situation and they went the other way, you would be in trouble?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You don't know that the basic defense of Georgia is overshifting, an overshift, as is Alabama's?

A. No; I don't.

Q. You don't?

A. I don't know that.

Q. Page 4 of your notes, you have "Best since Trippi, Porterfield." Who is Trippi?

A. Charlie Trippi is a former Georgia great football player who was one of the coaches last year.

Q. Are you familiar with his playing days at the University of Georgia?

A. Yes; I am. I remember reading about Charlie Trippi.

Q. Was he considered to be a right fair country ball player?

A. A pretty good country football player.

Q. He was an all around player playing both offense and defense?

[fol. 251] A. Yes; he played in the days when they played football.

Q. There is a note here which you discussed briefly yesterday reading, "Can quick kick", and if I recall correctly, and you correct me if I misquote you, that was in connection with a question asked by Coach Bryant, that is to say, you say you heard the question asked by Coach Bryant of Coach Butts, "Well, what about the quick kicking?" And Coach Butts says, "You don't have to worry about that, because they don't have anybody that can quick kick."

A. That's right.

Q. That is a fair representation—repetition of what you said?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, don't you know that Georgia has a quick kicker?

A. No; I don't.

Q. You don't know that they do quick kick?

A. No, sir; I don't.

Q. The opening part of this article by the editors up here in the top side, referring to the Chicago White Sox scandal, did you discuss anything with Mr. Graham about how—what you said you heard reminded you of any such thing as the Chicago White Sox scandal in 19—when they threw the 1919 World Series?

A. No; I did not.

Q. Did you all discuss that topic at all?

A. No, sir; did not.

Q. The first time you testified—the first time you talked to your friend Bob Edwards, you testified yesterday it was January the 4th?

A. That's right.

[fol. 252] Q. You testified yesterday that you did not find your notes until two days before you had the meeting at the Atlanta Biltmore?

A. That's right; the day before, as a matter of fact.

Q. Then—

A. A day or two before.

Q. Then you did not at any time show your notes to Bob Edwards before you found them on the day before you met at the Biltmore, the day that you met being January 24?

A. I couldn't have shown them to anybody, Mr. Schroder, until I found them.

Q. That's right.

A. And I found them about two days before we met at the Biltmore, and I met Mr. Bob Edwards that morning and showed him the notes.

Q. You met on January 24; that would have been January the 22nd?

A. No, sir; that was about January the 17th. The 24th is when I met with Mr. Cook Barwick in his office.

Q. No, sir; I don't want you to be in error.

A. I don't want to be in error.

Q. All right, sir.

A. We—we met on the 14th—on the 4th and about two weeks later is when I met with Johnny Griffith. I don't remember the exact dates.

Q. It was January the 25th. I am not supposed to testify, but I don't want you to get in error.

A. I don't want to be in error.

The Court: I thought the Coaches' Convention was the 17th of January; am I in error?

[fol. 253] Mr. Schroder: If that is what the testimony is.

The Court: That is what the testimony was, is my recollection.

Mr. Schroder: It is in error. All I can say, Your Honor, is that there were a lot of depositions in this case.

The Court: They would know. It was my impression there was a convention out here at the Biltmore Hotel on January the 17th. I could be in error.

Mr. Schroder: I think that is a week earlier.

The Witness: It was during the week of the Coaches' Convention, Your Honor; it was on a Thursday, the last part of the week of the Coaches' Convention.

Mr. Schroder: I will bring it out by some other witness. I will state for the record that it was January the 24th, Thursday.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. If it was January 24 that you met with Coach Griffith, it would have to have been January 22 or 23 that you first got hold of your notes?

A. Right.

Q. And you could not, therefore, have shown them to [fol. 254] your friend Bob Edwards before that time?

A. This is true.

Q. All right, sir. Now, the—

Mr. Schroder: Your Honor, just a minute, please. The deposition, please, Mr. Smith. I didn't bring it up here with me; 25.

Mr. Smith: Page 25?

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Mr. Burnett, your associate, Mr. Flack, had made several efforts to sell or peddle this story, had he not?

A. I don't know of several efforts; I know of one, Mr. Schroder.

Q. You know of one, and that was the only one you know of is the one involved with Phil Rizzuto in New York?

A. That's right. That was approximately two weeks before—

Mr. Cody: Your Honor, I don't think it is proper—

The Court: I didn't hear that, the first.

Mr. Cody: I don't think it is proper for this witness to testify about what somebody else did. You get into that with another witness.

[fol. 255] Mr. Schroder: All right, sir; will you hold this witness subject to recall, Your Honor?

The Court: What was the testimony?

Mr. Schroder: It had to do with an associate of his—

The Court: Mr. Flack; I got that part of it, but sell it to who?

Mr. Schroder: Phil Rizzuto was one, and others. Mr. Cody properly pointed out I can bring it out by Mr. Flack, but I want this witness held to put back on the stand.

The Court: This witness will be here all during court.

Mr. Cody: You needn't worry about that part. I think it would be better to bring it out and you can bring Mr. Burnett back to the stand.

The Court: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. At any rate, you did, did you not, Mr. Burnett, promised Mr. Barwick and the group in his office that you would not sell the story, didn't you, Mr. Barwick sitting right here?

A. You are referring again to the Phil Rizzuto—

[fol. 256] Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir; I did, when I reported it to him.

Q. You promised him you would not sell the story, didn't you?

A. Well, yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever go to him and tell him that you were going to sell it or had sold it?

A. I didn't sell the story, Mr. Schroder.

Q. You got paid for it, didn't you?

A. Subsequently, but I did not give the story in the beginning with the intention of doing it for selling it.

Q. Did you ever ask Mr. Barwick to relieve you of the promise you made to him that you would not give the story for money or sell it or whatever else you did?

A. No; I did not.

Mr. Schroder: That's all, Your Honor.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. Mr. Burnett—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the entire conversation which you allegedly overheard over the telephone, did you ever hear the word "Rakestraw" used?

A. Yes, sir; he used it as I have it here in the notes, Your Honor, when he said Rakestraw was—went to the right in describing a play; he used the name of Rakestraw.

Q. That was the only time?

A. The only time, and he said when Rakestraw goes to the left, an optional left pass, if they can block the man on [fol. 257] the corner he keeps running; if they can't they pass. That is the only time in my notes or that I recall hearing the name Rakestraw used.

The Court: I just wanted to clarify that.

Mr. Schroder: All right, sir.

The Court: Anything further from this witness, Mr. Cody?

Mr. Cody: Is he through? You through with him?

Mr. Schroder: Yes; yes, sir.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: I have a few questions, Your Honor.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Burnett, yesterday Mr. Schroder asked you if you had the notes, meaning the notes you have in your hands now, if you had those notes before you when you had this discussion with Mr. Graham who was then representing Saturday Evening Post.

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 258] Q. And you said that you did not have them before you?

A. No; I did not.

Q. Where were those notes at the time?

A. In Mr. Barwick's office, Mr. Cook Barwick's possession with the athletic board. I say "in his possession"; to my knowledge he had them.

Q. You had previously turned them over to the University officials?

A. Yes, sir; I had.

Q. Then you—in your discussion—

Mr. Schroder: Don't lead him.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. In your discussion with Mr. Graham, you were speaking from memory?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Who was—who was present, Mr. Burnett, at this first meeting that you had in Mr. Barwick's office?

A. Mr. Barwick—

Mr. Schroder: Your Honor, we have been all over this, I believe. I have got notes about this.

The Court: Didn't we go over this yesterday, Mr. Cody?

Mr. Cody: We touched on this meeting, but I didn't get the personnel of those present.

[fol. 259] The Court: Go ahead. If you've covered it, we'll stop you.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Go ahead; state briefly.

A. Mr. Barwick, Dr. Aderhold, Mr. Bolton, Bob Edwards and myself.

Q. Did Mr. Bolton and Dr. Aderhold at that time make known who they were?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you at that time know that a tape recording was made of that conference?

A. Yes, sir. They asked my permission, and I gave it.

Q. Was that the meeting at which they asked you to make an affidavit?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And to—

Mr. Schroder: We have been all over this, Your Honor.

The Court: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Schroder asked you a few minutes ago about some of your conversation with Mr. Carmichael. Did I understand you to say in response to one of his questions that Mr. Carmichael is the one that told Mr. Pierre Howard about this story?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: Wait a minute; whoa, whoa! That would [fol. 260] be pure hearsay. That was not answered; anyway, if it was, it would be pure hearsay.

Mr. Cody: He didn't object to it.

The Court: I believe I asked it; I believe that's correct. I didn't know how he knew about it. I don't want to go into any hearsay on it. I didn't know I was eliciting hearsay.

Mr. Schroder: May I move it be removed?

The Court: I think it is a minor detail.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Barnett, what did Carmichael tell you, if anything, about keeping his name out of this?

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, that would be hearsay.

The Court: Yes, sir. I sustain the objection. Mr. Carmichael will be here, won't he?

Mr. Cody: I didn't subpoena him, Your Honor. They didn't have his name on the list of witnesses they gave me. Maybe he does. That's all we have of this witness.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 261] J. D. Bolton called as a witness on behalf of the defendant, after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Your name is Mr. J. D. Bolton?

A. Yes, sir; that is correct.

Q. What is your position with the University of Georgia, Mr. Bolton?

A. I am comptroller and treasurer of the University of Georgia, and also treasurer of the Athletic Association.

Q. How long have you been connected with the University?

A. Since July 1, 1933.

Q. What part of that time have you known Coach Butts?

A. Since Coach Butts came there, I believe, in 1938.

Q. During that time have you been closely associated with him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How often would you see him and talk to him?

A. Quite—quite frequently.

Q. Almost daily?

A. Yes, sir; and sometimes—some instances, sometimes it would be maybe a week or more.

Q. How long have you been on the Athletic Board?

A. I think it was about 1935 or—6.

Q. Have you continuously been on it since?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On it now?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 262] Q. What is the function of the Athletic Board, Mr. Bolton?

A. The Athletic Board—the University of Georgia Athletic Association is incorporated, and it has full responsibility for the athletic program, subject, of course, to the control of the Chancellor of the University system and the Board of Regents.

Q. How many members constitute that Board?

A. I believe it is fifteen.

Q. Composed in part by faculty?

A. Yes, sir; I believe there are eight faculty members and seven non-faculty members, alumni.

Q. When did you—when this so-called Butts-Bryant affair first come to your attention?

A. I believe it was on January the 24th.

Q. Do you haye your notes there?

A. Yes, sir. Yes, sir; that's correct; is was on January 24, 1963.

Q. What brought it to your attention?

A. I was registered at the Biltmore Hotel to attend the Southeastern Athletic Conference, and we registered there, it was Thursday afternoon on January the 24th, and I was in my room looking at television. Coach Griffith called me and asked me if I—

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, that would be hearsay, the telephone and any other conversation he had.

The Court: I will let him go into what was said, but not—when he first had knowledge of it. I won't let him go into any knowledge of any conversation.

[fol. 263] By Mr. Cody:

Q. Did you thereafter go to Mr.—Coach Griffith's room?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that the first time he called it to your attention?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do after that?

A. I told him we would have to—

The Court: We can't go into any conversation, Mr. Bolton.

Mr. Cody: All right.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Did he—Mr. Bolton, I show you what has been identified as the Defendant's Exhibit No. 12, and I'd like to ask you if those papers were shown to you at that time?

A. Yes, sir; they were.

Q. By whom?

A. Coach Johnny Griffith.

Q. Did you take charge of them from then on?

A. No, sir.

Q. What happened to them from that point?

A. He kept them until the following Saturday morning, about 9:30.

Q. Who got them then, if you know?

A. He turned them over to President Aderhold that morning on Saturday morning.

Q. I see.

A. And President Aderhold turned them over to me and asked me to lock them up in the vault.

[fol. 264] Mr. Lockerman: If Your Honor please, we object to that.

The Court: Sustain the objection.

The Witness: I'm sorry.

The Court: You did lock them up after that?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Did you later turn them over to Mr. Barwick?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When?

A. It was that Saturday night, Saturday night on June 26th.

Q. Was Mr. Barwick the attorney for the Athletic Board and the University?

A. Mr. Barwick is a member of the Athletic Board. The Athletic Board at that time had no attorney, I don't believe.

Q. Now, you referred to meeting him on a Saturday. Where did you meet him?

A. At his home here in Atlanta.

Q. Don't go into any conversation that took place there. I am just trying to establish some dates. Now, thereafter did you—did you call a meeting in Mr. Barwick's office and have Mr. Burnett present?

A. I didn't call the meeting.

Q. Who did?

[fol. 265] A. President Aderhold.

Q. Did you attend the meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you have the date of that?

A. Yes, sir; it was on January 29, Tuesday.

Q. Now, following that meeting did you thereafter have a meeting at which Coach Butts attended?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that?

A. That meeting was on February the 22nd, on Friday.

Q. Where?

A. In Mr. Cook Barwick's office.

Q. Now, at that time was Coach Butts made acquainted with this—with those notes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember whether or not he had those notes and took a look at them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not Coach Butts was acquainted with the nature of the affidavit that Mr. Burnett had signed?

A. No, sir; I wouldn't know. I don't think he was.

Q. Was he told the purpose of this meeting after he got there?

A. Yes, sir; yes, sir.

Q. What was the purpose of it?

A. The purpose of the meeting was to inform Coach Butts of everything that we knew about at that particular time.

Q. That is, the Butts-Bryant affair?

A. Yes, sir.

The Court: Mr. Cody, I am not quite clear, and I don't [fol. 266] know whether the jury is, who was present at this meeting on February the 23rd, where it was held, and so forth.

Mr. Cody: I am just about to get there.

The Court: I am jumping ahead of you. I didn't quite know.

Mr. Cody: That is my next question, Your Honor.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. That meeting, I believe, was in Mr. Cook Barwick's office?

A. That is correct.

Q. At what time? Do you have a note of that?

A. I believe it was 10:00 a. m. I have a note here to that effect.

Q. As a matter of fact, Mr. Bolton, didn't—didn't you personally drive Coach Butts from Athens to that meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You invited him to ride with you?

A. Yes, sir; he rode with me and President Aderhold.

Q. Who was it contacted him to tell him that he was wanted at that meeting? Was it you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, tell us—tell us who all was at this meeting, if you know.

A. It was Chancellor Colwell, Mr. James Dunlap.

Q. That is Harmon Colwell?

A. Chancellor Colwell, Chancellor of the University Sys-
[fol. 267] tem of Georgia. Mr. James Dunlap—

Q. Wait a minute, wait a minute. Who is he?

A. He is the Chairman of the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia.

Q. Go ahead.

A. Mr. Bernie Moore, Commissioner of the Southeastern Conference.

Q. Who else?

A. Mr. William Hartman of Athens, Georgia, Coach Butts, Mr. Cook Barwick, Dr. Aderhold, and I.

Q. When you gave Coach Butts those notes, did he make any comment about them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you recall for the jury what comments he did make?

A. The best that I remember, Coach Butts looked at the notes and said, "No doubt the guy heard what he said he heard. I don't blame him for placing the interpretation that he did on this conversation. If I had been in his place, I probably would have thought the same thing, but he is mistaken. It's just conversation, ordinary football talk among coaches, and that you know I would not give old Bryant anything to help him and hurt Georgia, and I wouldn't do anything to hurt Georgia. If I did give any information to hurt Georgia it was not intentional."

Q. When was it that Coach Butts resigned as athletic director?

A. The following day, on February 23, which was Saturday following this meeting that you just referred to on February the 22nd.

Q. Has he had any connection with the University since that time?

A. Well, he resigned on that day effective February the [fol. 268] 28th, and there's been no connection since that time.

Q. Mr. Bolton, I assume by your testimony that you were on the Athletic Board in 1960 and '61; I believe you said your service was continuous?

A. Yes, sir; that is correct.

Q. When did Coach Butts resign as football coach at the University?

A. I believe that was effective January 1st, 1960. I expect I'd have to refer to some notes.

Q. See if it wouldn't be '61.

A. I believe it was '61.

Q. Did you have any understanding with him at the time of that resignation that he was to have nothing to do with football?

A. President Aderhold made a statement to him at the Board meeting—

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor please—

The Court: Yes, sir; that would be hearsay.

Mr. Lockerman: Pure hearsay.

The Court: Unless Coach Butts was present.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: Were you present when Coach Butts—was [fol. 269] Coach Butts present when Dr. Aderhold made the statement?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: I will let it in.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Go ahead and tell us what he said.

A. He told Coach Butts he could contribute a lot to the public relations of the University and the Athletic Association, but he wanted—and the over-all athletic program, but he wanted it clearly understood that he would have no responsibility for coaching.

Q. Was that a voluntary resignation he made, Mr. Bolton?

A. So far as I know.

The Court: What resignation are you referring to?

Mr. Cody: 1961, the first, as coach.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. From that time, Mr. Bolton, has he had anything to do with the football team?

A. Not to my knowledge; no, sir.

Q. Thereafter and before—before this resignation of February 23 that you mentioned effective February 28, 1963, was there any previous resignation that you know of as athletic director?

[fol. 270] A. I'm sorry; I didn't quite catch the last date. Prior to February 23?

Q. Prior to that, did he tender his resignation as athletic director previous to that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What reason did he give?

A. He gave as a reason that he had realized that he had devoted a great deal of his time to personal business.

Q. Was anything said about that interfering with his duties as athletic director?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go into any detail about that? Don't mention the details; I just want to know if there were any.

A. Some of the details on it; yes, sir.

Q. Did he mention anything at that time about his physical condition?

A. I didn't—not to me; no, sir.

Q. Do you know, Mr. Bolton, whether or not these outside activities of Coach Butts had hurt the University?

Mr. Schroder: Had what? I didn't hear.

The Court: Just a moment, Mr. Bolton, don't answer that question. What is the nature—

Mr. Cody: These business activities that he referred to, his outside business interests. Let me re-form the question. [fol. 271] The Court: All right, sir. Don't answer the question, Mr. Bolton.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Do you know whether or not these outside business interests that Coach Butts had did interfere with his responsibilities as athletic director?

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, I think that would call for a conclusion of the witness.

The Court: Well, if he was one of the officers of the Athletic Board, I will let him answer that, but—

Mr. Schroder: I don't think it is—I will withdraw the objection.

The Court: All right, sir, go ahead.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Can you answer that question?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your answer?

A. I think it did.

Q. It did?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: I believe that's all.

[fol. 272] The Court: We are going to take a recess for fifteen minutes.

Members of the jury, I must admonish you as previously —you may step down, Mr. Bolton.

(Whereupon the witness was excused from the stand.)

The Court: I am not going to send you to your jury room, but let you refresh yourselves on the outside. As I admonished you yesterday not to discuss the case among yourselves or let anyone discuss it in your presence. Simply dismiss it from your mind until we return at 11:25. Let the jury pass out; everyone else remain seated.

(Whereupon the jury retired from the courtroom at 11:12 a. m.)

The Court: Mr. Marshal, we will recess until 11:25.

(Whereupon Court recessed at 11:12 a. m., reconvening at 11:25 a. m.)

After Recess

The Court: Do you have any further questions, Mr. Cody?

Mr. Cody: Yes, I did, Your Honor.

[fol. 273] The Court: All right, sir, you may continue.

Mr. Cody: I have three more questions I'd like to ask Mr. Bolton which I neglected to ask a few moments ago.

J. D. Bolton having resumed the stand, testified further as follows:

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Bolton, at this meeting in Mr. Barwick's office February 22 when the other representatives of the University were present, was Coach Butts asked to sign an affidavit?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. What did he say?
A. He said, no, he would not.
Q. Was he asked to take a lie detector test?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What did he say about that?

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, they know that is strictly inadmissible.

The Court: Yes, sir; I don't believe that is admissible.

Mr. Schroder: Cody knows that.

[fol. 274] Mr. Cody: I think it is admissible to ask if he was requested to take one. I am not going into the results of it.

The Court: If he didn't take one there wouldn't be any results. I think the only purpose, and I thought I stated yesterday to the jury and I will instruct the jury again on the admissibility of the polygraph or lie detector test, would be to show in mitigation of damages, if any, on behalf of the Post, and I don't think that is a proper question, and I sustain the objection.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Now, Mr. Bolton, I have one more question I'd like to ask you. What was the date of this resignation of Coach Butts as athletic director, the one previous to the February 23 resignation?
A. January 28, 1963.

Mr. Cody: Thank you, sir; that's all we have.

The Court: All right, Mr. Schroder.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. I believe you testified, Mr. Bolton, that you and Wally Butts, that you had been at the University of Georgia since 1933, and he had been there since 1938?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that right?

A. That's correct.

[fol. 275] Q. The two of you together?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe that Mr. Cody asked you about those notes—

Mr. Lockerman: May I have them?

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. —and about the first time you saw them, and I think you have some memorandum as to the first time that you said that you saw these notes—

A. That's right, sir.

Q. The Defendant's Exhibit No. 12. Now, you don't know anything about these notes yourself, do you?

A. I know nothing of the technical aspects of football; no, sir.

Q. You don't know anything about these notes themselves, do you?

A. I don't believe I understand the question, Mr. Lockerman.

Q. You don't know yourself who made the notes or when they were made, do you?

A. Oh, no, sir.

Q. They were merely handed to you by Coach Griffith; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. As a matter of fact, these notes don't mean anything to you either, do they?

A. Not too much.

Q. Yes, sir. You don't know anything about football, do you?

A. No, sir; not the technical aspects of it.

Q. Mr. Cody asked you about the day that you came over to the meeting in Cook Barwick's office, and I believe [fol. 276] he asked you about—didn't he ask you if Wally Butts rode over here with you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, Wally Butts called you that morning and asked you if he could ride here with you, didn't he?

A. I don't think that is right.

Q. Well, in any event he did ride in your car with you, didn't he?

A. Yes, sir; that's correct.

Q. And you at that time knew everything about, or rather you knew what the purpose of that meeting was, didn't you?

A. That is correct; yes, sir.

Q. And I believe you testified on direct-examination that so far as you knew Wally Butts didn't know anything about the purpose of that meeting, did he?

A. I don't remember that question was asked, but I don't believe he did.

Q. Yes, sir. And it took you about, say, an hour or an hour and a half to ride over here from Athens for the meeting, didn't it?

A. That's correct.

Q. Did you say anything to Wally Butts, this man you had been working with for, say, twenty-five years, about what the purpose of that meeting was?

A. No, sir; nothing was said whatever.

Q. You just kept perfectly quiet, didn't you?

A. Oh, no, sir; we talked.

Q. I mean about the purpose of the meeting.

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. You didn't mention why you were—you didn't mention why you were bringing him over here for the meeting, did you?

[fol. 277] A. No, sir; Dr. Aderhold was in the car also.

Q. And neither did Dr. Aderhold?

A. No, sir.

Q. Neither one of you?

A. That's correct.

Q. I believe you testified that when you finally got into the meeting in Cook Barwick's office, and the purpose of the meeting was brought out to Wallace Butts and he was shown these notes, he immediately said, did he not, that possibly the man heard some conversation between himself and Bryant; is that about what he said?

A. No, sir. He said that he didn't doubt that the guy heard what he said he heard. You want me to repeat the whole thing again?

Q. I think I remember quite well what you said, and I suppose the jury does too. The next thing he said was that he misinterpreted or didn't understand the conversation; isn't that right?

A. Yes, sir; that's correct.

Q. And that he had not given any information to Bryant in the telephone conversation, if he had one, that would help him, didn't he?

A. Well, the way I understood it was, he said that, "You know I wouldn't give old 'Bear' anything to help him".

Q. That is what I was getting to next.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He told you immediately, and the others who were gathered there, that you knew, speaking to all of you, that he would not give old "Bear" anything that would help him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He said that, didn't he?

A. Yes, sir; he said that.

[fol. 278] Q. And he said that immediately, didn't he? I mean, in the conversation?

A. In the conversation; yes, sir.

Q. Yes, sir. I believe you referred also to some testimony about—I mean, in your testimony you said something about the fact that Wally Butts had some outside activities other than his connection with the Athletic Department.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Is Wally Butts or was Wally Butts the only man that had any activities other than—that is, at the University of Georgia, other than his activities with the University?

A. Oh, I shouldn't think so.

Q. There were others, weren't there?

A. Oh, sure.

Q. Yes, sir.

Mr. Lockerman: Will you mark these two papers for identification, please, Plaintiff's Exhibit whichever number is next?

The Court: Are you familiar with these exhibits that are being marked, Mr. Cody?

Mr. Cody: I never have seen them. I'd like to take a look at them.

The Court: All right, sir.

[fol. 279] The Clerk: Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 26 for identification is a copy of a letter dated October 22, 1962 to J. D. Bolton from Wallace Butts.

(Whereupon above document was marked for identification only as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 26.)

The Clerk: 27 is a copy of a letter dated April 27, 1962 to J. D. Bolton from Wallace Butts.

Mr. Cody: He hasn't offered them in evidence yet.

Mr. Lockerman: I just wanted to get him to identify them; that's all.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Mr. Bolton, will you look at these two documents marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibits Nos. 26 and 27, which are copies of letters addressed to you dated October 22, 1962, and the other dated April 27, 1962, and I ask you to state whether or not they are copies of letters you received from Wallace Butts.

A. Yes, sir; I can identify them.

[fol. 280] Mr. Lockerman: All right, sir, thank you. That's all.

The Court: Do you have any further questions?

Mr. Cody: I do; I do, Your Honor.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Bolton, while we are on the subject of letters, do you have a letter there you received from Mr. Schroder?

A. Yes, sir; I think so.

Q. Will you let me see that just a minute?

Mr. Schroder: Can I identify it?

The Court: I presume you are familiar with that letter?

The Witness: All right, sir.

Mr. Cody: Will you identify this as Mr. Schroder's letter; that would be Defendant's Exhibit No. 16, wouldn't it?

The Clerk: 15.

[fol. 281] Mr. Cody: 15, and the reply is 16?

The Clerk: Yes, sir.

(Whereupon above documents were marked for identification only as Defendant's Exhibits Nos. 15 and 16 respectively.)

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Bolton, I show you the Defendant's Exhibit No.—

Mr. Schroder: You haven't shown it to me.

The Court: Sir?

Mr. Cody: I thought you knew what was in there.

Mr. Schroder: Well, I don't know.

The Marshal: Let's have order, please.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Bolton, I ask you to take a look at this Defendant's Exhibit No. 15, and state if you received that during the course of the mail.

A. Yes, sir; I did.

[fol. 282] Q. Is the other exhibit, Defendant's Exhibit No. 16, your reply?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You, of course, don't know whether that is Mr. Schroder's signature or not?

A. No, sir.

Q. But you did address your letter to him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Bolton, in connection with these outside business activities of Coach Butts, I show you what has been identified—

Mr. Cody: I don't believe it has been identified. Mark this as Defendant's Exhibit No. 17, which is a 42-page document listing some telephone calls.

The Clerk: Defendant's Exhibit No. 17.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. I hand you the Defendant's Exhibit No. 17, and ask you to take a look at it, and then state to the Court and jury whether or not that is an instrument Coach Butts asked you to prepare.

A. I have got to do a little comparing here myself.

Q. That is all right. Take your time. Would you like to come over here to the table?

A. I think I can work it right here.

[fol. 283] The Court: The alternate juror on the rear, sir, can you see and hear everything?

Juror: Yes, sir.

The Witness: This looks like a part of it. I am not sure it is all.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Well, such of it as is there, answer the question with reference to that.

A. All right, sir. I know this is a part of it.

Q. Did Coach Butts render any assistance in the preparation of that document?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: I haven't seen the document they are talking about, Your Honor.

The Court: I haven't either. I just don't know what the relevancy is.

Mr. Schroder: May I look at it, Mr. Counselor?

Mr. Cody: Sure, but I haven't finished with the witness, though.

[fol. 284] The Court: I think he is entitled to look at it, and see whether or not he might want to make an objection to it.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Did you talk to Coach Butts after that document was completed or the one that you have there that has been identified?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say about it as to its correctness or as to any error?

A. Well, I have a letter from him.

Q. Will you let me see that?

A. I have two letters, one letter on February 26, one letter on April the 5th, one on April the 8th, one on April the 15th.

The Court: May I make this inquiry. What is the relevancy—

Mr. Schroder: That is what I would like to know, Your Honor.

The Court: —of all of this testimony insofar as the telephone call was concerned which was allegedly made to—

Mr. Cody: I'd like to discuss that with Your Honor, but I think it would be improper in the presence of the jury.

The Court: Well, let the jury be taken to the jury room. We will go ahead and work this out.

[fol. 285] (Whereupon the jury retired from the courtroom at 11:46 a. m.)

The Court: The line of questioning, as I recall, is based on outside activities.

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

The Court: And I assume that—and I certainly don't know; effort is being shown that phone calls were made on other activities, but what has that got to do with the issues in this case?

Mr. Cody: Two.

The Court: Sir?

Mr. Cody: Two, Your Honor. It has two.

The Court: What issue?

Mr. Cody: Number one, and the principal one, these is the information disclosed by this 42-page document which discloses—

[fol. 286] The Court: You said a 42-page document. That is a list of phone calls?

Mr. Cody: That's right. First, it discloses twenty-eight hundred eighteen dollars and ten cents in telephone calls that Coach Butts made on these personal and business transactions which he charged to the University.

Mr. Schroder: They have been paid. I think that's—that's all been paid.

The Court: Let's take number one. What's that got to do with this case?

Mr. Cody: I want to prove by this witness that this list of telephone calls was approved by Coach Butts and the parties to whom these calls were made are relevant in this case.

The Court: In proving what part of the case?

Mr. Cody: One, if Mr. Schroder, while he did not mention in his opening statement that any gambling was involved or had any relevancy to this case, nevertheless if he does see fit to inject it into this case, this document is very important in that respect because it discloses a tremendous number of calls to several different parties whom [fol. 287] I expect to show and can show were gamblers. I am glad to make that statement in the absence of the jury, because I don't care to make any statement to prejudice Coach Butts' case, but I think that on that subject that this document is highly important and is relevant, and I intend to offer it for that purpose.

Mr. Schroder: Let me be—

Mr. Cody: It connects up a sequence of events which I think are highly relevant in this case. Now, I am—

The Court: Well, is it your contention in your plea of justification that there was gambling involved in the football fix; I mean, that is a loose term.

Mr. Cody: We haven't charged Coach Butts with gambling, and it is my contention that we have not. Mr. Schroder has said that by—and set forth in his pleadings by inference he reaches that conclusion.

The Court: Do you contend—

Mr. Cody: I am not offering this document at the present time, Your Honor. What I want this witness to do while he is here and available is identify it. I am not offering it in evidence yet, but I want to, while this witness is here, I want him to identify it.

[fol. 288] The Court: Mr. Schroder, is it your contention that the article does charge gambling?

Mr. Schroder: Let me, if I—

The Court: Can you answer that question?

Mr. Schroder: I can't answer it right now.

The Court: I think that deals with the admissibility of this answer.

Mr. Cody: I think he ought to answer it.

Mr. Schroder: I'd like to direct some remarks to that exhibit and what I have to say in connection with it.

The Court: All right, sir, go ahead.

Mr. Schroder: I know Mr. Cody real well, but I don't think it is fair what he has just said in the presence of the press, because he knows that is not the purpose for which he has that document there. He knows there is not but one man on there that is even mentioned in any respect with relation to gambling. I don't think it is proper for him to [fol. 289] stand here in the presence of the press and say things that will really hurt the plaintiff.

The Court: Let's—let's eliminate the personalities. What I am trying to determine is the real issue. I will ask you the question, Mr. Schroder: Is it your contention that the article does, by the use of the word—I believe the use of the words "corrupt" and "fixing" and "rigging," is it your contention and will it be your contention that they did charge gambling?

Mr. Schroder: It does, Your Honor; I think it does charge that there was gambling in connection with the outcome of this game by both of mine—not both of mine, but both parties.

Mr. Cody: I believe it is admissible.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: What is?

Mr. Cody: Your Honor, let me make one statement.

Mr. Schroder: Just a moment, just a moment, whoa, whoa. He said he thinks it is admissible, and what did Your Honor say?

[fol. 290] The Court: I think if your argument or contention to the jury is that it does charge gambling by innuendo or whatever it might be, I think he would be entitled at the proper time, if you do put it in, put forth such evidence, I think it would be admissible for him to show telephone calls to gamblers, if that is charged.

Mr. Schroder: No, sir. Let me straighten this out, Your Honor; that is not what this document shows that he is talking about he wants to introduce to prove—to disprove it.

The Court: Well, I don't—

Mr. Schroder: Let him take the ones off here he says he can prove are known gamblers, and maybe he has got something, but that is not what he wants to introduce this document for, and he knows it. There is not one single person on there that is a known gambler at the time of this transaction, and I challenge him to prove it.

The Court: Of course, Mr. Schroder—

Mr. Cody: We have got depositions here—

The Court: Just a moment; just a moment. I have never seen the document. I don't know what is contained in it.

[fol. 291] Mr. Schroder: He says what it shows. I want Your Honor to see it.

The Court: Well, as I understand—

Mr. Cody: I say it's got to be connected up.

The Court: Let's get the procedure straight. As I understand you, you do not intend to offer the document at this time?

Mr. Cody: No, sir.

The Court: And all you want to do is have the document identified by Mr. Bolton—

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

The Court: And go no further?

Mr. Cody: Except—

The Court: All right, sir.

[fol. 292] Mr. Cody: Except to this extent. I want to offer these letters with it. I want to prove by this witness before he gets away—

The Court: You are not offering the letters at this time; you are just identifying the letters?

Mr. Cody: Just identifying them before this witness gets out of pocket. I want to get the record straight.

Mr. Schroder: I have never seen—

The Court: You have identified it.

Mr. Schroder: Well, I have never seen them.

Mr. Cody: Well, you will have an opportunity to see them.

Mr. Schroder: Well, thanks.

Mr. Cody: I want to make one other statement in response to what Mr. Schroder has said. While we are talking about the discreetness with the press, I have never made any statement in this case to the press or anybody else with any intention of causing any prejudice or harm [fol. 293] to Coach Butts. There's been a good deal of—there's been a good deal of conferences, a good deal of quotations from Mr. Schroder to the press, and I want to say that I resent any comment on his part that I am making this—trying to identify these documents for the benefit of the press. I can't help them being there, but, at the same time, I am not going to prejudice my client's case by excluding them from the evidence.

The Court: Well, we will cross that bridge when we get to it. I will let him identify the documents such as—and then we will, at such time as the evidence develops, we will determine whether or not they are admissible. I don't know what is in the documents. I can't rule on them without reading them.

Mr. Schroder: I don't know what is in the letter. May I have a look at the letters? I have never had them shown to me during any pre-trial hearing.

Mr. Cody: I have been presented with documents I have never seen before, and I can't help that.

The Court: Well, of course, that is where—I thought we had had enough pre-trial, but apparently we didn't. All right, sir.

Mr. Cody: I don't think we had room for all this, Judge.

[fol. 294] The Court: Let the jury be brought back in.

Mr. Cody: Will you identify that as a Defendant's Exhibit? What will that be, 17?

The Clerk: It will be Defendant's Exhibit No. 18. It is a letter dated April 8, 1963 to J. D. Bolton from Wallace Butts.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Bolton, I believe you have identified this Defendant's Exhibit 15 and 16 as—I believe you have already identified that. I show you now the Defendant's Exhibit

18, and ask you if that is a letter that you received from Coach Butts?

A. Yes, sir; it is.

Q. Do you know his signature?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did this Exhibit 18 have reference to the Defendant's Exhibit No. 17, the one—

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor please, the exhibits will speak for themselves.

[fol. 295] The Court: I will let him testify to it, if he connects it up. I haven't let the exhibits in yet.

A. (By the Witness) Yes, sir; that is correct.

Mr. Cody: I believe that's all.

The Court: Did you have any further questions, Mr. Lockerman?

Mr. Lockerman: No, sir.

Mr. Cody: You can have these back.

The Court: Did I understand you to say you didn't?

Mr. Lockerman: No further questions.

The Court: All right, sir, let Mr. Bolton step down.

(Whereupon the witness was excused from the stand.)

The Court: Call your next witness.

Mr. Cody: You may be excused, Mr. Bolton.

[fol. 296] The Court: Let me ask this question, Mr. Schroder, Mr. Lockerman. Can Mr. Bolton be excused?

Mr. Schroder: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: You have no further use for him in the trial?

Mr. Schroder: I want to accommodate Mr. Bolton. Let me confer.

The Court: I mean, if you—

Mr. Schroder: I don't have any, but let me check it out.

The Court: I presume he will be in Athens and can be available in a couple of hours.

Mr. Bolton: Yes, sir.

Mr. Lockerman: I believe he said he would be in Athens available?

JACK C. GORDAY called as a witness on behalf of the defendant, after having first been duly sworn, testified by deposition as follows:

[fol. 297] Direct examination.

By Mr. Davis:

Q. Would you state your name, please?
A. Jack C. Gorday.
Q. Where do you live, Mr. Gorday?
A. Tuscaloosa, Alabama.
Q. Are you an employee of the Southern Bell Telephone Company?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is your position with the company?
A. Group manager.
Q. Where?
A. Tuscaloosa.
Q. Any particular district or division?
A. The Tuscaloosa group, which comprises Tuscaloosa, Utah, Livingston, York.
Q. By subpoena we requested the toll ticket representing an alleged long distance telephone call made by Paul Bryant to Wallace Butts on Sunday, September 16, 1962, from the University of Alabama switchboard, number 752-7441 to either LI3-4351 or LI6-0262 in Athens, Georgia. Do you have a toll ticket representing such a call?
A. Yes.

Mr. Schroder: If it please the Court—
The Court: Yes.
Mr. Schroder: —may I ask a question? I believe that is toll ticket that is already in evidence. I don't see any sense [fol. 298] in going back over the testimony. Isn't that the toll ticket that is in evidence?

Mr. Joiner: May it please the Court—

The Court: My—go ahead.

Mr. Joiner: The toll ticket is in evidence, but the purpose of reading this testimony is to tie in the credit card number of Coach Bryant to the document which has already been admitted.

The Court: Yes, sir. I remember asking that question yesterday, and they said the evidence would tie it in. Yes, sir; go ahead. You don't insist, do you?

Mr. Schroder: No, sir.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Davis:

Q. Do you have a toll ticket representing such a call?

A. Yes.

Q. May I see it, please? Is this a record that is kept in the ordinary course of business? That is, you have such a record on all telephone calls that are made on all long distance telephone calls that are made?

[fol. 299] A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Joiner: Mr. Davis states: "I will ask the Court Reporter to identify, as Defendant's Exhibit 1, the photostatic copy of the front and back of this toll ticket that you have handed me." Your Honor, I'd like to state that we do not intend to offer that exhibit since it is the one that we have previously offered. It's already been admitted in evidence.

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Schroder: That was admitted without objection.

By Mr. Davis:

Q. Mr. Gorday, I would like, while we both look at Defendant's Exhibit 1, for you to indicate what information is on this toll ticket designating, as clearly as possible, the position on this copy that you are reading from? Do you follow me? In other words, I want to know what information is on this card as you interpret it, and I want you to tell me what place on the card you are looking at, whether it is the front, side or back side, lefthand corner or right-hand corner?

A. I understand.

Q. All right.

A. I am looking at the front side of the card.

Q. Which is the front side?

[fol. 300] A. This is the side that gives the information as to the city called and the city from which the call was placed.

Q. Well, on the photostatic copy identified as Defendant's Exhibit 1, it would be the—

A. The top portion is the front side of the card.

Q. All right.

A. This is a record of a call placed to Athens, Georgia, to telephone number LI 6-0262. The call was placed from Tuscaloosa, Alabama, and was billed to a credit card, the credit card is No. 752-7441B1-K54.

Q. You said the call was made to a certain number in Athens, Georgia. How do you determine what number it was made to?

A. Across the face of the card there at the very top is one, two, three, four, five, six, seven items over, it says to C. O. That is to Central Office. And then L I 6 and the next little block says to No. 0262. So, the complete number is LI 6-0262.

Q. I see. Does this card indicate here who placed the telephone call?

A. No, sir; it does not.

Q. The credit card you referred to, to whom does that belong?

A. Our records indicate that card was issued to—let me give it to you exactly; Paul W. Bryant.

Q. Does the card indicate the person that the call was made to?

A. Yes, sir. Written in on the card is Coach Wallace Butts.

Q. Who would make that notation in the ordinary course of business?

A. Our operator would if the information was volun-
[fol. 301] teered. She would not necessarily make any notation.

Mr. Joiner: If it please the Court, I'd like to read now from Page 14 of the deposition, a stipulation as to certain telephone calls which are summarized in the deposition, and then I would like to read the information pursuant to that stipulation as to one call.

The Court: All right, sir. Where is your stipulation?

Mr. Joiner: It is on Page 14, Your Honor.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Joiner: This is stated by Mr. Davis: "And it has been agreed by the attorneys for the parties to this action that the witness and his assistant or assistants may read from the toll tickets produced pursuant to this subpoena certain information, the same to be transcribed by the Court Reporter and made a part of this deposition without counsel for either party being present; it is further agreed that the information to be read from the toll tickets shall be transcribed in column style and consist of the following facts: A column indicating the date of the call, a column indicating the city and phone number where the call originated and also the person making the call, if any or all of that information is available; a column indicating the city and phone number called and the person called, if any [fol. 302] or all of that information is available; and a column indicating the time the connection was made and the duration of the call. Counsel further agree that the list of all calls compiled as above stated shall be an accurate account of the records produced and admissible in evidence as such if otherwise admissible."

Then I should like to read from Page 17, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Schroder: 17?

Mr. Joiner: It is the last call on that page. "Date: September 9, 1962, from 959-5327, Tuscaloosa, Alabama, to Athens, Georgia, LIberty 6-0262, Wallace Butts, residence; time: 2:20 p.m.; duration of call: 28 minutes."

JOHNNY GRIFFITH called as a witness on behalf of the defendant, after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Your name is Coach Johnny Griffith?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where did you attend college, Coach?
A. University of Georgia and South Georgia College.
[fol. 303] Q. When did you finish?
A. Finished in the summer of 1949.
Q. Did you play football when you were at the University?
A. I played my freshman year there; yes, sir.
Q. Did you subsequently play at South Georgia College?
A. Yes, sir; I did.
Q. How long have you been in the coaching profession?
A. Since 1949.
Q. What year?
A. Since 1949.
Q. Will you state to the jury what your experience has been in coaching?
A. I began coaching at South Georgia College as backfield coach in 1949; became head coach at South Georgia College in 1950 through 1953; came to the University of Georgia in 1954 as assistant freshman coach; in 1955 at Furman University as backfield coach; I returned to the University of Georgia in 1956 as assistant coach; I was named head freshman coach in 1959 and '60; head coach of the University of Georgia in 1961.

Q. Are you the head football coach there now?
A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: Can you hear all right?
Juror: Yes, sir.
[fol. 304] The Court: Can all of you jurors hear Coach Griffith? All right, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Griffith, I show you what has been identified as the Defendant's Exhibit No. 12. Will you state to the jury whether or not you remember seeing those notes before?
A. Yes, sir; I did.
Q. When and where?
A. I don't recall the date. It was the weekend of the Southeastern Conference meeting in Atlanta at the Biltmore Hotel on a Thursday afternoon approximately around 5:30.
Q. Who turned those notes over to you?
A. Mr. George Burnett.
Q. What did you do with them thereafter?
A. I showed them to Mr. J. D. Bolton the same night, and turned them over to President Aderhold on Saturday morning of the same week.
Q. Coach Griffith, was the 1962 game with the University of Alabama the first game of the season?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And that was to be played on September the 27th?
A. I recall it was the 22nd; yes, sir.
Q. In Birmingham?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What—prior to the beginning of that season, what preliminary practice would your team normally go through, I mean, so far as the weekly period is concerned? You would have spring practice; I am trying to get at that first.
[fol. 305] A. Yes, sir; we had spring practice that year which consists of four weeks of spring practice. The squad reported on the 30th. We had picture day on the 31st, and—

The Court: The 30th of August?
The Witness: The 31st of August.
The Court: 31st of August.

A. (By the witness) We began practicing on the 1st of September, and we played the game on the 22nd.

Q. Then you had how many weeks of spring training, spring practice?

A. Four weeks.

Q. And then in the fall that would give you about three weeks?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have many new men on your team for the '62 season?

A. Yes, sir; we had approximately fifteen or sixteen sophomores that we counted on out of the twenty-five or twenty-six boys that we would play during the season.

Q. How many—Coach Griffith, how many formations, basic formations does a football team use during a seasons, approximately how many?

A. Approximately seven or eight or nine, somewhere along there. That is what we use.

Q. With some variations in each formation?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 306] Q. How many did—how many formations did you train your team for for the Alabama game, this upcoming Alabama game?

A. Two formations.

Q. Why do you limit it to two?

A. Well, we feel that two is satisfactory, possibly sometimes three, and we don't think we can handle any more offense plans than three formations.

Q. Is that by reason of the fact that boys themselves can't take in more than that?

A. Well, in our case last year; yes, sir; that would be true because of the sophomore people we had on the football team.

Q. Take a look at that Exhibit 1 showed you, Coach Griffith, and try to refresh your recollection now as to—let's take it back to this meeting that you had at the Biltmore Hotel. Will you point out to the jury whether or not there is any reference on those—on that exhibit to either one or both of the formations that you had trained that team for?

A. Yes, sir; there are two notes that indicate the two formations that we used in the ball game.

The Court: That you used or planned to use?

The Witness: Planned to use and did use in the ball game.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Did you—could you state to the Court what those formations are?

A. We used a three-yard slot in the ball game and the note reads "slot to right, ends normal (3 yards.)" We use what we call—[fol. 307] Q. What page are you on?

A. These are not numbered.

Q. Mine is in the same order as yours.

A. I will have to count them. I am on Page 5.

Q. State to the Court the other formation that you referred to.

A. I am on the last page which is Page 8, "slot right, left end out. 15 yards."

Q. Is that last item what you coaches sometimes refer to as a pro-set?

A. Yes, sir.

The Court: As what?

The Witness: A pro-set.

The Court: Pro-set?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. P-r-o, hyphen, s-e-t?

A. Yes, sir.

The Court: What is that, professional-set?

The Witness: Yes, sir; it is a terminology we use to describe an offensive formation. Other schools call it maybe something different; I don't know.

[fol. 308] By Mr. Cody:

Q. What reactions did you have to these notes when you saw those two items that you have mentioned to the Court?

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, I don't think the reaction of the witness, what reaction he might have would be admissible.

The Court: Yes, sir; I don't think that is proper.

Mr. Cody: I withdraw the objection—I withdraw the question.

The Court: All right, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Griffith, will you look on Page 1? Do you see the name "Reismueller" mentioned?

A. I don't understand you.

Q. Do you see the name "Reismueller" or "Rissmiller" mentioned?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is his correct name?

A. Rissmiller.

Q. Rissmiller?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he a sophomore?

A. He was—he was starting his sophomore season; yes, sir.

[fol. 309] Q. You don't—freshmen are not permitted to play on the varsity team; is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. So this would have been his first year on the team?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What sort of a player was he?

A. Well, he is potentially a real fine football player, and we think he will be a real fine football player.

Q. Do you see anything in these notes other than the two formations that you have referred to which you particularly noticed?

A. I am not sure I understand your question.

Q. Turn to Page 2, the second item. Will you read that to the jury?

A. "Optional left pass if can block man on corner, keeps running."

Q. What does that mean to you?

A. Well, optional left pass is a terminology that I was familiar with.

Q. Was that terminology used by you in the 1962 season?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who used that terminology? Was it used before at Georgia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When?

A. It possibly could have been used in 1961; I don't recall. It had been used before that time, I don't know how long.

Q. Whose terminology was that?

A. Well, it was used by Coach Butts.

Q. Have you ever used that terminology yourself in the training of these boys?

[fol. 310] A. Not to my knowledge, in '61; definitely no in '62.

Q. On Page 2, that third item, "Well disciplined ball club": does that mean anything to you?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Schroder: I didn't understand the answer.

The Court: He said "No, sir."

Mr. Schroder: Thank you.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Take the next. What about the next item at the top of Page 3?

A. "On side guard pulls on sweep"?

Q. Yes.

A. We pulled the on side guard on sweeps in the second half of the ball game against Alabama.

Q. Was that a part of the training you had given your team?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does that next item mean anything to you?

A. No, sir; it does not.

Q. Do you have a young man on your team or did you have one last year named Woodward?

A. We have a boy named Woodward; yes, sir.

Q. Turn to the third item there on Page 3, "Woodward commits fast—safety man"; did he play safety, the safety man position on your team?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does the term—in football terminology, what [fol. 311] does it mean by "commits fast"?

A. Well, it means that the halfback or safety man whoever is in the secondary, in this case refers to the safety man, that he comes up fast on running plays, commits hisself from his original position to come up and make the tackle.

The Court: What would that do, leave safety open?

The Witness: Possibly so if they were throwing the ball; yes, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Was that a habit of Woodward?

A. Yes, sir; it was.

Q. Did you try to correct it?

A. Yes, sir; we have been trying to correct it since he came to the University. He is an aggressive type boy that likes contacts, and it is rather hard to try to discourage him from trying to do that; yet, it is definitely a disadvantage in playing secondary.

Q. When you say "contact," you mean to make a tackle?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That last item on Page 3, "Weak defense, anybody except Blackburn"; did you have—did you have a man on your team named Blackburn?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that the way you pronounce his name?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What position did he play?

A. He played left halfback normally. However, we did swing him from left and right halfback so he played both halfbacks.

[fol. 312] Q. Does that item mean anything to you?

A. Well, we had counted on him being our best defensive back from his previous experience over the 1961 season.

Q. This was his second year then?

A. He was a senior; it was his third year.

Q. Was he the best defensve back that you had?

A. We thought that he possibly would be, but he was sick off and on before the Alabama game, and didn't get the work he needed actually to be ready to play against Alabama.

Q. On Page 4, "Baer slots right, splits right end out"; does that mean anything to you?

A. No, sir.

Q. You have a man on your team named Baer?

A. We have a man named Babb, B-a-b-b.

Q. What position did he play?

A. He played both ends, left and right ends.

Q. This next item, Coach Griffith, on Page 4, "Long count, left half in motion"; does that mean anything to you?

A. We have a halfback in long motion count, what we call a four motion count, with both halfbacks, left and right halfbacks, and we throw an eighteen and nineteen overpass off of it.

Q. What is the purpose—difference between a long and a short count?

A. Well, the ball is snapped at different positions where the halfback is as he goes in motion; on a short motion he is normally about three or four yards from his original position, and in long motion he is normally about ten to twelve yards beyond the original position that he lined up in.

Q. Would that have any purpose in trying to draw your opponent off side?

[fol. 313] A. It will cause him to be off adjustment in the secondary to a certain extent, not to draw them off sides; no, sir.

Q. You see on Page 4 reference to Porterfield?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he a new man?

A. He was an upcoming sophomore; yes, sir.

Q. Was he one of your best players?

A. He was our best back; yes, sir.

Q. Was he what you would call a running back?

A. He was our best running back; yes, sir.

Q. Turning over to the next page, Coach Griffith, you heretofore referred to that second item as one of your formations, "slot to right, ends normal (3 yards)"; what is the significance, if any, as to the distance that the ends spread, whether it is three, five or seven yards; what is the significance?

A. Well, it makes a difference in regard to the defensive end as to where he will line up, whether he will line up on his inside head up or outside shoulder, and it would depend on the width of the slot or the split of the end as to where he would line up. Some teams have certain rules; we have our own rules in regard to that.

Q. That is one of the formations that you referred to?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Turning back to Page 4 just a moment, the item in the middle of the page, "Long count, left half in motion"; was that one of Georgia's plays for 1962?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you trained your team for the Alabama game to use that play?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 314] Q. At the bottom of Page 5, Coach Griffith, does that last item there—can't tell whether it is one or several items—does it mean anything to you?

A. Not the way it is written; no, sir.

Q. Did you ever know Mr. Burnett prior to meeting him at the Biltmore Hotel when you were shown these notes for the first time? Did you ever know him?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. You don't know whether he knows much about football or not?

A. I couldn't answer that; no, sir.

Q. Turn to Page 6 just a minute. Do you see a reference there to a notation, "Can't quick kick"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who did the kicking for the Georgia team principally?

A. Jake Saye.

Q. S-a-y-e?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he what you coaches would describe as a quick kicker?

A. Not from his position; no, sir. We had to use a different formation to quick kick from because he was a quarterback.

Q. You mean by that quarterback is too close to the line to quick kick?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Am I correct, then, in assuming that from his quarterback position he could not quick kick?

A. No, sir; we had to pull him into a type of quick kick formation that we used, and it is a double wing with a quarterback lining up about eight yards deep directly behind the center.

[fol. 315] Q. Now, when you do that, doesn't that tip off your opponent to the fact that you are kicking?

A. It could tip them off that we could quick kick from that, but when Saye lined up in that formation, we could do one of three things off of it, that is, quick kick and throw and run off of it.

Q. Then, is it true that you did during the '62 season use some quick kicks?

A. Not from the quick kick formation that most teams use; no, sir; we went to this formation to do our quick kicking.

Q. Did you not have anybody that could do any quick kicking from a normal formation?

A. No, sir; we did not.

Q. Does that next item after the "quick kick" make any sense to you?

A. "Slot right, right half on fly, screen to him," it is a formation we used; however, we did not screen to the right halfback as the note reads, "To him," and I assume the note—

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, it is not up to this witness to assume what the notes say, and he should construe what is in the notes as they are and not assume—

The Court: I will let him interpret the notes. I mean, he is an expert.

The Witness: "Slot right, right half fly, screen to him," we had a slot with a right halfback flying; however, we screened to the left halfback and not to the right halfback.

[fol. 316] By Mr. Cody:

Q. This "29-0 series," does that mean anything to you?

A. No, sir; we have an 029 series, not a 29-0.

Q. What's that? What is an 029?

A. It is what we call our outside belly series with the quarterback reverse pivoting, faking to the fullback, and either pitching off to the opposite halfback or keeping the ball and running.

Q. It is a short pass?

A. I beg your pardon?

Q. If it is a pass, if it develops into a pass is it a short pass?

A. We didn't throw off of this formation.

Q. I see.

A. It is a running series.

Q. At the bottom of Page 6 do you see that reference, "Babb catches everything"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does that mean to you?

A. We had built our passing attack around Babb and had used him also as a split end in this particular ball game from a pro-set. In other words, he would line up if it was a slot, and he—the right end, he would stay in that slot if it was a slot formation. If we called a pro formation, he would always be the end that went out anywhere from ten to fifteen yards and split, regardless of which side of the field it was called on, right or left. We planned—we built our passing attack around him.

Q. Was that because he was the best receiver you had?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe you have already mentioned, Coach Griffith, [fol. 317] this first item on Page 7; that is one of your formations?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does that next item make any sense to you?

A. "Georgia" with an arrow pointing to "drop end off, contain with tackle (defense)"; we drop our ends off and contain with a six loose defense.

Q. Is that part of the training that you gave this team for the Alabama game?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Coach Griffith, you have been in the, according to your testimony, you have been in the coaching business quite some time. Will you state to the jury whether or not in your opinion the information which you have mentioned and which has been taken from these notes would be helpful to an opponent of your team?

A. If the information like this were given, the two most important things to me in the notes are the two formations that we planned to use in the ball game. Our preparation during the summer and during the fall is based on defensively trying to determine the types of offensive sets that the opposing team will use and try to set the defenses for the possibility of the number of offensive formations that they have shown over the years or particularly in the last season.

Q. Would the information alone with respect to these formations that you mentioned, would that, to some extent, limit the preparation that was necessary on the part of Alabama?

A. Yes, sir; it would. It would eliminate them making preparation and spending time on the practice field to prepare against any of the possibilities of formations that we had shown to try to stop.

[fol. 318] Q. Coach Griffith, if I took a blackboard over here where you could draw a diagram of it, could you explain to the jury what these two formations are?

A. Yes, sir.

The Court: Would the black one be larger? Would it be more convenient?

Mr. Cody: Which one would you prefer?

The Witness: It is immaterial to me.

Mr. Cody: That is all right. Where is that chalk?

The Crier: On the board.

Mr. Cody: Let's get up here where we can see it a little bit better. Can you see that all right?

Juror: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Which formation are you referring to first?

A. This is the slot formation with the right halfback between the offensive right end and the right tackle.

Q. Did I understand you to say that it is important to know how far this end gets out from the tackle?

[fol. 319] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why is that important?

A. Well, from a defensive standpoint it is the distance he splits as to whether the ends go out with him and still help in the off tackle hold or whether it is right enough where he can play his inside and not be hooked on a sweep that the fullback might try to back him out or the end might hook him in.

Q. Any other comments you want to make descriptive of that particular formation?

A. No, sir.

Q. Let's pass on to your pro-set, as you coaches call it.

A. This is pro formation with the same slot on this side and the only difference is, the left end in this particular formation, because this is to the left, is split out to ten or fifteen yards, depending on the position of the field. In other words, if this were a half marker over here, he normally would not be able to go fifteen yards because he would go out of bounds. This formation is the same as this with the exception of this end who would normally line up here as he is lined up here, will split out approximately ten or fifteen yards.

Q. You can have a seat now, Coach Griffith. Did Wallace Butts have anything to do with the football team in 1962?

A. No, sir.

Q. How many coaches did you have there, assistant coaches?

A. We had ten.

Q. How many men did you have on the squad?

A. On our varsity squad we carried normally around forty-two or -three players.

[fol. 320] The Court: Some of your coaches would be team and freshmen; you didn't have ten varsity coaches, did you?

The Witness: No, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. How many freshmen coaches did you have?

A. We had one full-time and normally we have two or three student assistants.

Q. Gives you about six varsity coaches?

A. Seven; I believe I am correct on that.

Q. Is Coach Frank Inman one of your assistant coaches?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What part of your system does he teach?

A. He is now the offensive backfield coach, and he is in charge of the recruiting program.

Q. Is Coach Leroy Pearce one of your assistant coaches?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What part of the team does he handle?

A. Now, he handles the defensive linebackers and the defensive ends. Last year, 1962 season, he coached the ends both ways, offensively and defensively.

Q. How long has Frank Inman been with you?

A. He came to the University of Georgia in July of 1962.

Q. How about Pearce?

A. Pearce came in the spring, I believe, in March; I am not sure; March of 1962.

Q. Coach Griffith, is it true that as early as the first game of the season the coaches themselves don't know very much about the players?

[fol. 321] A. It depends on how many sophomores you have on your football team. We should have a pretty good picture after spring practice is over in regard to the juniors and seniors. Your sophomores are untested, and you normally do not know how they are going to react to competition in the Southeastern Conference.

Q. Did you have an abnormal number of sophomores in '62?

A. I would say we did; yes, sir.

Q. Is it customary for one coach to talk to the coach of the opposing team a week or ten days before a game?

A. I would depend upon what they were talking about.

Q. Would it be customary to talk about players?

A. Well, that is difficult to answer; in general it is whose players and—

Q. What about the characteristic of players?

A. No, sir; I would say it would not be normal.

Q. What about formations?

A. In my opinion it would not be; no, sir.

Q. What about plays?

A. No, sir.

Q. When I use the term "play", does that mean to you a part of a formation or a variance of a formation?

A. Well, I assume you are talking about offensive plays?

Q. Yes.

The Court: Offensive plays run off of a certain formation?

The Witness: Well, offensive plays are run off of dif-
[fol. 322] ferent types of formations. You can run a lot of plays off of—same type plays off of those formations.

The Court: You would have a number of plays run off of those two formations you say you prepared for the Georgia-Alabama game?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: And all of your plays would be run off of those two separate formations?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. If these—if these notes that I have shown you and which have been identified, if they are genuine, does that disclose just general football talk?

A. I would not say so; no, sir.

Q. Did Coach Butts ever tell you that he, in September of 1962, that he was calling Coach Bryant about anything?

A. Not to my knowledge; no, sir.

Q. Did he ever tell you that Coach Bryant had called him any?

A. No, sir.

Q. Coach Griffith, it is customary, I believe, for coaches to scout an opposing team and try to get as much information as they can about their potential; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 323] Q. Sometimes you coaches exchange pictures of a previous game so as to minimize the difficulties; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would the movies of a game normally show the action of a secondary defense?

A. Ours would show some of it at times and some of it would not. It would depend on the school taking the film and the type of equipment they were using. If they are using wide angles, it would consistently show the secondary. We do not use the wide angle.

Q. What do you mean by "wide angle", take it from down near the goal post, that direction?

A. No, sir. It shows the width of the field, and it will cover the offensive team in an offensive set and a defensive team entirely in its defensive set which will carry the lens or coverage approximately twelve or thirteen yards deep. I am not too familiar with it, but I have seen it and it shows the reaction of the secondary.

Q. Would it have—would it be able to show the tendencies of a particular player?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Being the first game of the season, your opponent would have very little scouting information about your team; is that true?

A. In regard to the preparation for the coming game he would have—should have no information. He would have only the information he compiled from films of our games in the last season.

Q. Well, isn't it true that even if you had a picture of the previous season's game, you might have corrected defects that appeared in that game?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 324] Q. Does a movie of a game show pass patterns, Coach Griffith?

A. Well, I go back to the original answer. It depends on the type of lens you are using, and it is possible that it definitely would. In ours, sometimes we get the pass pattern, the entire pattern; sometimes we don't.

Q. You would have to show large portions of the field to do that, wouldn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would the movies of a game show the distance of these splits?

A. It would show it, but it is rather difficult to look at a film and actually know the exact split of a line or a back or a split end or anything along those lines.

Q. Is that—is that because the cameras are at a bad angle?

A. No, sir; it is—in my opinion, it is because of the distance the camera is from the field in trying to cover the offensive and defensive team. It is just difficult to determine.

Q. Would the film of—would the picture of a game indicate the particular speed of a runner in comparison with other players?

A. Yes, sir; it could; yes, sir. It will—I will say it would.

Q. Do you have secret practice?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long before the first game of the season do you start that secret practice?

A. Beginning of the practice.

Q. September the 1st?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In your opinion, Coach Griffith, would it be helpful [fol. 325] to an opposing team to know something that would keep them from being penalized, receiving penalties?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Doesn't a game sometimes turn, that is, whether you win or lose, sometimes on as small an event as one penalty?

A. I have seen such games; yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: I didn't hear that last answer; I'm sorry.

The Court: He said he had seen such games—

The Witness: I have seen such games.

The Court: —where it turned on one penalty. All right, sir, Mr. Cody.

Mr. Cody: Just about through, Your Honor.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Griffith, if Rissmiller, being a sophomore, was a top flight runner and you had no previous experience with him on account of his being a sophomore, would it be helpful, in your opinion, to an opponent—

The Court: Rissmiller was a tackle, wasn't he?

[fol. 326] By Mr. Cody:

Q. I mean any player—well, we will put it "any player" —to know his potential?

A. Well, I will say this about Rissmiller. I don't think that it was any particular secret that he was predicted to be a real fine football player, because he had been selected, as I recall, as possibly the lineman-of-the-year in the Conference as a sophomore.

Mr. Cody: I believe that's all.

The Court: All right, sir, Mr. Schroder; you want to remove that blackboard?

Mr. Schroder: A couple of questions I would like to direct to the witness about these formations a little later, so I will move it, but bring it back.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Coach Griffith, who gave you your first job at the University of Georgia?

A. Coach Wallace Butts.

Q. That was in 1954?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Wallace Butts also assist you in getting a position at Furman University?

A. To my knowledge he did; yes, sir.

Q. He did?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you returned to Athens in 1956 you returned to [fol. 327] work for Wallace Butts?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In 1954, for a moment we will return to that year, when Wallace Butts gave you your first job at the University of Georgia, you at that time asked him if there was any way that Wallace Butts could give you financial aid, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he arranged financial aid for you, didn't he?

A. As an assistant to the freshman team; yes, sir.

Q. Has he ever given you any other sort of financial aid?

A. In the form of loans which have been repaid.

Q. I didn't understand you, sir.

A. In the form of loans which have been repaid, with the exception of around three hundred fifty dollars.

Q. You mean Wally Butts has made you loans of money?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you needed it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you still owe him some money?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did that quite willingly, did he not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was anxious to help, was he not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has Wallace Butts ever gone with you to the bank and endorsed a note so you could get a loan from the bank?

A. I don't recall his going to the bank. He has endorsed some notes for me; yes, sir.

Q. Whether he went to the bank or not with you, he did [fol. 328] endorse the loan for you to get—endorsed a note in order for you to get the loan, didn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has Wallace Butts ever made payments to the bank on those loans when they were in arrears?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In your behalf?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Taking your testimony item-by-item, you testified on direct-examination in response to a question put to you that the optional left pass pattern was something Wallace Butts used to use when he was head coach at the University, but which you did not use after you became head coach; is that right?

A. I said that we possibly did use it in 1961; I don't remember using it, but I definitely said we did not use the terminology in 1962.

Q. Did you use the terminology in 1961?

A. I said not to my knowledge we did not. We possibly could have.

Q. Let me refresh your recollection. Let me hand you a document here and ask you if you can identify that document, and, if so, let me know what it is?

A. It is the offensive plan for the Miami game in 1961.

Q. The offensive game plan for the Georgia team to employ in the Miami University game in 1961?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Look at that game plan—who prepares the game plan?

A. The offensive backfield coach, Charlie Trippi, along with myself.

Q. Along with you?

A. That's right, sir.

Q. All right. Look in that game plan for the Miami game [fol. 329] of 1961, and see if you do not have in that game plan a pass pattern described by you and Charlie Trippi as optional left?

A. Yes, sir; we do.

Q. All right, sir, is there any doubt in your mind now that the term "optional left" was used by the University of Georgia in its football plans for 1961?

A. No, sir; there wasn't.

Q. All right. The previous question or my last question was this, and there may have been some misunderstanding as to what the answer was. Is there any doubt in your mind now, after seeing the Miami game plan for 1961, is there any doubt in your mind now that the term "optional left pass" was used by the University of Georgia during the year 1961?

A. I said that we possibly could have used that. I did not say that we didn't or we did. I don't know if that is an accurate game plan or not. I couldn't answer that. It appears to be; yes, sir; I would accept it as just looking at the front page.

Q. Well, there is a reference to an optional left pass in this game plan, is there not?

A. Yes, sir; there is.

Q. Well, is there now some doubt in your mind?

A. No, sir.

Q. All right, sir. These two diagrams which you have placed on the board here which you have described the top one as a slot formation—

A. Slot right; yes, sir.

Q. Slot right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the bottom one is the pro-set?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. This slot right, was that something new for the [fol. 330] Georgia—that Georgia was planning for the Alabama game?

A. I am not sure I understand your question in regard to that formation.

Q. Was the slot right formation something new that Georgia was preparing to use for the first time in the Georgia-Alabama game of 1962?

A. Well, I still don't understand your question. You mean by "the first time", had we ever used the formation? It was something new as far as preparing for the Alabama game; yes, sir.

Q. You did not use that in 1961?

A. Yes, sir; we used it in 1961.

Q. Well, it wasn't something new, then, was it?

A. Not in the sense of the word being a new formation; no, sir.

Q. Did you use this slot formation that you have described here in 1960?

A. I was not the head coach then.

Q. No, sir; but you were on the coaching staff, weren't you?

A. I was the head freshman coach, and we used it at the University of Georgia; to my knowledge we did use it; yes, sir. I don't know whether it was a three-yard slot or a five-yard slot; I couldn't answer that.

Q. You used it in 1961 in every game you played, didn't you?

A. I couldn't say that we used it in every game. We used it some; yes, sir.

Q. Name me a game you didn't use it in? You were head coach in 1961.

A. Well, I couldn't—I couldn't recall.

Q. It was used very often in 1961, wasn't it? That is a fair statement, isn't it?

[fol. 331] A. Yes, sir.

Q. The lower formation that you have diagrammed here known as the pro-set, was the Alabama game in 1962 the first time the University of Georgia had used that formation?

A. No, sir.

Q. It had used that formation during the season of 1961 also, had it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have already testified at some length about scouting being done by the opposing teams. You will assume that Coach Bryant would scout your team during '61 just as you were scouting his team in 1961, wouldn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if Coach Bryant scouted your team in 1961 they would have seen those same two formations, wouldn't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, those same formations are used by Alabama, aren't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Exactly, aren't they?

A. No, sir; they use what they term as the two-yard slot rather than a three-yard slot.

Q. That much difference?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How about the pro-set?

A. The same.

Q. They used that repeatedly in the year '61 and also through the year '62, didn't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Wasn't anything secret about those formations, was there?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 332] Q. Practically every team in the Southeastern Conference uses those same formations?

A. I couldn't tell you about every team.

Q. Do you know of one that doesn't use it?

A. I couldn't tell you of one that doesn't use it.

Q. You play most of them, don't you?

A. We play six of them.

Q. Do you know any of those six that don't use those two formations?

A. Not offhand; no, sir.

Q. Was there any formation that you coached the university of Georgia football players to use against Alabama in 1962 that the Georgia team did not use in 1961?

A. No, sir.

Q. When you refer to the slot end out three yards, that doesn't mean that that end is going to play exactly three yards out from the tackle on every occasion that the formation is used, does it?

A. That is what we strive to get, three yards; yes, sir.

Q. Then it would be inaccurate to say that the end moves from three yards on one occasion to two, and from three yards on another occasion to five, in order to accommodate his own play against the defensive tackle; would that be an inaccurate statement?

A. I would like for you to repeat that again; I didn't get it.

Q. All right, sir. The split end—strike that. On the normal slot where the right end is away from the right tackle and there is a back between the end and the tackle—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —the end in this position has a tackle on the other [fol. 333] team playing opposite him whom he has to block on occasions, doesn't he?

A. Not from a slot formation; no, sir.

Q. What does he do?

A. The tackle won't come out and line up on the end there.

Q. It will be the end that will line up.

A. Yes, sir; yes, sir.

Q. All right, sir. He has got a blocking assignment, this end has—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —against the man playing opposite him, doesn't he?

Q. And if the man is where he can't get a good block at him, he will move his own position to accommodate him, won't he?

A. No, sir; because on a slot formation the end will block in, and in our plan the full back will block on the man lined up head on or inside or outside on the offensive end.

Q. All right. Let's put it simply. You know Mickey Babb?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is your best end, I believe you said a while ago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mickey Babb played all through the Alabama game, didn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He played approximately fifty, five-0 minutes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Both offensive and defense?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mickey Babb, when he was playing in the end position on slot right, was he or was he not, throughout the [fol. 334] Alabama game, three yards from the tackle?

A. Well, I couldn't answer that.

Q. Well, you were there, weren't you?

A. Yes; but I can't see from the sideline whether he is lined up two and a half or three, but we strive to get three.

Q. Yes, sir. Mickey Babb is going to testify in this case. You know he is under subpoena, don't you?

A. I did not know that; no, sir.

Q. Now, if Mickey Babb is out five yards on many occasions, four yards on other occasions, two yards on other occasions, and three yards on other occasions, those occasions where he is not three yards out, he is not playing the way you coached him; is that right?

A. I would say so; yes, sir.

Q. All right, sir. But you wouldn't say he wasn't playing that way through 1961 and 1962, would you, because you said you couldn't see from the sidelines?

A. Well, I can't see from the sidelines whether he is lined up two and a half or three or four, but we strive for the three-yard slot.

Mr. Cody: I didn't hear that last answer, sir.

Mr. Schroder: I'm sorry.

The Witness: I said I can't tell from the sidelines on every offensive play in a slot formation whether the end is lined up two and a half or three or three and a half, but we strive for a three-yard slot, and that is what we try to coach them.

[fol. 335] By Mr. Schroder:

Q. When a guard pulls on a sweep—what is a "sweep"?

A. Well, in our terminology it is the quarterback reversed pivoting, pitching to the left half or right half, depending on which way it is going, and the halfback tries to run wide, taking the block of the actual back either on the inside or outside.

Q. Well, in simple terminology, a sweep is a run around the end, isn't it?

A. If he can get around it; yes, sir.

Q. That's right; that is what a sweep means, to sweep out?

A. That's right.

Q. Sweep out around the end if he can get there?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, you have testified on direct-examination about pulling a guard on a sweep. When a guard is pulled, he is supposed to be out leading the interference, is he not?

A. On a sweep; yes, sir.

Q. All right, sir. Now, you say that Georgia pulled an on side guard out in front of the ball carrier to lead the play in the Alabama 1962 game?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you seen the film?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: Before I forget it, may I address—

The Court: Sir?

[fol. 336] Mr. Schroder: Before I forget it, may I address a request to the Coach. When the film is shown in Court, may I request Coach Griffith to be here? I don't have him under subpoena.

The Court: Yes, sir. Well, he is under subpoena, though, isn't he? Well, regardless of who he is under subpoena by, he is supposed to stay here, regardless of who subpoenaed him.

Mr. Cody: Your Honor, we expect to show the films ourselves. We have asked to get them back. Mr. Schroder asked us to let him have them.

Mr. Schroder: Let's get going with them.

Mr. Cody: I have been trying to get them back.

Mr. Schroder: Let's get going with them this afternoon.

The Court: Let me say this. How much longer will you have this witness? I presume before he leaves, why can't you have the films this afternoon?

Mr. Schroder: I would be perfectly delighted if we can have them.

[fol. 337] The Court: Don't you have them?

Mr. Schroder: One of the assistant coaches—

The Court: One of who?

Mr. Schroder: One of the assistant coaches has it.

The Court: Where is he?

Mr. Schroder: He is at the Tech Clinic; isn't that where Mr. Gregory is?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: We won't be able to show the film this afternoon. I am not through with my cross-examination of this witness.

The Court: Well, I wanted to clarify that.

Mr. Schroder: I also want this witness to be present when the film is shown.

[fol. 338] The Court: Well, he will be present unless he is excused.

Mr. Schroder: I mean, present in the courtroom.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: I'd like to have him here.

The Court: I don't know. If he is not—do you want him to testify?

Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir. I want him where he can point out some of these things.

The Court: No witness is excused, regardless of who subpoenas him, once he is here, until the court is terminated.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. When preparing a team for a football game to be played, and particularly Paul Bryant in preparing his team to defend against Georgia, you would assume that he would plan a defense against everything that he had seen during 1961, wouldn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Including your two formations over here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your slot and the pro-set?

[fol. 339] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you have referred to certain things that are—two formations that are in Burnett's notes. Is there anything in those notes that would indicate in any way that those were the only two formations that Georgia would use in its game against them in 1962 against Alabama?

A. No, sir.

Q. Nothing in the notes to indicate that, was there?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did Burnett ever say to you that in this conversation he is supposed to have overheard that Coach Butts said to Coach Bryant, "Now, these are the only two formations Georgia is going to use against Alabama?"
A. No, sir.
Q. The document I showed you a moment ago is known as a game plan, isn't it, in football terminology?
A. It is part of a game plan.
Q. It is part of a game plan?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The final game plan that any team will—I won't say any game; put it to Georgia; Georgia gets up its final game plan when?
A. After the season starts; it is completed usually by Monday night; parts of it are completed by Sunday night, other parts of it completed during the day on Monday, and Tuesday the final game plan is made.
Q. Monday preceding the Saturday on which the game is to be played?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. That is when your final game plan is formulated?
[fol. 340] A. After the season has started.
Q. It is gotten up?
A. Yes, sir; after the season has started.
Q. On the Alabama game in 1962 your final game plan was not formulated until Monday before the game, was it?
A. Well, our game plan was formulated all through the summer in breaking down films and in meetings ten days before practice session started. The basic game plan was formulated at that time.
Q. I am asking you about the final game plan.
A. The final game plan was formulated on Monday.
Q. Monday preceding the Saturday on which the game was to be played; is that true?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. I believe you testified that you have seen the film of the Georgia-Alabama game in 1962. On how many occasions would you estimate you have you already seen that film?

A. Approximately four or five times.

Q. Describe briefly how the first touchdown for Alabama was scored and what it resulted from?

A. Well, I believe that in the first quarter they intercepted a pass and hit Wilson, their split end, for a touchdown, and I believe that the next point—

Q. Just one moment, please, sir. The end's name was not Wilson; it was Williamson, wasn't it?

A. Williamson.

Q. And he was known by Georgia to be a very capable end, pass receiver and fast, wasn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, Coach Butts, after he had returned from a trip to New York with Coach Bryant and Coach Graves, told you and your coaching staff that [fol. 341] Bryant had told him that "We are going to throw what is known as the bomb, the home run against Georgia the first chance we get to."

A. Not to my knowledge he didn't tell me that.

Q. You don't know that he told that to John Gregory, your defensive coach?

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Would you say he didn't?

A. I wouldn't say; I don't know.

Q. The first time Alabama got the ball, what did it do? Threw the bomb, didn't they, the home run?

A. Not the first time; no, sir.

Q. All right, sir, what was their first play?

A. I don't recall the play. They kicked to us after a series of downs.

Q. All right, sir. Well, I meant—Georgia threw a pass which you say was intercepted?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That pass was thrown by Rakestraw?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was from the—it was thrown—he was running out to his right to throw to the left end, Babb, wasn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Babb was jostled or held up by LeRoy Jordan, the All-American center of Alabama, wasn't he?

A. I don't recall who held him up.

Q. He was held up?

A. That's right.

Q. And he didn't get where he was supposed to, not on his account, but he didn't get to where he was supposed to get, did he?

A. That's right.

Q. And Rakestraw threw the pass, and Alabama made a fine interception right down to the man's shoetops, didn't [fol. 342] he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. First play they ran after they intercepted that pass was the home run, wasn't it?

A. That's correct.

Q. All right, sir. They ran it from the same formation you have got over there called the pro-set, didn't they?

A. That's right.

Q. Williamson was a split end, and he was a swinging end; he would play left end when he was split on the left and right end when he was split on the right, wouldn't he?

A. That's right.

Q. The fellow that was supposed to cover Williamson was not a defensive ball player, was he?

A. No, sir; he was not.

Q. He wasn't trained to play defense, was he?

A. No, sir.

Q. And Williamson had no trouble at all giving him a wrinkle and going on by and catching the ball for a touchdown, did he?

A. That's right.

Q. You know that boy that was playing that position who was supposed to cover Williamson on the home run was not a defensive ball player, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were supposed to have someone else in there for him?

A. Well, the reason that he was in the ball game, we got Rakestraw out first because Rakestraw had a bad ankle.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. And we had to put in another substitute, and under the rules we could only put in two in at a time, and we [fol. 343] took a chance on leaving Porterfield to get Rakestraw and another boy out.

Q. Porterfield was the one that was playing the position that was supposed to guard—defend against Williamson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. These notes say that Porterfield is the best since Trippi; do you agree with that?

A. Well, that is a matter of opinion.

Q. Have you ever seen Charlie Trippi play?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You know about him, don't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. One of the all-time greats of the University, isn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Porterfield cannot play defense, can he?

A. We haven't trained him to play defense.

Q. Charlie Trippi played defense, didn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Very good one, wasn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Charlie Trippi threw passes—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —did he not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he kick it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Entirely different sort of ballplayer than Porterfield, isn't he?

A. Yes, sir; I would say so.

Q. All right, sir. That is the first touchdown. That resulted from the home run with the offensive man in there on Georgia's defensive team. Now, the second score was a safety, wasn't it?

[fol. 344] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you please describe how that safety came about?

A. As I recall, it was a bad snap over the kicker's head and went in the end zone.

Q. That is just one of those things that will happen, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir; they happen.

Q. Just hard luck; the center threw it over the man's head that was supposed to be kicking it, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the ball went back into the end zone, and all he could do was fall on it for two points for Alabama; right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right, sir. Now, tell me how the—how Alabama scored its second touchdown?

A. I am not sure I recall.

Q. This formation referred to or that you have already described about dropping the end off, containing with the tackle—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —that is a normal defense employed by every college that you know about in the Southeastern Conference, isn't it?

A. Depends on the defense.

Q. That is what I mean.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you are against a pro-set passing situation, you drop your defensive ends off, don't you?

A. Normally.

Q. Normally?

A. Under passing conditions.

Q. All right, sir. Now, isn't it true—let me put it this way. You had a new man playing left end for Georgia in [fol. 345] the Alabama game, didn't you, named Barry Wilson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Never had played in any varsity game before?

A. No, sir.

Q. Your team captain, his name was Ray Clark, wasn't it?

A. That's correct; yes, sir.

Q. And Ray Clark ordinarily would have been playing that position, wouldn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Ray Clark was injured two nights before the Alabama game in a scrimmage, wasn't he?

A. That's correct; yes, sir.

Q. Why were you scrimmaging your boys two nights before a big game like Alabama?

A. I felt like we weren't getting the concentration in a scrimmage that we planned with no contact, and we were not getting response from the players, and we scrimmaged them for about ten minutes.

Q. You felt just forty-eight hours before the game was to be played that you were not getting the concentration from your players that you thought you were entitled to?

A. Wasn't getting the concentration I felt it was going to take to play a good ball game and beat Alabama.

Q. And what other reason did you give for scrimmaging them just forty-eight hours before the game?

A. Wasn't no other reason.

Q. All right, sir. They weren't too happy about that, were they?

A. Well, I couldn't answer that; I don't know.

Q. What is your thought about it?

A. Well, I don't know; I don't imagine they wanted to [fol. 346] scrimmage. That is something normal in football.

Q. It is abnormal in football to scrimmage any team just forty-eight hours before the game, isn't it?

A. Well, that would depend on the situation.

Q. Well, is it normal at Georgia to scrimmage Georgia's team just forty-eight hours before a game?

A. It is the only time I have ever done it.

Q. Yes, sir. And it was in that scrimmage that you lost the captain of your team?

The Court: What is the nature of this, Mr. Schroder? I mean, I want you to have an opportunity; I can't see where going into what individual players did in the scrimmage, what relevance it has. If it is relevant, I am going to let you put it in.

Mr. Schroder: I will go into detail and explain to Your Honor what I am doing.

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Schroder: The impact of this witness' deposition, I mean, this witness' testimony, at least the way it occurred to me, I may be too close to the case, I don't know, was that certain information was transmitted which assisted the coach of the opposing team in his preparations for the coming game.

The Court: Yes, sir.

[fol. 347] Mr. Schroder: I can show not only that that didn't happen and couldn't have happened based on what we have got here already, but, as a matter of fact, the Georgia team itself wasn't ready to play that game. They lost the score, yes, 30 to 0, but it could not be attributed to what the Post says it was; could not be. Now, I am going into reasons to show why it was 35 to 0, or any other score.

The Court: All right, sir. If you have got the solution, go ahead.

Mr. Schroder: I have got the solution.

The Court: All right, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. I have talked about the first touchdown. I have talked about the safety. Now, the second touchdown, your left end, as I said, was a new man, sir?

A. Correct.

Q. And he committed an error, didn't he?

A. That's correct.

Q. He committed quite an error; he did not cover the area where he was supposed to cover?

A. That's right.

Q. And the man he was supposed to cover caught the ball for a touchdown, didn't he?

A. I believe that's correct, yes, sir.

Q. Yes, sir. Now, that is nine, that is fifteen points. The third touchdown happened in just the same way to the same unfortunate end who was out of position again [fol. 348] and didn't cover his man, didn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Same thing, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Therefore, we now have the score about three touchdowns and two safetys; we have got 21 to 0, all of which occurred as a result of an individual unfortunately not doing what he was coached to do; right?

A. Well, there are things that lead up to that situation where they scored. There were other things that led up to it, too.

Mr. Cody: Speak up a little louder; I can't quite hear you.

The Witness: There are situations that put Alabama in position to score in the ball game, and those drives that the Alabama team made and the mistakes the Georgia team made.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. None of those touchdowns were within the ten-yard line, were they?

A. That's correct.

Q. They were from out in the middle of the field?

A. Well, I believe that the first one was around the thirty-five or forty-yard line.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how the next two touchdowns were scored?

A. I don't recall; no, sir.

Q. But you do know that Georgia—your Georgia players—I hate to have to say this, being a Georgia man, but [fol. 349] Georgia did not play a good football game that night, did they?

A. I didn't think we played well; no, sir.

Q. The Georgia players made quite a few serious errors on their part in not doing what you had coached them to do?

A. Due to lack of experience; yes, sir.

Q. Well, I am certainly not being critical; I am stating a fact. That is a fact, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have referred, in response to a question to you put by Mr. Cody about Rissmiller, and as you said, he was already voted by the sports writers of some organization as being, in their opinion, would be the sophomore-of-the-year, tackle?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was known, everybody knew he was potentially a great tackle at Georgia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Wasn't anything new about that, was there?

A. No, sir; I would say not.

Q. As a matter of fact, Coach Bryant himself had tried to recruit Rissmiller to come to Alabama, hadn't he?

A. I think that's correct.

Q. You know that is so, don't you?

A. I am not positive; no; I didn't recruit him myself.

Q. Where is he from?

A. He is from Eastern Pennsylvania.

Q. How many colleges to your knowledge were after him?

A. I couldn't say; probably five or six.

Q. You know there were more than that now, Coach Griffith?

[fol. 350] A. I really don't; I didn't recruit the boy individually.

Q. You didn't have a report from your recruiter that did go up there and get him?

A. Yes, sir; but we recruit some sixty boys. I can't remember that far back how many schools were after him.

Q. Georgia felt they had a real scoop when they got Rissmiller?

A. We still think so.

Q. And Bryant wanted him to come to Alabama, didn't he?

A. Probably did.

Q. Be that as it may, in your opinion, is Rissmiller the best tackle in the history of the University of Georgia to come to Georgia?

A. Well, he's got two more years left, and, as I say, I think potentially he is a real great football player.

Q. Well, what is your answer to my question? Is he the best tackle that—in the history of Georgia football?

A. I couldn't answer that.

Q. It is a matter of opinion, isn't it?

A. It is a matter of opinion. From what I know back through the years of Georgia football, he would be maybe not the greatest, and I would have to say probably he was not the greatest now, but he has two more years.

Q. As a matter of fact, he had a little bit of difficulty himself in the Alabama game, didn't he?

A. He was knocked out in the Alabama game; yes, sir.

Q. He made how many tackles?

A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. Have you talked to Coach Pearce about it?

[fol. 351] A. Not to the number of tackles Rissmiller made. We know, but I don't have those records with me.

Q. He played a fine game; I will say that for him; he played up to his capabilities. The next note here—pardon me—that was a note I was reading from, "Rissmiller greatest in history." Next one said, "Rakestraw to right." I believe you said that means nothing to you?

A. No, sir.

Q. The next one is "Optional left pass" and you corrected your testimony now to say that was used in Georgia's plans in 1961?

A. That's correct.

Q. Nothing new about that, is it?

A. In 1961; yes, sir.

Q. Nothing new about that?

A. No, sir.

Q. "If can block man on corner, keeps running"; is that connected up in anything that you know of that Georgia has got?

A. Well, I—I would say it is a piece of information that could mean several things in football in general.

Q. Is that anything peculiar to the University of Georgia's football game?

A. No, sir.

Q. Is there any secret there in that?

A. I would say not.

Q. Next entry is a—

The Court: Mr. Schroder, before you go into that next entry, we have been sitting for an hour and a half. I am going to let the jury refresh themselves. You may step down, Coach Griffith.

[fol. 352] (Whereupon the witness was excused from the stand.)

The Court: Members of the jury, I am going to permit you to refresh yourselves from now until 3:30, at which time you will return to the jury box, but I must admonish you as previously not to discuss the case among yourselves or permit anyone to discuss it in your presence. Simply dismiss it from your mind until you return to the jury box at 3:30.

Let the jury pass out; everyone else remain seated.

(Whereupon the jury retired from the courtroom at 3:15 p.m.)

The Court: Court is recessed until 3:30.

(Whereupon Court recessed at 3:15 p.m., reconvening at 3:30 p.m.)

After Recess

The Court: All right, Mr. Schroder; you may proceed.

JOHNNY GRIFFITH having resumed the stand, testified further as follows:

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Coach, the next entry in what has been described as [fol. 353] Burnett's notes reads, "Well disciplined ball club"; that would be on the second page, I believe, sir.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does a "well disciplined ball club" mean to you?

A. Well, it is a matter of opinion. It's been my opinion it means the team that is consistent in the operation and techniques of offense and defense, fundamentally strong, don't break down offensively or defensively as individuals. They are physically tough, strong, and basically that is my opinion of it.

Q. Doesn't that also—what you are saying, doesn't that add up to this, that a football player, or in this instance, the football club will be trained and trained and trained again in the particular techniques that the individual members of the club are supposed to carry out, that when the situation occurs in a game they will react instinctively?

A. That's correct; yes, sir; I would say so.

Q. Well, now, was the Georgia football team in the Alabama game of 1962, would it come within that definition?

A. In due respect to the football team, I would say no, because of the number of young people that we had to play in the game and after a certain amount of time there is a certain element of self-discipline that an individual develops through four years of college football.

Q. Yes, sir. On the next page you have already discussed the first note there, so I will pass on to the second one which reads, "Don't overshift". Georgia's basic fundamental defense could be described as "the loose six"?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 354] Q. Does Georgia or did Georgia in the game against Alabama in 1962 overshift?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the Alabama team in the game against Georgia in 1962 overshift its defense?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The next entry reads, and I believe you have discussed this, but I am going to ask you a couple of questions about it, reads, quote, "Woodward commits fast, safety man", unquote. Woodward is one of the best, if not the best, tackler in the secondary Georgia defense?

A. Yes, sir; I would say so.

Q. You have seen the film of the Georgia-Alabama game?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You testified on direct-examination that it would be helpful for a defensive coach or a coach preparing his defenses against Georgia to know that Georgia had an individual who committed himself fast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Woodward was not a sophomore, was he?

A. No, sir; he was not.

Q. Woodward had played an entire season as safety man for Georgia in 1961, hadn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Georgia was scouted by Alabama in 1961, weren't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Alabama had films of the Georgia games in 1961, didn't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, it would be no news to anybody coaching Ala-
[fol. 355] bama that Woodward committed himself fast, would it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, having seen the film, don't you know that Alabama never did throw a pass in the season that was to be protected by Woodward?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You know they didn't do that?

A. They did not.

Q. The next entry has to do with Don Blackburn?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Don Blackburn, unfortunately, was sick, wasn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he only played about, what, four or five minutes in the Alabama game?

A. I would say approximately five minutes.

Q. Five minutes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The top entry on the page—on Page 4 reads, "Baer", and I am assuming we are changing that to read "Babb" for the purpose of our discussion—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —"slot right, split right end out"; is that the way—doesn't "slot right" mean all those words?

A. As I say, I am not sure what it means actually.

Q. Wouldn't mean anything to you if you were getting ready to play Georgia, would it?

A. Well, no, sir; I would say not.

Q. All right, sir. Your next one, "Long count, left half in motion"; that is, what, a description of a half of a play?

A. It is the action of the left halfback. It doesn't mention a play.

[fol. 356] Q. Not a play; it is just an action of the left halfback?

A. That's right.

Q. That is nothing new, is it?

A. Long motion is not.

Q. "Long count, left half in motion," there is nothing new in that, is there?

A. No, sir.

Q. That's been used by Georgia for years, hasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In fact, that is commonly used throughout the Conference, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, we have discussed the next one about "Best since Trippi". On top of Page 5, there is the entry again where we will use or substitute the name, "Babb on a hook on goal line." Now, is there anything new about that?

A. No, sir; we usually hook Babb on the goal line. We normally had two or three goal line passes. We would be —that would be one of them.

Q. That is one of the few things that an end can do that is left for him to do on the goal line is hook, isn't it?

A. That is one of the things he can do; yes, sir.

Q. Well, is there anything new about throwing an end on a hook on the goal line?

A. In football; no, sir.

Q. That is what we are talking about, football?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. We have discussed the next one. The third one on Page 5, reads, "Right halfback on fly, left halfback, quarterback gives to left half, left guard pulling blocks on corner"; now, "right halfback on fly" means one thing and that is [fol. 357] simply this, isn't it, that when you have a slot formation to the right with the end out from the tackle about three or four or five yards with a halfback, the right halfback is right here behind him, isn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when he goes on what they call the fly, he reverses and heads back toward the quarterback before the ball is snapped, doesn't he?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, is there anything else in that note that would mean anything at all to you?

A. You mean in all the notes or that one note?

Q. That one note I just read, that third entry on Page 5?

A. No, sir.

Q. That is no play that Georgia has, is it?

A. We put the right halfback on fly; yes, sir.

Q. But that doesn't tell anybody anything, does it?

A. No; it tells the action of one individual.

Q. That is done by everybody, isn't it?

A. Well, I have seen it; it is done in football.

Q. In college football everybody puts the slot man on a fly some times, don't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Nothing new about that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Does the rest of the entry mean anything to you? Is it descriptive of anything the University of Georgia does?

A. No, sir; I couldn't tie that in with anything.

Q. The top of Page 6, I believe this one has been discussed. It reads, "Slot or wide slot till goal line"; now, isn't it true that every football team that you know anything about usually does pull in the offensive location of [fol. 358] the players, lining up of the players when they get to the goal line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Nothing new about that entry, is there?

A. No, sir.

Q. That is used by every team in the Conference, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The next one you discussed somewhat at length on direct examination, as I want to ask you a few questions about it. The entry reads, "Can't quick kick", well, now, as I understood your testimony, Saye can quick kick, can't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that is not a true statement, is it?

A. Well, in the sense of the word, we can't quick kick from the normal quick kick formation.

Q. Is that what the note says?

A. No, I was explaining what a quick kick means to me.

Q. What does the note say?

A. "Can't quick kick."

Q. Georgia can't quick kick?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Georgia does quick kick, doesn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And so to that extent the entry is inaccurate, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir; I would say it was.

Q. All right, sir. The next one, "Slot right, right half on fly, screen to him;" so, again, I am the end, the tackle is there, and the halfback is right behind me in the slot; he goes on the fly back towards the quarterback before the center hands the ball to the quarterback. "Screen to him," [fol. 359] now where would he be if the quarterback was going to screen to him with relation to the field?

A. You are speaking of the right halfback?

Q. Yes, sir, screening to the man on the fly?

A. He would be beyond the left halfback three or four yards.

Q. And isn't it true that when this halfback moves on the fly, as we have described, the defensive team adjusts itself to that direction to protect against him doing something in that direction; is that right?

A. Well, not particularly on a fly. A long motion causes an adjustment in the secondary more than the fly.

Q. Well, why wouldn't you screen to the right half on the fly? You say you don't have that play, but this says you do have it. I want to ask why you don't have it?

A. Well, we don't think it is a good play. It is something we just don't do.

Q. So, certainly that is not an accurate picture of what Georgia does?

A. No, sir; it is not.

Q. All right, sir. The next note you have also discussed at some length. Anyway, "29-0 series, Babb catches everything they throw"; now, 29-0 series, that is not even a pass series, is it?

A. No, sir.

Q. I believe you described that on direct-examination as being what is known in football jargon as the outside belly play?

A. Our 029 is; not 29-0.

Q. You don't have a 29-0, do you?

A. No, sir.

Q. You have no idea what 29-0 means, do you?

A. No, sir; I am not familiar with it.

[fol. 360] The Court: You do have an 029?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. And the 029 is the outside belly play?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where the quarterback can either kick or pitch to the man running out towards the sideline, the man in motion?

A. Yes, sir; that's correct.

Q. But there is no pass off of that?

A. No, sir.

Q. No way Babb could catch anything in that play; is there?

A. Not in this ball game here; no, sir.

Q. I believe we have already discussed the final page there and the entries on that. The basic formations used by the University of Georgia when it is on defense really are the same as those used by Alabama, aren't they?

A. In that ball game; yes, sir.

Q. In the ball game in 1962 they were using the same formations?

A. Basically the same thing.

Q. In 1961 after you became head coach, didn't you hire someone from Coach Bryant's coaching staff?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. And he came over to coach the University of Georgia along with you?

A. Yes sir.

Q. For the 1961 season?

[fol. 361] A. Yes, sir.

Q. And his name was Bob Ford?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Bob Ford brought with him, when he came there to join your staff, all of the formations that Alabama was using?

A. Basically the defensive formations.

Q. Yes, sir. And you took those defense formations and put them into Georgia's formations, didn't you?

A. We took part of it, correlated it with ours; yes, sir.

Q. And he—when I say "he", Coach Bryant is recognized as the outstanding defense coach in the country, isn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And one of the reasons you employed Coach Ford to come over and join your staff was to bring some of the information and help he had gotten under Coach Bryant when he was coaching at Alabama?

A. I thought he was a well-trained football coach and had a knowledge of defensive football.

Q. Which he had obtained from Coach Bryant at Alabama?

A. That's right.

Q. That is right, isn't it?

A. That's right.

Q. During the 1962 season you, as head coach, assign to one of your assistants the responsibility of preparing your team for offense, don't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your offense head coach, the coach in charge of your offense under you—

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 362] Q. —in 1962 was Charlie Trippi?

A. Right.

Q. And Charlie Trippi has been a coach there at the University since he retired from professional football?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he left the professional ranks in what, about 19—

A. I don't recall; I think he came to the University as a coach in 1957; I am not sure.

Q. He had been there, anyway, five years through 1962?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you also have an assistant coach to whom you assign the over-all responsibility of preparing the Georgia team for defense or on defense, don't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what was the name of the assistant coach that had that responsibility during 1962?

A. John Gregory.

Q. John Gregory?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the game in Birmingham, 1962, Coach Charlie Trippi was up in the press box, wasn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what was his function? What were his duties up in the press box?

A. To observe the Alabama defenses and make suggested plans as to what we could do to compete against them.

Q. He was up there to assist, be an offensive coach, to assist Georgia in its offense against Alabama?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he had a telephone that he would communicate [fol. 363] with someone down there on Georgia's bench?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he would tell that someone on Georgia's bench what play he thought Georgia ought to use?

A. That's correct.

Q. On the next series—on the next play?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you would send in a substitute to tell whoever was playing quarterback on that occasion—I think it was Rakestraw—to tell quarterback Rakestraw what play Coach Trippi wanted him to run?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the way most of the plays were run that evening, were't they?

A. About eighty per cent of them; yes, sir.

Q. Eighty per cent were called by Charlie Trippi up in the press box?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right, sir. Now, on defense, of course, when Georgia is on defense it has to adjust whenever its particular defense pattern is at the time according to, number one, what down it is, with Alabama having the ball; with the location on the field, that is to say, on what yard line or what area of the field; number three, what the—whether it is, as I said, the down and yardage, that is whether it would be first and ten, or second and eight; all of that goes into the person's mind who is setting the Georgia defense at any particular time; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, who was—during the Alabama game of 1962, was Coach John Gregory on the sideline as the head defensive coach?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was Coach Gregory signalling to the Georgia team [fol. 364] on the field what defense to go into on any particular occasion?

A. Most of the time; yes, sir.

Q. Eighty per cent of the time?

A. I couldn't answer that.

Q. But you do know that the defenses that Georgia was in at any particular time, most of the time was called by your head defensive coach from the sideline?

A. Correct.

Q. Sir?

A. Correct.

Q. Going back to formations for just a moment before I go into the Post story or the Post article. Any variety of plays can be run from any given formation, can it?

A. Yes, sir; you can run a series of plays from possibly three to four different formations; yes, sir.

Q. All right, sir. Let's take the two formations on the board there, the slot formation at the top. From that formation how many different varieties of plays can a team use that is employing that formation?

A. Well, I can call them out the way we run them.

Q. Can you see that?

Mr. Cody: Speak a little louder so we can hear you.

A. (By the witness) Running to the slot formation you can run the sweep; you can run—would you like for me to draw them? I can call the name of the play. I don't know whether it will mean anything to you.

Q. I will bring this over there for you. Coach, it won't be necessary for you to draw it with crayon; you can use your finger.

A. Run this one here, and here with this man, go in the [fol. 365] trap here, come back with a pop on this side over here, and run a slant, pull back in here, and put this man in motion, and come back with a sweep, the same as you would run in this direction here, and you run a nineteen roll-out in this direction here, and run a—run a trap play back with him, and so on.

Q. And you can also run pass patterns off of that formation, can't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, can the same thing be said for the pro-set?

A. Well, you limit yourself in this direction here in this hole right here; other than that you have got the same setback to this direction, you see.

Q. My point simply is this; you can run a—any number of—any number of running plays off of either formation, can't you?

A. Yes, sir; that's correct.

Q. And you can run any number of passing formations off of any formation?

A. Yes, sir; that's correct.

Q. Coach Griffith, have you read the article appearing in the March 23rd issue of the Saturday Evening Post bearing the caption "The Story of a College Football Fix"?

A. Yes, sir; I have read it.

Q. I now have before you here, Coach Griffith, the first column of that article on Page 81, Column 1. Where I am pointing my hand reads as follows: "Butts also said that Rakestraw (Georgia quarterback Larry Rakestraw) tipped off what he was going to do by the way he held his feet. If one foot was behind the other it meant he would drop back to pass. If they were together it meant he was setting himself to spin and hand off." I want to ask you a couple of questions about that entry, please, sir. That would be [fol. 366] right vital information for a coach planning his defense to have, wouldn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you tell the Saturday Evening Post that that was true insofar as Larry Rakestraw is concerned?

Q. Have you ever told anyone that that is true insofar as Larry Rakestraw is concerned?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, is it true insofar as Larry Rakestraw is concerned?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Thank you, sir. Will you step down here just a moment. Put a—put sort of a parenthesis and then initial it.

A. Right here?

Q. Yes, sir. Draw a line right there. Thank you. I am now going to show you, Coach, the same page, Column 2. There is an entry on Page 2, in referring to Wallace Butts, reading: "Butts, filed away in the position of Georgia's athletic director, which he had held along with his coaching job for some years, was outspokenly bitter about his removal from the field." Did you tell that to the Saturday Evening Post?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know where they got that information?

A. No, sir; I do not, sir.

Q. Would you mark that, please, sir?

A. All right.

Q. Thank you, sir. Let's have Column 3, same page. The paragraph I am now referring to and pointing is on Page 81, and this is the last column. "The game itself would have been enjoyed most by a man who gets kicks from attending executions." It comes on down here, [fol. 367] "The Georgia players, their moves analyzed and forecast like those of rats in a maze, took a frightful physical beating." And, of course, you were there as head coach, weren't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever say anything like that to the Saturday Evening Post?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know where they could have gotten that information?

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Will you please repeat with this, those places?

A. All right.

Q. Will you please just—well, do it right here, save you some running up and down. On this same page, being 81, in the third column where I am pointing now, it reads, and I quote, "It was a bitter defeat for Georgia's promising young team. The twenty-eight-year-old Johnny Griffith, who was beginning his second season as head coach, was stunned." Did you ever say that to anybody connected with the Saturday Evening Post?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know where they got that information?

A. No, sir.

Q. Would you do that, please, sir?

The Court: That is not attributed to Coach Griffith as having said that.

Mr. Schroder: He said he was stunned, it was a bitter defeat for him.

[fol. 368] The Court: He didn't say he wasn't stunned. You asked him did he tell the Saturday Evening Post that.

Mr. Schroder: The Saturday Evening Post attributes—

The Court: They didn't attribute that, from reading the article they didn't attribute that to Coach Griffith.

Mr. Schroder: I don't believe, with all due respect, Your Honor, I don't know whether anybody could know whether he was or wasn't, and whether he told the Post if he was.

The Court: He testified he didn't tell the Post that, but he didn't—

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Did you tell anyone that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Let's have Page 82, Column 2. This is a quote directly attributed to the coach. Coach, at the bottom of the column there you are quoted as saying this, and I will read: "'We knew somebody had given our plays to Alabama,' Griffith told him." Did you say that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know where the Post got that information?

A. Possibly so. I said this, that I figured somebody—

[fol. 369] The Court: Let him come back to the stand where we can hear his testimony.

Mr. Cody: Speak so we can hear you, will you, Coach Griffith?

The Court: Talk out a little louder.

The Witness: I made the statement I figured somebody had been giving information to Alabama, period.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Did you say what they have you quoted there as saying, giving your plays to Alabama?

A. I did not say "plays"; no, sir.

Q. Did you say right after that, "'We knew somebody had given our plays to Alabama,' Griffith told him, 'and maybe to a couple of other teams we played too. But we had no idea that it was Wally Butts.'" Did you say that?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Here at the bottom, Coach Griffith, it says, "Griffith went to University officials, told them what he knew and said that he would resign if Butts was permitted to remain on his job." Did you say that?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Will you mark that one and initial it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Thank you, sir. Let me turn to Page 83, column 2.

[fol. 370] The Court: Mr. Schroder, before you take that down, did Coach Griffith mark there something he hasn't testified about or am I mistaken?

Mr. Schroder: No, sir; he went down too low the first time, and he—

The Witness: I put an arrow in there.

The Court: I thought it was something about calling the plays before the signals. That is where he marked it. He marked it incorrectly?

Mr. Schroder: No, sir; he marked it right; you have got it correct, now, have you not, Coach?

The Witness: Let me see; I think I have.

The Court: What I wanted clear was that about the players coming—that has never been gone over.

Mr. Schroder: Well, while he is down here, may I ask him about that?

The Court: Yes, sir; I thought that this would be the time to clarify it.

[fol. 371] Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir; I overlooked it.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. "'You Know'"—and I am reading or quoting from the article. "'You know, during the first half of the Alabama game my players keep coming to the sideline and saying, 'Coach, we been sold out.'" Is that an accurate statement?

A. No, sir.

Q. "'Their linebackers are hollering out our plays while we're still calling the signals.'"

A. Some of them came out of the game and said, "They knew what we were going to do," or something along those lines. I don't recall it word-for-word, and I don't know who said it.

Q. Just one player?

A. I am not sure; just one or two.

Q. Just one or two?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But they didn't say it like they have got it there that you said?

A. No, sir.

Q. And to that extent it is an inaccurate statement?

A. That's correct.

Q. Did anyone ever come off the field and say anything to you about, "Coach, we have been sold out"?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Well, you would remember it, wouldn't you?

A. I don't know whether I would, but I don't remember it.

Q. Well, you don't know where the Post got that information?

A. No, sir; I do not.

[fol. 372] Q. Thank you, sir. In block letters at the top of this, this being page 83, column 2, I think that is going to refer to what is down here at the bottom; if not, you correct me. I am reading here at the bottom, "'I never had a chance, did I?' Coach Johnny Griffith said bitterly to a friend the other day. 'I never had a chance.'" Now, is that a correct quotation?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever say that to anybody?

A. No, sir.

Q. The Post put it in large block letters on its own sheet "I never had a chance". That is what you say you never told anyone?

A. No, sir.

Q. You have not said that to anyone?

A. No, sir.

Q. The way that reads—only have half of it up there, but the article itself will show, "Head Coach Johnny Griffith of Georgia's beaten Bulldogs: 'I never had a chance.'"; your testimony is that is absolutely inaccurate?

A. That's correct; it is not a quote by me.

Q. All right, sir. After the—would you mark that one? I hate to give you all this exercise. Coach Griffith, after the Post issue of March 23rd hit the streets, did anybody come by to see you from the Post?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Let me back up for just a moment and ask you this. Before the Saturday Evening Post published this article that we are talking about; did it ever consult with you as to the accuracy of the quotations that they were putting in that article as having been said by you?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 373] Q. Now, you said you were visited by a representative of the Saturday Evening Post after the issue hit the streets?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you point out to the man who visited you from the Post that you had not been quoted accurately in that article?

A. Not the man that delivered the magazine to me; no, sir; because I did not read the magazine while he was there.

Q. Well, you have had some discussion with somebody from the Post since?

A. Perhaps a week or two weeks later.

Q. That is what I am referring to. What did you tell him about the manner in which they had used your name and your quotations in their article?

A. I simply told him—point out the misquotes that were directed to me.

Q. And what did you say about him having—should consult you before they quoted you in that way?

A. I said that I felt that I should have been contacted.

Q. And you went further than that, didn't you? Didn't you write a letter or send a copy of a letter to the editor of the Post pointing out that you had been misquoted?

A. I wrote the letter to Dr. Aderhold and a copy was sent to the editor of the Saturday Evening Post.

Q. Has the Saturday Evening Post done anything about retracting the quotations which it has put in its article as being attributable to you?

A. Not directly to me.

Q. Have you seen any—not directly to you?

A. They have not contacted me directly; no, sir.

Q. I see.

[fol. 374] Mr. Schroder: May I ask the Court approximately what time—

The Court: 4:30.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. The sophomore group that you have there at the University of Georgia, and I say "the sophomore group," I mean the group in 1962, they will be juniors this fall?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They have quite a bit of potential, don't they?

A. I think so; yes, sir.

Q. And they showed that by beating Auburn, which has a right strong team, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Won from Clemson also?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With many of those sophomores coming back this fall we can certainly hope for a still better fall this season, can't we?

A. Yes, sir; I think so.

Mr. Schroder: Thank you.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Griffith, I have just a few more questions.

Mr. Schroder: Cody, you going to use this?

[fol. 375] Mr. Cody: No.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. And the first one being a little bit personal, you can decline to answer it if you wish, and I won't insist upon it. Was it true that Coach Butts was outspokenly bitter against Georgia's coaching staff?

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, I think that would certainly be hearsay.

The Court: Well, I believe that you asked—

Mr. Cody: He went into it.

Mr. Schroder: That was in the article, and he denied he said that.

The Court: I think it is admissible.

Mr. Schroder: All right.

The Court: You asked him had he ever heard him say anything about him, and he asked him—I think it is admissible; I overrule the objection.

Mr. Schroder: All right, sir.

[fol. 376] By Mr. Cody:

Q. You want to make any comment about that?

A. I don't have any comment to make about it, because I don't know anything about it.

Q. Was it true that Georgia took a frightful beating in this Alabama game?

A. Not a physical beating; no, sir.

Q. So far as the score was concerned, they took a frightful beating?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it true that that more or less shocked you, stunned you?

A. Yes, sir; to a certain extent.

Q. Was it true that in the 1962 season that you did think that somebody had given the Georgia plays or formations to other teams?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it true—

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, I haven't objected for two days as to leading questions, but I think he is leading the witness.

The Court: Don't lead your witness.

Mr. Cody: It is in rebuttal to something he asked about, Your Honor, and I—

The Court: You are still not privileged to lead him.

[fol. 377] By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Griffith, tell us just a little bit more about these boys coming off the field during the game, and by that I mean, you point out what part of the game or who those players were, if you remember, whether offensive or defensive players, and tell us a little bit more about that, if you can remember.

A. As I remember, one or two came out with a statement along these lines, that "they know what we are running; they are even calling out our plays. What are we going to do?" or something along those lines. I don't recall a great deal about it, because in the heat of a ball game you are not concentrating on something like that, but I do remember something of that nature.

Q. You are busy trying to make substitutions and look at the plays yourself, aren't you?

A. That's correct; yes, sir.

The Court: You are leading him, Mr. Cody.

Mr. Cody: I will quit that.

The Court: It's awfully easy to do that.

Mr. Cody: I know.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Now, there's a lot been said here about the fact that a lot of other teams use this pro-set and use this slot formation that you describe; are there variances from that [fol. 378] formation by different teams?

A. Are there what?

Q. Variances.

A. In—yes, sir; in, for example, the slot formation there is; some teams will use a six-yard slot; some a ten; some a five; and some a two.

Q. Of what importance is that?

A. Well, as I said before—

Mr. Schroder: Cody, I believe we have been all over this.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Have you answered that before?

A. Yes, sir; along those lines in regard to the defensive and play as to where he will line up.

Q. There is a time when you use a particular play; is that of importance?

A. In a game plan you have game situations, first and ten, second and long, second and short, second and third, and the offensive plan or your running attack and your passing attack are broken down to those categories; yes, sir.

Q. Now, to reduce football really to its most common denominator, what you try to do when you get the ball—see if this is correct—you have four downs to make ten yards; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You—

Mr. Cody: You mind if I lead him to that extent?

The Court: No, sir; you can't lead him.

[fol. 379] By Mr. Cody:

Q. If you don't make the ten yards in four downs, what happens?

A. Well, you don't get to that fourth down as far as running the game goes. You kick the ball normally on the fourth down.

Q. And the opponent has the ball?

A. That's correct; yes, sir.

Q. Is that when the—is that when the opponent has a better opportunity to make a touchdown, when they have the ball?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If they don't make a touchdown when they have the ball, it is when they intercept a pass or something of that sort, isn't it?

A. That's correct.

Q. Fumble, pick up a fumble? Now, what was your—what was your complaint or what was your opinion, Coach Griffith, as to the effect that it had on your team when it got the ball by your opponent having some information about your plays or formations? Now, tell us about that.

Mr. Schroder: Now, wait a minute, whoa. Let me see here.

Mr. Cody: I think that is—

The Court: Just a moment; just a moment.

Mr. Cody: I think that is a proper question.

[fol. 380] The Court: Well, I don't know.

Mr. Schroder: No, sir; he is putting words into the witness' mouth not only by leading him but also is putting words in the witness' mouth that the witness hasn't said.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. I will correct that by adding the words "if they had information about your plays and formations."

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, I think that would call for a conclusion.

Mr. Cody: I think it is a hypothetical question based upon facts that have been testified to.

The Court: Well, I don't know. I don't think you properly worded your question, and as it is now I think it is objectionable. I will sustain the objection to it.

Mr. Cody: Very well then.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Griffith, have you ever expressed any opinion as to how much better team Alabama had than Georgia before the game?

A. Yes, sir; I am sure that I have. I could not give you a definite date or who I expressed it to, but it was general information before the ball game—I felt that Alabama had [fol. 381] better personnel than we had, and more experienced football team.

Q. How much better?

A. Well, in my opinion I felt that if the Georgia team scored once and Alabama scored three, that we would have done possibly the best we could have done with the material that we had at the University of Georgia.

Q. You got another game coming up in September, haven't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You hope you do better?

A. We plan to do better; yes, sir.

The Court: Any further questions of Coach Griffith?

Mr. Cody: Just a moment, Your Honor.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Griffith, roughly do you know how many yards Georgia gained in its offensive plays against Alabama during that game?

A. No, sir. I don't know the exact number. I think it would probably be less than a hundred, in the 80's, 90's; I am not sure.

Q. Is that good or bad?

A. That is bad.

Q. You know how many passes they completed?

A. Georgia?

Q. Georgia.

A. Not the exact number; no, sir. I would say probably around eleven; I am not sure.

Q. Do you know how many they tried?

A. No, sir; I don't know the exact number; probably [fol. 382] eighteen or nineteen.

Q. Do you know how close you got to the goal line at any one time or the closest you got?

A. I believe that we got to their 40-yard line; that was the closest we got.

Q. And you said the score was 35 to nothing, I believe?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: I believe that's all.

Recross examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Mr.—Coach Griffith, the last quarter of the game Alabama was using its third and four stringers, wasn't it?

A. I believe they were in the last.

Q. They were trying not to run up the score; they were using their third and fourth stringers, weren't they?

A. I think they were in the last quarter; yes, sir.

Q. How many passes—Mr. Cody asked you how many passes they completed. How many passes did Mickey Babb drop that night?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Quite a few, wasn't it?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you know of any he dropped?

A. Yes, sir. I know of one or two he dropped definitely.

Q. Without bringing the blown-up portion of the article back here, Mr. Cody was asking you about some remarks made by Georgia players, Georgia personnel coming off of [fol. 383] the field. I want to refer you, please, sir, to the Saturday Evening Post article which reads—and I am reading from Page 81, column 3—

Mr. Cody: Are you quoting him now?

Mr. Schroder: Quoting him? I am quoting—

Mr. Cody: If he is not quoting Coach Griffith, I object to it.

Mr. Schroder: I am quoting the Saturday Evening Post article.

The Court: All right, sir; go ahead.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Quoting, "'The Alabama players taunted us,' end Mickey Babb told him. 'You can't run eighty-eight pop, (a key Georgia play) on us,' they'd yell. They knew just what we were going to run, and just what we called it.'" What is that play "eighty-eight pop"?

A. We don't have an "eighty-eight pop". We have the "thirty-three" and "thirty-two pop".

Q. You mean you don't have an "eighty-eight pop" in Georgia's offensive plans?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, then, there couldn't be a key Georgia play such as that as the Post refers to it?

A. We don't have the "eighty-eight pop."

Q. That is what I say; it couldn't be a key Georgia play [fol. 384] as the Post calls it?

A. That's correct.

Q. No play for Georgia, is it?

A. No, sir.

JOHN GRIFFITH having resumed the stand, testified further as follows:

Recross examination (continued).

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. One question, Coach Griffith. You know Bob Edwards?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Bob Edwards first called you about this matter saying that Burnett had furnished it to him; is that right?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, the first time that Bob Edwards called you was before Christmas in 1962?
A. As I recall; yes, sir.

The Clerk: Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 28 for identification is a copy of a letter dated October 22, 1962, to Coach Johnny Griffith from Wally Butts.

(Whereupon above document was marked for identification only as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 28.)

[fol. 385] The Clerk: Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 29 for identification is a copy of a letter dated February 26, 1963 to Coach Johnny Griffith from Wally Butts.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Mr. Griffith, I hand you Plaintiff's Exhibits 28 and 29, and ask you did you receive the originals of those letters?
A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: That's all, Your Honor.
The Court: Any further questions?
Mr. Cody: I'd like to ask him a couple of questions, Your Honor.
The Court: All right, sir.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Griffith, this information, after examining the notes made by Mr. Burnett, in your opinion could that information affect the result of this Georgia-Alabama game? [fol. 386] A. Yes, sir.

Q. If you had been the Alabama coach and had received that type of information—

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, we are going into all this all over again. I am going to have to go through all this.

The Court: Let's see what the question is.

Mr. Cody: I haven't asked him this before.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Would it have been helpful to you in the preparation of your defense against Georgia had you been the Alabama coach?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: That's all.

Mr. Schroder: All right, sir.

Recross examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Coach Griffith, referring back to the so-called Burnett notes which we reviewed in court here yesterday—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —I believe you testified that a good number of those notes were inaccurate and didn't even apply to anything [fol. 387] that the University of Georgia had; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The only two things that you saw in those notes that, in your opinion, as you testified, might have affected or might be of any benefit to an opposing coach—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —were the two formations we spent some time discussing yesterday?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Those two formations were the two formations that were also used by Alabama in its offense, weren't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the Vanderbilt game, which was the following game played by the University of Georgia in Nashville, Georgia used those same two formations, didn't it?

A. I am not positive; I think so.

Q. You think so?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did that game come out?

A. Georgia won 10 to nothing.

Q. Using the same formations that Vanderbilt had seen the week before when they were scouting Georgia in its game against Alabama?

A. I couldn't answer that positively; no, sir; I couldn't answer that.

Q. Well, do you remember varying your offense against Vanderbilt?

A. Well, I am sure that we did, because they used a different defense.

[fol. 388] Q. I mean, your formations?

A. I can't recall; no, sir.

Q. Those are really your two basic formations, aren't they?

A. Well, we used other formations during the season. Yes, sir.

Q. Yes, sir. Those are your two basic formations that you did use throughout the season, weren't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Throughout the season '62?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And as you said yesterday, you had been using those same two formations in 1961 also?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: Excuse me. That's all.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. Coach Griffith, if I recall correctly you said you felt that two other games—information had been given on two other games; is that correct?

A. No, sir; I did not say that.

Q. I misunderstood you.

A. Yes, sir.

FRANK INMAN called as a witness on behalf of the Defendant, after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

[fol. 389] Direct examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Your name is Coach Frank Inman?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you attend college, Coach?

A. Presbyterian College.

Q. Where is that?

A. Clinton, South Carolina.

Q. Did you play football there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What coaching experience have you had?

A. I got my Master's Degree at Duke in 1947, and in the spring—end of the year I went to Richmond Academy in Augusta as Assistant Coach, and stayed at the Richmond Academy until last year when I went to Georgia. In 1956 I became Head Coach.

Q. What part of the team do you coach now?

A. At the University?

Q. Yes.

A. I am the offensive backfield coach.

Q. What year was it you went to the University as a coach?

A. Last year; my first year was last year, the season of 1962.

Q. Were you an assistant coach then during the—at the time that Georgia played Alabama?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Coach Inman, have you seen these notes that Mr. Burnett turned over to the Athletic Department, have you ever seen those notes?

A. No, sir; I have seen a copy of them.

Mr. Cody: Let me see those notes.

[fol. 390] By Mr. Cody:

Q. Hold these notes a minute. I want to ask you a few questions about them. Did you attend all the staff meetings of coaches during the spring training of 1962?

A. No, sir; I did not. I was not employed until July 1, '62.

Q. Then did your work begin on or about September 1st in the coaching of the players of 1962?

A. My first practice session was September the 1st.

Q. Will you state to the Court whether or not you helped train the team with respect to a formation that you coaches refer to as a slot formation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you train—help train the team with respect to a formation known as the pro-set?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is that pro-set, Coach Inman?

A. Pro-set is a set at Georgia where we use a slot on one side with an end and halfback and on the opposite side the off end is split; with the Alabama game, about fifteen yards.

Q. How many basic formations are there in football, just approximately?

A. That would be difficult to answer. There are a large number. I could name a few and you can count them.

Q. Suppose you name a few.

A. Well, there is the pro-set we use, which I suppose other people do too. We use the wing, the wing back without any end split; sometimes we use a wing back with an off end split which we call a flex. It is also a normal T-back, full house backfield. There are many variations of spread [fol. 391] formation such as the one that Tech used this past year against us.

Q. Was that a pro-set?

A. We called it a spread.

Q. I see. Go ahead.

A. And then you can take any one of those sets that I have mentioned and just by changing the spacing of the line men or the position that the back lines up, whether he is in a close position, three yards, or in the middle position, three to five yards, or out eight or more yards, and I think that would change the formation completely.

Q. When you refer to a slot formation, are there different variations in there, so far as the distance in the spread is concerned?

A. There is a lot of—a large amount of discussion, I think, about the width of a slot, and at Georgia we have used different ones since I have been there. We started with a three-yards, and at other times we had it wider than that.

Q. Is the difference in that width of the slot important in football?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would it be important to an opposing team to know the width of that slot?

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, he is leading the witness.

Mr. Cody: I think he has a right to express an opinion about it, Your Honor.

The Court: He said you were leading the witness.
[fol. 392] Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.
The Court: And I agree with him.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. What is your opinion, Coach Inman, as to whether or not the width of a slot is important?

A. I think it is important to determine where the defensive people are going to be placed, whether or not they would put more than one defensive man in the position in the area between the slot, whether or not they would declare the strength of the defense like a monster man or rover line-backer toward that direction. We think it makes a lot of difference in how you set your defense. Of course, there are a lot of things involved, the field position, and so on. But generally the formation is a basic thing that you determine your defense from, one of the basic things.

Q. Look on those notes, Coach Inman, and turn to Page 5. Do you see anything on that page that indicates a Georgia formation?

A. Is this the one that says "Slot or Wide Slot"? Am I looking at the right page?

Q. On Page 5. Your pages are not numbered, but in the order in the order in which they appear, I think—

Mr. Schroder: Mr. Cody, I think you are referring to the second note on Page 5.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. The second note on Page 5.
[fol. 393] A. "Slot to right, ends normal (three yards)"?
Q. Yes.
A. That is the question, please?
Q. Is that a formation, a Georgia formation?
A. In our slot right formation we did set the end three yards, and put the on side halfback in that area, a yard behind the yard of scrimmage.

Q. Turn to the last page, Coach Inman. The first item on that page you see where it says "Slot right, left end out fifteen yards"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that a Georgia formation?

A. That is what we call our pro-set, which is the slot right with a split end on the off side, and we tried to put him out wide, fifteen yards.

Q. Did you help train the Georgia team to use that formation for the 1962 season?

A. Yes, sir. I was the assistant offensive backfield coach, and I worked primarily with the halfbacks. I helped Charlie, and I worked particularly, I would say, in this formation where the backs lined up.

Q. How many formations—back up there just a minute. The Alabama game for the season of 1962 was the first game of the season; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have a good many sophomores on your team?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many formations did you help train that team to use in the Alabama game?

A. We had two basic formations, but, of course, we worked them both ways, and I guess you would call that four formations; we had a slot right and slot left and a pro right and a pro left.

[fol. 394] Q. Did you use those formations during the game?

A. Yes, sir.

The Court: Did you use any other formations except those two formations during the game, those basic formations?

The Witness: During the Alabama game?

The Court: Yes, sir.

The Witness: No, sir. To my recollection we used that. Of course, we used a punt formation. As I recall we ran one time from a punt formation, which I don't think—but that is the formation, so we ran those two.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Inman, do you have any opinion as to whether or not this information could have been helpful to Alabama? Do you have an opinion about it?

A. These notes?

Q. Well, I mean—yes, the notes?

A. I think that any information in football from a reliable source would be valuable to any coach, and the value of it, I think, would—I assume would be, at least in my case, would be determined by whom—where it came from. If an expert told me—

Mr. Schroder: Wait a minute; whoa, whoa.

[fol. 395] The Court: Just a minute. That is hearsay. You can go back and ask him the question, what some expert told him would be hearsay.

Mr. Cody: Let's don't get into some comment an expert told you.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. I am asking you as an expert whether or not, in your opinion, this information contained on those notes or any information on those notes could have been helpful to Alabama?

A. Yes, sir; I think it could.

Q. If you had been the Alabama coach would it have helped you prepare your defense against Georgia?

A. Well, I would have to say what I said before. You say if I had been?

Q. Yes.

A. Any information I got in football would have—I'd have to decide on how valuable it was, depending on where I got it from. If one of my coaches gave me this information, I would take it without any question, and that is what I meant by—when I said "expert". I should have said "coach", a qualified coach. Does that answer your question?

Q. I think it does. Coach Inman, do you know—do you know who the head of the Southeastern Conference is or was in 1962?

A. The Commissioner?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir; I know him.

Q. Who is he?

A. Mr. Gardner.

[fol. 396] Q. Who is Mr. Gardner?

A. He is head of the officials' association.

Q. If you wanted to obtain an interpretation of a rule, who would you—who would you turn to?

A. Other than my coaching staff?

Q. Yes.

A. If the staff couldn't decide, I assume I would go to the man in charge of it who would be, in this case, Mr. Gardner.

Q. Did Coach Butts have anything to do with the football team during the 1962 season so far as coaching was concerned?

A. Not to my knowledge, no, sir.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. The note you read a moment ago in Page 5 reads: "Slot right—" you read it. I forget what page it's on.

A. The last page?

The Court: I think he is referring to the second note on the 5th Page.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Page 5, the second note.

A. "Slot to right ends normal (three yards)."

Q. As that note is written, it is incorrect, isn't it?

A. I am not sure I understand you.

Q. Do you put your ends out three yards on the slot right?

A. The right end is split three yards on slot right.

Q. This doesn't say that. It says both ends.

[fol. 397] A. It says "ends normal".

Q. "Ends normal (three yards)"; isn't that what it says?

A. In parentheses it says "three yards"; yes, sir.

Q. Do you put both ends out three yards?

A. On the side of the slot the end is three yards, as near as we can get it, which is, as I understand—

Q. You have two ends on your team, don't you?

A. The off end, if I could finish, the off end in our set-up would be anywhere from three feet to whatever it takes him to run the play.

Q. What is an off end?

A. The one away from the slot.

Q. All right, sir.

A. It would be the left end in a slot right.

Q. Then to the extent that this says your ends are three yards out or split, that is erroneous, isn't it?

A. Not to my thinking; no, sir.

Q. You used—you do split both ends three yards out on a slot right?

A. On slot right the right end splits three yards. The left end splits to do the job, whatever the call is.

Q. Does he go three yards out?

A. He could go three yards; yes, sir.

Q. Is that a slot right formation there on top?

The Court: I don't believe he can hardly see it.

A. (By the witness) Yes, sir; that is a slot right.

Q. I want you to show me this. The witness was not here yesterday, and I might state for his information this was drawn by Coach Griffith as Georgia's right slot formation.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, your note there reads, "slot to right, ends nor-[fol. 398] mal (three yards)"; now, in order for that note to be put on this board, you would have to move this end out here to the same distance that would be, wouldn't you?

A. I suppose if you are going to say this (three yards) means both ends, you are right.

Q. How many ends does it say? Does it say singular or plural? Read it.

A. It says "ends".

Q. E-n-d-s?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many ends does a team have?

A. Two.

Q. One here and one there, right?

A. Usually one on the right and one on the left.

Q. That's right, sir. That is here and there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when that said "ends normal (three yards)", your slot right, it would be a different diagram than this one, wouldn't it?

A. I don't see any marking up there about the split of that end.

Q. I didn't draw this. This was drawn by someone else. Can you see it all right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, the note that you have there in your hand is different from this, isn't it?

A. I think the right end in a slot is three yards and a left end is split anywhere from three feet to any position it takes to get the job done, and if you are saying this note says that both ends are three yards, then I would say that the slot right at Georgia could be that way.

Q. I am not saying—

A. But it would not be that way every time.

[fol. 399] Q. I am saying what the note says.

A. I thought you asked me—

Q. The note speaks for itself, doesn't it? I mean, just read it.

A. Mr. Schroder, you asked me what the note said.

Q. Read it.

A. "Slot to right, ends normal (three yards)."

Q. "Ends normal (three yards)"; now, that is not my language. The language there says that your ends are split three yards; in effect, isn't that what it says "ends normal (three yards)"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right, sir. Under that note this end would line up three yards away from the tackle just as that end is lined up three yards away from this tackle?

A. Under—if they were going to draw this, sir, I thought you said that was Georgia's slot?

Q. I am talking about—if you are going to draw that formation up, you would move this end out here, wouldn't you, three yards?

A. I suppose you would; yes, sir.

Q. All right, sir. No, oftentimes it is true, speaking of information and the reliability of information that comes into coaches' hands, it's been known often for one coach to plant information where another coach can get it, hoping he will rely on it; you know of instances like that, don't you?

A. No, sir; I don't.

Q. You weren't at Georgia in 1961 before the Vanderbilt game; you weren't at Georgia then?

A. No, sir.

Q. You never heard of that being done, a plant?

A. I have never done anything like that.

Q. I am just asking have you ever heard of anything like that?

[fol. 400] A. Have I ever heard of information being planted?

Q. Hoping that other coaches would rely on it?

A. I have heard of things like that. I don't know of any reliable coach that might use planted information.

A. We have what we call a spread; yes, sir.

Q. Did you use it last year?

A. No, sir—last year?

Q. Did you use it in the Vanderbilt game—I mean, the Alabama game?

A. No, sir.

Q. Is this similar to the one that Alabama uses and similar to the one Georgia Tech uses?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, I don't know what the formation is, but you did not have any spread formation that you used against Alabama in '62?

A. No, sir.

Q. Is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How—I have forgotten the score; what was the score of the Georgia Tech-University of Georgia game?

A. I would like to forget it; it is something in the 30's.

Q. Sir?

A. Was it 30?

Q. 30-something 6, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Georgia Tech and Alabama, you rate them even?

A. Georgia Tech won the game; yes, sir.

Q. Won the game how much?

A. I don't recall; they won the game.

Q. About two points?

[fol. 401] A. They used some kind of a spread formation and were able to win.

Q. Alabama used the same formation against Tech that Tech used against Alabama, didn't it?

A. I don't know, sir.

Q. Alabama beat Tech by two points, didn't it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Excuse me. I had it backwards. Georgia Tech defeated Alabama by two points, didn't it?

A. I am really not sure. I think that's correct. They won the game.

Q. And Georgia Tech and Alabama played Georgia about the same way, didn't they?

A. Different times of the year.

Q. Yes, sir. But about the same results?

A. I would say Alabama beat us a little worse on the scoreboard.

Q. That was the first game your sophomores had ever played in?

A. The Alabama game; yes, sir.

Q. Now, is there anything particular about these two plays as Coach Griffith drew yesterday, or wasn't Georgia using those same formations in 1961?

A. I can't—I really can't say exactly what Georgia used in '61.

Q. You did—you weren't at Georgia in '61, were you?

A. No, sir; I went there a little late, and so I didn't have an opportunity to study as much as I should have.

Q. All right.

A. But these formations we have used since I have been at Georgia, and I assume we have used some of those prior to that time.

[fol. 402] Q. Well, they are right basic formations for any Southeastern Conference Football Team, aren't they?

A. They are basic formations for any team that uses a slot with those splits and a pro-set with those splits.

Q. Do you know of any team in the Southeastern Conference that doesn't use either one of those two formations?

A. You just talked about the Tech game in which they had to go to what they figured was a surprise move and a spread that was not either one of those; no, sir.

Q. I say, do you know of any team in Southeastern Conference that does not use these two formations as part of their basic plan?

A. I don't know of any, but I couldn't say that they all do or do not, because I do not know that much about some teams. Like Tulane, for example, that I have not seen play.

Q. Well, it is a fairly common—both of them are fairly common basic fundamental formations, aren't they?

A. Along with a number of others; yes, sir.

Q. Yes, sir. Mr. Cody asked you about some rule interpretations, or who you would go to for an interpretation of the rules as they apply to football players and teams. In 1962—let me ask you this—I withdraw that for the moment. What organization establishes or promulgates rules to be followed by the teams all over the country, as well as those in the Southeastern Conference?

A. The Rules Committee. I don't know the exact name.

Q. I don't mean the members; the name of it.

A. I believe it is the American Football Coaches Associa-
[fol. 403] tion Rule Committee. I am not sure about that, about the name.

Q. They promulgate and seek enforcement of all rules as they pertain to the various colleges which belong to that association throughout the country, don't they?

A. You understand, I don't have a very large background in college football. My understanding, they make the rules, and Mr. Gardner and other groups have to enforce them.

Q. Enforce them?

A. That means they have to interpret them, I think.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that that association has local representatives in each area like the Southeastern area and the Southwestern area and the Pacific Coast area, and Midwest?

A. Which? You talking about the rules committee?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I understood that is right.

Q. Who, in 1962, was the southeastern representative of that rule-making body?

A. I understand Coach Butts.

Q. Coach Wally Butts?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: I believe that's all, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, sir; any further questions from Coach Inman?

Mr. Cody: Just a second, Your Honor.

[fol. 404] Mr. Schroder: I may have one or two more.

Mr. Cody: Well, I have—

The Court: He said he might have another question.

Mr. Schroder: There was one question I missed.

The Court: All right, sir, go ahead.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. I forgot to ask; you said you were—during 1962 you were the assistant offensive backfield coach?

A. I believe that is the way they—what they call it. I worked with the backs. Coach Trippi was the offensive backfield coach and I was called, I think, the assistant backfield coach, and worked in recruiting.

Q. You were Coach Charlie Trippi's assistant?

A. No, sir; I was Coach Johnny Griffith's assistant.

Q. I thought you said Coach Charlie Trippi was in charge of the offense?

A. He was in charge of the offense.

Q. And you were under him?

A. Everybody that worked with the offense was under the offensive coach; yes, sir; but I think I was considered an assistant at the University of Georgia, not another member of the staff.

Q. I understand that.

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 405] Q. But Charlie Trippi was in charge of the offense, wasn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were—you were assisting him?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: That's all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Inman, during the early part of your 1962 season, did you have secret practice?

A. You mean prior to the '62 season?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir; at Georgia we have a fence around our practice field, and, as I recall, a manager was stationed at the gate and allowed only authorized personnel on the practice field.

Q. Is that a—is that a walled field? Do you have a wall around it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was Coach Butts permitted to attend those secret practices?

A. Yes, sir; Coach Butts was our athletic director.

Q. Did—why is it, Coach Inman, that you—that you don't prepare or train your team for the first game of the season to use all of the basic formations?

A. Well, that is a decision, I think, that the staff has to make, and in our case I think the feeling was that we had a large number of inexperienced players and that by concentrating on these maneuvers and using these formations, using our best people in certain positions, that we could [fol. 406] move the football and do a better job. I assume that that is the reason everybody decides on certain formations.

Q. And you limited yourself to two?

A. Well, I would call it four, slot right, slot left, pro right and pro left.

Mr. Cody: That's all I have.

Recross examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. I believe you said you ran from another formation, a punt formation you ran in the Alabama game?

A. Yes, sir.

The Court: Sometimes that is a necessity, isn't it?

Mr. Schroder: It wasn't this time.

The Witness: No, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. This was a planned play, wasn't it?

A. Called play.

Q. Called play. This Alabama end who caught the first touchdown pass—did you see the game?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. His name is Williamson?

A. I believe that's correct.

Q. Plays right end?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 407] Q. And he would play left end if they were going to swing him over that way?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear Coach Buts tell the offensive coach or Charlie Trippi that—or John Gregory, when he came back from New York with Paul Bryant and with Ray Graves, coach at the University of Florida, to watch out for Williamson on the first opportunity that Alabama got, that they would throw the bomb, as they call it, to Williamson?

A. I don't recall being in on that conversation; no, sir.

Q. That is what they did too, wasn't it? They threw the homerun to him as soon as they got Georgia's interception, that was the first touchdown for Alabama, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Don't you all—

A. It wasn't the first time they had the football, as I recall it.

Q. It was the first time they had the ball, I mean, when they intercepted Georgia's pass?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they were in position for the homerun, weren't they?

A. Were they in position for a homerun on 50, approximately? I would say anything that far out would be considered in football a homerun.

Q. And they did it?

A. Yes, sir; a fine executed play.

Q. Unfortunately, we at that time had an offensive man trained to play offense in the backfield, supposed to cover Williamson, didn't we?

A. Mr. Schroder, who do you mean "we"?

[fol. 408] Q. The University of Georgia.

A. Yes, sir; the University of Georgia.

The Court: Any further questions?

Mr. Schroder: Just one moment.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. What is the name of the large—a student community —what is that, the Student Educational Center?

A. The Georgia Center for Continuing Education.

Q. Yes, sir. That is sort of in the shape of a hotel, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has rooms upstairs?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How close is that to your practice field?

A. It's—it's not exactly adjacent, but it is well within sight.

Q. No problem at all for someone up there to see if they wanted to see what Georgia was doing out there, was there?

A. I can't answer you positively. I have wondered about it, because it is a very pretty place and it is real tall.

Q. It is real tall, and Georgia practices out there behind. If they wanted to get in there and spy, there wouldn't be any problem, would there?

A. It's not behind it; it is this side of it.

Q. This side of it?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 409] Mr. Schroder: That's all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. How far is that building away from the practice field?

A. Well, I have been having a tough time with three yards. I think—I would guess the hotel part of the building is two hundred yards, I suppose. This would be real—

Q. I just want your estimate of it.

A. I would think that's right.

Q. Two hundred yards?

A. There is a building there and some open space in the center, so, whatever that is.

LEROY PEARCE called as a witness on behalf of the Defendant, after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. Would you state your name, please?
A. Leroy Pearce.
Q. What is your present employment?
A. I am assistant football coach at the University of Georgia.
Q. How long have you been employed in that capacity?
A. Since February 8, 1962.
[fol. 410] Q. Did you play college football?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where did you play college football?
A. University of Wyoming.
Q. Coach Pearce, I wonder if you would tell these gentlemen of the Jury the experience that you have had in the field of coaching football?
A. I coached football for Coach Badden in Wyoming in in 1950-51 and 51-52. I coached for Arkansas in 1953 and 1954.

Mr. Cody: Speak a little louder, Coach Pearce, if you can.

A. I coached at Tennessee for Coach Wyatt in '55 and '56. I coached at Iowa State for Jim Myers in 1957. I coached for Bill Jennings in Nebraska from 1958 through 1961.
Q. What time of the year did you come to the University of Georgia?
A. February 8, 1962.
Q. And what was your position at that time?
A. I was to coach the offensive ends and the defensive ends.

Q. And would you state whether or not you occupied that same position during the 1962 football season?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Coach Pearce, would you state your opinion as to whether or not football coaches, in the course of preparing for a game, seek to obtain information about their opponent?

A. Would you—do you mean scouting?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir. Scouting is a common practice, and in most conferences now they have the film exchange where you can [fol. 411] exchange films with your opponents, and, of course, you have people on your staff that scout. Most of the assistant coaches scout, and that is going to the game and watching the game to pick up anything that you can do, and those are common practices in football.

Q. Would you go into a little bit more detail about what is involved in scouting, what information you are able to obtain and what your purpose in scouting a football game is?

A. Well, in your football scouting you try to get an analysis of the team's offensive and defensive tendencies, get the plays they run, the formations they are in, and get all their defenses and stunts. These are things you can get in a film, because you can study a film and run it backwards and forwards. At a game when you are scouting it is real hard to get a lot of things like that, because it is hard to keep up with the game because you are trying to keep tendencies on downs, distances, situations, and trying to get a feel of the game and study their personnel actually by being there and not from the film.

Q. Would you state whether or not it is normal for coaches in the Southeastern Conference to try to attend the spring practice game of teams that they expect to play the next year?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are they able to obtain any information that will give some indication of what the team could be expected to do during the next year?

A. I believe that the most valuable information you could get from that would be the—It is the first time you get a chance to see boys that will be sophomores play the next year. Now, you—usually the teams are regulated on their offense and their defense so that coaches that are [fol. 412] there, if they bring enough people, they get a chance to pick up your stunts and things on defense or your offensive things.

Q. When you play that spring practice game, you know there are going to be opposing coaches watching, do you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, would you summarize to the Jury the shortcomings in the procedures that coaches use to obtain information; in other words, what information would you like to have that you are not able to obtain through normal procedures?

A. Well—

Q. Maybe you'd like to break it down to detail the scouting first and then the films, and I believe you have covered the spring practice.

A. I wish you would restate that question, please.

Q. What are the shortcomings of scouting as far as getting complete information about a team that you are about to play?

A. Well, if you have the films you can take the films and break them down. I would say the only shortcomings as far as films are concerned is it doesn't show all pass patterns unless somebody has a wideangle film, and usually —now, we don't take them at Georgia, and I don't know whether anybody would let you have their wideangle film, but you can get pass patterns if you have the wideangle film. If not, you can't get those and you would have to rely wholly on your scouting or your scout at the game to pick up pass patterns. I think that would be the main weakness of films, but from films you can get their offensive and defensive patterns, and if they don't change it you can be in real good shape on it.

[fol. 413] Q. Now, what opportunity have you had to scout the team that you are going to play on the opening day of the season?

A. Well, you have, during the summertime you can get all of their last year's films which we did, and I am sure that everybody does, and I'd say that the only shortcoming about this is if there is a lot of change in personnel, you don't get to see the new personnel.

Q. And would you state whether or not there were a lot of changes in personnel on the 1962 Georgia football team?

A. Yes, sir. We played a lot of sophomores in 1962.

Q. Would you summarize for the Jury the procedures that football teams in general, and Georgia in particular, utilize to prevent other teams from obtaining information?

A. Well, at the University of Georgia we have what we call closed practices, and we have a wall around our practice field to keep people from getting in, and anybody at the practice is supposed to be admitted—we have a manager on the door and he is supposed to only admit people that have been—well, members of the Board of Trustees and things like that, and in most cases the press and—state the rest of the question.

The Court: He said—

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. What is the—

[fol. 414] The Court: He said state the rest of the question; he didn't understand the question.

Mr. Joiner: I believe he covered it, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, sir.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. In particular during the 1962 season, what precautionary measures did you exercise with reference to your play groups?

A. Well, in 1962 I—we broke our team into three groups, the backs and the ends and the lineman, and had our football players in group meetings and gave them the offensive and defensive assignments in those meetings, and I would say that our quarterbacks probably had a real good picture —well, I hope they had a real good picture of the overall offensive part of the game, but other players just had what they were supposed to do.

Q. In other words, the left guard wouldn't know what the halfback was going to do on the play, and the right end wouldn't know what, maybe, the quarterback would do?

A. I don't think it would be that bad. He would know in the numbering system because we number our backs. But if he were a blocker, the halfback were a blocker, the guard might not know that.

Q. If someone should try to obtain a copy of these plays, would you state whether or not they would have to have the plays for each individual position before they would [fol. 415] have a complete analysis of each offensive play?

A. I believe that they'd have to have the linemen, ends and backs.

Q. Coach Pearce, who was favored to win the 1962 Georgia-Alabama game?

A. Alabama.

Q. How much was Alabama favored to win that game by?

A. Well, as nearly as I can remember it was 14 to 17 points.

Q. I believe you previously testified you were not at Georgia during the 1961 season; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you had an opportunity to review the films for the 1961 season?

A. I reviewed all the films when I came to Georgia, and I studied mostly the end personnel, because I knew I would be coaching the ends for the 1962 season.

Q. To the best of your recollection, how many different formations were used by Georgia during the 1961 season?

A. I can't give you an answer to that because I don't know. I mean, there are—

Q. Could you give us an estimate, an approximate number?

A. Well, I'd just say several, because I really don't know.

Q. Now, Coach Pearce, what formations were used by Georgia in the 1962 Georgia-Alabama game?

A. Well—

Q. Basic formations?

A. The names that we gave them is a slot and a pro-set, [fol. 416] and I am sure that you have been over that.

Q. And would it be correct to state that you could say that there are variations of those two separate formations, or you could say it is four different formations? I mean, assuming you go both ways?

A. Assuming that you go both ways, if you count right and left, it is two different formations; it could be four formations.

Q. Would you state your opinion as to whether it could also be considered two formations with those variations; in other words, could it have been—state your opinion—state your opinion as to whether or not it could have been considered the pro-set formation going left and right and the slot formations going left and right?

A. I believe the best answer I could give is that if you put a play in, say, slot right, and put a play in, that you have the same play going the opposite way with it turned over. Now, I really don't understand your question if that is not the answer.

Q. Well, my question is whether or not the two basic formations—let me rephrase it. State your opinion as to whether or not the two basic formations used by Georgia in the 1962 Alabama game were the pro-set and the slot?

A. Yes. Our basic formations were pro and slot.

Q. Assuming that both of these formations were used by the 1961 Georgia team, along with other formations, would it be of any help to an opposing coach to know that these were the two particular formations that you were going to use in that game if he knew the formations you had used the previous year?

[fol. 417] A. If he was sure that those were the formations he could cut his practice time, mainly on those formations, and later in the week practice the other formations, the best plays you could use from the other formations. Did you ask me a question and did I answer it?

Q. My question was, assuming that the opposing coach knew all of the formations that had been used during the previous season and that these two formations were used during the previous season, if he knew that these two particular formations were going to be used in the game and no others, would that be helpful?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, how many formations did Georgia generally use in a game during the '62 season?

A. We didn't use very many formations, because we—

Q. I mean, in one particular game, how many formations would you usually prepare to use in any one particular game?

A. Well, we picked out two or three formations for each game, depending on what we thought we could do best against the football team that we were going to play.

Q. Now, assuming that the opposing coach knew from the films of the 1961 season the plays that Georgia had used during that season and assuming that Georgia used the same plays in the 1962 season, would it be helpful to a coach to know the particular plays that a team intended to use in a particular game?

A. If you knew the exact plays it would be helpful, because you could practice against them and get recognition from them.

[fol. 418] The Court: You mean plays for formations?

Mr. Joiner: Plays. I believe I covered the formations previously, Your Honor.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. Coach Pearce, during the course of preparation for a game, do you normally have the first team defense work against the firm team offense?

A. Well, we, at the University of Georgia we have the first team defense work against the scout team, and we have the first team offense work against the different scout team so that they actually never work against each other.

Q. What would the scout team that was working along with the defensive team be running?

A. The scout team that worked with our defensive team would run the opponent's offensive plays.

Q. To the best of your knowledge at that time, from scouting the offensive team?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Coach Pearce, if information were given that would relate to the formations and plays of a particular game, would it be any more help in the opening game than in games later in the season?

A. Well, as I previously stated, I think it would—it would help you early because you would—if you knew of anything new, if you knew anything about players that had not played the previous year.

Q. Would you state your opinion as to whether or not it would be more helpful in the opening game than it would later on in the season?

[fol. 419] A. It would be more helpful in the opening game because as a team starts to play during the year, from one week to the next, you can't make a major change in your football team. So, anything that you have in the first game you will stick with that basically for the next game. You can change for each game a little bit, but not a major change.

Q. Would you state your opinion as to whether or not in college football it is quite frequently done for a coach to change in some respects his offense from one year to another?

The Court: You mean from one year, one game—

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. One year?

A. I would say a lot of coaches change from one year to the next, because mainly if you are losing, you are trying to find something that is better than what you are doing, and you will—for instance, we have spent a lot of money going to coaching clinics, talking to other coaches and trying to find out what we are doing, and in our staff meetings if we decide somebody else is doing something that is better than what we are doing, I am sure we will change to it.

Q. Would you state your opinion as to whether or not the opponent of Georgia for the opening game of 1962 could have told, from reviewing the 1961 films, whether or not Georgia was going to continue to use the same offenses that they used in 1961?

A. I would say that they could have taken all the films of last year and broke them down, and the things that we did best from 1961, assuming that we would have used [fol. 420] those, they would have no assurance what we would have used.

Q. Would they have—what, if any, assurance would they have had that you were not putting in one or two completely new formations?

A. None.

Mr. Schroder: What's all this got to do with the case? We are just talking about two formations.

Mr. Joiner: Well, Your Honor, Mr. Schroder has made the point—

The Court: I think it is relevant.

Mr. Schroder: I withdraw the objection.

The Court: I overrule the objection. I think it is relevant.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. Coach Pearce, I show you these notes which have been admitted in evidence, and ask if you recognize them?

A. I have seen a photostatic copy of these notes right here.

Q. Will you state whether or not you have seen them on more than one occasion?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. And are you fairly well familiar with the contents of these notes?

[fol. 421] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Directing your attention to Page 6 of the notes, the third entry on that page, it is next to the last page, "slot right, right half on fly, screen to him"; do you see that entry?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you state whether or not that comes close to describing a play that Georgia used in the 1962 Alabama game?

Mr. Schroder: We are coming close—I think that ought to be explained, if it is coming close and how close.

Mr. Joiner: Your Honor, I would like an opportunity to explain it. Mr. Schroder—

The Court: Go ahead and explain it.

Mr. Joiner: Mr. Schroder has tried to restrict this to the technical language on the notes, but the witness Burnett has testified that he was unable to get down the exact language and that some of this is sketchy information, and if some of it comes close to describing a Georgia play, I think it is important to have that information because it could very well have been that writing as quickly as he did Burnett was unable to get the whole play written down, and I think it is a proper question.

[fol. 422] The Court: I will let him testify as an expert if he could determine from those notes what it meant.

Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir. But seems to me what counsel has stated, he is seeking to impeach these notes he is relying on. If they don't speak the truth, he is trying to get it explained.

The Court: I don't think so. I will let him ask it. I will hold him within bounds.

By the Witness:

A. I think the best way I can answer your question is to tell you how we did screen for this game. We would—assuming we had a slot right, we'd put our right half in long fly, we called it, and our quarterback would go on a drop back pass, and we would screen to our left halfback who had gone across. We did not screen to the man that was on the fly; we screened to the other halfback.

Mr. Schroder: Well, now, if the Court please, it is not a question what Georgia would do or did do. The question is whether or not Georgia has this play, and I think that the question that was asked a moment ago and the answer would be objectionable. The note speaks for itself. The Post has charged us with—charged Butts with giving detailed information as to plays.

The Court: As an expert, Mr. Pearce, could you tell from [fol. 423] those notes what that play meant in relation to what you knew of the Georgia offense?

The Witness: Well, this is not our screen pass. It is close to our screen pass. We screen to the other halfback, screen to him, and I think you have to—I don't know whether you can assume who "screen to him" is; if that is the plan on the fly, we didn't screen to him.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. What if it is the left halfback?

The Court: I will let him explain it. I think the Jury will understand it.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. If "him" is a left halfback, would that be an adequate description of a screen pass which you intended to use in the 1962 Georgia-Alabama game?

A. If "him" is the left halfback, yes.

Q. Directing your attention to Page 1 of the notes, would you give the Jury your opinion of the tackle on the '62 team named Rissmiller?

A. I have been asked about Rissmiller before.

Q. Let me point this out. I am asking your opinion as of the week before the 1962 Georgia-Alabama game and not as of the present time, because I don't think that would be pertinent.

A. Rissmiller was a starter for us, and he is the best we have, but if you say "greatest in history," as this is, and I really don't know what "greatest in history" means, but he did not start for us; he was the best we had.

[fol. 424] Q. Would you state your opinion as to whether or not it would be helpful to an opposing coach to know who your best lineman was?

Mr. Schroder: I don't think that is the way the note reads, Your Honor. The note reads "Reismueller greatest in history," and again he is putting something else in the notes that is not in the notes.

Mr. Joiner: I think that—

Mr. Schroder: It doesn't say he is the best lineman.

The Court: He is going into a question of adjectives. I will let him ask him. I don't know what your last question was.

Mr. Joiner: Let me restate that, Coach Pearce.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. Would you state your opinion as to whether or not it would be helpful to an opposing coach to know who your best lineman was?

A. I would say that; I would say that it would be helpful. You might want to run at him. During the game he might not be as good as he was supposed to be.

Q. Now, turning to Page 2 of the notes, third entry on that page, what was your opinion as of the week before the 1962 Georgia-Alabama game as to the state of the discipline [fol. 425] of the Georgia team? I realize it is hard to remember back that far, but if you would, just to the best of your recollection.

A. As I have stated before—as I have stated before on this question, I think there is a real wide meaning in discipline of a football team, what some people think discipline is and what other people think it is. Now, I stated before that as far as the ends were concerned, and I was concerned mainly with the ends, that before we played Alabama I thought our ends were well disciplined. In the Alabama game I thought they did some things they shouldn't have done, and I didn't think they were well disciplined during the football game.

Q. Had Georgia added two coaches just prior to the '62 season?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who were those coaches?

A. Coach Inman and myself.

Q. Directing your attention to the third page of the notes, the first entry on that page, "on side guard pulls on sweep," what does that mean to you, Coach Pearce?

A. Well, this note—excuse me, I am—what does this mean to the Georgia football team or what does this mean?

Q. What does it mean to you? I mean, what do we mean by saying this on side guard pulls—

A. Okay.

Q. I am trying to get across to the Jury what you mean by that, because they as well as I are not quite as familiar with football as you coaches are.

A. Well, assuming a—a sweep is a play that is designed to run inside of an end or outside of an end, depending on how he plays. If he goes out, you try to kick outside; if [fol. 426] he plays tight, you try to run around him. On a sweep, assuming you are running it to the right, if the on side guard pulls on a sweep, it would be the right guard pulling, and that—I think I explained a pull, when they step back and turn up the field in the hole open, the first place there is daylight to block any one of the opposing players that they come to first.

Q. Would you state your opinion as to whether or not it would be helpful to an opposing coach in preparing to defend against a sweep to know whether or not the on side guard might pull on the sweep?

A. It is an unusual thing. A lot of coaches would never pull an on side guard because of the danger of somebody shooting through that area and stopping the play, and we would only do it against certain defenses. Now, have I answered your question?

Q. I am not sure that you have. My question is whether or not in preparing a defense against a sweep it would be helpful to a coach to know that the on side guard might pull, but let me withdraw that and rephrase it in another way. Would it be helpful for a linebacker to be coached to be on the alert for an on side guard to pull on a sweep so that he would be able to shoot the slot or be watching for an opportunity to do so?

A. It would be helpful if the linebacker keyed on the guard; yes.

Q. Would you explain to the Jury what you mean by this phrase "shooting the slot"?

A. In football, in shooting the gap, if—we have the gap rule and I am sure that everybody has a gap rule, and if on our gap rule, if a guard takes too big a split and our guard feels like he can make it through the gap and get in the opposing team's backfield without being blocked by that [fol. 427] guard, we tell him to go ahead and shoot the gap. Now, that is—that is up to each guard each time. Now, was your question in reference to linemen or linebackers?

Q. A linebacker.

A. Linebackers, if they key the linemen they are playing against hard, in some cases are given the option to run through when a guard pulls or works down the line of scrimmage in the direction that he is pulled, because the guard is usually pretty good key on the direction he is going, and by "key" I mean what he does the defensive man reacts to that action.

Q. In other words, what you are saying is when the guard pulls out, there is a hole left there that the linebacker can run through and make a tackle; isn't that in essence what you are talking about?

Mr. Schroder: That isn't what he said, if it please the Court.

The Court: Mr. Schroder—

Mr. Schroder: If he is going to quote him, he ought to quote him. The witness says the linebacker follows the direction in which the guard is going, as I understood.

The Court: Just a moment.

The Witness: The linebacker—

[fol. 428] The Court: Go ahead. I think Coach Pearce can explain it.

The Witness: The linebacker in many cases will have an option of either running through the direction that the guard pulls from or working down the line the direction he pulls from. By working down the line I mean staying on his side of the line, and by running through I mean running through into the other team's backfield in the direction that the guard pulls.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. Would you state whether or not when you say "running through" you are referring to running through the hole that was left by the guard when he pulled out?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. Coach Pearce, I believe we were on the top entry, note 3, with reference to the on side guard. Would you state whether or not during the course of the 1962 Georgia-Alabama game a play was run by Georgia in which the on side guard did pull on a sweep?

A. Yes, sir. We pulled our guards twice in the game.

Q. Would you state whether or not to the best of your recollection that would be reflected in the film?

A. Yes, sir; it would have been.

Q. Now, directing your attention to the middle of that page, "Woodward commits fast, safety men"; who was your first string safety man for the Georgia-Alabama [fol. 429] game of '62?

A. Brigham Woodward.

Q. And would you give your opinion as to whether or not he did commit himself fast in—I am talking now about previous to the Alabama game and in the Alabama game?

A. Woodward was a sophomore in 1961, and sophomores have a tendency to commit fast. Let me say, first of all, he is a real good tackler. He does like to tackle. Woodward, we felt that Woodward committed maybe a little bit fast, but we were working on it; we were trying to correct it.

Q. Would you state to the Jury what you mean by a safety man committing fast?

A. Well, a safety man is supposed to prevent touchdowns and supposed to be the last man in your defense, and if he goes up to make a tackle and the runner would happen to get by him, it might be a touchdown, or if they faked a run into the line and threw a pass in his territory it might result in a touchdown or a long gain.

Q. Would you state whether or not to the best of your recollection there were instances in the 1962 Georgia-Alabama game in which Woodward did commit fast?

A. He made several tackles on the line of scrimmage; yes.

Q. And would you state whether or not to the best of your recollection that would be reflected by the films of the game?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, directing your attention to the next entry on that page, "weak defense, anybody except Blackburn"; how long did Blackburn play in the game?

[fol. 430] A. I can't answer that as to time. He didn't play very much.

Q. Would you state the reason for that?

A. Well, Blackburn, in practice before the Alabama game, was—kept getting pains in his stomach and did not practice very much, and so he just hadn't practiced enough to play very much.

Q. Would you state to the best of your recollection the date on which the coaching staff decided that Blackburn would not be used extensively in the game?

A. I can't answer that question at all, I don't believe, because I don't remember it.

Q. You don't remember the date on that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Assuming that this entry is with reference to pass defense, state your opinion as to whether or not this information would be helpful to Georgia's opponent in the opening game if Blackburn did not play very much during the game?

A. I'd say if Blackburn didn't play much during the game you could throw to anybody, to answer your question.

Q. Would you explain what you mean by that, what this entry means to you, and why you say you could throw to anybody?

A. Well, if—excuse me. If I answer your question, it says if Blackburn is not in the game and you say, "weak on pass defense, anybody except Blackburn," and Blackburn is not in the game, I would assume that would mean, and this is an assumption only, that everybody else is weak.

Q. And if it did mean that, would it be helpful to an opposing coach to know that in order to prepare his pass offense for the game?

[fol. 431] A. Well, if you thought the other team was real weak on pass defense you would plan to pass a lot.

Q. Now, directing your attention to the entry on the middle of Page 4, "long count, left half in motion"; would you state whether or not that has any significance with reference to any play which Georgia intended to use in the 1962 Georgia-Alabama game?

A. We used a long fly or long motion which put our halfback away from the formation before the ball was snapped. We practiced on it and we did use it on the Alabama game.

Q. Would that be reflected in the film?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, directing your attention to the entry on the top of Page 5, "Bear on hook to goal line"; assuming that that is made with reference to end Mickey Babb, would you state whether or not to the best of your recollection you had any such play in mind to use in the Alabama game, if the opportunity was present?

A. I have looked for our game plan and I haven't been able to find it on that, and we—Mickey Babb is six-four, and a real good target. I can't tell you "yes, that was definitely in our game plan"; I just can't answer that.

Q. Assuming that it was in your game plan, did you have an opportunity to use a play of this nature in the 1962 Georgia-Alabama game?

A. No, sir; we were never close to the goal line.

Q. Now, that next entry "slot to right, ends normal three yards"; assuming that to be a brief statement of slot to right, end is normally three yards, what would that mean? [fol. 432] A. Well, to me that would mean that if—if we are in a slot right, that our end would be split three yards, and that—if that meant that that was our slot—let me say that last part over. Our slot was a three-yard slot, and I—I don't know whether this means our formation or what it means right here.

Q. Would you state whether or not it comes close to describing one of the formations that was used by Georgia in this game?

A. That is exactly—if it is slot right, ends normal three yards, that is exactly our slot right formation; yes.

Q. No, Coach Pearce, does it make any difference in preparing to defend against a slot formation whether or not the end is split two, three, four, five or six yards?

A. Yes, sir; it makes a tremendous difference to the people playing in the wide positions, which are the ends, and the people that I coach for the Georgia team. We thought it was real important to have a three-yard slot. In fact, we stopped our practice several times and measured off, just walked three yards. When you say three yards, until you get out there and pace it off to the boys they don't really understand what a three-yard slot is, and if I—if I knew that a team was—would be in a three-yard slot, I could—I think could do a better job preparing my defensive ends for that slot formation.

Q. Would you state whether or not to the best of your recollection you had any difficulty in getting the ends to line up prior to the 1962 Georgia-Alabama game exactly in a three-yard split?

A. Yes; I stated that. Our offensive ends?

Q. Yes.

[fol. 433] A. Yes. I have already stated that. We had a hard time. Like I said, several instances in practice we stopped practice and we would walk off three yards from the outside foot of the tackle to the inside foot of the end so they could have another look at what three yards really was.

Q. Now, directing your attention to Page 6 of the notes, the second entry on that page, "can't quick kick"; would you state your opinion as to whether or not Georgia did have an authentic quick kick for the Alabama game?

A. Would you tell me what you mean by an authentic quick kick?

Q. Yes. Perhaps it would be better if you just describe the quick kick that they did have and tell the Jury how that differs from a quick kick that might be used in the normal formation.

A. We had a quick kick formation, and we quick kicked from that formation, and in that formation we had our line regular, we had wingbacks, two backs at each end, a fullback, and our kicker or—and in our case it was Jake Saye who was our kicker, and a quarterback lined up deep. He could quick kick from that formation, and he could—could throw a pass or we could run the ball, and when we —we call it a quick kick formation, and then we call it quick kick if we quick kicked.

Q. Would you state your opinion as to whether or not lining up in that formation would tip off the other team to the possibility of a quick kick or a kick of some type?

A. Well, Georgia and Tech are the only two teams I know that quick kick from that formation. There may be more; I just know of those two.

[fol. 434] Q. State your opinion as to whether or not the surprise element of quick kick is greater from a normal formation that it is from this formation that you have just related to the Jury?

A. I would say any time that you could come out in a regular formation and quick kick that it would be more of a surprise element; yes.

Q. Now, would you state whether or not Georgia was able, in the beginning of the 1962 season, to quick kick from the normal formation?

A. No, sir; we could not.

Q. Now, directing your attention to the last entry on that page, "Baer catches everything they throw"; assuming that to mean end Mickey Babb, would you state your opinion as to whether or not Mickey Babb was the best receiver on the team, and you understand now that I have reference to the period of time immediately prior to the Alabama game?

A. Mickey Babb is an excellent target, and I am sure that Rakestraw wanted to throw to him more than any other end.

Q. Would you state your opinion as to whether or not he was the primary target in the Georgia-Alabama game?

A. We threw to Babb more in that game than anybody else; yes.

Q. Now, directing your attention to Page 7, the entry which appears on the top of that page, "slot right, left ends out fifteen yards"; what does that mean to you, Coach Pearce?

A. Well, that means that you are in a slot on the right and your left end is split fifteen yards, and this is your pro formation.

Q. Now, Coach Pearce, would you state your opinion as [fol. 435] to whether most of this information contained in these notes relates to the offense to be used by Georgia or to the defense to be used by Georgia in the game?

A. I wish you—

Q. Let me withdraw that and rephrase it. Would you state your opinion as to whether or not most of the information on these notes relates to offense or defense? Maybe you'd like to briefly go over them.

A. No; no, I kind of understand what you are talking about; I understand what you are talking about. These notes, as far as I am concerned, concern the offense of the team that is being talked about.

Q. Now—

A. Mostly; I will add that.

Q. Coach Pearce, to the best of your recollection, how many yards did Georgia gain in the 1962 Georgia-Alabama game running?

A. I couldn't even come close to answering that. We didn't make very many.

Q. Could you give us a close approximation as to the total yards?

The Court: He said he couldn't come close to it.

Mr. Joiner: I was asking about passing and running.

The Witness: No, sir.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. Would you state whether or not Alabama had the ball—well, let me withdraw that and rephrase it. Would [fol. 436] you state your opinion as to whether or not Alabama was on offense in the 1962 Georgia-Alabama game more than the Georgia team was on offense?

A. We were on offense forty-six plays. I don't know how many plays they were on offense. There is usually about eighty plays, eighty-five. Seemed like—during the game seemed like they were on offense all the time, but that is not right. We were on offense forty-six times. I do not know how many times they were on offense.

Q. Coach Pearce, have you had an opportunity to review the films of the Georgia-Alabama—the Alabama Georgia Tech game for the 1962 season?

A. We studied the films before we played Georgia Tech, and I have seen them once since the season, but—and that's all.

Q. Who won that game?

A. Georgia Tech.

Q. Would you state to the jury to the best of your recollection how the game was won, what you remember of the closing minutes of the game?

Mr. Schroder: We have got into another game.

The Court: What's that got to do with this?

Mr. Joiner: Your Honor, I am not sure it's got any relevancy, but Mr. Schroder went into this game on the examination of Coach Inman on one or two points; I think it might throw some light on this case.

[fol. 437] Mr. Schroder: I don't remember Mr. Inman—

Mr. Joiner: I will withdraw the question.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. Coach Pearce, you have testified with reference to the various things revealed by this note. Would you give us your opinion as to whether or not some of the things reflected in this note are also reflected in the film of the 1962 Georgia-Alabama game?

A. We are in two formations, and I think we have answered this as we went through.

Q. We did on one or two particular ones, but I am not sure we covered it all. I wanted a general "yes" or "no" answer—

A. Yes; yes.

Q. —before we go into the film. Coach Pearce, I wonder if you would be good enough to show the film to the Jury, and during the course of the film, if you run across some particular play, formation or anything else that is referred to in these notes, if you would run that part again and point it out to the jury?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: Don't I get a little cross-examination here?

The Court: Sir?

Mr. Schroder: Don't I get some cross-examination here?

[fol. 438] The Court: Yes, sir; I will let you cross-examine him when he gets through with him.

Mr. Joiner: I believe the film is a part of our direct.

The Court: Yes, sir. I will let you cross-examine him and let you run the film back and question him about the film.

Mr. Schroder: Fine.

The Court: All right, sir. Let Coach Pearce—wherever is convenient for you, sir, to describe the plays to which you—

Mr. Joiner: I wonder if the Jury would be able to see.

The Witness: I will get a chair.

The Court: We have got to have the Court Reporter where he can get down what you say. When the screen is put up, I want to see whether you can see it.

Juror: So far, it looks fine.

[fol. 439] The Court: How about you?

Juror: This stand may be in the way, this podium.

The Court: Remove this podium, temporarily.

All right, we can turn off some lights when you get it adjusted. Are you ready?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: Will the marshal turn off—keep everyone out. Don't let anyone leave or anyone come in the court room.

The Marshal: Everyone remain seated, please.

The Court: All right, sir.

The Witness: The Georgia team will be in white; the Alabama in the dark jerseys. Georgia will kick off to Alabama.

This is Georgia kicking off, covering the kick. Alabama is on offense; Georgia is on defense.

Now, to establish things right now, this is what we call a slot left. Now, our left halfback is between the left end and the left tackle, and the distance between the left end and the left tackle is supposed to be three yards. Our [fol. 440] regular fullback is in his regular spot behind the quarterback and our right halfback is right.

This is our slot left formation in this picture, and in this motion, if we talked about fly or anything, when the left halfback leaves early like this, this is a fly motion.

Now, just to show you right here again, this is a slot right formation. The distance between the right end and the right tackle is supposed to be three yards. That is our right halfback over there, fullback is in his regular position, and now the left halfback is behind the left tackle in the backfield.

This is a slot right. Rakestraw throwing, and it was intercepted; Alabama's ball.

Alabama is on offense. They throw a touchdown pass to Williamson, first play. They had us 7 to 0.

Our first formation is a slot right. This is slot right. There is throw to Mickey Babb.

This is slot right.

This is another slot right. It is hard to see.

Now, for the first time in the game, is what we call our pro-formation. This is a pro left, and a situation in the backfield and the left end, the left tackle is the same as slot left. The only difference is that our right end is split.

And Mr. Joiner asked me to point out anything that was relative to the notes. This left halfback, number 35 is going in what we call long fly or long motion right now. He gets passed the other halfback by the time the ball is snapped right there. We had a penalty on this play; it was called back.

This is a punt formation. We tried to run the ball.

Next is a punt formation and we kicked the ball. Some real good kicking.

[fol. 441] Now, I think just to point out whether it is reaction but to point out, Woodward is coming into the picture right now on the right. He is our safety man. He comes up and gets on the pile, and I think that that is what people would call "commits fast".

Judge, do you want anything pointed out more than once?

The Court: No, sir.

Mr. Joiner: I think once is enough, if you feel like the Jury understands that the one time.

The Court: Is it necessary for you to show all the film to bring out your testimony or just certain portions?

The Witness: I'd like to show the fourth quarter to show the guards pulling on sweeps.

The Court: You show it the way you feel like.

The Witnesses: This is a slot right. Another slot right. The third is a slot right, and then we punt. This resulted in two points for them. Our center snapped the ball over the head of the kicker, Jake Saye, and he is tackled in the end zone. Gave them two points.

This is Georgia kicking off, a free kick.

That is the end of the quarter, and we will have to change reels now.

[fol. 442] The Court: All right, sir, turn back on the lights. Coach, do you have to illustrate—to illustrate your point, can you show the—I want you to show anything you might feel important, but is there anything pertinent to your testimony in the second quarter?

The Witness: They have seen the formations. That is up to Mr. Cody. I think one thing in the fourth quarter it shows the guards pulling on the sweep, and I believe that we can show our formation, show the guards pulling. You have seen Woodward already. I would think you could see everything with the fourth quarter.

Mr. Joiner: That would be acceptable, Your Honor.

The Court: I wanted to cut down on the time.

Mr. Joiner: Yes, sir. I believe it would be all right to go into the fourth quarter. That would be fine.

The Court: All right. Mr. Marshal, just shut the door and don't let anybody out or anybody in.

The Marshal: Everybody have seats, please; remain seated.

The Court: You ready?

[fol. 443] The Witness: Ready.

The Court: All right, sir, turn off the lights.

The Witness: Georgia again on defense.

Georgia receives, and our first formation will be pro right, and this is the first time in the—we have run it in the film before, but this is the first time it has been shown here.

This our pro formation to the right with our left end split, and in the Alabama game we moved our right end—not our right end; we moved Mickey Babb when he was in the game, was going to be our split end all the time.

Now, we have not established who "him" was in our screen pass, but this is our screen pass coming up here, our right halfback is on the long fly, and you can see it is a drop-back pass. I don't know who "him" is. We screened to our left halfback.

I will show you once more. This is our screened pass in the Alabama game, right half, long fly.

That is pro right ninety-nine.

Here is pro right ninety-nine, and on this play—now, on your right guard—well, we have an end; the right guard is pulling and leading up the hole. Right there he blocks on whoever this is, fifty-something. I don't know what his number is. That is our right guard and that is a pull on a sweep.

This is another one right next to this. And the number has an 8 on him, whoever it is that pulled. It is pro right ninety-nine again.

[fol. 444] This is pro left and this is a pass, a throw to Babb.

I think we have touched on everything right now, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, sir.

The Witness: If you want to—

The Court: All right, sir, cut back on the lights.

The Witness: You want me to run this back now or later?

The Court: No, sir; I imagine you have some more questions.

Mr. Joiner: I have one more question to ask him, please, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, sir.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. Coach Pearce, would you state whether or not to the best of your recollection Coach Wallace Butts attended any of the practice sessions prior to the 1962 Georgia-Alabama game?

A. I know that he was there sometimes; I don't know how many times. I know he was there.

[fol. 445] Mr. Joiner: No further questions, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, sir; go ahead, Mr. Schroder.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Mr. Pearce, when you were showing the film a moment ago you described the formations that Georgia was going into on each occasion. How did the formation Alabama was in differ from those Georgia was in?

A. Alabama used a slot and a pro formation also.

Q. Each time that they were on offense they were using the same formation Georgia was using when Georgia had the ball?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. If I remember correctly, the film showed the first time Georgia used the pro-set, they threw and completed a pass, didn't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And as I saw it from the screen, from the film, when Georgia used its screen pass they completed it and made a gain?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't look like anybody was too well defending those in the film that we saw, did it; they weren't expecting it or not.

A. I don't know whether they were expecting it or not.

Q. Well, I mean—

A. We made five yards on it.

Q. You made your play successfully, anyway, on each of [fol. 446] those two occasions I described?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the pro-set and also the screen?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the fourth quarter you showed us a scene there where you say the guard, the on side guard pulled and blocked the Alabama linebacker, I believe you said?

A. He blocked the linebacker on one occasion, and the next time he didn't block anybody.

Q. And missed his block the next time?

A. It didn't look like to me he even tried to block him.

Q. Anyway, the first time we used—when I say "We", I mean Georgia—the first time, as you related, the right side guard pulling on sweep, they gained yardage, didn't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Evidently Alabama wasn't expecting that gain?

A. Well, from the yardage he had made it was hard to gain on Alabama.

Q. The three instances I have described here we did gain on them, didn't we?

A. Yes, sir.

The Court: Would you talk out just a little bit louder, Mr. Schroder, I can't hardly hear you.

Mr. Schroder: Who, me?

The Court: Yes, sir. I can hear Coach Pearce all right. [fol. 447] Mr. Schroder: Excuse me, Your Honor. I apologize.

The Court: That's all right; I am kind of deaf.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Before I go into the details of these notes, only some of which Mr. Joiner discussed with you on direct-examination, there are one or two questions that I wish to put to you, Coach. Before I do that—and the first one is this. One of the notes, I believe it is the one on Page 5, we have been talking about slot formations here a moment ago, and I think the other formation that you have been talking about is known as the pro-set which Georgia used against Alabama and which Alabama used against Georgia. Is there anything in these notes that you have there which states that those are the two formations to be used against anybody?

A. No, sir; it describes the two formations.

Q. Is there anything in those notes that even indicates that those are the only two formations that one team was to use against the other?

A. It is only two formations that I know that are mentioned.

Q. I see. Is there anything in the notes that says, in effect, that these are the only two formations that will be used?

A. Mr. Schroder, I don't think it says that they are or are not going to be used.

Q. That's right, sir. You remember—you said that when your deposition was taken—let me get your deposition. Have you read your deposition since it was written up?

[fol. 448] A. Yes, sir; yes, sir.

Q. You remember this question being asked you then: "Was there anything in those notes to indicate that the party who was getting that information to rely upon that; was there anything stated that those were the only two formations Georgia was going to use?". And the answer was: "Not in the notes, no, sir." That is what your testimony is today, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, from those films you indicated also an instance in which Woodward committed himself fast, you said, because he made the tackle?

A. I don't believe he made the tackle; he came up—

Q. Came up?

A. —and piled on the tackle.

Q. And that is what he is supposed to do, isn't it, on a running play?

A. A safety man is primarily responsible to prevent touchdowns. If he pops loose, he is supposed to tackle him; yes, sir.

Q. But Mr. Woodward, on that occasion that you showed us on the film, kept himself between the ball carrier and the goal line?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is what his job is, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So there wasn't anything indicative about that scene because he was doing what he was supposed to do, wasn't he?

A. Lot of people in coaching never want their safety man to tackle a ball carrier within five yards of the line of scrimmage. I can't say what we do, because I do not coach the safety man.

Q. Well, are—did you mean to indicate by that film [fol. 449] there was something wrong with what Woodward was doing?

Mr. Cody: Speak a little louder, Coach.

Mr. Schroder: Me?

Mr. Cody: No.

The Witness: Were you talking to me, Mr. Cody?

The Court: Mr. Cody asked that you speak a little louder, if you could.

The Witness: Okay; yes, sir. In a press box you try to find people that are getting out of position. Whether he was out of position or whether he wasn't, he was up on the line of scrimmage and he is our last line of defense.

The Court: In other words, the point you are making, he shouldn't have been making the tackle on the line of scrimmage or piling on the line of scrimmage, being the safety man; is that correct?

The Witness: Unless the ball carrier broke aloose. If there is nobody there to tackle him, we would hope he would tackle him. We would—

The Court: He wouldn't make the tackle on the line of scrimmage if the ball carrier broke aloose, would he?

[fol. 450] The Witness: No, sir; he would not.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. The point, Coach, is that if the safety man keeps the ball carrier between himself and the Georgia goal line, he is performing his job, isn't he?

A. If the man is a ball carrier, if it is not a fake to a man, if the man is a ball carrier; yes.

Q. Let me be more specific and refer to the play—the specific play that you pointed out when the film was being shown. The quarterback on that instance, or the safety man on that instance was doing what he was supposed to do, was he not, or do you feel qualified to answer, since you said you weren't coaching the backfield?

A. That's right. On that very play I'd feel—I'd say I am not qualified to answer that question.

Q. Let me ask you, if you had information for example, that the Alabama safety man committed fast and you were preparing the University of Georgia to play Alabama on the following Saturday, and you relied on that information, what would you be inclined to do insofar as preparing your offense, the passing offense is concerned?

A. I think you'd try to take advantage of that.

Q. You would try to take advantage of that weakness, wouldn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you have seen these films, some—how many times, eighteen or nineteen times?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right, sir. When you—when you say, for example, that Babb is your best target and he is therefore thrown [fol. 451] more passes than the others, he was thrown quite a few passes in the Alabama game—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —and in many instances he was in position to catch them, was he not, and he just dropped them? Make sure, I am not being critical of Babb; I am just stating a fact.

A. He had, I will say, several; that doesn't mean any certain number.

Q. Speak up, please, sir.

A. He had several chances to catch the ball and did not catch it; yes, sir.

Q. The reason he did not catch it, however, was not because somebody had him well defended, but because he dropped it; isn't that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If someone called you or someone gave you information which you thought you could rely upon preparing Georgia to play Georgia Tech, and they told you that Georgia Tech had in its line the greatest tackle in the history of Georgia Tech, and you relied upon that information, how would you prepare your running game that you were going to use against Georgia Tech in your next week's game?

A. Mr. Schroder, we—I think we established this before that that didn't mean Rissmiller was the greatest lineman. I mean, I would just like to check back and see what's established.

The Court: He wasn't asking you that question. He was asking you—

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. I am asking you, from the notes here, sir, this is in- [fol. 452] formation that was supposed to have been in the notes, "Reismueller, greatest in history;" all right, sir, you are the coach of the University of Georgia, and I know something about Georgia Tech, information has reached me that you don't know, and I tell you that Georgia Tech has the greatest tackle in the history of the school by the name of Mr. Jones, plays left tackle. How would you react if you felt you could rely upon that information in preparing your offense for the forthcoming Georgia Tech game?

A. I—now, we are assuming the same position as Alabama and Georgia, that there were no films to look at?

Q. Name any school.

A. No; I just wanted—no films to look at, just from what somebody tells you?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Well, I am sure I wouldn't set my basic offense to run at this person. I—I might instruct—I think I would instruct my quarterback that in situations where we needed yardage not to run at this person.

Q. Now, you have reviewed these films on any number of times, I think fifteen or seventeen, a number of times?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Alabama direct its running plays away from Rissmiller?

A. I don't believe that they—I think they ran them wherever they wanted to.

Q. Rissmiller unfortunately was the target on several occasions and unfortunately he didn't make too many tackles, did he, again being sure for the record I am not being critical?

[fol. 453] A. I understand that. I will answer that "yes", and then I will qualify it by saying this, that Rissmiller, along with several other boys in that football game, were sophomores, and it is a tough job for a sophomore to open against Alabama.

Q. There is no question about that, sir; we are in a hundred per cent accord on that, but my point is really this. If this information that is listed in this note was given about Rissmiller being the greatest in history, and Alabama taking this information, they did not indicate by the way they had their running plays going that they were relying on this information, did they?

A. No, sir. They just ran every place.
Q. Just ran right at him like they did anybody else?
A. Yes, sir.

LEROY PEARCE having resumed the stand, testified further as follows:

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Coach Pearce, during the first half of the Alabama-Georgia game, do you know how many times Georgia did use the pro-set?
A. No, sir; but I can check it, if you'd like me to.
Q. Do you have anything to check it by?
A. Yes, sir. Five times.
Q. Five times?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. On four out of those five times it was used successfully, wasn't it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. During the half Alabama changed its defense to be [fol. 454] used against the pro-set in the second half, didn't they?
A. No, sir; they never changed their defense until we started running into the sidelines late in the fourth quarter.
Q. Well, during the first half, do you know whether—what player Alabama had out guarding the split end?
A. They had their rover man, that is, Williamson; he was an end.
Q. Do you know during the first half they had Jordon out there on occasion also?
A. No, sir.
Q. You don't know that, sir?
A. No, sir.
Q. But you do know—

The Court: You mean you don't know it or they didn't have him out there?

The Witness: Well, what I—I—I would—I would have to see it right now to believe it.

Mr. Schroder: Sure.

The Court: I didn't understand your answer.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Who is Jordan?

A. Sir?

Q. Who is Jordan? Is it Leroy Jordan?

A. Yes, sir; Alabama center.

Q. Center?

[fol. 455] A. Linebacker; yes, sir.

Q. Is he a fairly good ball player?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is the one, I think, that made All American?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As I said, you did testify, though, after you have examined your notes, that on four out of the five times that Georgia used the pro-set in the first half it was done successfully?

A. Yes, sir. And we say we made ground, that is successful.

Q. That is really the object, to gain ground?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When the film was being shown here before we had the luncheon recess you referred every time that Georgia was on offense what formation they were in as slot right or slot left?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, during that same quarter you did not, of course, say anything about what formations Alabama was in when it was on offense, but do you recall what formations they were in?

A. They were in the exact same formation.

Q. So, if you were looking at the film and describing what formations Alabama was in, you would be saying slot right, slot left, or pro-set?

A. Pro right or pro left.

Q. Pro right or pro left?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the running of the film, I don't recall that you described any particular play that Georgia was running off of the formation that it happened it be in, but let me ask you this. You did see both Georgia on offense, as we did, and Alabama on offense during the first quarter and the [fol. 456] last quarter. Now, did you see any plays that Alabama used that Georgia does not also have in its repertoire, or would you have to look at it again?

A. Well, I can say this, that Alabama ran a hand-off and we didn't.

Q. A Hand-off?

A. And that is just one play.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. But I—I—I wouldn't want to say.

Q. Without looking at them again?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What, please, Coach, is the difference in pulling a guard on a sweep and a switch block?

A. Well, now—

Q. Do you know the definition of switch block; you know what that means?

A. Well, now, we did not use a switch block. We used a swing block, and I think that is probably what you are referring to.

Q. All right, sir. What is a swing block?

A. A swing block—you are going to change assignments—

Q. Yes, sir.

A. —and the tackle is going to block down and the guard is going to pull around the tackle and block in that area.

Q. Block in the tackle's area?

A. Tackle's area.

Q. The tackle's zone, really?

A. I—I would say that that is probably correct.

Q. What is happening, then, on a swing block, for example, the man on the other team that the guard is supposed to block is on his outside shoulder, and with the play going that way, the guard can't block him, so he and the [fol. 457] tackle switch assignments with the tackle out here; he blocks the man that the guard was supposed to block but couldn't, and the guard blocks the man the tackle was supposed to block when he takes—when they switch the assignments; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir. He will pull around the tackle and—he will pull around the tackle and block the first he sees.

Q. What is the difference between that which you describe as swing block and pulling a guard on a sweep?

A. If you pull a guard on a sweep, you tell him to pull up the first place there is daylight, and if you swing a man, he would actually have—if there is a man on the tackle, he would block the first man he came to.

Q. All right, sir. If Coach Griffith testified yesterday pulling a guard on a sweep meant that that guard was supposed to pull out on a sweep meant that that guard was supposed to pull out and lead interference for the ball carrier, is that your understanding of what pulling a guard on a sweep is?

A. Yes, sir. I would say that in addition to that that the guard—most guards are taught to pull up the first place they get a chance to pull up through the line.

Q. But they are—they are really, when they are pulling on a sweep, running interference for the ball carrier, aren't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is different than the procedure we have just described as a swing block?

A. Well, ask me the question again, please.

Q. Swing blocks are used not only on sweep plays but on [illegible]y play that might—well, off tackle play, they use a swing [fol. 458] block, do they not; they switch assignments when the guard is on the outside of my shoulder and I can't block him in?

A. Any play that is outside; yes, sir.

Q. On a sweep play, that is when, as you have described it a moment ago and as Coach Griffith described it yesterday, when you pull a guard on a sweep, you are pulling him out to lead interference for the ball carrier?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right, sir. Now, are you sure that Georgia has now or had—well, "has now" would be unimportant. Are you sure that Georgia had, in 1962, a play such as a sweep where they pulled their on side guard to lead the interference for the ball carrier?

A. Mr. Schroder, I think you are real technical there. I would think at any time a guard pulls around a tackle it would be a pull.

Q. Well, you are using it—you are using it to describe a swing block?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To you "pulling the guard" means to swing?

A. If you had—if—he would tell the tackle to block down and tell the guard to pull on around the tackle and block.

Q. It is a switching of assignments. You mean pulling him to lead interference; they are the same thing?

A. Well, I think it is a real technical point in the fact that a guard on a sweep may turn up way inside if he sees daylight.

Q. All right, sir. Before we go back to the film here, I want to ask you a question with reference to your description of the slot right or slot left with the split end three yards out, and you said that you had some difficulty getting [fol. 459] the Georgia ends to understand what three yards was, amounted to?

A. Yes, sir. We in practice several times—a lot of times or several times, any amount, we would stop the play because the end would be too wide or too tight and go over to the tackle and step off three yards and tell him that is where he should be.

Q. Well, now, in the film which you have seen often, did you not notice that the end on slot right or the end on slot left was varied in his position sometimes two yards from the tackle and on other times five yards from the tackle?

A. Well, he wasn't supposed to be. He is supposed to be three yards—I will tell you, it is real hard to tell from the film because of the angle of the camera.

Q. You saw the game yourself from the press box, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you say that Georgia's ends were always three yards?

A. No, sir; they were not always three yards. They were supposed to be.

Q. Don't you know that on many occasions that the end, Mickey Babb, moved his position from three out to five, back to two in order to take care of the offensive—I means, the defensive end playing opposite him?

A. Well, I think that would come under the discipline that we talked about earlier. He should have been three yards.

Q. But you know that he wasn't, don't you?

A. No, sir.

Q. You were watching from the press box?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 460] Q. You say he was three yards on every time?

A. He was—he—no, I will not say that. He should have been three yards.

Q. I know, but I am—in the game he wasn't doing what you had coached him to do, though, was he?

A. If he was supposed to be—he was supposed to be exactly three yards, and I will assume that he may have been two yards or he may have been four yards; yes, sir.

Q. All right, sir. Well, then, if that is correct, then he is not doing what the notes indicated that he ought to have done, is he?

A. If he was supposed—if he was supposed to be a three-yard end every time; no, sir.

Q. And if whoever was being told this was relying on that, then he wouldn't be getting much benefit out of it, would he, if he was relying on him being three yards so he could set up his defenses to meet it but the man didn't know what the note said he was going to do, that—that is not too good, is it?

A. Well, I think that we would have to sit down and—

Q. All right, sir.

A. You can't tell from the film, but I think that he was three yards most of the time.

Q. He is going to be here as a witness. The matter which we discussed before lunch about the first touchdown which was shown on the screen that Williamson scored, the homerun—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —the man assigned to defend him on that play was a man who was not in your plan as a defensive player, was he?

A. The man assigned—the man assigned was not; that is correct.

[fol. 461] Q. The man assigned to defend Williamson on that play had hardly played any defensive football at all, had he?

A. Now, we are speaking of practice, because he had never played in a football game before, college game.

Q. Well, on practice; you didn't practice him on defense, did you?

A. Not very much; just so we could line him up.

Q. On defense against the Alabama pro-set did Georgia employ the same defense or type of defense that Alabama employed against Georgia's pro-set?

A. Alabama was using the rover defense, and we were using the overshifted six. They used a rover man to the wide side of the field most of the time, and we overshifted most of the time. We just overshifted to the slot away from the split end most of the time.

Q. Did you change that at the half?

A. No, sir; we just tried to get our ends to play it better.

Q. Sir?

A. No, sir; we tried to get our ends to play it better.

Q. You used the word "overshifted"; Georgia employed an overshift in its defense against Alabama?

A. We used—we used a half a man overshift; yes, sir.

Q. Did Alabama use an overshift in its defense against Georgia?

A. They used a full overshift; yes, sir.

Q. Both teams were then using overshifts?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Without going into too much detail, I want you, if you can remember from having seen the film, it was not [fol. 462] shown today, the part I am now talking about; when Alabama scored its second touchdown, do you remember how that—

A. I remember just exactly how it happened.

Q. Would you describe it to us, please, sir?

A. They were in a pro left; they had the right end split.

Q. Pro left, right end split?

A. With a right end split.

Q. That was the same formation they scored their first touchdown off of, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The same formation when they scored their second touchdown, the pro left, right end split?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then what happened?

A. And they drove their end deep on our halfback and turn him in towards the middle between our halfback and safety man. The halfback came out in the flat about six yards down the field, and our end started to be playing off, did not stay off but started to rush the passer and left the right halfback wide open, and then they threw the pass.

Q. And they threw to him and it was a touchdown?

A. Yes, sir. He ran on over with the ball.

Q. So, unfortunately, that resulted from a Georgia error on the part of its end play?

A. On the part of its end and halfback play; yes, sir.

Q. All right, sir. You remember the next touchdown Alabama scored, how that was scored?

A. I don't know the play it was on, but—

Q. Well, wasn't it off of the same formation, Georgia's pro-set, pro left?

A. They scored another—they scored another play; I [fol. 463] am sure they went over the one yard line on the same type play with the split end and turning into the middle and catching a low pass. It was the same type formation; yes, sir.

Q. Was the end, the Georgia end, also supposed to cover the flat on that?

A. Well, Mr. Schroder, let me straighten that up.

Q. All right, sir.

A. Our end was given the opportunity to play in three different spots. He was either, as we call it, in a triangle, which means between the tackle and the end about four or five yards off the line of scrimmage; he could go out to the inside shoulder of the end and play out there. Or he could move back in and rush the passer. Now, it is a guessing game, so I don't think that you could say he is wrong. Maybe he didn't do the right thing on that play, but I don't think you can say he is wrong.

Q. Well, I haven't said he was wrong. I was using your language when you said that the touchdown resulted from the—

A. The first touchdown when he was off the line of scrimmage and started to rush; yes, sir; the second time he was on the line of scrimmage and forced and the ball was thrown over.

Q. Do you know of any play that Georgia has that Alabama doesn't have?

A. I couldn't answer that question. I don't know Alabama's plays.

Q. Have you seen about every play Georgia used also used by Alabama or other teams that you played during 1962?

A. I would say that most teams with the same formations will have very similar plays.

Q. All right, sir. Most teams in the Southeastern Con- [fol. 464] ference do have the formations that we are talking about now, the pro-set and the slot?

A. I would assume that's correct; yes, sir.

Q. All that use the "T" formation, that is?

A. Everybody except Tennessee.

Q. Everybody except Tennessee uses the "T" formation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You said this morning that during the middle of the season it would be impossible to change a formation—

A. No, sir.

Q. —or make a drastic change. If I have misstated the answer you gave, correct me.

A. The thing I said is it would be almost impossible to make a drastic change in your offensive plan or defensive plan in one week, I mean, just completely come out with something new.

Q. Yes, sir. You are familiar with the fact that Alabama did change its offensive pattern in the middle of the season or towards the end and got a whole new formation that they used in the game against Tech?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Tech did the same thing against Alabama?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They both went into a spread on the same day?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And neither had used a spread before?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know that both called it the same thing?

A. Called it—no, sir.

[fol. 465] Q. It had the same name, both Tech and Alabama, for their spread formation?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, you didn't know. Let me return to the notes, now, please, sir, before I ask you some questions about the film. There were quite a few questions asked you—

Mr. Schroder: Excuse me.

The Court: Do you want some water, sir?

The Witness: No, sir; thank you.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. You were asked quite a few questions about them this morning, and I want to make sure your answer is as you want it to be in the record. The first note on the first page, in fact, the only note on the first page having to do with this matter is "Reismueller, greatest in history", and you and I have, I believe, discussed that.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That insofar as you know he is not the greatest in history to attend Georgia?

A. Georgia; yes, sir.

Q. On top of the second page there is a note "Rakestraw to right". Now, does that mean anything to you?

A. It means absolutely nothing.

Q. The next note reads "optional left pass if can block man on corner, keeps running". Now, do you know what [fol. 466] Georgia's optional left pass play is?

A. We didn't have pass pattern we called the optional left.

Q. Coach Griffith said that yesterday until he looked at a 1961 game plan, and they did use an optional left pass.

A. I am talking about 1962. We did not have—we did not have—what did you want me to answer?

Q. With reference to that second note "optional left pass if can block man on corner, keeps running"; does that mean anything at all to you?

A. To just—as far as it is concerned to me, if it meant—let me answer it this way. We didn't have that as a pass pattern, but if an optional pass was called, I assume a quarterback would run with the football if he was blocked; you would hope he would.

Q. You say you did not have that optional left pass, Georgia had no play like that in 1962?

A. No, sir. We had a—we had a—let me qualify that. We had a roll-out pass which, if it is a run or pass, some people call it an option to run or option to pass. We had that.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. But if the pass is called "optional left pass", we did not have that and would not mean anything to me.

Q. That would mean the quarter back would have an option as to which end to throw to down the field, the tight end or close end, being the right, and crossing over, or the left end down deep?

A. Well, if you said "optional" to me, it would mean that the quarterback is going to run or throw or else have two or three receivers downfield to throw; yes, sir.

Q. All right, sir. But you say Georgia had nothing like [fol. 467] that in their plans for Alabama?

A. Again, it is a technical point. We did not have a play we called "optional left pass". Anytime the quarterback drives out with the football, it is an option.

Q. But you did not have an optional left pass; that is the way the note reads, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I think you discussed with Mr.—maybe with me, the next note, which is "well disciplined ball club".

A. Yes, sir; have discussed it with you.

Q. And unfortunately Georgia was not well disciplined during the game? Alabama—the next one we have already talked about on top of Page 3, "on side guard pulls on sweep". The next note is "don't overshift", and you have already testified that both Georgia and Alabama were overshifting their defenses; that's correct, isn't it? You testified to that?

A. I testified that both Georgia and Alabama did overshift their defenses.

Q. All right, sir. Now, the next note is "Woodward commits fast, safety man". We have agreed that Woodward is the type of man who likes to get in and make a tackle?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, if that sort of information—did we discuss this before lunch?

A. I don't believe we discussed it; we have discussed it.

Q. "Woodward commits fast, safety man"; that would indicate to you, as Alabama's Coach, that perhaps you would take advantage of it by throwing a pass into his zone because he had committed himself by coming up? Do [fol. 468] I make myself clear?

A. Yes, sir; you are very clear, very clear.

Q. Well, now, I believe you testified that Alabama did not take advantage of that—of the fact that Woodward committed himself fast because they threw no passes into his area?

A. That is exactly correct.

Q. All right, sir. Next one on Page 3, last one on Page 3 is "weak defense, anybody except Blackburn".

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I believe your testimony this morning was that he had been ill or was ill and didn't play but five minutes?

A. I didn't put any time on it.

Q. Very shortly?

A. Very little; yes, sir.

Q. Well, just as a matter of, say you are an expert, if someone were trying to help somebody in a game and this fellow was the best man and he was sick, I'd be inclined to tell the opponent he was sick and he didn't have to worry about him, wouldn't you?

A. If he wasn't going to play and he know it, I would think that would be pretty good.

Q. He was sick for some week or so around there on the field, was he not?

A. Yes, sir; he was sick during our practice before the Alabama game.

Q. During practice?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The next entry on top of Page 4, "Babb, slot right, split right end out"; that is anything in that note that means anything more than slot right?

A. No, sir.

Q. If you are in slot right, the right end has to be split [fol. 469] out, doesn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Nothing unusual about that; everybody that uses that slot does it that way, don't they?

A. That is a slot?

Q. A Slot.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And everybody who uses the "T" formation uses a slot, as you know of here in the Southeastern Conference?

A. I assume so; yes, sir.

Q. That wasn't something new?

A. Slot formation?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Oh, no.

Q. Wasn't new at Georgia?

A. No, sir.

Q. "Long count" is the next note on Page 4, "left half in motion". Now, I think that was pointed out by you on the film at one time; didn't you say a man—

Q. Isn't that a "garden variety" play by teams using the "T" formation?

A. Say it once more, please.

Q. There is nothing unusual; that is a common play?

A. It has come back in in the last few years and most people use it.

Q. Most people use it anyway, don't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Alabama was using it against Georgia, weren't they?

A. I am not sure whether they used the overpass on us or not.

Q. Sir?

A. I am not sure that they used what we call the over-[fol. 470] pass or long motion on us.

Q. This note I mentioned doesn't read "pass"; it reads "long count, left half in motion".

A. I am not sure they used a long motion against us.

Q. You would have to check the film for that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But if they didn't use it, they would be one of the few that were not using it in the Southeastern Conference, wouldn't they, Alabama?

A. Yes.

Q. Next note is "best since Trippi, Porterfield". Of course, that is a matter of opinion, but you don't know—you know Charlie Trippi, but did you ever see him play?

A. We have discussed this before in the deposition. As I told you, I had seen him in a couple of films. I had never seen any of the interim football players and I would have no way to judge.

Q. You knew Trippi was also an excellent defensive player?

A. Well, I have heard that he was an excellent defensive football player; yes, sir.

Q. And Porterfield is the one unfortunately who was in the Alabama game supposed to be covering Williamson on that first pass and he wasn't supposed to be in there on defense?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is not a defensive player, is he?

A. Well, no, sir.

The Court: What was your last question?

[fol. 471] Mr. Schroder: "He is not a defensive player?"

The Court: Oh.

Mr. Schroder: Speaking of Porterfield.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. On Page 5, the top note, "Babb on a hook on the goal line"; is there anything unusual about that play?

A. No, sir.

Q. Everybody hooks on the goal line if they are going to pass to the man; they use a hook?

A. Well, yes; yes.

Q. They have that?

A. You don't have as much yardage.

Q. That's right; you can't go down and out. You have only got ten yards; you have to turn around and hook?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Sir?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The next one is the one I believe we have discussed at some length, "slot to right, ends normal three yards"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. There is one thing about that entry, it says "e-n-d-s", "ends normal", which to me would mean he would have both ends split three yards. Does Georgia have any formation where both ends are split three yards?

A. No, sir.

Q. The next note, "right halfback on fly, left half back [fol. 472] quarterback gives to left half, left guard pulling blocks on corner." Does Georgia have any such play like that in their repertoire?

A. I think our countertrap would have to be checked on that; I am not sure.

Q. Well, does that mean anything to you?

A. As it is written, no.

Q. Sir?

A. As it is written, no.

Q. On top of Page 6, I don't believe you have discussed this note.

A. No, sir.

Q. Everybody brings in wide slots when they get down to the goal line, because you need all your power toward the center of the line?

A. To keep people from shooting inside; yes, sir.

Q. That's right. That is a common variety formation, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you discussed this next note at some length on direct-examination, and all it says, "can't quick kick". Mr. Burnett added to that Georgia has nobody that can quick kick. Now, without—nothing said here about what formations you are in when you quick kick, is there?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, that is an untrue statement, then, because Georgia can quick kick and does quick kick, doesn't it?

A. Yes; we quick kick.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. From the quick kick formation.

Q. That's right. But this says simply they can't quick kick, and that is not true, is it?

A. We can quick kick from a quick kick formation.

[fol. 473] Q. Therefore, what? This is not true, is that right?

A. Not true.

Q. Not true. The next one, I believe, we discussed also. You discussed with Mr. Joiner on Page 6—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —"slot right, right half on fly, screen to him." Georgia does not have that play in its offensive plan, does it?

A. Did we ever decide who "him" was?

Q. Let me put it to you this way. How many individuals are mentioned in the notes?

A. The right halfback is mentioned.

Q. It refers to one individual and that is the right half?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the "him" would have to refer to the only one that is mentioned, wouldn't you think?

A. If it refers to the right halfback, we do not have the play right.

Q. Is there anyone mentioned in there other than the right half?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, then, Georgia does not have the play described in that note, does it?

A. Not that screen pass; no, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, if someone was trying to give Alabama some information on what Georgia's offense was and gave them that information, and they spent two weeks planning, working their boys in defending against that play, and it turned out at the game they didn't throw to the man the note says they are going to throw it to but threw it way out the other side, that would be nice, would it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Throws it the opposite way? Your screen pass calls [fol. 474] for an opposite way than the way this is written, doesn't it?

A. Opposite direction; yes, sir.

Q. Opposite direction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right, sir. The next one reads, "29-0 Series, Babb catches everything they throw." As I understand it, Georgia does not even have a series known as 29-0 Series?

A. No, sir.

Q. I think it was testified to, however, yesterday, that Georgia has what is known as an 029?

A. 029, yes, sir.

Q. And that is known as the outside belly?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is when the quarterback gets the ball, comes out here half into the other back's belly and half into his, and they decide when they get to the line of scrimmage who is going to take it, in effect?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. "Babb catches everything they throw" couldn't—do they ever throw off of that 029?

A. I didn't think that is what you were going to say.

Q. Do they ever throw off of outside—

A. We don't have—for the Alabama game we did not have an 029 pass.

Q. All right, sir.

A. We had an 037, which is—which is the pass that comes off—

Q. Comes off the other end?

A. I mean, you have to assume a lot there.

Q. Certainly you did not have a 29-0 series for the Alabama game and you did not have an 029 pass for the Alabama game?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 475] Q. Well, I think you anticipated the next one. Mickey Babb does not catch everything that is thrown?

A. I thought you would ask me that. No; he did not catch everything. I wish he did.

Q. I wish he did too. The next one on Page 7, I think we have talked about that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is a common variety formation, "slot right, left end out fifteen yards" known as the pro—that would be called a pro left—no, that is a pro right?

A. We call it pro right.

Q. Pro right. And that is a common variety formation for all teams using the "T" formation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there is nothing in these notes to indicate that that formation or any two formations are to be used by any team being discussed, nothing in the notes to that effect?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, the final note having to do with a defense, "drop end off, contains with tackle". That is the—what you were describing a moment ago that Georgia was doing?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When Alabama scored the second and third touchdowns, because the ends—well, the first time the end didn't —was out of position, let's put it that way?

A. Yes, sir; he was wrong; yes, sir.

Q. And, any way, Alabama used that same thing against Georgia, did they not? Well, I saw it in the film.

A. I am not trying to—I am just—with their monster [fol. 476] formation, they—well, yes, sir; they would have contained for tackle.

Mr. Schroder: All right, sir. Your Honor, let me confer just a minute here.

The Court: All right, sir. Let me ask a question.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. I am certainly no authority. Did Saye play quarterback?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Rakestraw play quarterback?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Anytime you got ready to punt, Saye had to be in?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Rakestraw never punted?

A. No, sir.

Q. So, on an ordinary formation, on a "T" formation the quarterback stands right behind the center, doesn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you had nobody who could quick kick other than Saye when he was in there.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Therefore he couldn't be immediately behind the center?

A. Correct.

Q. He would have to be at least two, three, or four yards, how far?

[fol. 477] A. We placed him six yards.

Q. Six yards?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So he couldn't run from a true "T" formation, quarterback position, Saye couldn't, and punt?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Can any other quarterback?

A. No, sir.

Q. It is physically impossible, isn't it?

A. Correct.

Q. When you kick the center right in the—if you did it—

The Court: Isn't it possible sometimes, or how do you true quick kick; if you had a halfback you could quick kick?

The Witness: If you had a halfback to quick kick, there is two ways to do it. One, you can give him a direct snap between the center's legs and between the quarterback's legs too, and he sidekicks. The quarterback can take the ball, pitch it to him, and he can take a sidestep and kick it. We could do that—if we could do it we could do it out of our slot or pro formations, but we can't.

Mr. Schroder: We had it over there about two years ago when Bobby Walden tried to quick kick, Your Honor; I [fol. 478] think you have seen this; and he kicked it right into the fullback's back.

The Court: I remember that.

Mr. Schroder: You remember that?

The Court: How does Georgia Tech quick kick, or do you know?

The Witness: They have always quick kicked with their fullback.

The Court: The quarterback would be the—would be standing right behind the center?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: And so—under that condition there would be an element of surprise, wouldn't there?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: Which is the chief weapon of a quick kick, isn't it? I mean, a chief point?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

[fol. 479] By Mr. Schroder:

Q. When you got Saye back there to quick kick, they can't defend against the quick kick, because they know he can run and they know he can pass, don't they?

A. Correct.

Q. They don't know he is going to quick kick, do they?

A. No, sir.

Q. And they better not plan on him quick kicking; it will pass right over their heads, won't it?

A. I would hope it would; yes.

Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir; that's all.

The Court: You don't have any further questions? Any further questions?

Mr. Cody: No, sir.

Mr. Schroder: I was going back on the film; I will wait, I mean, when my side is coming up.

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Joiner: No questions, Your Honor.

The Court: Thank you, sir.

[fol. 480] (Whereupon the witness was excused from the stand.)

The Court: All right, sir, call your next witness.

Mr. Cody: We rest our case, Your Honor.

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR DIRECTED VERDICT

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor, under the rulings of the Court, as Your Honor well knows, the Court has ruled that the Defendant in this case had the burden of proving the truth of the charges against the Plaintiff as complained of by the Plaintiff in this article. I know that Your Honor has read the article very carefully, as all of us have, and I know that Your Honor is, therefore, very familiar with the charges that the Defendant made against the Plaintiff.

They charged him, just for the purpose of summarizing briefly, they charged him with being a fixer and a rigger, with having fixed and rigged the game against—between the University of Georgia and the University of Alabama in 1962 by furnishing all of the vital secrets and information concerning the Georgia plays, both offensive and defensive, to Coach Bryant. It also charged him with being corrupt, and, as Your Honor well knows, we allege in the Plaintiff's Petition that the innuendoes in the article are such that it charges that the Plaintiff did these things and furnished this information as a gambling device and thus [fol. 481] implied, of course, that the Plaintiff either was gambling himself on the game or that he was doing so for the purpose of some gambling procedures.

Now, we take the position that under the Court's ruling, what they call their plea of justification, that they had the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence under the law that those things are true. I think when you analyze the things that they have shown by the testimony that they have introduced that the very most that can be said about it, that is, if anything in the way of proof, is that if the information was furnished as they contend, then all that it did in any way according to their own witnesses would have been helpful, and I think that is the word that their witnesses used, "would have helped the opposing team."

Now, the fact is that all that they say about those notes is that—as I understand it, and I am terribly handicapped myself because I don't know very much about football, and I admit it, but, as I understand it, about all they really say about those notes is that they reflect two coaches; Griffith and Inman, indications of two formations. I don't believe that the notes use the word "formations" at all, but the contents, the charges in the article referred to Georgia's plays both offensive and defensive, and certainly that indicates that they—that they claim that Wally Butts furnished the Georgia plays, and certainly it was in the plural as used in the article which carries the implication that he furnished Georgia's plays they intended to use.

The Court: Mr. Lockerman, let me ask you this question. Didn't Coach Griffith, and Coach Inman, and didn't [fol. 482] Coach Pearce testify that in their opinions those notes would have been helpful in defenses against Georgia's plays? Wasn't that the gist of their testimony, or am I wrong?

Mr. Lockerman: That they would have been helpful in —what did you say?

The Court: Helpful in defending against Georgia's offensive; substantially, isn't that what they testified? Isn't that the gist of their testimony?

Mr. Lockerman: It may be that they did say what amounts to something along that line, but—

The Court: And if they had had that information, one of them testified this, that if they had had this information, as an Alabama coach it would have been helpful, they thought it would have been helpful to them.

Mr. Lockerman: Let's go just a little bit further, though. They said that it would be helpful in what respect? It would have been helpful in the respect that Alabama would have used, say, less time in their practice because they would not have, say, gone through as many formations. But, one of them, specifically—I do not remember—I do not remember which one, but he said, even then, before completing the practice for that game they would have practiced all the formations that they had in their repertoire.

[fol. 483] Now, if all it is going to do is save a little time for the University of Alabama in some practice sessions, If that means that they are going to practice one hour instead of—I don't know whether they practice an hour or whether they practice a great deal, but the whole question is, does that amount to having fixed and rigged this ball game which the Post charges them with doing?

Now, just to be helpful, I think that two coaches talking together about football in general, and certainly that is the position of the Plaintiff in this case or would be the position of the Plaintiff in this case, that coaches do talk about football in general, and if you talk about football in general you are apt to get something helpful in that discussion. I would think that would be the reason they would talk about it.

The Court: My recollection, Coach Griffith said he didn't think—one of the coaches, maybe it wasn't Griffith, said he didn't think that coaches would discuss particular plays prior to a particular game.

Mr. Lockerman: But when you go through these notes, as has been done by Mr. Schroder on cross-examination, I think that when you sum it all up, that what each one of these coaches has, in effect, said when he got through with the cross-examination was that they really did not amount to anything of any vital importance.

The Court: Wouldn't that be a question for the Jury to pass on?

[fol. 484] Mr. Lockerman: Well, I would—I don't see how they could possibly ever—I mean, with all the technical information that was discussed, I don't see how they could ever arrive at it.

The Court: What are you asking this Court to do?

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor, I undoubtedly should have started out with the statement at the conclusion of the Plaintiff's case in chief—I mean, the Defendant's case in chief, under the burden that they now have and under the Court's ruling that they have the burden of proof, that they have not shown by a preponderance of the evidence that they have put in, they have not carried the burden of proof that they had thrust upon them or placed upon them, and—

The Court: I will charge the Jury in regard to preponderance of the evidence, but if there is any evidence here, the matter would be left up to the Jury to decide which witnesses or what witnesses or whose witnesses—they determine the preponderance of the evidence, not the Court.

Mr. Lockerman: That would be—that would be true, Your Honor, if both sides put in, you know, evidence, under the preponderance of the evidence.

The Court: I expect to charge the Jury that as far as [fol. 485] proving the truth of the charges are concerned, the burden would be on the Defendant in this case under a plea of justification.

Mr. Lockerman: Well, that is our position, that they have not, by the evidence that they have put in, they have not proven the truth of the charges in any substantial way at all, and they have not carried that burden.

The Court: You would yet have to submit it to the Jury on the question of mitigation of damages.

Mr. Lockerman: Well, yes, sir; but our point is this, that as the case now stands that we are asking the Court to direct a verdict to the effect that insofar as their burden of proving the truth of the charges, we would have to go ahead, of course, with other phases of the case, but, I mean, under the burden that they had, they had to prove in their initial presentation of the case the truth of these charges. Therefore, if they don't carry that burden, then I think that the Court should—should direct that this has been a libel. They have not—

The Court: Oh, I am going to charge the Jury that this article is libelous per se; I expect to charge the Jury that the article itself is libelous per se. I think even the use of the word "corrupt—the Georgia Statutes vary a little on libel. Under the Georgia law a man in his profession, whether he is a doctor or a lawyer or farmer of coach or anything, who has been maligned, I think it is libelous [fol. 486] per se, and I will charge that the article is libelous per se.

Mr. Lockerman: My associate has just called my attention to this case of—no; it is not a case; it is Odgers' Libel and Slander, the fifth edition, Chapter 7 under the subject of justification. At Page 181 the author stated, "But the whole libel must be proved true. It will be no defense to the action to prove that a part is merely true. The defense must be pleaded to the words set out in the statement of claim and not to some other word of Defendant's own. Justification must be as broad as the charge and must justify the precise charge. If any material part be not proved true, the Plaintiff is entitled to damages in respect to some part."

The Court: I think the Defendant has the burden of proving that the sting of the libel was true, and if they fail to do that, then I think it is a matter for the Jury—for the Jury to determine whether or not they failed to prove the sting of the libel.

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor, I did want to call your attention—

The Court: You go ahead, sir; I didn't mean to interrupt you.

Mr. Lockerman: The definition that is given in Webster's New International Dictionary of a "fixer" and certainly they have charged him with being a fixer—

[fol. 487] The Court: Yes, sir; I know—I am not exactly sure what "fixer" means, but I know what the word "corrupt" means, and I think the word "corrupt" would—I am going to charge the whole article was libelous per se.

Mr. Lockerman: Yes, sir.

The Court: Why doesn't that care for it all?

Mr. Lockerman: Certainly it will in Your Honor's charge to the Jury, but we felt that we should make a motion at this time—

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Lockerman: —to the effect—a motion for a direction by the Court which, in effect,—this is a rather unusual situation, as Your Honor knows, because of the switch in the position of the parties.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Lockerman: But we do feel that the record should show that we filed a motion for a directed verdict—

[fol. 488] The Court: I want you to have every opportunity.

Mr. Lockerman: —on the point that the Defendant had not, under the evidence that it has shown, proven the truth under the burden that it had of the things that it has said against the Plaintiff in this article.

The Court: Mr. Lockerman, I think it would in error for this Court to withdraw that issue from the Jury.

Mr. Lockerman: Yes, sir.

The Court: I think you would be jeopardizing your whole case.

HUGH FLEMMING having resumed the stand, testified further as follows:

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Mr. Flemming, do have in your hand there a toll ticket representing a call from Cullman, Alabama, to Atlanta, Georgia, on September the 10th, 1962?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. Would you please give the Reporter the exhibit number that has been given that one, I believe,—

A. It shows Exhibit 30.

Q. Thank you.

[fol. 489] A. Plaintiff's.

Q. Let me have a copy for opposing counsel. Could you interpret that for me, please, sir? You might let me have a copy too.

A. Yes, sir. This is a station call on September the 10th from Cullman, Alabama, to Atlanta, Georgia, to telephone number 874-1967. There is no name of the calling party.

Q. Does it indicate a charge card at the top?

A. Yes. It was billed on credit card 5434351 A-K 35.

Q. And that is—that, according to your information, is Coach Butts' credit card?

A. That is a credit card on that particular telephone number; I don't know whose it is.

Q. Do you have one on September the 11th, 1962, from Birmingham, Alabama, to Atlanta?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. That one was placed at what time, sir?

Mr. Cody: Your Honor, may I interrupt this witness just a moment?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: In the interest of time I am perfectly—I see he has a number of these toll tickets. I am perfectly willing for him to take them back and make the same type of schedule that we have done in Athens and Tuscaloosa and Atlanta and Chicago, and list it, and I will agree that that is a correct summary of what those toll tickets show. We take his word for it. It can save a lot of time.

[fol. 490] Mr. Schroder: I agree with you, but—will you agree with me that the toll tickets I have now need no further explanation by any expert witness if I need to introduce them?

Mr. Cody: I will; I will agree to that.

Mr. Schroder: There is no need, then, to pursue this further. I don't need any study of it made.

FRANK GRAHAM, JR., called as a witness by the Plaintiff, after having first been duly sworn, testified by deposition as follows:

Cross examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. State your full name, please, sir.
A. Frank Graham, Jr.
Q. And your address?
A. 201 Congress Street, Brooklyn 1.
Q. Your occupation, sir?
A. I am a writer.
Q. What type of writing do you specialize in, if any?
A. Chiefly sports.
Q. What is your age, Mr. Graham?
A. I am 38.

Mr. Schroder: Speak a little louder, please, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. How long have you been engaged in writing sports?

[fol. 491] A. I was a publicity man, publicity director of the Brooklyn Dodgers, for which I did a lot of writing from 1951 through 1955. Since then I have been chiefly a writer.

Q. Specializing in baseball or in general sports?

A. General sports. I was assistant managing editor of Sports Magazine, also, for two years.

Q. Where were you educated, Mr. Graham?

A. Columbia University.

Q. Did you major in journalism?

A. No, I majored in English.

Q. What year did you graduate?

A. 1950.

Q. Have you written a great deal on the game of football?

A. Not a great deal, no.

Q. Are you what one might call a football fan?

A. Yes, I have watched football ever since I was a child. My father was a sports writer and I started going to games with him, and I played a little in high school at Iona Prep.

Q. I-o-n-a?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Furman Bisher?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you known Furman Bisher?

A. I don't believe I ever met him face-to-face until some time in February, the end of February, of this year. When I was at Sport Magazine, also with the Dodgers, I talked to him on the phone several times, and I may have met him at a World Series, about 1954 or 1955.

Q. However, you don't recollect having met him face-to-face until February of 1963?

A. That's right.

[fol. 492] Q. Did you talk to him in 1963 prior to your meeting him face-to-face?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Where did you meet him on this occasion?

A. I met him here in New York.

Q. What were the circumstances of the meeting?

A. I had just come back from Atlanta, and Furman Bisher was in town on some kind of speaking engagement, I believe, and he called the Post to say that he had a story, and I had a call from Roger Kahn, senior editor here, and he said Furman Bisher was in town and he would like me to come in and meet him, talk with him.

Q. Do you recall the date on February that this occurred?

A. Well, it was the Monday after Washington's Birthday, I believe. Washington's Birthday was a Friday, I think.

Q. That would be—

A. About the 25th or 26th.

Q. About the 25th or 26th?

A. About that.

Q. Let me interrupt that thought for a moment and ask you, did you bring your notes that you used in writing the story?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you be able to give me the specific date better by consulting the notes, or would that date appear in the notes?

A. No, it would not appear in the notes.

Q. Had you, prior to that time—and we will assume that it was February 25th—been in touch with the Curtis Publishing Company about the story that Furman Bisher called the Post about?

A. Yes.

[fol. 493] Q. What was the story that Furman Bisher had that he wanted to consult the Post or you about?

A. He said it was a story about Georgia football.

Q. Did it turn out to be the story that you wrote in the Post in the issue of March 23rd?

A. It did.

Q. Did you talk to Furman Bisher on the occasion that he was in New York on February 24th or 25th?

A. I talked with him the evening of February 23rd and briefly on the telephone on the next day, which would be Tuesday.

Mr. Schroder: Well, there is a correction there. We understood that this is Monday after Washington's Birthday; I believe the witness said "the 23rd" when he meant "the 25th."

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Where did you meet with Furman Bisher on the evening of February 25th?

A. At the Manhattan Hotel.

Q. Manhattan Hotel?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that where he was staying?

A. Yes, he and his wife were in town.

Q. Was that the first time that you recall in the year 1963 that you had been in communication with Mr. Bisher?

A. Yes.

Q. And I believe you said that he called you or did someone from the Post call you?

A. Furman called the Post and the Post arranged for me to meet him.

Q. Did you spend some time with Mr. Bisher at the Manhattan Hotel that evening?

[fol. 494] A. Yes, we spent an hour and a half.

Q. Did you meet in his room or down in some other room?

A. Downstairs, in the cocktail lounge.

Q. And you were with him and his wife for an hour and a half?

A. Yes, she came later. I was with Roger Kahn.

Q. Kahn went with you to see Bisher?

A. Yes.

Q. What, in general, did Mr. Bisher tell you at that meeting at the Manhattan Hotel?

A. He told me substantially what I had learned in Atlanta, much of the information which was in the affidavit which George Burnett signed for the Post.

Q. Did Mr. Bisher indicate to you the source of his information?

A. Yes. Apparently he got a good deal of it from Cook Barwick.

Q. Did Mr. Bisher subsequently do some work for you or the Post in connection with gathering information for your article?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Was he employed at that time, that evening that he met with you?

A. Yes, that day. He may have been employed before I met—I don't know if there had been a firm understanding, but the agreement was that I would come and meet him and talk to him and tell him what I had heard and he, in turn, verified this information, or some of it. Then he was to—originally I was going back to Atlanta, and then it was decided—I think you will have to check with Mr. Kahn—then it was decided, so far as I know, because he would have more entrees to people in Atlanta, that he would complete the investigation down there. They would send me—he [fol. 495] would send me material from which I would complete my story.

Q. What was the pay by the Post or what was the agreement as to his compensation?

A. I don't know.

Q. That was not discussed in your presence?

A. No.

Q. As I understand your testimony, Mr. Graham, Mr. Bisher confirmed what you said you had already heard in Atlanta when you had been there on the previous date in communication with George Burnett?

A. Yes, he had heard much—some names, I believe, he was unfamiliar with, some questions he asked me, and then he said he would go back that week and he would get more information or talk to more people, et cetera.

Q. Do you remember what information it was that he had and which he discussed with you which you didn't have, by way of names or any facts?

A. That I didn't have?

Q. Yes, that he gave you.

A. No. He just gave me a general background. He talked to me of the background of the situation in Atlanta, the situation at the University, and identified some people for me more precisely, people whose—

Q. I understand you said that you mentioned some names to him with which he had not previously been familiar.

A. Yes, there were names like Milton Flack.

Q. He had not heard that name before?

A. He had heard the name, but he was a little vague on some of the details, how Flack fitted in et cetera. I would say substantially the information we had, he had, because there were only two affidavits in existence.

[fol. 496] Q. One which Burnett had given to you and the other one he had given to the—

A. University.

Q. Did he have that affidavit with him when he met with you?

A. No, no, he had no affidavit.

Q. When did your visit take place to Atlanta in connection with this story?

A. I flew down on a Wednesday evening, which was the 20th.

Q. What were the circumstances leading up to your trip to Atlanta?

A. I was called at home by Mr. Kahn, who said that the Post had an assignment for me, and would I come in and talk to Davis Thomas, the managing editor of the Post, on a Tuesday morning.

Q. Your call by Mr. Kahn took place when?

A. Monday of that week.

Q. That would have been what date?

A. That would have been the 18th.

Q. The 18th?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Kahn told you that he had an assignment for you to do for the Post?

A. Mr. Thomas had an assignment for me. As I understood it, Mr. Thomas said that he had a story which involved sports and he asked Mr. Kahn to get a sports writer.

Q. Then you came into the Curtis Publishing Company's office the following day?

A. Tuesday.

Q. Tuesday?

A. Yes.

Q. And you talked with Mr. Kahn and Mr. Thomas?
A. Yes.

[fol. 497] Q. What was the substance of that conversation?

A. They said they had information about a man—they were not positive—a man or a boy, they didn't know who he was—whether a college student or an outside person—who had overheard a telephone conversation between Wally Butts and Bear Bryant, in which certain information was passed from Butts to Bryant, and they asked me to go down to Atlanta to meet an attorney in Atlanta who was coming in from Birmingham, Roderick Beddow, and I was to go to the Heart of Atlanta Motel, get there on Tuesday night, and on early Wednesday morning I would be called by Mr. Beddow.

Q. Mr. Beddow is the lawyer representing the Curtis Publishing Company in the libel suit pending against it in Birmingham?

A. That's right.

Q. And I believe Bear Bryant is the Plaintiff in that action and the Curtis Publishing Company, along with Furman Bisher, is the Defendant? Did you know that before?

A. I had read something in the paper about it and I heard more about that that Tuesday morning.

Q. That was when you had your meeting with Mr. Kahn and Mr. Thomas?

A. Yes.

Q. What did they say to you about the lawsuit pending in Birmingham against the Post and against Bisher?

A. They simply said that this firm in Birmingham was representing them in a suit, this suit, and that through this firm in Birmingham, this information had been sent to them.

Q. What else did they have to say about that lawsuit?

[fol. 498] A. That is all that I can recall.

Q. You say—

A. That there was a suit for $500,000, that Bisher had written this story in the previous fall, I don't remember the date, and they were being sued, and out of this—let's see—they were being sued by Mr. Bryant, and their lawyer, Roderick Beddow, had sent them this information and they wanted me to go down and see if there was a story for the Post.

My assignment was to go down and meet with Beddow to talk to this—to talk to the man who turned out to be George Burnett.

Q. You went to Atlanta on February 20th, I believe you said?

A. Yes.

Q. And you went to the Heart of Atlanta Motel?

A. Yes.

Q. You didn't see anyone, I assume, that evening in connection with this story?

A. No, I didn't. I didn't get there until about midnight.

Q. The following day you met with Mr. Beddow?

A. Yes. Mr. Beddow and an associate of his named Fred Boteger, B-o-t-e-g-e-r.

Q. B-o-t—

A. -e-g-e-r.

Q. Was he introduced to you as an associate lawyer?

A. As an associate.

Q. Do you know—

A. He wasn't a lawyer. He was a private investigator, I believe. But he was introduced as an associate.

Q. He was a private investigator and came over with Mr. Beddow from Birmingham to meet and discuss with you the story about this telephone call?

[fol. 499] A. Yes.

Q. What time on the morning of the 21st did Mr. Beddow get in touch with you?

A. I would say about between 9:30 and 10:00.

Q. Was he staying at the same motel?

A. No. He and Mr. Boteger had just arrived from Birmingham. They flew in that morning.

Q. He contacted you first by telephone?

A. Yes, he called me and I said that he was to go to the office of Pierre Howard,—

Q. And you—

A. (continuing) —in the Healy Building.

Q. And you later did go to Mr. Pierre Howard's office in the Healy Building?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. That was on February 21st?

A. That was on that morning, yes.

Q. Who was in Pierre Howard's office when you had your meeting there?

A. The three of us, Beddow, Boteger and myself, and Pierre Howard, and we were joined shortly after by Milton Flack.

Q. Was that the first time that you had met Milton Flack?

A. Yes.

Q. How long was Milton Flack in the office while you were there?

A. He arrived a few minutes after I got there, and he was there, I would say, all of the rest of the time that I was there. We had our—we ate lunch in the office. We sent down for sandwiches.

Q. What was the nature of the conversation that took place in Pierre Howard's office with Mr. Flack?

A. Pierre Howard and Milton Flack recounted the story that George Burnett had told them.

[fol. 500] Q. Howard and Flack were recounting the story that Burnett had told to them?

A. Yes, and then filling me in on some background on Georgia football and the situation there as they knew it. Some of the conversation was casual and some directly pertained to this matter.

Q. You got there you say around 10:00 o'clock in the morning?

A. Yes.

Q. And you remained there for the remainder of the day?

A. No, we were there until after lunch. We put in a call to George Burnett to get him to come—

Mr. Schroder: Just a moment; you read that wrong.
Mr. Lockerman: "No, we—"
Mr. Schroder: "They put in a call—"

By the Witness:

A. They put in a call to George Burnett to get him to come, and just about the time—just after Pierre Howard called Burnett—no, just before Howard called Burnett, Burnett had been called by Cook Barwick and had been asked to come to Barwick's office in Altanta, I believe in the Federal Building, and there talked to Bernie Moore, who was the commissioner of the Southeastern conference.

Q. Let me get the sequence a little clearer in my mind. You arrived in Atlanta on the evening of February 20th; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. On February 21st, at 10:00 a.m., you went to the office of Pierre Howard, pursuant to instructions given you by [fol. 501] Attorney Beddow from Birmingham?

A. Yes.

Q. Around 10:00 a.m.?

A. Yes.

Q. At Pierre Howard's office that morning—

A. Yes.

Mr. Schroder: Cody, I am not going to read that part.
Mr. Cody: Skip it; it is okay.
Mr. Schroder: All right.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. During that morning meeting attended by the people whose names I just listed, were you considered to be the representative of the Curtis Publishing Company?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Did you discuss a price that Curtis would pay for the story?

A. I did. It was to be done through Pierre Howard acting as agent for Mr. Burnett.

Q. Did Milton Flack engage in the conversation that related to the purchase price of this story?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Was there any negotiation or negotiating done with reference to the price or was it just fixed, and that was it?

A. No. I said the Post was willing to pay $2,000 for it.

Q. What was the counter-offer?

[fol. 502] A. There was none, but both Milton Flack and Pierre Howard thought he should get more, especially if this were an exclusive story. So then I said I would—I was prepared to offer him $2,000 just for George Burnett's affidavit in this case; that if the story appeared in print, was published and was a Post exclusive, then, in addition, he would get $3,000 more, after the date of publication.

He was to get $2,000 immediately, which I believe was wired by Davis Thomas after I told him it was all right to go ahead, and it was wired to Pierre Howard.

Q. Was that check made payable to Howard?

A. I believe it was to Howard. Now, I never—

Q. You never saw the check?

A. No.

Q. Was there any discussion as to a payment by Curtis by Pierre Howard?

A. No, none whatsoever.

Q. Was there any discussion as to any payment by Curtis by Milton Flack?

A. No.

Q. Do you know whether or not Curtis has paid Pierre Howard?

A. No, I don't believe they have. So far as I know. I have never heard. Later, I believe, and you will have to check this, I believe Milton Flack was paid $500.

Q. Was that discussed at the meeting that you attended that morning?

A. No.

Q. On the 21st?

A. No.

Q. I believe you said at the time you were in Pierre [fol. 503] Howard's office on the 21st that Burnett was at Barwick's office?

A. He was to go there. Apparently he was in the suburbs of Atlanta on business and a call was left for him some time that morning, but he was out—

Q. A call was left for him?

A. For Burnett.

Q. Do you know where?

A. I don't know where.

Q. Do you know who made the call?

A. Pierre Howard.

Q. While you were there?

A. Yes. I believe he called the secretary and said, "See if you can get George Burnett," as I recall it. I am not sure.

Q. Was it made clear to you that this meeting was being done with the approval of George Burnett?

A. No. There was no—when I spoke to Milton Flack there was still some doubt as to whether he would—wanted to cooperate.

Q. Who, Burnett or Flack?

A. Burnett.

Q. Give me the substance of that conversation.

A. He said that he was very upset about this; George Burnett was very upset about this matter; that he had been worried about it for a long time, and the whole thing had been on his mind, and he was reluctant to get into it, even from the start. And he said when the thing had first been brought up, he had been brought to Johnny Griffith, the coach at Georgia, and he had asked Griffith to try to leave him out of it, which, of course, was impossible once Burnett reported the story.

Q. This is Flack's story to you?

A. Yes.

[fol. 504] Mr. Schroder: Look's like we are getting into hearsay. I didn't notice it. Flack was telling him something, but—

Mr. Cody: What page.
The Court: Sir?
Mr. Schroder: I don't know; some of it—
Mr. Cody: Okay.
Mr. Schroder: I haven't started skipping yet. Some of this I am getting into hearsay.
The Court: If you can agree to it, it is all right with me.
Mr. Schroder: It would not be proper to read it.
Mr. Schroder: The next questions seem to be all right.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Go ahead.

A. And so then Mr. Beddow said, well, the best thing was to get Mr. Burnett in here and see what he wants to do.

Q. So that insofar as you knew, the story really wasn't [fol. 505] available when you went to Atlanta?

A. I had thought it was, but when I got in there there apparently was some doubt about it.

Q. Later that afternoon or later that day you say Burnett came to Pierre Howard's office—no?

A. No.

Q. Excuse me.

A. No. We had lunch there, and we just sat around for a while and then finally we understood that he was in—George Burnett was in talking to Cook Barwick and Bernie Moore, and we decided to go back to the Heart of Atlanta Motel, and Boteger and Beddow and I went back.

We waited a while and then Milton Flack, I think, had some business or somebody to see so he left for a while and then he came in, and then later in the afternoon, I believe it was after three o'clock, when Pierre Howard and George Burnett came over.

Howard—Burnett had apparently come from Cook Barwick's office, picked up Pierre Howard.

Q. Then he came on out to the motel?

A. Yes.

Q. Originally Flack had gone to the motel when you left Howard's office, with you, and then he left—

A. No. Flack didn't come originally. I think he had something to do.

Q. But then he did come to the hotel?

A. Then he arrived before—

Q. Before Burnett and Howard?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the nature of the conversation that took place in the motel when Howard and Burnett arrived?

A. We were introduced to him and he started off by telling about the meeting which had taken place that day [fol. 506] in Cook Barwick's office. He seemed to be upset about what had happened to him there.

Mr. Schroder: Just a minute, Mr. Witness; getting back into hearsay now. I am reading on Page 24 now, Mr. Cody.

Mr. Cody: What line are you on?

Mr. Schroder: I am on line 10 where the paragraph begins there where it says, "He said," and it goes into some conversation; I am going from there, Mr. Cody, over to the top of Page 26.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Now, when Burnett and Howard came to the motel room there in Atlanta where you were, this was what was related to you by Burnett and Howard that you have just testified to?

A. Yes. Burnett did almost all the talking once he arrived in the room.

Q. Did you, as representative of the Curtis Publishing Company, come to an agreement with Burnett as to the publication of the story and the price that Curtis would pay him?

A. No.

Q. That had already been determined in Howards office?

A. I had talked with Howard about the Post offer before and then it was agreed that I would see Howard next day in his office after I had talked to Burnett.

[fol. 507] Q. Was the amount of money to be paid to Burnett discussed with Burnett?

A. No.

Q. Did he know or indicate to you that he knew?

A. It was never mentioned between us. I handled all that with Howard.

Q. You assumed that the client knew what the lawyer was negotiating?

A. I assumed, but I didn't know.

Q. You did take an affidavit from Burnett?

A. That was the following day.

Q. The following day?

A. Yes. He went through the whole story. That was this afternoon, in—Thursday afternoon, in the Heart of Atlanta Motel.

Q. Who was—

A. When he got through talking, we had a drink and we had to wait a while because Mr. Beddow and Mr. Boteger were going back to Birmingham on the plane and they were waiting for their plane and we had a drink and Mr. Howard was going somewhere and then I stayed with —the five of us left and then finally Mr. Boteger and Mr. Beddow left and I said I would call them in the morning in Birmingham.

Q. For what purpose?

A. To talk to them about the whole situation, what he had heard. Because we were not—we were never alone after we met Mr. Burnett and I wanted to get their reaction, et cetera.

We stayed—well, it was after dark when they left for the airport, and afterwards I went out to dinner with Flack and Burnett. They took me to a place in Atlanta to eat.

[fol. 508] Q. When was it that you and Burnett were alone? Was it that day or the following day?

A. It was the following day. Well, I am just trying to think—yes, I was alone with Burnett the following morning. On Friday morning, which was Washington's Birthday, I went to—that was the 22nd—I went to Pierre Howard's office.

I got there before Burnett, and then I talked to Howard and Howard—Howard and I made the final arrangements on the story, and I said that money would be wired by the Post to Pierre Howard.

Q. Was Burnett there during that conversation?

A. No. Burnett came in and Howard said, "Now, you will want to talk to him alone, to go over any questions that you have in your mind."

So we went into another office in the back where the two of us talked alone for a while.

When that was over I went out and Pierre Howard sent in a girl who was apparently a notary public, and I left for lunch, and he said while I was gone—while I was gone he and the girl and Burnett would prepare his affidavit, and she took down his story, and I was to come back later in the afternoon and pick up the affidavit.

Mr. Schroder: Who is following the deposition?

Mr. Cody: Give us the page.

Mr. Schroder: Page 29 at the top is hearsay and I am skipping it. That is the first question, on down to line 23. I am beginning reading on line 24 on Page 29.

[fol. 509] By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Now, when you first met with Messrs. Kahn and Thomas in New York, before you went to Atlanta, and they pointed out to you the purpose for them calling you, did you make notes during that conversation?

A. I took a couple of notes, just a couple of names, the name of the motel where I was to go, et cetera.

Q. Did you take any notes at that time having to do with the substance of the story?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. When you met with the people that you said you met with in Pierre Howard's office the first time, did you make notes as to what was said in that conversation?

A. I took very few notes then. I may have written down an unfamiliar name. I would say most of the notes that I took were the next day when I was alone with George Burnett.

Mr. Schroder: The next one, Mr. Cody, is line 16 on Page 30; the question and answer both would be hearsay. I am reading beginning at line 24 at the bottom of the page. I am just skipping one question and one answer.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. You didn't make any notes to amount to anything during that conversation?

A. No.

Q. Or what was said—

A. No, I wanted to get it from him, most of it.

Q. When they were filling you in on Mr. Burnett's background at that time did they indicate to you—

A. I did—I will say this: I did take notes on some of [fol. 510] the names of people. I took notes on some of the names that he had overheard, Burnett had overheard mentioned during this telephone conversation.

Q. Did—when Flack and Howard were telling you about Burnett's background, did they tell you about the matter of the bad checks that he had written?

A. Yes.

Q. You knew that then before you heard it from Burnett?

A. Yes.

Q. Did they tell you how many there had been?

A. Pierre Howard said two.

Q. How many did Flack say?

A. He said two.

Q. You knew that, then, before you met Burnett?

A. Yes.

Q. When Burnett subsequently came to the motel room that afternoon with Pierre Howard, and you had a general discussion among all of you about the meeting in Barwick's office and I suppose—

A. Yes, Burnett did almost all the talking then.

Q. Did you make notes of what was said in the conversation?

A. Very few. I remember once I interrupted him to write down the number that he had dialed that day, when he was hooked into this long-distance call.

It was Jackson number, I believe, which I used in the story, and I had him repeat that.

Q. On the occasion of Burnett's visit to the motel room on the afternoon of February 21st, did he have these so-called notes with him that he said he took?

A. No, he never had the notes, at any time during the—we were never able to get the notes at any time during [fol. 511] the entire preparation of the story.

He had thought that he could—let's see—he said that he was going to try to get them on Friday. I called Pierre Howard—I went to see Pierre Howard on Friday morning, the 22nd, and they still didn't have them and they were trying to get these notes and they were not able to get in touch with Cook Barwick and Barwick wasn't coming into his office that day, because it was Washington's Birthday, and I said that I would like to get the notes, if possible, to check dates and a couple of names that were mentioned, et cetera, and see everything that I could on this, and they promised to keep trying.

Howard said if he didn't get them before I left Atlanta, that he would send them, rush them to me by air, the first part of the following week.

Q. Were they rushed to you by air?

A. I never got them.

Q. You have never seen the notes yet?

A. No.

Q. Then you wrote the story without benefit of having seen the notes?

A. That's right. I had to depend on Burnett's recollection, the recollection of Flack and Howard from what Burnett had told them about the notes.

Q. Did anyone at any time indicate to you that anyone else had overheard the conversation that Burnett said he overheard?

A. When I was here in New York, I had been told that there were two—possibly two people there, but we didn't know how many had overheard the conversation. There was a man named Carmichael mentioned.

[fol. 512] Q. That he was there when the call was intercepted?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you—

A. When I spoke to Burnett and Flack and Howard about it, they said that Carmichael was a friend of Wally Butts and didn't want anything to do with this case, didn't want to be brought into it.

Q. Did you get in touch with this Carmichael?

A. No. They said that he positively didn't want to talk.

Q. Did you interview anyone other than Burnett and Flack and Howard?

A. No.

Q. Did you, after you came back to New York, ever interview anyone in connection with this story, other than Furman Bisher?

A. No. When I came in on Monday then it was decided that Furman Bisher would complete the interviewing on the story, that he would have a better—he knew most of these people and would have a better chance to get us the information than I would have.

Q. And you came back to New York you say from Atlanta or did you say, on Monday?

A. No. I came back on Saturday. I came into the Post office on Monday morning but I flew back on Saturday afternoon. On Saturday morning—I had stayed over in the hopes of getting these notes. They were never released by the university to us.

Let's see. On Saturday morning, I called Pierre Howard at his home, and there was still no chance to get the notes. I called Milton Flack and he and George Burnett said they would drive me to the airport that afternoon.

[fol. 513] So that morning I went to the public library in Atlanta and I looked over—I went through all the newspapers for a couple of weeks before the Georgia-Alabama opening game last year and for a few days afterwards.

Q. Did you make notes of what the newspaper articles said?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the substance of the articles in the newspapers that you read prior to the game and after?

A. There was some—I am trying to think—the substance of it was that Georgia was hopeful. Johnny Griffith said that they knew they were playing a strong club and they had a lot of hope.

They had some good, young players, a lot of sophomores on the team that he had high hopes for, but that Alabama was favored by from 14 to 17 points. And Bear Bryant said he expected a very close game.

Q. Did you use any of those articles in your publication of the story?

A. Yes, I did, yes.

Q. Were the names of the Georgia football players prominently mentioned in those articles?

A. Some were. I went through and copied down the names of all their leading players who were mentioned at any time during the two weeks before the game, for spelling, et cetera, and then their position.

Q. Were the names Babb and Rissmiller mentioned prominently in the newspapers—

A. Yes.

Q. (continuing) —prior to—

A. Yes.

Q. Ever since practice started on September 1st?

A. Well, their names were mentioned. I copied them [fol. 514] down. I don't remember how many times. When I would see a player who would play a prominent part in the Georgia team, I wrote down his name with his position.

Q. Were the names Rissmiller, Babb, Rakestraw, Blackburn—

A. I don't remember Blackburn—

Q. Woodward—

A. Yes, Don Blackburn.

Q. Those names were mentioned prominently—

A. I don't remember Blackburn so much, but apparently he was mentioned, because I have it.

Q. When did you first hear Blackburn's name?

A. I guess there, because—

Q. You mean in the newspaper?

A. In the newspaper.

Q. What names were mentioned to you by either Howard, Flack or Burnett when they were relating what Burnett was supposed to have overheard?

A. Babb and Rissmiller and Rakestraw.

Q. Now when you came on back—

Mr. Schroder: Evidently it was withdrawn.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Flack and Carmichael took you to the airport?

Mr. Lockerman: I think it says "Flack and Burnett".

Mr. Schroder: The question—line 14.

[fol. 515] Mr. Lockerman: Oh, yes, yes.

By the Witness:

A. No.

Q. Flack and Burnett took you to the airport?

A. Yes.

Q. Was the forthcoming story discussed going out to the airport by the three of you?

Mr. Schroder: Well that is again—that is on line 21, Cody, on Page 37.

Mr. Cody: I think—go ahead; that is all right.

Mr. Schroder: Sir?

Mr. Cody: Go ahead.

Mr. Schroder: I am looking now at line 21 on Page 37 where it says "We were talking"; that is hearsay, of course, which would also apply to Page 38—May I address counsel just a minute on some of this?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: Mr. Cody, I am going on over to Page 40, if it suits your convenience and start on line 14.

[fol. 516] Mr. Cody: Page 40?

Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Now, when Bisher came to New York on that Monday, I believe you testified earlier that he was the one that got in touch with the Post?

A. That's right, sir.

Q. And he offered his services to the Post?

A. Yes.

Q. They accepted his services?

A. I don't know on what basis what was done, whether he himself wanted to write the story. He didn't know at any time that I was in Atlanta.

Q. Well, did he indicate to you or to the Post officials in your presence the reason for his getting in touch with the Post officials when he came to New York on that Monday?

A. Yes he said that he had what he—I don't have the exact words, but something about having a very important story about Georgia football.

Q. Obviously, he didn't know up to that time that the Post already had the story?

A. Apparently not.

Q. Did he indicate to Mr. Kahn in your presence when you all met at the Manhattan Hotel, that he was still interested in writing the story or selling the story or giving the story to the Post?

A. Well, apparently he and—you see, I don't know all the details—apparently he and Roger Kahn—Mr. Kahn apparently told him before we met that I had been in Atlanta, so that the Post had the story.

[fol. 517] Q. So that when you met with him he already knew that the Post had the story?

A. Yes.

Q. And then he assumed the role of assisting you?

A. Yes.

Q. By making field investigations or whatever you writers call them?

A. Yes.

Q. In Georgia for the Post?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you seen Furman Bisher since that meeting in the Manhattan Hotel?

A. No.

Q. Have you talked with him over the phone or communicated with him in any other manner?

A. Yes, he called me later in the week.

Q. From Atlanta?

A. Yes.

Q. Later on in the week of the Monday that you met here?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the substance of—

Mr. Schroder: Well, I guess it would be all right to read that part; it is in the article.

Mr. Cody: Yes.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. What was the substance of that conversation?

A. He told me that he had talked to people at the University of Georgia. He had been—he gave me some quotes from a couple of football players, from the trainer, Sam [fol. 518] Richwine, and the coach, Johnny Griffith.

Q. Is that the last time that you have had any communication with with Mr. Bisher or have you had subsequent conversation with him?

A. That was the last time.

Q. When the story had been more or less—

A. He was,—I believe in between, I believe he was in touch with Mr. Kahn.

Q. Giving Mr. Kahn additional information about the story?

A. I don't know. He talked to him I know because Roger Kahn told me that he would call me on Friday.

Q. I am going to jump ahead just a moment. When the story was almost completed, did you then or at any other time send it to Mr. Bisher for corrections or for whatever he wanted to do with it?

A. I sent him a copy of the story, the following week, which would be a week after I saw him. The week after that Monday that I saw him at the Manhattan Hotel.

Q. That would be the first week in March, I assume?

A. Yes.

Q. You sent Mr. Bisher a—

A. I sent him a copy of my story, as I had written it for the Post, which he was to have for his files whenever the story was to be written in Atlanta, for the newspapers.

Q. Did he make any corrections?

A. No.

Q. Or suggestions?

A. No.

Q. After the story had been completed?

A. No.

[fol. 519] Q. Had you asked him to make any corrections or suggestions if any occurred to him before the story was published?

A. No, I sent the story to him, I say that week, and I have not heard from him again.

Q. Mr. Bisher then had the story in final form during the first week in March which was approximately two weeks before it hit the newsstands?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Graham, will you kindly refer to your notes, because I want to ask you some questions about the article itself.

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Graham—

Mr. Schroder: May I address counsel, please?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: Please look ahead so if there is any part you want to object to.

Mr. Cody: Okay.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Mr. Graham, I am looking at Page 80 of the March 23rd issue of the Saturday Evening Post. The title of the story is "The Story of a College Football Fix." Below that in smaller letters is the following: "A Shocking Report of How Wally Butts and 'Bear' Bryant Rigged a Game Last [fol. 520] Fall." And below that is "By Frank Graham Jr."

Now, is that language which I just read, is that yours or is that someone else's?

A. That was the editor's.

Q. You had no title on your story?

A. I think I just put "The George Burnett Story," or—I believe that was it.

Q. Now, looking again at Page 80, there is an insert in white that read:

"Not since the Chicago White Sox threw the 1919 World Series . . ." and there is no need for me to quote the full quotation there; and ends: "For now we can only be appalled," and the concluding two words are: "The Editors." Did you have anything to do with the preparation of that insert?

A. No.

Q. The first time you saw that, I assume, then, is when the magazine hit the stands?

A. I saw it in print, but it was before the magazine was—

Q. What you writers call that?

A. Well, it was on a sheet which had been marked up, ready to go to the printer.

Q. Now the photograph on Page 80 and the three photographs on Page 81—well, I will say on the next page, because mine does not show a number—

A. Yes, it is 81.

Q. (continuing) —and the two photographs on Page 82, and the one photograph on Page 83, do you know the source of those photographs?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Were they sent to you?

A. No.

Q. You don't know, then, where Curtis got them?

[fol. 521] A. No, I don't.

Q. Did you finish them to them?

A. I believe on this one, the one of George Burnett, on Page 80, a photographer—

Q. 81, is it not?

A. 81, pardon me. A photographer on assignment for the Post took that picture. I don't know his name.

Q. While you were in Atlanta?

A. No.

Q. Or at some subsequent date?

A. At some subsequent date.

Q. You don't know, then, where the Post got the other pictures that I have referred to?

A. No, I don't.

Q. You did not furnish them?

A. No.

Q. On Page 81, the first three paragraphs of the article, what was the source of your information that you put forth or set forth in them?

A. George Burnett.

Q. Do you have the notes?

A. No. Much of this I took from his affidavit, and, for instance, I did write down the number. Much of the story, of course, was taken directly from the affidavit which he signed.

Q. The fourth paragraph, beginning with—beginning with "Like most males over the age of four . . . " and ending with " . . . football history," what was your source of that information?

A. The first two sentences were from George Burnett himself, and—

Q. Did he, for example—you said the first two sentences were from George Burnett.

Did he refer to the two coaches as being "collossi"?

[fol. 522] A. No, that was my word. He mentioned two of the biggest names in Southern football, something like that.

Q. Is there any other language in that paragraph which is your own and not George Burnett's?

A. I would say the way it was phrased, like most males over the age of four in Atlanta.

Q. Burnett did tell you, then, that he was a football fan?

A. Yes, he said he had always been interested in football. He told me that he had played football in college—in high school in Texas.

Q. Did he indicate to you that he was interested in football in the State of Georgia?

A. Yes, he said, like everybody else, he was interested in the games, knew these people. I had known Wally Butts from afar. I had only met him once. But he was interested in these people.

Q. Did he indicate to you familiarity with the players' names?

A. No, no, not especially. We were talking about it at one time and he said it was a young team. But he was not familiar with all the names.

Q. Did he indicate to you that he had seen the University of Georgia play any football games the previous season, being 1961?

A. No, he didn't say.

Q. Did you ask him?

A. No.

Q. The next paragraph beginning "After a brief wait . . ." and the next two sentences after that paragraph, or the next three sentences after that paragraph, which include quotations, they were taken by you from the affidavit?

A. Yes.

[fol. 523] Q. Not from any notes that you had?

A. It may have been partly from the notes. It was partly from the notes and partly from the affidavit.

Q. Let's move on to the next paragraph, which I shall read:

"As Burnett listened, Butts began to give Bryant detailed information about the plays and formations Georgia would use in its opening game eight days later. Georgia's opponent was to be Alabama." Now, what detailed information did you have in mind when you wrote that particular language?

A. What he had told me. He said: "Whereupon, Wally Butts proceeded to give detailed information pertaining to the University of Georgia's offense and defense to be used in the Alabama-Georgia game the following week."

Q. Did he tell you what information he had when he used that language?

A. He said: "At regular intervals Bear Bryant would ask Wally Butts certain questions pertaining to defensive and offensive maneuvers. Wally Butts would either ask him in detail or—

Mr. Cody: "Answer him".

By the Witness:

A. Wally Butts would either answer him in detail or would say, 'I don't know about that, I will have to find out.'"

Q. Go back—excuse me. I thought that you were through. Are you reading from your notes?

A. No, from the affidavit.

Q. Did Burnett at any time tell you the particulars of the questions which he said that Coach Bryant asked Coach Butts?

[fol. 524] A. He said here, for instance: "A question in particular that Bear Bryant asked was, 'How about quick kicks?' and then Wally Butts answered by saying, 'Don't worry about quick kicks, they haven't anyone who can do it.'"

Q. Let's go back a moment, where you were reading: ". . . Wally Butts proceeded to give detailed information pertaining to the University of Georgia's offense and defense. . . . " Did he give you any of the detailed information which he said he heard Wally Butts giving to Coach Bryant?

A. No, he said that he would have to have his notes to refresh his memory.

Q. So that you used that language just based upon what he said in his affidavit, without knowing exactly what information he was talking about?

A. That, and such things as he also told him that Woodward committed himself fast on pass defense, and he said that he would have to get the notes to refresh his memory on it.

Q. Now, we have in that same sentence the language: ". . . to be used in the Alabama-Georgia game the following week." What is the source of the information there? Did he tell you that they said this was what was going to be used in the game or how did he indicate to you—

A. He said they were talking about the game coming up which was in eight days, as he said in here, pertaining to the University of Georgia's offense and defense to be used in the Georgia-Alabama game the following week.

Q. Did he tell you that was his language or that is what they said was going to be used in the game, or did he tell you anything about what it was?

A. This was his language.

[fol. 525] Q. All you have is what is in this affidavit?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have anything in your notes indicating that there was anything said between the two coaches about what was to be done or what was to be used in the upcoming game?

A. No.

Mr. Schroder: I don't know what that means.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. The next language in the affidavit is: "At regular intervals Bear Bryant would ask Wally Butts certain questions pertaining to defensive and offensive maneuvers." Did Burnett tell you what he meant when he used the language "regular intervals"?

A. He just said that Bryant would ask him a question and he said that he was struck by the tone in which Butts answered these questions, that he seemed to be answering them reluctantly, to him—

Q. That is not my question, Mr. Graham. Did Burnett tell you what he was basing the use of the word "regular" on or did you just take it from his affidavit?

A. I took it from his affidavit.

Q. Did Burnett tell you what any of the questions, certain questions that Bryant asked Butts, pertaining to defensive and offensive maneuvers, were?

A. No. Except for instance about quick kicks.

Q. Other than what is set forth in this affidavit there was no discussion as to the substance of the conversation?

A. No, just that he was—couldn't remember anything definite about it, he said, without his notes. He could re-[fol. 526] call some of the names, but—

Q. Now, returning to the article in the magazine, about half way down the first column, there is a paragraph which reads: "Butts outlined Georgia's offensive plays for Bryant and told him how Georgia planned to defend against Alabama's attack."

Mr. Schroder: That being a quotation from the article.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Did Burnett furnish you with any details as to what offensive plays were discussed?

A. No. He just said that there was talk about this in which Butts mentioned specific things, but which he could not recall.

Q. So that—

A. What they were, numbers of plays or—

Q. So that when you wrote your articles, you just took it from the affidavit?

A. Yes, and from my questioning of him.

Q. Sir?

A. From the affidavit and from my questioning of Burnett.

Q. Read to me from your notes, please, sir, what you used when you wrote the language which I have just quoted.

A. He said that—he said—I asked him if there were any specific things that he could try to remember, and he said they discussed certain formations which he could not recall the details of, which Georgia would use inside the ten-yard line.

Q. And you don't know or he didn't tell you what he meant by that language?

A. No.

[fol. 527] Q. Skipping a sentence in that same paragraph, you have written:

"Occasionally Bryant asked Butts about specific offensive or defensive maneuvers. . . ." Did Burnett tell you what he meant when he was conveying that information to you?

A. Well, it was—for instance, certain things like quick kicks, which was one thing that stuck in his mind, that Bryant was trying to find out at certain times would they use a quick kick, could they be expected to look out for a quick kick in certain instances, and Butts said: "Don't worry about them, they haven't got anyone that can do it."

Q. What do you have in your notes pertaining to that sentence that I have just read?

A. I just have—I asked him about that and he didn't elaborate. There was nothing more for me to add, so I just said, "No quick kickers," and referred back to the affidavit.

PAUL WILLIAM BRYANT called as a witness by the Plaintiff, after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination,

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. State your full name, please, sir.

A. Paul William Bryant.

Q. What is your occupation, Mr. Bryant?

A. Football coach, Director of Athletics, University of Alabama.

[fol. 528] Q. How long have you been in the coaching profession?

A. Well, since I graduated from college, since 1936.

Q. Where, briefly, have you coached other than at the University of Alabama?

A. I was assistant coach at Vanderbilt University.

Q. Speak up so they can hear you.

A. I was assistant coach at Vanderbilt University. I was coach at the University of Maryland, the University of Kentucky, Texas A & M, and now at Alabama.

Q. At the last four places or institutions that you related, were you the head coach at Maryland, the head coach at Kentucky, the head coach at Texas A & M, and at Alabama?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been the head coach at the University of Alabama?

A. We are starting my sixth year, sir.

Q. Mr. Bryant, the Saturday Evening Post published an article in its March 23rd, 1963 issue entitled "The Story of a College Football Fix", you are, of course, familiar with that article.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In that article it is reported that on September the 13th, 1962, Coach Wallace Butts, athletic director at the time of the University of Georgia, initiated a telephone call to you in which it is stated in the article certain information relating to the University of Georgia football formations, football plays, and defenses which they proposed to use in the forthcoming game between his school and your school were transmitted by him to you. You are familiar with that general statement as to what is in that article?

[fol. 529] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you have any recollection, and if you do have a recollection of that telephone call, of the substance of what was said and as I said, if you do, would you please relate it to the Court and Jury?

A. Sir, I don't know whether he made the call or not; I don't remember. According to the records of the telephone company which I have seen, of course, the call was made.

Q. Do you have any recollection as to what was said in that conversation?

A. Specifically; no, sir.

Q. Do you—let me put it this way. Have you had other telephone conversations with Coach Wallace Butts?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you had numerous conversations with him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With reference to other coaches, not only in the Southeastern Conference, but in other areas of the country have you had conversations over the telephone with those people?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is also related or set forth in the article that on Sunday, September 16, 1962, you and Coach Wallace Butts had another telephone conversation, which, I believe the Post states, was initiated by you. You are familiar with that general statement as it appears in the Post?

A. I am familiar with it, but I do not remember whether or not I made the call, but according to the telephone company's records, again, the call was made.

Q. All right, sir. Coach Bryant, will you please state to [fol. 530] the Court and Jury whether in any conversation you had with Coach Butts at any time he conveyed to you any information—

Mr. Cody: Your Honor, I—

The Court: What is your objection, Mr. Cody?

Mr. Cody: Mr. Schroder is an expert on leading questions, and I want to object.

The Court: I think both of you have been.

Mr. Cody: I have no objection to him asking the witness to relate the substance of any telephone conversation he has overheard with Coach Butts, but I don't—I want to object to leading questions.

The Court: I don't know that question was leading. Read the question back, Mr. Reporter.

(Whereupon the question was read aloud by the Reporter.)

The Court: I don't know what the question—will you finish the question.

[fol. 531] By Mr. Schroder:

Q. —relating to the plays, formations, or defenses to be used by Georgia, the University of Georgia—

Mr. Cody: Before you answer—

The Court: Don't answer, Coach Bryant.

Mr. Cody: I want to renew my objection.

The Court: Let him finish the question. Have you finished it, Mr. Schroder?

Mr. Schroder: No, sir; I haven't.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. —so far do you understand what I have asked you up to now?

A. I would like to have it again, please, sir.

Mr. Schroder: I don't know that I can restate it exactly.

(Whereupon the question was read aloud by the Reporter.)

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. —in a forthcoming game with the University of Alabama?

[fol. 532] Mr. Schroder: Don't answer it; there is an objection.

The Court: All right, sir, Mr. Cody. Did you object to it?

Mr. Cody: As leading; yes.

The Court: I overrule the objection.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. You understand the question now, sir?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your answer?

A. Absolutely not, and I had had, I wouldn't have taken it, because he is for Georgia and I am for Alabama.

Q. What do you mean by—I don't understand the meaning of your answer. I understand you said absolutely not, but I didn't get the next thing you said.

A. Well, if he would give me something on the University of Georgia, well, then, the first thing I would think they weren't going to use it, because he is for Georgia and I am trying to beat them; I am for Alabama.

Q. All right, sir. It has been testified here by witnesses that in the telephone conversation of September the 13th, 1962, a record of which was supposed to have been made by one George Burnett, a discussion of certain formations to be used by the University of Georgia was had. In order that you might know what it is that I am addressing myself to, I will attempt to demonstrate it by use of this blackboard [fol. 533] or greenboard. Can you make anything out of, first of all, the formation on the other half of the board? If you can't see it, I will move it closer to you.

A. That is what we refer to as a slot formation.

Q. All right. Can you make anything out of the formation on the lower part of the board?

A. That is also a slot formation with a weak side end spread out.

Q. I want to direct a few questions to the formations on the upper half of the board described you as a slot formation. I want to ask you, Coach Bryant, is that what is known in the trade—when I say "the trade" I mean the college football trade—as a normal slot formation?

A. Yes, sir. The terminology differs in different places, but I think most anyone would refer to that as a normal slot formation.

Q. And when you use the word "normal" in describing that slot formation, that would include the split end being out three yards from the tackle?

A. Normally three yards from the tackle to open up the running lane.

Q. In the University of Georgia spring football game in 1962, which of course, is open to the public as all spring games are, did the University of Alabama send any scouts to Athens, along with other universities that Georgia was going to play, to scout, to see what the University of Georgia had?

A. We certainly did.

Q. Did the University of Georgia similarly send its scouts to Birmingham—to Tuscaloosa at the University of Alabama spring game?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In 1962?

A. Yes, sir; I saw a couple of them myself.

[fol. 534] Q. The individuals that do the scouting for the various universities return from the game that they are scouting and prepare what is known as what?

A. A scouting report.

Q. Are you familiar with the scouting report prepared for the University of Alabama covering the spring game of the University of Georgia in the spring of 1962?

A. Sir, I am not entirely familiar with it now because that was our opening game, and I have studied many since then, but I am somewhat familiar with it.

Q. Was the formation on the upper half of the board which you have described as a normal slot used by the University of Georgia in its spring game of 1962?

A. According to our report; yes, sir; a hundred and nine times.

Q. Sir?

A. According to our report, a hundred and nine times.

The Marshal: Let's have order, please.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. I will return to a discussion of that for a moment, but let me drop to the formation at the bottom of the board which, as you described it, is a slot, a normal slot right with the left end out fifteen yards. Did the University of Georgia employ that formation in its spring game of 1962?

A. Sir, I don't believe so. I could be wrong; I don't believe so, but they had used that formation, I think, the year before a few times.

[fol. 535] Q. Now, let's move forward to the fall of 1962. Football practice cannot begin before September 1st?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The University of Alabama, I assume, did begin its fall practice on September 1, 1962, as did the other universities in the Southeastern Conference?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the function of you, as head coach, and that of the assistant coaches during that period of September —from September 1st until the first game which was September the 22nd with reference to making plans, coaching, training, or whatever terminology should be used?

A. Well, to begin with, sir, we plan early more for conditioning, physical conditioning, and as the game approaches, well, then, we begin going over—well, before that, we go over plans that we use from year to year; in other words, our basic defenses, our basic offenses that we think we do fairly well with, and then as the game approaches we go into our game plans.

Q. When you use the word "game plans", do you mean to include that both your offensive and defensive formations?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you please relate to the Court and Jury, Coach Bryant, what you trained and coached your boys with respect to defensive formation to be expecting when they played the University of Georgia on September 22, 1962?

A. You want me—well, actually—

The Court: Does he want to go down to the board?

[fol. 536] The Witness: That is all right, Your Honor.

Mr. Schroder: Maybe you'd better use the board.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Go ahead and talk if you want to.

A. Basically speaking we felt like the University of Georgia had Tennessee tendencies and the University of Alabama, because they had coaches from the University of Tennessee and from the University of Alabama which over the years have played defense very well. Bob Ford was one of our coaches that went over with them the year before.

Q. We over with who?

A. Georgia. And we haven't played defensive too poorly. We felt like they would have some of our tendencies, so, basically speaking—I will put the football there in the center—basically speaking—and this is the important thing, we thought, defensively that they would be in a three-deep. Certain things you can do with a three-deep. Certain things you can't do.

Q. When you say "three-deep", please make it in layman's language.

A. Three-deep would be, you have two halfbacks and a safety man back here to cover the deep part of a field.

Q. All right, sir.

A. In other words, you win or lose first from passes, and if you have three-deep men back here, they play the deep part of the field. Now, the differences in that—do we have an eraser, sir?—is some teams, we did for years—

[fol. 537] Q. Before you knock that down; is that Georgia's defense or Alabama's?

A. I said, basically speaking, I thought they would have the Tennessee and Alabama tendencies because of the Tennessee success with it, and because we have had fairly good success, and Bob Ford is over there, plus the fact we saw them in spring practice with the three-deep. The difference—

The Court: Why the Tennessee tendencies? Was there a Georgia coach from Tennessee?

The Witness: I think they have at least one from there, and we have Tennessee tendencies because over the years they beat us so many times, we tried to join them, but here is the difference. Here is a three-deep and here is a four-deep. These men vary. But, basically, we thought that they would certainly be a three-deep. Does that answer your question, sir?

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. That is a defensive formation—

A. Yes, sir.

Q.—that you have described?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you please describe now for the Court and Jury what offensive formations you trained your boys to expect at the Georgia—during the Georgia-Alabama game?

A. Well, first of all, sir, having been in the—as we call it—we call it the slots; first of all, they were in this slot a hundred and nine times in the spring game. We have to assume that they are going to be in that in our game. [fol. 538] However, since we used the same thing some, we don't feel like—we didn't feel like that we would have to work as much against that if it was something they didn't use. Next to this particular offense, this thing that we thought, based on their personnel, particularly the big fine—I should say great end, Babb, I expected fully—fully expected them to be in a wide slot, a wide slot like this with the end way out. The reason for putting him way out, of course, is to get him off the line of scrimmage where you can't hold him up.

First of all, let's go back here. If he is in here, and here is a linebacker and here is a halfback, and here is a safety, you can mix it up and cover him or attempt to cover him with different people. One time you can try him on it; the next time you can try him on it; and occassionally you can put him on it, but when you put him way out like that, then the halfback has to move out, and not only can't he get off the—

Q. When you say "the halfback," you mean the Alabama halfback?

A. The defensive halfback has to move out with with him, and you—you can no longer mix it up with three different men covering, which makes it more difficult. All you can do then—all I think you can do, you can double cover him occasionally with this man out like that. Now, then, when you put him out here, it certainly weakens your running strength in here. It has not weakened anything over here, because that man can take one-step motion and be there and have your normal defense. So, you have weakened your running attack here.

So, in addition to that, I fully expected them to take this man here and move him over here, giving him strength over here with this one man still out, way out here, [fol. 539] fifteen yards or so, and of course, that is an unbalanced line. You haven't weakened yourself too much to the weak side, but you have—you have at least a yard or a yard and a half less distance to go to get there. You have strengthened yourself to the strong side running tremendously. So, with this unbalanced thing which you drop an end off out here and double cover him a lot, it is much more difficult to drop the end off because you have running strength in here, and I fully expected them to do that.

I fully expected them to move him from side to side because there was a great deal of difference on our own halfback defense plus the field position. An important thing is field position. We expected occasionally for him to be out from regular formation, but you can see when you put him out there on regular formation, that you have taken away a lot of your strength right in here, and we use the same formation, and I use—we take away a lot of our strength right in there. Does that answer your question, sir?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. If it doesn't, let's go over it again.

Q. Let me—let me go to the greenboard here for a minute, now, while we have it here. Without regard to what the name is up here, do different teams use different names for set formations?

A. Different terminology; yes, sir.

Q. Well, we have been using Georgia's terminology when we were referring to this particular formation, and it seems they call it a pro-set, that is a normal slot with the other—the other side end out fifteen yards?

A. Well, we call it—I think it is simpler to call it slot, [fol. 540] because they know what they are saying when they say slot, and in this case, left end out.

Q. Fifteen yards?

A. Eight, fifteen; we put him out seven sometimes.

Q. Did the University of Georgia employ that formation in its game against the University of Alabama on September 22, 1962?

A. Unfortunately they did; we didn't expect that much of them.

Q. What sort of a defense did you have planned by the use of that formation setup?

A. Well, sir, first of all—

Q. Just erase that out.

A. Yes, sir. First of all, we thought that to beat Georgia the first thing we had to do was stop Rexler—

Q. Rakestraw?

A. —Rakestraw, the great quarterback, and we would rather have him passing than running. In other words, he does both very well, but we thought we would prefer him to throw than run with the ball. Although in the latter part of the season, the year before after he got over his injuries, he did both very well. So, what we decided to do, something we didn't do very often—let's put the three-deep back here—we decided to play a five-man line, a five-three, or what amounts to a five-three. We usually play a rover, a wide tackle six, a wide tackle—I will show that. We, normally speaking, play defense like this, and put an extra man to the formation.

Q. To strengthen the formation?

A. To strengthen the formation, or to the field position. In other words, if that was on the hashmark—

Q. Tell us what a hashmark is?

A. A hashmark is the mark there where they put the [fol. 541] ball down. Sixty-seven per cent—normally speaking, sixty-seven percent of your football is played on one of the two hashmarkings. You are only in the middle thirty-three per cent of the time, normally speaking.

Q. That is with reference to side-to-side?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right.

A. We either put it to the formation of the extra man or if it is along the side of the field we put the extra man or double-wobble, meaning by double-wobble—let's take the halfback, move a little wider out, move this safety over a little bit more, and this man here plays a little deeper because he has an extra man up there to take care of that area. But we were afraid on that defense that their fine quarterback would hurt us coming out there on the option, either way, running or passing. We decided—wait a minute; before I leave that, if we don't play that defense we will play what we call our north category, and move the guards. In other words, with our ends there, our tackles here, our linebackers here and have the guards either move like that or play balanced, and that becomes a stack, you can see where one is stacked behind the other, but it is a balanced defense because we have as many men on one side as we do on the other. But there, again, in certain situations we don't want to bring our ends in there hard to contain their quarterback to make him throw the ball, because we don't know we can cover the flat, but we want to contain him.

So, for that game and for every game, for that matter, we have a new defense every week. It may vary. May not be much change, but the other defenses play year in and year out, but for this particular game, in an effort to [fol. 542] contain him quickly, we wanted to put out two men here, depending on the split, and see how fast they could get back here to contain Rakestraw and make him have to throw instead of run with the football. Now, then, in doing that, then we had to put—we put our tackles here in different places. But let's put them right here, and we will put a guard behind a guard expecting them to read and slant to stop the trap. Now—

Q. Everytime you say something like "reading" and "trap"—

A. What I mean by "reading," gentlemen, is you are sitting and watching this man; if he blocks down to that man, common sense would tell you that the play is probably coming in here, and he can go there. If he blocks out here, common sense will tell you the play is coming in here, and he will go here. If he sets for a pass, common sense will tell you it is a pass, and you start back. If he pulls in that direction, common sense will tell you the play is over in that direction, and you go in that direction. If he pulls in this direction, common sense will tell you the play is over here, and you will run through or come in this direction. They are there to try to stop the trap, to mix it up, and still pursue the play.

Now, then, over here we will take our fullback and either pull him up on the line or put him behind here. That was our plan, or put him behind there to where he would be in the pass defense over on this side. On the other side, on the other side most of the time we were going to cover the flat with the halfback, and we had a great fullback player named Jordan, and we wanted to put Leroy right there because this side of the formation hasn't changed, and with one-step motion, that becomes a strong side. We wanted [fol. 543] Mr. Jordan there, because there he can get to both sides of the field, and he could make every tackle. That was our 'Bama defense at the Georgia game, the opening game.

Q. All right, sir. Was Alabama in the defense which you have just described when the University of Georgia first went into its normal slot with the weak side end out fifteen yards, being the one described on the board?

A. As I recall it, sir, we were in that 'Bama defense.

Q. That is the defense you have just described?

A. In the first of the game, five or six times and we were hurt on it. That doesn't speak very highly for me putting it in there, but we were hurt on it, I think four times, and we should have been hurt on it the other times. I wasn't against this; it wasn't a sound defense.

Q. Is that—

A. Against this it would be a sound defense, but not this. What they ran in the spring, it was a sound defense, but this—this it was not.

Q. Will you explain why it was not?

A. I certainly will, sir. All right, we put Jordan over here where the action is going to be. Lo and behold, they take the big, old, tall end and move him way out here, and we have got to put somebody out there with him, so that takes Jordan out there, and we move this man in a little, stunt this one over here, and they were smart enough to take our best football player and take him out of the park to where he couldn't do anything but play pass defense and get all mixed up, and we were counting on him being in here where he could get the folks.

[fol. 544] Q. The University of Alabama defense setup, then, was not adjusted for the formation which you—which is drawn on the second—on the lower part of that?

A. That was supposed to have been our basic defense, sir. If we know we are going to get a lot of this, we expect this occasionally, but if we know we are going to get a lot of this we are going to play what we call split, which comes in what we call a north category that I showed you a while ago where we have the same number of people on each side, and where we can drop an end out there to take away the very short passes, keep the pressure off the halfback.

Q. Therefore, if you were expecting what is described there as the pro formation, you would have prepared your defenses differently than you did as you have described here?

A. Only the 'Bama defense; the rest of them were fine.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when they did go into the so-called—what Georgia calls the pro-set, that had the effect of Leroy Jordan, who is your best linebacker, I assume—

A. He was our best football player, sir.

Q. Yes, sir. That took him out of the play?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a result of which, I believe you said, the University of Georgia did successfully employ that on at least four—they only ran it five times, I think the testimony yesterday showed, and they did succeed with that formation four out of the five times that they used it?

[fol. 545] A. I don't know whether it was three or four, sir, but we should have been hurt every time we were in it.

Q. Was something done to take care of the situation or to adjust your defenses later on in the game?

A. Well, we are not stark idiots. We will not do the same thing. I don't remember how soon. I know at the half we went over it, and we didn't play it any the second half. Jordan was calling the defenses, and knowing Leroy, I doubt if I told him to change, but knowing him, when they start taking him way out yonder, he will change and get back in here where he belongs, whether I told him to or not, and I think any good, smart football player would.

Q. You may return to the stand. In preparing your teams for the fall session, do coaches during the summer exchange films with other coaches of the games that their respective teams have played during the summer?

A. Oh, normally speaking, yes, sir.

Q. Is that—does that sort of an arrangement exist between the University of Georgia and Alabama?

A. Yes, sir; and other schools. We have already exchanged with them, I think for this year.

Q. And the purpose of that—will you describe the purpose of that, please, sir?

A. Well, the purpose of that is to chart what they do, field position, number one; down yardage, number two, but to find out what they do what as best you can or when they have done what and who does it.

Q. And since all universities, or universities do do that, there is nothing wrong with that, with universities swapping films with each other?

A. Oh, no; everyone does it. The Conference approves it, N. C. A. A.; everybody approves it.

[fol. 546] Q. And the film, for example, that you exchanged with the University of Georgia during the summer of 1962, you were then given an opportunity to review every game they played during the year 1961?

A. Sir, I don't remember whether—how many we exchanged with them, and I personally don't review them all, but our staff does, and our players will before the game.

Q. And that is with the idea of learning as much as you can about each other? They are doing the same thing with Alabama films, are they not?

A. You can bet your life they are.

Q. And that is the—the idea of that is to learn as much as each coach can about the other team with reference to its formations, its plays, its defenses, and its personnel?

A. And personnel; yes, sir.

Q. In the last—let's see; the Georgia-Alabama game was played in September, 1962, September the 22nd—

The Court: Just a moment. The defense counsel, in fairness, wants the blackboard moved back. The Marshal can move it back.

Mr. Schroder: Sure.

The Court: If you are going to use that any further, you can keep it.

Mr. Schroder: No, sir. I will assure you it was not intentional.

[fol. 547] By Mr. Schroder:

Q. In the week of the game, which was played on September 22, 1962, or—I don't remember whether Friday was on the 13th, or Thursday; well, September the 13th, regardless of whether it was Thursday or Friday, from September the 13th until September the 22nd, what, if any, significant changes did you make in the Alabama defensive plan for the University of Georgia?

A. I don't think we would ever make any significant changes, sir. I think you set your basic stuff down normally speaking as you are drawing near the game. If you will—I say "if" and I am always apologizing to the team for saying "if"—I say if they should do this we will do that, or if they do that—probably do it on the day of the game, right on up, because based on something they could do, something that they ought to be doing, based on their personnel, and something you saw somebody do ten years before, you get—you want them to be sound; you want them to feel like they are prepared for any and everything. so, we will say, if they do this, we will do that.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. And as I say, I always apologize about all those "ifs."

Q. The purpose of that is, I believe you said, to get your boys' confidence, or if anything new is thrown against them they will be prepared?

A. Yes, sir.

The Court: I believe you are leading him, Mr. Schroder.

[fol. 548] Mr. Schroder: I didn't mean to, Your Honor. I thought he had already testified to it.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. What is the purpose of that?

A. Well, the purpose is when they go on that field, I want them to feel like—I don't care if it rains, sleets, or snows, if they come out in nine spreads, whatever they do, we are prepared; it is a challenge to them, between me and that fellow I am playing on the other side.

Mr. Schroder: Let me see the notes, please.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. I believe you testified a moment ago with reference to the recorded—when I say "recorded," that is a bad word—with respect to the telephone calls that the records of the company showed were made on September 13 and September 16, you had no indication of what might have been said?

A. I don't have any recollection that they were made, but if they were made, I do not have any recollection what was said.

Q. You were, at that time, head of the athletic department at Alabama, as Coach Butts was at Georgia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tell us what there is that could be discussed by—or what ought to be and what is discussed between athletic directors before their two teams meet?

A. If we talked, if we did, some things that we could have talked about or should have talked about—

[fol. 549] Mr. Cody: Your Honor, I want to object to that.

The Court: Yes, sir; I think that is highly speculative. I will let him do this, Mr. Schroder. I will let him testify what athletic directors of that nature—

Mr. Schroder: Subjects they would discuss.

The Court: —if he calls to other athletic directors, and the usual procedure.

Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir.

The Court: But as to the contingencies, and "we could have talked," I think that is too speculative.

Mr. Schroder: I withdraw it.
The Court: All right.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. You had been athletic director of the University of Alabama for how many years?

A. Beginning the sixth year, sir.

Q. Were you also athletic director of the other universities you mentioned?

A. I was at Texas A & M, and I was not at the University of Kentucky and University of Maryland.

[fol. 550] Q. You have been athletic director for how many years now?

A. I guess nine.

Q. When a school is preparing to meet another school in a football game, what is the custom among athletic directors with regard to what arrangements have to be made, and do they talk about matters such as that?

A. Sir, I don't know what the customs are, because I am a football coach too, so, certainly, the arrangement has to be made with the athletic directors and approved for everything, approved by them. Being a football coach, too, I don't believe I could give you an intelligent answer on what a director of athletics would do on it.

Q. Did you have matters personally between yourself and Coach Butts—you spoke of many conversations that you did have with him during 1962, both before September 22 and after September 22; did you all have matters of a personal nature that you discussed.

A. I don't think we did. I think we had many matters that we discussed at one time or another pertaining to our football program and the football game or games, and one financial matter, I think, we had in common that I have discussed with him quite a few times.

Q. Was that an investment in some company?

A. Yes, sir.

The Court: You mean you all had a common investment?
The Witness: Yes, sir.

[fol. 551] By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Coach Bryant, I am going to hand you what has been identified as Defendant's Exhibit 12, and for your information that has been identified and authenticated by the witness George Burnett as representing notes he made during—

A. I have got to borrow some specs here, sir; I left my specs on the plane.

Mr. Cody: I will lend him mine.
The Witness: These are curious too.
The Marshal: Let's have order.
The Witness: I will try these.
Mr. Schroder: Can you read with those all right?
The Witness: Yes, sir; I think so.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Starting with Page 1, Coach Bryant, there is a notation at the top which reads "Bear - Bryant. Wally - Butts," is there anything unusual about that entry, if it relates to what you and Butts were supposed to have been talking about over the telephone with each other?

[fol. 552] A. The only thing that I can say there, sir, is as long as I have known Coach Butts he has never called me "Bear," if he is supposed to be talking to me, never.

Q. How does he address you?

A. He calls me "Paul." If he is speaking somewhere, like in Cullman the week before our game, he will refer to me as "Bear" because hoping the people will know I am the Alabama coach, I guess, and make his stories funnier, but he has never called me "Bear," ever.

Q. Let's pass on now to the next note or the only other note on that Page 1, which reads, "Reismueller, greatest in history"; does that mean anything to you, and if it does, will you tell us what it is?

A. Well, Rissmiller we thought was a terrific prospect, and we tried to recruit him, but they beat us for him. I have heard Coach Butts at banquets—maybe not at banquets, but on press talks with me or talking with a group comparing personnel there then with personnel he had, but I don't ever recall him comparing Rissmiller with some of his great tackles in the past when we were talking, but I think he is a terrific football player and sorry we had to play against him.

Q. I believe you said you were familiar with his capabilities?

A. Very familiar with them; yes, sir; we tried to get him.

Q. Turning to Page 2, the first line there, "Rakestraw to right"; then it has a line drawn under that.

Mr. Schroder: I am unable to know, Your Honor, whether that is one entry or whether it is connected with the entry below it.

[fol. 553] By Mr. Schroder:

Q. So, Mr. Witness, will you take them separately, see there in the first line reading "Rakestraw to right," and tell us what, if anything, that would mean to you, and then take the next entry below that by itself and tell us what, if anything, that entry would mean to you, and then take them both together and tell us.

A. "Rakestraw to right" wouldn't mean anything to anyone, I don't think. "Optional left pass", to me that would mean it is going to be a run or a pass.

Q. That is what "optional" means?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have got the option of running or passing?

A. Running or passing; yes, sir. "If can block corner man keeps running", I think that is right. If my little boy didn't do that, I would want to spank him. You block them, you keep running. If you don't block them, you would throw the ball; I guess that is what it means.

Q. All right, sir. The next entry reads, "well disciplined ball club, added two coaches"; what, if any, comment would you like to make about that—maybe—does that mean anything to you in general or in particular?

A. Well, no, sir; not really. But if that was said, I would think I would be the one saying it about our ball club, and we had a couple of new coaches.

Q. Did you consider your team to be a well disciplined ball club?

A. Yes, sir; self disciplined.

Q. Turning to Page 3, Coach Bryant, the first note at the top of that page reads, and I quote, "on side guard pulls on sweep"; what, if anything, does that entry mean to you as related to either your team or the University of Georgia's team?

[fol. 554] A. Well, to me that would mean that the on side guard pulls on the sweep. We pull our on side guard on the sweep—we don't pull him; we have a signal where he swaps assignment with the next man, but I don't think—I could be wrong; you can see if I am—they didn't pull the on side guard. Missouri does it, and they do it well. They are the only team I know of that does a real fine job of pulling the on side guard.

Q. Will you please step down and use part of this board where I can preserve the other, because some other witness may want to use it, or if you erase it, put it back just like it is, and please indicate or describe to the Jury what you mean by an exchange or a swing or a switch.

A. First place, sir, gentlemen, the on side is the side where you are going, where the ball winds up. The guard pulling and leading the play around here; that in our terminology that would be pulling. But we have these two men on our sweep; they are responsible for 1, 2 wherever they are lined up. Let's say we have got a stack like that, a defensive man there, and one there. The on side, the man in front is 1; the second man is 2. Well, this man's assignment is 1, and he is way outside, and it is a very difficult block; it is an impossible block. So then we will say a signal—actually our signal is "green".

Q. What is it? "Green"?

A. "Green."

Q. Who says that?

A. This man would be the one who makes the call, because he is the one that has got the impossible block. He would say "green", and this tackle would swing here, he would swing or pull right around there and block him. He would go on to that point there and try to block who wound up as number 2.

[fol. 555] Q. Is that—from what you have drawn there on the board, would it be correct to say that is an area blocking?

A. That is what we call it; yes, sir; area blocking. You go to an area, and the number that is there when you get to that area, that is the man you block.

Q. The tackle would take the guard because the opposing defender is on the outside, and he can't block?

A. The area outside the guard; yes, sir.

Q. So the tackle takes him when this man says "green"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The tackle blocks him and the guard then takes over the tackle who was supposed to block right in this area here, whoever it happens to be?

A. Whoever winds up down there when he gets there.

Q. That is known as a "swing block" or an "exchange block"?

A. Exchange block. We call it a "slot block" or an "exchange block" where they are swapping assignments.

Q. The next entry is described or reads as follows: "don't overshift". Now, Coach Bryant, what, if anything, does that mean to you, relating the question to the University of Georgia and/or the University of Georgia football team?

A. Well, both of us use—we overshift a lot, and so do they.

Q. When you say "overshift," would you describe that to the Jury what it means?

A. Yes, sir; it was something that I had up here earlier about putting a rover to one side or the other. There are different ways of doing it. We move the rover over. Let's say, now, this time that we are in a balanced defense, and we have a man here and a man here and a man here, and [fol. 556] one here, and one here, and one here, with three deep, and a linebacker back here; that, of course, is a balanced defense. To us that is a north category. Any balanced defense, regardless of where they are lined up, where it is the same number of people on each side, it is a north category. A while ago when I took a man and put him on the other side, or vice-versa, to us, that is east and west, actually, and it is a rover defense; to overshift, you move these people in or out. This man will move in here pretty tight; this man will move over here; this man here would move there, and you would have your end there, with your linebacker there, and you would wind up with the same thing we referred to as an "overshift" or "rover defense."

Q. Thank you, sir.

A. Does that answer it?

Q. Yes, sir. Is it or was it your testimony that the University of Alabama does that and did do it in that game?

A. Oh, we have done it for years, sir, and I think we have done a lot of it. I didn't check the film on it. I think they did a lot of it against us.

Q. In the 1962 game?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The next entry reads, "Woodward commits fast-safety man." Obviously that is referring to some one particular individual. Could you amplify as to what that means to you?

A. Well, to me—I thought he was a real fine defensive safety or defensive football player, and to me committing quickly, that would have to be forward. I don't believe anybody would commit quickly in the wrong direction. So, if they are on defense, there is a safety; that would have [fol. 557] to mean he comes up fast, to me.

Q. Do you know whether or not Woodward does do what you have just described there?

A. I actually don't. If he does, I ought to be "bored for the hollow," because we don't throw a pass in there. If he comes up fast, we should have been throwing in there, and we haven't.

Q. Next entry reading, "weak defense, anybody except Blackburn"; evidently—I mean, obviously the notes are referring again to a specific individual. Would you comment on that, if it means anything to you related to either team?

A. It doesn't mean anything to me. I was looking at our scouting report this morning, and, of course, they have corrected this. It will be strong this year, but in our scouting report they said the whole secondary was weak.

Q. That was the scouting report that your scouts had prepared?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For the Alabama-Georgia game?

A. Yes, sir. The secondary was the weakness.

Q. Does the name "Blackburn" mean anything to you?

A. The only thing that I—the only thing that I remember about it, I think he was ineligible and got eligible before we played.

Q. Top of Page 5, "Baer slot right, right end, split right end out," and we are assuming, without knowing, that "Baer" means "Babb", but at any rate, uncorrected or corrected, does that entry mean anything to you when related to the Georgia or Alabama football team?

A. If I just saw that I would think it was me, ause [fol. 558] of the Baer part, and secondly because o the formation that we had used last year, ninety per cent of the time, probably ninety-five per cent of the time.

Q. Does Alabama employ the split right—slot right, split right end out?

A. We employ the slot right, left end out, and we also employ the slot right left end over and out the other way, not a great deal, but occasionally, and come out of the huddle quickly, hoping it might foul the defense up; they might be overshifting in the wrong direction, sir.

Q. Next entry reads, "long count, left half in motion"; what, if anything, Coach Bryant, does that mean to you when related to the University of Georgia and/or the University of Alabama football teams?

A. I don't recall whether Georgia ever did that much to us or not. I do recall that we played Georgia in Birmingham when Coach Butts was coaching, that we used it quite a bit, and hurt them with it quite a bit, and I do recall that by putting a wide man, and I have talked with Coach Butts about this because he has hurt—he has hurt everybody, but he has hurt the four-spoke defense, the type that Tech and Tulane, and a lot of them employ, putting a wide man out and long motion toward him, and throwing certain patterns off of that. When we hurt his team in Birmingham, it was more about the keeping; a boy kept it, and ran with it. That's right, we do that.

Q. All right. You don't know whether Georgia does it or not?

A. I believe year before last—I may be wrong—that with an unbalanced line, with the end wide, that they did it a couple of times. Now, either that, or I saw them do it in a film, but I can't be sure, sir.

[fol. 559] Q. Did Georgia use an unbalanced line against Alabama in 1961?

A. Yes, sir; they did, and I thought it was a real smart strategy.

Q. Did the University of Georgia use an unbalanced line against Alabama in 1962?

A. Sir, I really don't remember. I expected it, but I really don't remember whether they did or not.

Q. The next entry reads, "best since Trippi," with the name "Porterfield" under the line I just read; what, if anything does that mean to you, Coach Bryant, when related to the University of Georgia football team?

A. Sir, I don't know. I have heard Coach Butts bragging on Georgia's players, and they all get better after you quit coaching; mine will get better, too; but I never heard him compare anybody with Mr. Trippi. I don't know what that means.

Q. The top of Page 5, there is an entry reading, again, "Baer on a hook on goal line"; does that mean anything to you related to either your team or that of the University of Georgia?

A. Well, only thing, sir, when you get down that close, you either have to hook or go out of bounds or something. I mean, out of the end zone. The area is so small, you at least have to cut your patterns down, regardless of whether it is a hook or sideline cut or what, because particularly on a hook you are going to the end zone, and of course, you are out of bounds when you go over that, so I think that would apply to anybody's football.

Q. Next entry, "slot to right, ends normal, (3 yards)"; as you read that entry, would you try to diagram it on the board here, please, sir?

[fol. 560] A. Yes, sir. It don't—really—what did it say? Slot right, ends three yards; it really doesn't mean a great deal to me; both ends out three yards. I don't think they are out wide enough to change secondary defense. You have got to get a man out, way out, so we don't do it, and I don't—that doesn't mean a great deal to me. We do put them way out like this. We did against Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl to make it difficult to cover the whole field and making it difficult to put two men, which we call double covering, on two different people, but so far as ends three-yard slot, that doesn't mean anything to me.

A. "Right halfback on fly, left halfback, quarterback," don't make sense to me; I don't know what it is talking about.

Q. Top of the next page, "Wide slot till goal line"; that was read by me from the notes there. Now, does that or not mean anything to you when related to either Georgia or Alabama's football teams?

A. Well, normally everyone, we do, I am sure, I think everyone does, the nearer you get to the goal line the more you cut down your formation to help—

Q. What do you mean by "cut down"?

A. Pull them closer together in an effort to keep leaking people from coming through, people leaking through the seams and throwing you a loop. When you get down there you don't want people coming from the inside out and [fol. 561] throwing you a loop, and I assume that is what that means; I don't know, sir.

Q. Next entry reads, "can't quick kick"; does that mean anything to you when related to the University of Georgia's football team?

A. No, sir; it doesn't; to ours either. We quick kick, and Georgia—I don't think it quick kicked this year, but Georgia quick kicked us last year, I think; if they didn't they quick kicked—I remember seeing them quick kick.

Q. The next entry reads, "slot right, right half on fly, screen on him." Does that mean anything to you?

A. No, sir; I don't know what that means.

Q. Can you mentally reproduce the picture?

A. Well, if "fly" means the man is in motion—I don't know whether it means motion. There is your right slot. Let's see what it says; "slot right, right half on fly." I would assume that that means him in motion. "Screen to him," I would say that it means him screening out here, and offhand, I wouldn't think this is a very sound play.

Q. When you say "screen to him," that means—

A. Let the lineman come through and send these people to take the secondary people back and try to have an area in here, and these linemen, after blocking or coming out here, setting up a wall or some interference in front of this man, and he goes back a little deeper and drops the ball out here to him the flat, and he has some people in front of him to run interference for him, and the men already downfield would come back and block people like that, and if it works, you get a long gainer out of it.

Q. Do you have—

A. Tech does that very well.

Q. Do you have any play where you screen to the fly man as—do you know what the fly man is?

[fol. 562] A. I assume that it is the man in motion, sir, but I don't know. We refer to it as something else.

Q. You don't use the terminology "fly"?

A. No, sir.

Q. All right, sir. The last entry on Page 6 reads, "29-0 series, Baer catches everything they throw"; does that mean anything to you, Coach Bryant?

A. No, sir.

Q. In regards to either your team or the University of Georgia?

A. No, sir; it doesn't.

Q. You do not have any series by that name?

A. We have a—we have a play 29, sir, but we don't throw off of it. It is a fullback option.

Q. Top of Page 7, "slot right left end out fifteen yards." Is that the formation that appears on the bottom half of this board here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I believe you have already testified at some length about Georgia's employing that formation in its 1962 game?

A. Yes, sir; and it is our basic formation. This is the first year we have had it as our basic formation, because we had a great passer, Joe Namath.

Q. N-a-m-a-t-h?

A. -t-h. We had a great end in Richard Williamson, and that is our basic formation. We had big strong halfback over here, Wilson, who would block like an end, and great runner, "Cotton" Clark. We thought that was the only formation for us to use. That was the formation that we ran in over ninety per cent of the time.

Q. When Georgia employed it against you, is that the formation that you had Leroy Jordan out in the pasture, as you said?

[fol. 563] A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right, sir. The next and last entry, "drop end off, contain with tackle," having a "Georgia" and an arrow pointing to "drop," and having "Defense" written below it within parenthesis. Did that entry mean anything to you as related to either Georgia's or Alabama's football team?

A. Well, it does to us, sir, because we have been doing that for years. We drop the end off and try to contain with a tackle. I might say the last time we played Coach Butts' team in Athens, he also broke us of doing it because he hurt us badly, but that is what we wound up doing in this game.

Q. Do you know whether or not the University of Georgia uses that same defense?

A. They use it some; yes, sir; I don't recall how much.

Q. That's all the notes. Well, there is an entry, final entry; you might read that and say if that means anything to you?

A. Well, the "614" is one of our office numbers. That is the only thing that means to me.

PAUL WILLIAM BRYANT having resumed the stand, testified further as follows:

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Coach Bryant, returning to the Saturday Evening Post article for a moment, it reads, Page 81, Column 1, that the telephone operator was overheard to say this to the [fol. 564] other party on the phone, " 'Coach Bryant is out on the field, but he'll come to the phone. Do you want to hold, Coach Butts, or shall we call you back?' " This call, although the Post article reads that it took place on Friday morning, September 14, I believe that the notes which you just had in your hand indicate the man listening in one the call recorded that it happened on Thursday morning, September 13. I want to direct two questions to you with respect to that quotation I just read from the article. The first one is, how close is the practice field at Tuscaloosa on the University campus to the telephone there, the nearest telephone in the office there?

A. To 641, sir?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Well, it's three blocks, but since this came out, I have timed it, and knowing where the car was, walking out of my office and getting in the car and driving to the practice field and going through the gate and walking out to where I would be on the practice field and coming back, it takes thirteen minutes for me to do it, knowing where the car was and knowing I could get in the gate, and so forth.

Q. Does the date September 13, 1962, have any significance to you since the notes here that you have been looking at a moment ago indicate that the telephone call was intercepted at about 10:30 or 10:40 in the morning?

A. I don't know what you mean, sir.

Q. Was the University of Alabama practicing football on that day at that time?

A. No, sir; we were not. We had discontinued our two-day practice; we were not practicing that morning.

Q. Going further down Column 1 and reading again, this [fol. 565] quotation which is attributed to Burnett. "Butts also said that Rakestraw (Georgia quarterback Larry Rakestraw) tipped off what he was going to do by the way he held his feet. If one foot was behind the other, it meant he would drop back to pass. If they were together it meant he was setting himself to spin and hand off." Coach Bryant, to your knowledge, did Georgia quarterback Larry Rakestraw have the defect or deficiency described in that quotation which I described to you?

A. Not to my knowledge, sir.

Q. Would that have been of interest to an opposing coach or opposing players to know that a quarterback on the offensive team did have that tendency?

A. Well, sir, it might have been to some, but due to an experience I had once, it wouldn't have been to us.

Q. How is that?

A. We wouldn't have been interested at all.

Q. It is of no interest to know whether or not the quarterback is going to pass or run?

A. Well, if he knew that, but we knew that about a quarterback once, and we played him. We had gotten it out of a film, and we double checked it the week before, and I thought we were going to win the game, and the press and experts and so forth thought we were favored, and we played the quarterback, and were beaten thirty-four to seven or thirty-four to nothing, and I haven't been interested in what quarterbacks do anymore.

Q. What team was it?

A. It was L. S. U., that means Louisiana State University, L. S. U., when I was with Kentucky.

Q. There is one note among the others I reviewed with you before the recess this morning which one of my part[fol. 566] ners did not get the full answer, and I am not sure I did either, so I will ask you once more about it. It is on Page 4, and it reads, "Baer slot right, split right end out." Now, my question about that particular entry is this: does it mean anything to you with reference to the University of Georgia football team?

A. It does to our team, sir.

Q. Does it mean anything to you with reference to the University of Georgia's football team?

A. No, sir. However, the year before, and we were anticipating it this year, but they didn't have the slot, as I recall it. They had the end tight with the back which would actually be a wide slot with unbalance, but the way that is written there it doesn't mean anything to me as to the Georgia team.

Q. But you say it does mean something to you insofar as your team is concerned?

A. Yes, sir; it does; because our basic formation is the one on the bottom there which is slot right, left end out, and occasionally we will come up, and, of course, with that, your strength, your running strength is over here to your right.

Q. To here?

A. Yes, sir. But your throwing strength, I mean you have the type passer we have, he is out on the left, and they may put their rover or anyone may put their rover over there.

Q. When you say "rover"—

A. Double defending—

Q. The defending—

A. Double cover.

Q. All right, sir.

A. You come out quickly with the end on the other side.

[fol. 567] Q. With the end over here?

A. Yes, sir; and we do that occasionally. And we want to go quickly when we do, hoping that they will have the rover on the wrong side or make a defensive mistake.

Q. Returning to the article, again, there is reference made in the article to the fact that something was said in the conversation, the alleged conversation about—and I can't find it at the moment—but about a telephone—whether or not Coach Butts was going to be at home on Sunday, and that you were to call him back on Sunday. I believe I asked you about that a moment ago, and you said you had no independent recollection of it, and that you had learned only by looking at the telephone records that there was conversation on Sunday between somebody using a phone in Tuscaloosa and someone using a phone at Coach Butts' residence.

Mr. Cody: Well, now, I want to object to Mr. Schroder testifying, Your Honor.

Mr. Schroder: I am not trying to—

Mr. Cody: I don't mind it if you will take the stand.

The Court: Yes, sir; I think you can ask him—the proper method—I sustain the objection. I think the proper method would be, was there a phone call on that day, and what was the gist of the conversation, if you remember it.

[fol. 568] Mr. Schroder: All right, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Was there a phone call on that day from you to Coach Butts that you recall?

A. Not that I recall, sir, but according to our record, our telephone record that we had, a call was made.

Q. All right, sir. Do you or not know the substance of it? Do you know what was said?

A. On that particular time?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Were any other calls made by you on that day?

A. According to my—our records, and this surprised me, because actually I thought I was in Birmingham doing a commercial for Coca-Cola, but according to the record from the telephone company I also talked with Coach Darrell Royal.

Q. Who?

A. Darrell Royal at the University of Texas shortly before the call was made to Coach Butts' number.

Q. Do you have any knowledge about what you talked to Coach Darrell Royal about?

A. It had to be football, but I don't know.

Q. How long did that one last?

A. I think according to our records thirty-seven minutes.

Q. During September, 1962, did you or not have occasions during which you discussed matters with Coach Wallace Butts?

A. Yes, sir; both personally and over the telephone.

[fol. 569] Q. Will you tell us what some of the matters were that you did discuss with him?

A. Well, some of the things that I know I discussed with him, I don't know when, sir, but first of all it would be schedules. I don't mean this is in any certain order of importance, but schedules, because we have discussed—been discussing over and over about the advisability of moving the game further up into the year, about playing over there, whether or not to play the game in Tuscaloosa or in Birmingham, for Georgia to buy some lights and get them up there where we can play at night and draw a lot of people.

I know that we are bound to have discussed tickets. We certainly should have, because I don't think they have the IBM machines that we have to keep up with the tickets. His ticket office could never tell us how many tickets they had sold or how many they had left, and consequently when we played the University of Georgia we had a sell-out. We have four or five thousand outside that can't get in, and later on they send us back several hundred, five hundred tickets that we could have sold a dozen times, and I should have been talking with him about that, whether I was or not.

You have always got problems—not problems, but you have got to discuss your band situation. They don't just walk up and march in. They have to have preparations made for it. As I recall it, maybe one or two high schools—I don't recall—but they were very fine, did a wonderful job. They represented Georgia last year. We could have been talking about that.

We could have been talking about what time they wanted to work out; I don't know.

[fol. 570] We could have been talking about this investment we are both interested in; I don't know.

Q. Do you know whether or not you were talking to him about the enforcement policies of certain rules?

A. I was leading that because—yes, sir; I don't know about that particular day, but I discussed it with him several times. He was in Buffalo at an informal meeting, and there were several—we were directed by—in writing from the Commissioner and from the NCAA, or the Coaches'

Association, about the way they were going to interpret or enforce the butting or the unnecessary butting or the late whistle the butt block, and I still don't know what they meant, but when Wally returned from the meeting in Buffalo, he called me, and I appreciated it very much. He didn't only say Alabama, but since we play defense pretty hard, I think he said, "I think this was directed at you and L.S.U. and maybe someone else," but said "it is something you should know, because the directors are coming out with it." I don't know whether it come out then or not. "But there is something you should know, because it would be a shame for you or any team to lose a good player like Leroy Jordan," just using Leroy Jordan as an example, "any time, early in the game, or something, just because you didn't know how they were going to interpret the rule." It wasn't a rule change; it was an interpretation. So I asked Wally, I said, "When I see you, let's get together, and I will talk about this."

I did on a couple of occasions, I have talked with him about it on the phone. I went to a meeting in Birmingham where he made a talk about it. Commissioner Moore presided. We all—we wound up then in confusion. We invited Mr. Gardner to our campus to observe our practice. [fol. 571] We wanted him to see what we really taught, not so much to interpret the rule, but we wanted him to see what we taught, because I don't want to go out there on Saturday with folks coming in blowing whistles and me not knowing what they were blowing them about and costing us a football game. Although Mr. Gardner helped us tremendously, I didn't know how they were going to interpret the rule until about the third game, because you play and you see how they are going to act, and I am sure I talked with him about that on numerous occasions.

I talked with him about football, football in general, because that is my business; that is my hobby; and I just talk to him in general about football. I know I have talked to him about our football. I know I have talked to him about his football, particularly his passing game, because he is the greatest passing coach this area has ever known, and most of us, what little we know about passing, we learned it from him. I had talked this over with several about passes in particular, but we could never make it go. We scored a touchdown against the University of Tennessee this year, and I think it was responsible for this game, because we hadn't been scoring on it. And another one was on a pass that he has hurt everybody on, particularly Georgia Tech or a team using the Georgia Tech defense with a wide man, whether it is a back or end, and a long motion in running a deep circle, a deep side line, and I know I have talked to him about that, because those are two things we wanted to do.

I have talked to him, I am sure, a lot of times about football in general. You can't get two coaches together when they don't talk about that.

Q. Is there anything unusual about that?

[fol. 572] A. About them talking?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I don't know. I think I have read where a whole lot of them say they do. I have talked a whole lot with different coaches. I used to talk a lot to Coach Dodd here at Georgia Tech. I used to talk a lot to Coach Woodruff down in Florida, and I probably shouldn't say this, but Coach Woodruff, is longer winded on the phone that Coach Butts is. You get him on there, and you are going to miss dinner.

Q. What was—let's see; the first game in 1962—what was the record of the University of Alabama in football in 1962?

A. We had a great bunch of youngsters that dedicated themselves, and they won them all.

Q. Well, did they receive any honor?

A. They received the National Champion, both news agencies, Associated Press and United Press, and the MacArthur Bowl Award for National Champions also.

Q. Coach Bryant, these notes that you and I have been discussing before the recess when we went over them one by one, would those notes, in your opinion as a football coach, be of any assistance to a football coach preparing his team to meet a team in the near future when the information contained in those notes is alleged to have been transmitted by someone connected with the team that you were preparing your team to play?

A. Sir, there may have been a couple of things in there I would have rather known than not known, but those notes, as far as I am concerned, would not help me one iota. As a matter of fact, all it would do is get me confused. The kind of things I want to know weren't in the notes.

[fol. 573] Q. Well, as a head football coach preparing your team for a game, what sort of things would you be interested in?

A. May I go to the board?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. First of all, what you do in the way of offense or defense or preparation is not going to win; those players wearing those uniforms are going to win and what they have in there is going to win. The things I would like to know, I would like to know the game plan, and the kind of stuff we have been talking about is not the game plan. The first thing I would like to know, they are a field position football team. The field, the sidelines and hashmarks are not going to change, so the first thing I would like to know, both offensively and defensively, is what this team is going to do over here on the hash mark, because they will be on the hashmark sixty-seven per cent of the time and I thought that Georgia, when I learned their game plans, which was last week, did a real fine job, because they came out and put their formation into the hashmark knowing that we overshifted or put our rover to the long side of the field, for at worse they were going to get a balanced line defense, they weren't going to have to block the extra man over there. That was real important. I wanted to know what they were going to do there. If I had known they were going to do that, then I would line up in a balanced defense and disguise. On the snap of the ball I would have two extra guys getting over here where they are going.

Now, then, in the middle of the field out here, in game plans we'd like to know what their plans were. I learned last week that their plans out here was to take their formation and put it one way, knowing that we were going to [fol. 574] overshift and put an extra man over here. See, we have one more man over here than we have over there. Now, they have us over here. They take a one-step motion, and they are back and their strength is over there, and they hurt us. That is what I'd like to know.

Now, the next thing I'd like to know is, you have eleven to fourteen or fifteen first downs in the ball game. You are going to get the ball, normally speaking, from eleven to fourteen or fifteen times. If you get it any more than that, you are getting beat and they are kicking off to you. What I want to know, both offensively and defensively, I want to know what they are going to do on first down, because it is a guessing game on first down. After the first down somebody has an advantage, see, so the first down—now, in our football, and I will be quiet, I know I am talking too much—but in our football, here is a twenty yard line and here is a twenty yard line, and I don't care, you can check the pros, the Georgia Tech or Georgia or South Carolina or Notre Dame, I don't care, anybody; there will be five to seven plays in this area here between the 20's, five to seven plays that is going to determine the game. It may be one down to make two yards; it—offensively or defensively. It may be one down to make sixteen yards, either offensively or defensively. It is going to be five to seven plays that is going to decide the game. I want to know what they are going to do on those five to seven plays. When they get down in here on the goal line, I don't care what they do. They only got eleven, and we are going—we don't care what they do down there.

So, if you will tell us what they are going to do field position-wise, and what they are going to do on first down, [fol. 575] and what they are going to do on these big downs, five to seven of them, then we have a game plan, and if you can't win then, why, you are playing somebody that is an awfully lot better than you are. Does that answer your question?

Q. Yes, sir; thank you. On the first page of the Saturday Evening Post article about you and Wallace Butts. I am going to read it to you, quote, "Not since the Chicago White Sox threw the 1919 World Series has there been a sports story as shocking as this one. This is the story of one fixed game of college football.

"Before the University of Georgia played the University of Alabama, last September 22, Wally Butts, athletic director of Georgia, gave Paul (Bear) Bryant, head coach of Alabama, Georgia's plays, defensive patterns, all the significant secrets Georgia's football team possessed.

"The corrupt here were not professional ball players gone wrong as in the 1919 Black Sox scandal. The corrupt here were not disreputable gamblers, as in the scandals continually afflicting college basketball. The corrupt were two men—Butts and Bryant—employed to educate and guide young men.

"How prevalent is the fixing of college football games? How often do teachers sell out their pupils? We don't know yet. For now we can only be appalled."

Coach Bryant, I want to ask you this question. Did or not you and the Plaintiff in this case, Wallace Butts, throw, fix or rig the outcome of the Georgia-Alabama game as you have been charged with doing by the Saturday Evening Post?

A. Absolutely not, and if we did we ought to go to jail, and anybody that had anything to do with this ought to [fol. 576] go to jail, because we didn't. Taking their money is not good enough.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Bryant, do you—you have got a very vivid memory of this football game of September 22, 1962, and you have pretty well described that to the Jury. That game lasted sixty minutes, didn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As does every game?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has it occurred to you to check up on the length of this telephone conversation you had with Coach Butts on September the 16th?

A. It has.

Q. How long was it?

A. According to the record I got, sixty-seven minutes.

Q. And you don't remember anything about it?

A. I don't remember when or which one. Insofar as the football game, my vivid memory, I went over the notes up there this morning. Outside of that I hadn't even looked at them since the game or the movie.

Q. You put this call in to Coach Butts, didn't you?

A. I don't know.

Q. You don't remember whether you—

A. I don't know the call was placed.

Q. You don't know you made the call, and you don't remember anything that was said?

A. I remember plenty of things that were said sometime, [fol. 577] sir. I don't even know the call was made. I am not sure all these notes weren't made after the call was made.

Mr. Cody: I move to strike that, Your Honor; that is not in response to my question.

The Court: Well, let's get the session down to what the facts are.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. You say your extension number is 641 on the switchboard down there?

A. That is one of them; yes, sir.

Q. What's this investment you and Coach Butts made; what is that?

A. Continental Enterprises, sir.

Q. Who got you into that?

A. Nobody got me into it; I got myself into it. A friend of mine told me that he thought it was a good investment, and I got myself into it.

Q. And if you sold out today—you still have your investment; is that right?

A. Some; some; yes.

Q. And if you sold out today, what would your loss be?

A. Well, since I talked to you in Birmingham, sir, it's gone down a little. I would say that my loss would be half of about sixty thousand dollars. It would put me a little loser; I am a pretty good winner on it so far.

Q. When we were talking about it in Birmingham, you said it was sixty then, didn't you?

[fol. 578] A. I think I said it would be forty to fifty. It's gone down a little. It would be a little more than it was then.

The Court: I didn't—is that loss or gain?

The Witness: That is a loss.

The Court: A loss?

The Witness: Unfortunately.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Who is the man that got you in that investment?

A. No one got me into it, sir; Mr. Sam Wilson.

Q. In Jacksonville?

A. Yes, sir. He is the friend that told me about it, told a lot of people in our profession about it. He didn't get me into it. I thought it was a good deal, and the first time I bought it I made for me a lot of money out of it. The next time I bought it it went down.

Q. Do you remember when I was in Birmingham taking your deposition?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On May the 27th?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you make this statement: "And as a matter of fact, one of them, the reason him telling me is a good company, and going to make money, one of the reasons I [fol. 579] invested in it was because of Wally." Who were you talking about then, Wally Butts?

A. If I said that I was talking about Wally Butts, and I must have said it if you have it there.

Q. Did he induce you to buy—

A. No, sir, but he was a close friend to these people that I think own control of the company.

Q. But you did say, when this deposition was taken, that you went into it on account of Wally?

A. I don't believe I said it, but if you have got it down there, maybe I said it.

Q. Well, you remember being sworn before you gave this deposition?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was before a Court Reporter?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your counsel was present?

A. Oh, I remember that, but Wally didn't talk me into buying it.

Q. What's that?

A. Wally didn't talk me into buying it.

Q. I didn't ask you that.

A. I might have talked him into it as far as that goes.

Q. I am talking about what your testimony was on May the 27th.

A. Well, it's the same now.

Q. Now, Coach Bryant, let's get back just a minute to some of these possible subject matters that you might have discussed on the phone with Coach Butts. Did you know that he hadn't had anything to do with the football team in nearly three years?

A. Why, certainly I knew that. He was Director of Athletics.

[fol. 580] Q. But he had nothing to do with coaching; you knew that, didn't you?

A. Why, certainly I knew it.

Q. All right, sir. Now, why would you be talking to him about a change in the schedule?

A. He is the Director of Athletics; he makes the schedules.

Q. Well, Coach Bryant, we are talking about an upcoming game that was to take place on September the 22nd, and you—we are talking, too, about a telephone conversation on September the 16th, six days off. How could you change the schedule of that game?

A. I didn't say I talked to him about the schedule on that date. I said sometimes I talked to him about schedules, many times. I doubt very seriously if we talked about the schedule that day, other than we might have talked about how fortunate we had been to move it from Tuscaloosa to Birmingham, because it was originally scheduled for Tuscaloosa and we would have made thirty or forty thousand dollars more out of it to play in Birmingham.

Q. I know you—

The Court: The Athletic Association would have made thirty or forty thousand dollars?

The Witness: Yes, sir. I represent them.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. I notice you made a reference to Leroy Jordan when you were giving us this talk about what you might have discussed on the telephone on September the 16th. You say he was the best player on your team and you had [fol. 581] reference to the possibility of him being out of the game?

A. Sir, the first time that Wally called me after he returned from Buffalo is when Leroy Jordan was mentioned, the first time.

Q. And you remember the conversation?

A. Yes, sir; I sure do. You mention Leroy Jordan, and I will remember it pretty good.

Q. When did that take place?

The Marshal: Let's have order.

A. I didn't look that up. You can look it up. I think it was sometime late in July.

Q. Who is president of the University of Alabama?

A. Dr. Frank A. Rose.

Q. Do you remember talking to him about three hours one Sunday night?

A. I certainly do.

Q. Did you know that on that same morning he had had a conference in Birmingham with Dr. Aderhold, President of the University of Georgia?

A. I didn't know it, sir, until about the middle or after he got through with me.

Q. And this matter that we are discussing today was the same subject matter of that conversation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In his conversation with you?

A. Yes, sir. And later at other places with Dr. Rose.

Q. Are you familiar with this letter that Dr. Rose wrote to Dr. Aderhold?

A. I saw it.

Q. In which he quotes you?

[fol. 582] A. I saw it in the paper or someplace, mostly in the paper, I think.

Q. Didn't Dr. Rose show it to you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Are you familiar with the letter?

A. I saw it in the paper, I think, sir; I know I saw it in the paper.

Q. Do you remember what was in it?

A. I remember some of the things that were in it.

Q. Let me ask you if one or two of these statements are true.

A. Okay, sir.

Q. "I have spent a great deal of time investigating thoroughly the questions that were raised during our meeting in Birmingham and have talked with Coach Bryant on at least two occasions." Is that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Passing on to the third paragraph, "Coach Butts had discussed with Coach Bryant and the two were together at some meeting where Coach Butts told Coach Bryant that the University of Georgia had plays that would severely penalize the Alabama team and not only would cause Leroy Jordan, an Alabama player, to be expelled from the game, but could severely injure one of the offensive players on the Georgia team"; is that right?

A. No, sir; it is not, and if you will get his letter that he wrote later, you will see that it is not.

Q. Let's pass on to the fourth paragraph, then. "Coach Bryant asked Coach Butts to let him know what the plays were, and on September 14 he called Coach Bryant and told him. There was a question about another one of the offensive plays of the Georgia team that could seriously penal- [fol. 583] ize the Alabama team and bring on additional injury to a player. Coach Bryant asked Coach Butts to check on that play, which he did, and called back on September 16." Is that correct?

A. No, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, you called him on September 16; that is your evidence, isn't it?

A. I don't know that I called him. According to the telephone records somebody called him, and I suppose—I probably did, but I don't know that, sir.

Q. Let's pass on to the next paragraph. "It was then that Coach Bryant changed his defenses and invited Mr. George Gardner, Head of the Officials of the Southeastern Conference, to come to Tuscaloosa and interpret for him the legalities of his defenses. This Mr. Gardner did the following week." Is that correct?

A. No, sir; it isn't. You get Dr. Rose's letter—you get Dr. Rose over here, and he will answer that pretty well for you.

Q. We will get to him later. Let's finish your part of it first, sir.

A. Okay, sir.

Q. Passing to the next paragraph. "Coach Bryant informs me that calling this to his attention may have favored the University of Alabama football team, but that he doubts it seriously. He did say that it prevented him from using illegal plays after the new change of rules." Is that correct?

A. No, sir. We don't use illegal plays anyway. It might have saved us penalties or saved us losing Jordan.

Q. And how long has Dr. Rose been President of the University of Alabama?

A. Sir, I think six years.

[fol. 584] Q. Was he there when you came as coach?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not he ever taught English?

A. I don't know, sir.

Q. You know anything about—

A. I think he is capable of teaching anything.

Q. You know anything about his educational background?

A. No. I know he is one of the best educated men in the world but not on football terminology. I can beat him on football terminology.

A. I think that letter was hurriedly written by the President, going out of town, to another President, that he thought it was in confidence, and I think that he—he came out with another letter explaining the difference in plays and techniques, and that he didn't understand football terminology, and I think you get him up here on this stand he will straighten that out real quick like.

Q. Let me ask you this question, then, Coach Bryant. Doesn't it seem strange to you that in your three-hour conference with Dr. Rose that you then remembered the subject matter of this alleged telephone conversation, and yet you don't remember anything about it now?

A. I didn't remember anything about the telephone conversation then or now any more than I have said. The things that we could have talked about, I don't know even it was a telephone conversation. I told him the same thing that I am telling you now.

JIMMY SHARP called as a witness on behalf of the Plaintiff, after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

[fol. 585] Direct examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. State your full name, please, sir.

A. Jimmy Sharp.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Sharp.

A. Well, I am presently residing in Tuscaloosa at the University of Alabama. My home is in Montgomery, Alabama.

Q. Speak up so the gentlemen over here can also hear you, please sir. Where did you receive your college education, Mr. Sharp?

A. At the University of Alabama.

Q. Did you engage in athletics while there?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. Did you play football while there?

A. Yes.

Q. What position did you play on the football team?

A. I played guard.

Q. Were you on the first team?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In last fall's game, 1962, between the University of Georgia and Alabama, did you play as first string guard for the University of Alabama?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. Mr. Sharp, in that football game, which was played in Birmingham, did or not the University of Georgia present a formation which came as a surprise to the University of Alabama?

A. Yes. We weren't prepared, we weren't expecting the formation that they came out with. It was what we refer to as a slot out.

Q. Would you diagram that one on the board here for me, please, sir?

[fol. 586] A. This end split way out. There is the basic line formation which we weren't expecting, and the defense we were in at the time, the reason we weren't expecting it, all our game plans—

Q. Would you please let the Jury hear what you say. Speak a little louder.

A. This was the formation that sort of—it confused us. It did confuse us. We hadn't anticipated it, and we couldn't make the necessary adjustments.

Q. Is that commonly known or would a description of that be slot right with the left end out fifteen yards?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right, sir. That formation was presented by the University of Georgia during the first quarter of the Alabama game?

A. Yes; I believe it was five times.

Q. In what respects did it confuse you as one of the members of the defensive team and the other members of the Alabama Defensive team?

A. Well, me, in particular, as far as my position, I wasn't the one that was greatly affected. It was affecting our linebackers and our secondary. The way this would have—if we had played the defense that we had worked for in the game, it would have taken our linebacker, Leroy Jordan, the strongest player on our team, and placed him way out in order to cover this.

Q. Is that what happened?

A. Yes, sir. Well, at first it was just mass confusion, because we hadn't worked in practice on the adjustment. That would be the normal adjustment, and we hadn't worked on it, and there was a lot of confusion, and they were wide open to the play.

Q. That play was successfully used by the University [fol. 587] of Georgia on at least four out of the five times it was used?

A. Four; yes, sir; three of them were successful and on the fourth the fellow just dropped the pass. He was wide open down the sideline.

Q. The other—are you familiar with the other formation that was employed by the University of Georgia to any particular length or extent of time during the game? Could you describe what that was?

A. I guess you are referring to the slot formation?

Q. Yes, sir. Could you diagram that for me right here, please, sir? That is what is referred to as the regular slot formation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What distance is there in the regular slot formation between the tackle and the end?

A. Well, the normal distance here is three yards. Of course, it varies a few inches or something like that.

Q. You may go back to the stand. Did or not the University of Georgia in the spring game of that year, 1962, give any indication that that was their basic formation that they did expect to use?

A. Yes, sir; they did. In fact, they ran it out of a total of a hundred nine plays—a hundred and thirteen plays in the game, and they ran it a hundred and nine, some form of this slot.

Q. From that formation approximately how many plays can be run?

A. Well, there are a variety of plays you can run from that. You can run your whole attack. This is designed for several reasons. The basic principals behind it—by placing the slot man over there, you are trying to create a line for a running game and also to compliment a spin-[fol. 588] out action which Georgia had come on strong with this Rakestraw, and he was a real fine passer. You can get receivers out fast into that flat or down, you can —your halfback in the slot can aid in blocking; he is closer to the line. He can get to him quicker. Your defense is spread out to create that lane. Also the defense is confused by him being so close to the line that the defensive personnel doesn't really know who is coming. He's got an extra man, where before he had a little time to look and check. Georgia had used this formation in '61. At this time they had experienced quarterbacks. They had just lost the fine Tarkington and no experience, of course, and they had primarily in their spring game, in their formation —what I mean by that, the three backs in the backfield, with no slot or split. They would run this formation and other formations in '61 a number of times. Towards the end of the season they began to run this formation and other passing formations. In fact, they ran the slot out in '61 also. But this time I think they had different distances. I am not sure about that, but this was the cause of the upsurge of Rakestraw and his passing game and into the '62 season we had taken all of the films and all the spring games statistics and plays and what they had done, and we believed this to be what they would do, since Rakestraw was such a fine passer, and they had more speed in the backfield. We thought that this would be the fine play.

Q. You mean formation?

A. Or formation.

Q. Does Alabama use approximately the same formation in its offense? Does Alabama use this formation also?

A. Yes, sir; they do. Georgia's offense and ours are very similar in some ways.

[fol. 589] Q. During the last week of practice before the game on Saturday night in Birmingham, September 22, were there any changes in the basic defensive formations that you had been coached on before that week?

A. No, sir. No changes. We, of course, when we work on the defense, we work on, I guess, about every formation that the coaches can think of that has ever been run, including some that some of the coaches make up, to expect the unexpected, but we hadn't felt they'd throw that, and it shows in the film, and by the five plays—well, the four plays being open, there was some little confusion.

Q. You said you hadn't expected Georgia to throw that?

A. I mean, the slot out.

Q. The slot with the left end out, known at Georgia as pro-set?

A. Pro-set.

Q. Were you a member of the 1961 National Champion Football Team?

A. Yes; I was.

Mr. Schroder: Just one moment. May I check?

The Court: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. During the game in Birmingham between Georgia and—the University of Georgia and the University of Alabama, did you yourself or did you hear any of your brother players on Alabama's team call out any such thing as "you can't run '80-8 pop' on us"?

[fol. 590] A. No, sir; I don't think I have ever heard that. That was new to me when I read it. We do—we are taught to key different people in the backfield and especially the guards. Jimmy Wilson and myself—

Q. Speak up, please.

A. Jimmy Wilson and myself were coached by Coach James to look into the backfield, to pick up keys and study the game films that we had on their previous games, things they have done, and try to pick up certain keys. We would holler out; we had a code we'd holler out for this to alert the other guards, but that was the difference between me and Jimmy.

Q. Other members of the team also have trade names or words they would use in exchanging information?

A. Yes, sir. Sometimes playing teams that had a swing-back sitting out by itself, they'd go to run back to the other side away from him, you'd catch him leaning back. It is a normal tendency; you can't get a level stance and come back this way; it is a tendency, the lean-back. We had certain codes. I know one game we used "red" and "white", "red" if you are going right and "white" if you are going left. The reason we used code names, we felt if we called out, "Richard, he's coming right", or "Bill, he's coming left", we are going to tip them off that somebody on their team is being tipped off, and at the half time they can go to the sideline and correct this.

Q. Is it customary or not during a college football game for the two opposing teams to carry on a lot of chatter among themselves?

A. No, sir; it is not customary. Of course, you are not supposed to. There is always some words passed.

Q. I didn't—I mean, friendly chatter?

A. Well—

[fol. 591] The Marshal: Order, please.

By the Witness:

A. I was referring to that too. You play against these boys two or three years, you begin to know them real well, and you studied the game films, and you study everything they do, and you know them, you get a good block on somebody. You say, "how did you like that, So-And-So," or something like that. It's always a little something going on.

Q. Always something going on? Did you or not get to know the Georgia guard, Wally Williamson, during the three years he was at Georgia?

A. Yes, sir; I got to know him.

Q. Wally play in that game for Georgia in Birmingham?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know the difference between a switch block or an exchange block by a guard and a tackle and pulling a guard out to lead interference?

A. Well, yes; I think I know—your terminology is not the same as ours, but I think I know what you are talking about.

Q. It is not really mine. You tell me what a switch block means to you or an exchange block or swap block?

A. A switch block or exchange block to me, in our terminology, I think, would be what we call a green.

Q. Green?

A. We have code names. We call it the line of scrimmage; it is according to how the defense is lined up. We'd come to the line and recognize the defense. We will do a lot of recognition blocking, seeing the defense and blocking as such, and we come to the line and "green" is the exchange block between the guard and tackle, when the play [fol. 592] was going wide or spin-out pass where the two men that the guard and tackle had to block had outside angles on them, meaning that both the guard and the tackle would have to really get after it, and it was a real difficult block. So, by alerting each other with "green" the tackle would come down and block the guard's man and the guard would pull out and loop back in, getting a little depth to take the other man, thereby be in a little better position in being able to block them, and we did this very effectively.

Q. That is, when the guard and the tackle swapped, switched, or exchanged blocking assignments, the guard then comes into the area where the tackle was supposed to block and protect that area; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

CHARLES PELL, called as witness on behalf of the Plaintiff, after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Your name is Charles Pell?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Pell?

A. Tuscaloosa, Alabama presently.

Q. Where did you receive your college education?

A. At the University of Alabama.

Q. Are you still studying there?

A. Well, I am in summer school; yes, sir.

[fol. 593] Q. Have you participated in athletics there at the University?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you a member of the football team?

A. Well, I was until I—my eligibility ran out.

Q. Did you—were you a member of the 1962 Alabama football team?

A. Yes; I was.

Q. What position did you play on that team, Mr. Pell?

A. I was a tackle.

Q. A tackle?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What do you weigh? What did you weigh on the night of the game?

A. 189.

Q. Do you know Mr. Jimmy Sharp?

A. Yes; I do, sir.

Q. Did he play on the same team?

A. Yes; he did.

Q. He played guard?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he weigh?

A. He weighed about 182.

Q. Were you on the first team?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Pell, in preparing yourselves to play in a football game against any university, do you have given to you any information relating to the strength and weaknesses of your coming opponents?

A. Yes, sir; we do. We have a scouting report which is compiled for each opponent.

Q. Would you please describe for the Court and Jury what is meant by a scouting report?

A. Well, a scouting report is compiled by one of the [fol. 594] assistant coaches. Some of the coaches, they divide up the games, and their responsibility is to scout this team and to pinpoint their strong points, pinpoint their weak points, and then to put it down into a scouting report. Also to study old films, break the games down. For instance, if—all the plays they run on first down and ten yards to go, all the plays they run on second down and long yardage, so on and so forth. This will give the team a picture of their tendencies. They also have the defenses that the team has been known to run. These defenses are not only the previous year's, but also the defenses that it is known the coaches believe in, also the offensive ideas of the coaches, and they compiled this from years before and compile downs so the players can understand it and study it and learn it and be better prepared for the game.

Q. Is that common practice in football?

A. Yes, sir; it is.

Q. Now, did Alabama have a scouting report such as you have described preparatory to its game against the University of Georgia in 1961?

A. Yes; we did.

Q. Would you tell the Court and Jury in essence what that was?

A. Well, the scouting report was compiled by Coach Charlie Bradshaw, presently at Kentucky. It was his job to find a scouting report, and actually it contains all that I described, and it has an introduction. It gives us an idea of what we have to do to win, and by studying what Georgia would do or has been doing or we think they might do, we have a better idea. We go in the game prepared mentally and physically. In 1961 we had an idea of how Georgia was football-wise, and I quote, "They will be bigger and [fol. 595] physically stronger than we are. The backfield will not be as fast as their starting backfield of last year but they do have some good backs with Jackson and Gutherie." And it also tells us what we had to do to win: "We can beat Georgia if we give our very best 110 per cent effort." And it said also, "It will take our very best to win."

Q. Do you have a scouting report for the game of 1962?

A. Yes; I do. Also it contained all that I described before, plus "Georgia is going to have another fine football team. They will be bigger physically and stronger than last year." Their young backs, they have a lot more speed in their backfield, their quarterback string with Rakestraw had been improved since he had gained a year's experience, and he was a much more mature ball player, and their strength would again be in the line, and their weakness was in the defensive secondary.

Q. That scouting report or any scouting report is usually completed sometime in August?

A. Yes, sir. They usually have all their work down in August; yes, sir.

Q. And from the first day of practice on up until the first game the players are coached and trained in accordance with the information that is contained in the report?

A. Yes, sir. Also that and also during the spring practice of the previous spring we prepare for our first game and our next season game during the spring. That is the purpose of spring training.

Q. From September 1st until the game against Georgia on September 22, were there any significant changes made in the defenses that Alabama was preparing to use in that game?

[fol. 596] A. No, sir; there was not.

Q. What defense, primarily, did Alabama plan to employ against Georgia in the game of 1962?

A. Well, Coach Stallings, our defensive coach, had, after studying their spring game, which showed Georgia running the slot offense to a tune of 109 times out of 113, so Coach Stallings and the other coaches got together and devised a defense we called the " 'Bama" defense. This is a regular 5-3 defense.

Q. Is that what you are referring to when you refer to the slot?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the defense that Alabama was preparing against that particular formation was you called the 'Bama defense?

A. Yes, sir; it is a version of the 5-3 defense, and we just turned it 'Bama.

Q. That is just a code name?

A. Yes, sir; just a code name.

Q. Would you describe that defense to us, please, or maybe you could do it better if you came here and did it with chalk on the board.

A. Well, first of all—first of all we would have the end playing a 9 technique.

Q. Playing a what?

A. A 9 technique, which is principally outside-in. He's got containment.

Q. What do you mean by "he's got containment"?

A. He has to keep everything from coming outside of him. Then, also we had a man in the 3-technique right here. Then, we had a man—3-technique is between the guard and tackle. This is so he can play both ways and probably draw two blocks from one person, I mean, two blocks by him, therefore, freeing the linebacker so he can be more effec- [fol. 597] tive. Also we had a man head-on the center, right on his nose. Then we had a man in the 4-technique over here. Then we had a man in a 7-technique, what we called —which is head-on this halfback, that is in the slot. Then we had another end and the 9-technique on this side with the same responsibility as this one. This tackle was head-on the tackle. What this defense was primarily supposed to do—also, we had our linebacker in here. Then our big weapon, Leroy Jordan here. And that is basically what the 'Bama defense is.

Q. Is there anything in the use of numerals? I heard you say 9, 3, 4, or something; does that mean anything?

A. It simplifies the learning of your defensive assignment. We have rules for defenses that—for instance, the 9-technique, we have a 1-technique, a 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9, which stretch from here all the way out to here, either in the gaps or on their nose, and doing this it is simplified. Instead of going through the whole thing, you tell them, "Your job is the 3-technique", and they know what the 3-technique man is required to do. Therefore he can carry out his job more effectively and learn it a lot easier, because there is a lot of stuff to that.

Q. This offensive set that is shown here is known as the normal slot?

A. Yes, sir; it is called—it is a normal slot used with every team we played. They use the slot offense, and we use it ourselves.

Q. And I believe you testified that Georgia had used this a number of times in its spring game?

A. They had used it quite a few times in their spring game also in '61, the year of '61. This was one of their offensive formations. So, therefore, the slot formation is nothing new.

[fol. 598] Q. Your scout report man who prepares your scouting reports, does he give the team at the University of Alabama any idea as to what formations he believes Georgia will stress because of having seen it before or the cause of its personnel?

A. Yes, sir. The coach who scouts the opposing—I forgot to mention, when he is scouting the team he has a team permanently. When he is on the staff, very rarely do they change teams. You see, a coach—well, for instance, let's say Auburn. A coach scouting Auburn for five years, he knows their personnel as they develop freshmen, even from high school. Also he knows their coaches. He knows generally how they think, and he is required to express his opinion on what he thinks their strategy will be.

Q. All right, sir. Now, is the 'Bama defense, code name 'Bama—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —set up primarily for the game that we are talking about?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, in that game on September 22, 1962, did the University of Georgia go into any formation which made that an inadequate defense?

A. Yes, sir; they did.

Q. Will you show what that formation was down here, please, sir?

A. Yes, sir. Early in the first quarter we were going straight in to our 'Bama defense and playing it pretty well. Then they came out in the slot split with the end out here split on the side opposite of the formation, and, as you can see, with Leroy here, with all these men in here, there is where is where we want to play Leroy, that was the idea of the defense. As you know, Leroy was a tremendous line-

[fol. 599] backer, and the object is to keep Leroy in the thick of the battle where he is best, where he can be more effective. Now, we can't move our end out here to cover him, so what we have to do is take Leroy. We have to take Leroy from here and put him out here in the open for a pass defense in playing this particular area in here and the other is still the same. Now, as you can see, Leroy is out here, and where Leroy does his best work is in here, as has been proven, and this weakened our defense in here; it weakened it tremendously. In fact, they ran it only five times the first half, and four times that was successful. Well, they failed—they dropped a pass one time, so three times it was very successful. We could not defend this man and still have our strength in here where we needed it.

Q. Was something subsequently done to rectify the situation?

A. Yes, sir. The coaches in the press box, which is customary, they have scouts up there viewing, and on the telephone, they saw what was happening in this formation. We weren't prepared for this formation as to overshifting to compensate for the change in the formation. So, at the halftime—one of Coach Bryant's basic defenses is what we call the split defense or split six, and going back to directions, going back to just plain stuff, we could compensate and shift to their strength and get Leroy back in here where he can help us or/and be effective.

Q. During the—

A. Would you like for me to show the reason, the split defense, and how it would help us?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Now, in the split defense we have what we call a rover. He is called in because when they come out of the [fol. 600] huddle, before they line up, he is in the middle; then he will go to either the wide side or the strong side or unbalanced line, whichever is happening at the time, whichever formation they are in, so we go into the split, and we have a man in the 3-technique, as I showed you before. We have Leroy here. We have a guard in the 3-and have the other linebacker here. Also have a man there, 7 and 9, and over here, which is the tackle, and the rover drops off. Now, as you can see, we have a sound defense now with our strength where we need it in here. We have our personnel, Richard Williamson, the rover, very effective pass defender and outside man, and he was very capable of giving them trouble on that split end out there. Now, Leroy is in here where the thick of the battle is, and everything in here, that is where Leroy can really make hay, and the second half can prove that this was a great help to us, and also Georgia came out in the second half running this formation more effectively, which indicates that they realized they had only run it five times and could have hurt us four, did hurt us three times out of five, could have hurt us four. However, we had changed our defense to something to strengthen our part of it, so, consequently, that formation was weakened and we came out on top.

Q. Thank you, sir, go back to the stand. During the period from September 1st until the Georgia game on September 22, in planning its defenses, did the University of Alabama or not concentrate on any particular two formations?

A. No, sir; they did not.

Q. Any three particular formations?

A. No, sir; I couldn't say that either.

[fol. 601] Q. If the normal slot, as you indicated a moment ago, would have the end three yards out from the tackle—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —if that end was, say, lined up four yards rather than three, or maybe as many as five yards instead of three, would that cause Alabama to make any basic change in its defense?

A. No, sir; we wouldn't have to make a basic change at all with our split defense, because our ends, defensive ends —I can say this with authority because left tackles were defensive ends on defense, so he would—he has his rules, and you have your certain coaching points on the defensive techniques. Now, if the end moved out—would you like for me to show you on the board?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Well, at three yards he would be here, and then the five yards he would be, say, here, with your slot man in here. As you can see on our split defense we have this man—actually, he would be in here with a three-yard split, but to illustrate it so you can see it, I will make it much larger. Now, instead of this guy playing in here on his outside eye, as he would on a 0-technique, he would simply play, maybe, on his inside eye, and consequently playing out through the man in order to do his job of containment and rushing the passer and making sure they did not get outside of him. So, you see, we could still stay in our basic split defense, be fundamentally sound with this man right here playing through his head and getting right there to keep him from coming around.

Q. Thank you, sir. Mr. Pell, for Alabama to know formations and plays which any team that it is going to play, such as the University of Georgia, in advance, what advan-
[fol. 602] tage would that be to Alabama?

A. Well, I can think of no advantage it would be.

Q. What else do you need?

A. You'd need almost a thousand other things before you could use it.

Q. Describe what you are talking about?

A. Well, if a player—if a player would know his opponent's plays, what plays he would run, how he would run them, he does not know what situations he would run them in. For instance, would he run them on first and 10, first down and 10 yards to go for a first, or would he run it on the second down and 2 yards to go for a first? Would he run it on third, fourth; would he—would he run it backed up? Would he run it in the middle of the field? Would he run it on a sideline, one of the hashmarks? Would he run it down there at the score—would he run it on clutch plays?

There are so many things that determine what play should be run. It would take—take so much to drill a boy or a player into knowing what the other team was going to do.

Q. Is what you are saying that knowledge of the play is not important but knowledge of when it is going to be run?

A. That's right. As you know—well, no; I don't suppose anybody has a monopoly on a football play or a formation. Once they imagine up a new formation, there is nothing to keep another team from using the same formation, and in coaching clinics they go over football plays, successful football plays. You can even buy a book in the bookstore that has successful ball plays. So, knowing what the play is does no good. Knowing what the formation is does no good. You have to know how they run it and how effectively they run it and when and where and how.

[fol. 603] Q. Thank you, sir. What is the Alabama philosophy so far as coaching the players or training the players during the week of the game?

A. Well, Coach Bryant, he even said this yesterday at the clinic in a speech, and he firmly believes it, we would always work hard, fairly hard on Monday nights because of the boys having the—the players having labs in the afternoon. We would practice on Monday night pretty hard. Tuesday afternoon we'd practice pretty hard. Wednesday sometimes we'd practice fairly hard. When we say "hard" or "moderately hard"; well, "hard" would be full gear for two hours practice; "moderately" would be an hour and forty-five minutes practice with little full speed hitting, more dummy for perfection drills, getting quick and getting aggressive and going over your assignments. Then, on Thursdays most of the time you'd go out in sweats and go through your game plans, offensive plays, get them down, work on perfection drills again, go through our defense, and a short brisk drill of approximately an hour and thirty-five or forty minutes. And on Friday most of the time we'd have—if we are on the road, we usually get there on Friday, work out in the stadium, a light work out in sweats for approximately, maybe, forty-five minutes, get loosened up, get used to the field, and then the game on Saturday.

Q. Now, you have played against Georgia for three years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In 1962 in Birmingham, speaking from the physical stand-point, how did the two teams compare?

A. Well, Georgia, in both '61 and '62, was both physically larger and stronger than we were in the line; there is no doubt about that. It came out in our scouting reports; we [fol. 604] knew it. The team as a whole in '62, they had fairly much more speed than we did.

Q. Well, the size of a player does not necessarily determine the ability, does it? I mean, not the ability, that is a bad word—that is an unfortunate word.

The Court: You say Georgia had more speed than you did in '62?

The Witness: Not—I say, as a team. Individually I would suppose I would have more speed. But 23—what we mean by speed is just out footracing, but where it counts is when you get real quick, your short movements. When there is not that much between you and an opposing ball player, if you are real quick it doesn't matter how much you play; you can pack a pretty good wallop in that little space, and we had to rely on quickness and desire.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Let me ask you this question, sir. In your opinion, can a football game he rigged or fixed without the players knowing about it?

A. No, sir; it could not.

Q. Could a football game be rigged or fixed without the players participating in the—

A. No, sir; it could not; no way.

Mr. Schroder: You may examine him.

Mr. Cody: You may be excused.

[fol. 605] The Court: What are you studying to be, a football coach?

The Witness: Well, I am studying—I am in the School of Commerce. I will be coaching next year.

The Court: All right, sir; thank you.

Q. How long have you been coaching at the University of Georgia?
A. Since 1957.
Q. How long have you been in the coaching profession?
A. Since 1949.
Q. Are you familiar with the University of Georgia films that were taken of the Alabama-Georgia game in 1962?
[fol. 606]. A. Yes, sir.
Q. Could you show that to us, please, and relate what the screen shows?
A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Schroder: Mr. Gregory, would you relate what is being shown there, please?

The Witness: Yes. This is the team coming on the field, the University of Georgia team in the white uniforms. Alabama, of course, is the dark.

This is the Georgia team, the players on the sideline before the kick-off. The captain is out in the middle of the field.

This is Georgia kicking off and Alabama receiving.

The Georgia team in this game covered kick-offs and covered punts real well.

Now, this is the Alabama team, and that is what we refer to as a pro formation at Georgia. This is pro right with Alabama's end. Our defensive end, the right end is off in what we refer to as the triangle, and he is supposed to cover the flat. That is a simple quarterback sneak by Alabama.

This is pro left with Williamson, the split right end. This was a badly executed play on the part of Alabama. I think it was going to be what we refer to as the outside belly, but it was—it was not well executed.

Again, this is a pro formation used by Alabama which is a slot with a split end.

[fol. 607] On this particular defense our end is back in a position where he can rush a passer. If you will notice our defensive linebacker, the right defensive linebacker is loosening up and he is to cover to the flat. He is keying that back of Alabama's and covering him when he swings out there.

Now, on this particular pass, Williamson, which is the split end, went down the field and broke to his left, and Namath, who is the quarterback, he overthrew him and the ball was wild.

Alabama is now in the punt formation, what we call spread punt at the University of Georgia.

In this particular game Alabama had a real good kicking game and Georgia usually got the ball deep in their territory.

This is a slot formation. We refer to it at Georgia a slot left. That is, a lot of teams refer to it as a tight slot. It looks—that slot looks like it might be a yard and a half. When that back goes in motion like that, that is what we call in our terminology as a fly.

This particular play is—is our outside belly series which is 029 at Georgia, and Rakestraw was the quarterback, and he kept the ball.

Now, this is slot right, we are going to run a trap play. Our left guard was supposed to trap, but Alabama, as you can see, Alabama had a defensive man that went around our center and made the play. Our center failed to block the man on his nose, and the defensive man made the play, made the stop right there.

This is slot right. Here is the play; here is the interception that was referred to in the magazine article that said that Rakestraw was rushed badly and the Georgia players were like a bunch of rats in a maze. Rakestraw was [fol. 608] not rushed at all. He should have run for a first down—

The Court: I don't think that is proper.

Mr. Schroder: No, sir.

The Court: No, sir.

The Marshal: Let's have order, please.

The Court: If we can't have order, we will clear the courtroom. Mr. Schroder, if he makes another remark like that, I will have to discontinue this testimony or something. I don't think that was proper.

Mr. Schroder: Just call the plays.

The Court: Yes, sir; whatever his feelings were, I don't think he should show them.

The Witness: This is Rakestraw on what we call a roll-out type pass at Georgia. He was trying to throw to our left end coming across here.

After the interception Alabama lines up in a pro, and Williamson is the split end, and he puts just a little fake [fol. 609] on Porterfield, who is the defensive left halfback, and beats him for a touchdown.

Mr. Schroder: That's all right; let it go; let it go.

The Witness: Alabama was attempting an extra point.

Georgia is in a slot right formation, and that is what we call at Georgia a power-pop play.

Slot right; Rakestraw is rolling out to his right, throwing to Babb, and Babb catches the ball and falls out of bounds.

This is slot right fly, and Rakestraw rolls out again. This looked like a kind of trap that was run real fast, the film was, and it looked like a countertrap by Georgia.

This is the pro left formation used by Georgia. This back is going in long motion, and Alabama did not adjust its defense to this particular play. This is the first time that we have used this formation in the game, and they do not put anyone out to cover this back that is going over in long motion. We complete the pass to him, and he makes a good run, but we get a fifty-yard penalty and the play is called back.

That is Georgia in spread punt formation. We tried to run off of the spread punt.

Georgia now is again in spread punt formation.

This is Alabama in a pro formation again, pro left. It was pop play, in our terminology, that Alabama ran.

On this particular play we didn't have anyone covering the flat, and the flat was wide open, and they threw the ball out there.

[fol. 610] This is a pro formation, a hook pass thrown by Alabama, a pop play.

Alabama completed a pass in the flat off of a roll-out type pass.

That was—in our terminology at Georgia that is what we call a Utah pass. This is a roll back type pass by Alabama.

This is a slot right by Georgia. I don't know what the play was going to be. It was a bad exchange between the center and the quarterback. I don't know what the play could have been.

Again this is a slot right. It is a trap play. This is a slot right formation with the back on the fly, and we run the outside belly, 048.

Georgia was in spread punt formation, and it was a bad snap over the kicker's head, resulted in a safety.

That was a pro formation and a sweep run by Alabama.

This is a pro formation again, and Alabama runs the outside belly. The quarterback kept the ball.

Alabama is in a slot formation, a slot left. They run the fullback off tackle.

Lights.

The Court: Mr. Schroder, do you have any particular play or any particular point, or just show the whole thing?

Mr. Schroder: Show the whole game.

The Court: All right.

[fol. 611] Mr. Schroder: I'd rather not ask the witness to comment on a play, just say what is going on and that is it.

The Witness: I didn't understand what you wanted.

Mr. Schroder: I understand; it is my fault.

The Witness: I didn't understand what the procedure was. Mr. Schroder, do you want every play called?

Mr. Schroder: Not necessarily.

The Marshal: Let's have order, please.

The Witness: Lights.

This is a pro right formation by Alabama and a roll back type pass, what we call the Utah pass at Georgia, a little pass he flipped to the halfback coming through the line.

A pro right formation with left end split real wide; man on fly; looks like what we would call at Georgia the 048 or the outside belly by the quarterback.

This is a pro left formation, a trap play by Alabama.

This is a slot formation, slot left. It is a quick hand-off to the right halfback, straight into the line.

This is a slot right formation by Alabama, a hand-off to the fullback in the middle.

This is a pro left. Namath rolls to the right, throws to the right halfback in the flat.

Mr. Schroder: Is that a touchdown?

The Witness: Yeah. That was Alabama's second touchdown.

This is a pro right, Rakestraw rolls and throws to Babb on a down and out, which was incomplete.

A slot right, fly; we run a counter trap play.

This is a slot right. We run a sweep.

This is a pro right by Alabama and a quarterback sneak.

This is a pro right formation. This is 30-2 pop in Georgia's terminology that Alabama just ran.

This is pro left, a sweep.

This looks like a lot, a give-off to the fullback.

Pro right, trap play to the fullback.

Pro left, fly, the outside belly series which at Georgia would be 029.

Pro left, pop play to the fullback.

This is slot right, fly; fullback runs off tackle, which would be 036 slant at Georgia.

This is pro left, a roll-out to the left by quarterback.

He throws to the right quarterback out in the flat and drops the ball and it is incomplete.

That is a slot left and quarterbacks sneak.

Slot left, fly, fullback runs off tackle; it would be the 037 slant.

Slot right, fly; Rakestraw rolls and throws complete to Babb on the left.

[fol. 613] Mr. Schroder: That was pro right?

The Witness: This is pro right formation. Babb, a split left end.

This is pro left, motion, tries to throw to Babb.

This is the pro left, the back coming in motion. Rakestraw rolls, tries to throw to him, complete out in the flat.

This was 19 pass, left end bent in. Pass was completed to John McClell.

The slot left, it was a 19 special pass, and Rakestraw tried to keep the ball.

Slot right, a 19 pass, left end hook. The left end was going out and trying to do a hook in there, and it incomplete.

Slot left, fly; this was a type of a bootleg.

This is slot left, fly, the outside belly series with the quarterback keeping the ball; it would be 029 keep at Georgia.

This is pro left, trap, just a quick fullback trap with the right guard trapping. I can't see this complete formation. I see a man split way out here. It looks like pro right. It is pro right, quarterback sneak.

Lights.

The Court: Turn on the lights.

Members of the Jury, I will admonish you—I think I have previously given you those instructions. We will recess until 3:20. Let the Jury pass out; everyone else remain seated.

(Whereupon the Jury retired from the courtroom at 3:05 p.m.)

[fol. 614] The Court: Recess until 3:20.

(Whereupon Court recess at 3:05 p.m., reconvening at 3:20 p.m.)

After Recess

The Court: All right, sir.

The Witness: Lights.

This is the beginning of the third quarter.

That is Alabama kicking off to Georgia.

Georgia is in a pro right with a motion. This is a pop play, 30-2 pop.

Georgia is in a slot right, fly; Rakestraw rolls to the right and tries to hit Babb, and he misses.

Slot right, motion; Rakestraw rolling to the right, tries to throw to the right halfback in the flat; it is incomplete.

This is a slot right, a sweep.

A pro left; it is a trap, quick trap to the fullback.

Pro left, what we refer to as a roll-back pass; throws to the end coming across and it is complete.

Pro left, roll right; he hit the end on a hook and it is complete.

Alabama quarterback rolls to the right, throws to the right halfback in the flat, and he scores a touchdown. The third Alabama touchdown.

Alabama tries to go for two points and throws in the end zone, and it is incomplete.

[fol. 615] Georgia is in a pro right, fly, 32 pop.

We make a pretty good gain, but we get a fifteen-yard penalty on the play.

Pro left, fly, a counter trap.

Pro left, fly, an option play, quarterback keeping the ball.

Pro right, sweep right, 99 at Georgia.

Pro right, fly, 048 keep, the outside belly series with the quarterback keeping the ball.

Pro right, 21 trap, left halfback on a quick trap.

Pro left, quarterback rolls to his left, decides to run with the ball.

Pro right motion, 33 pop.

Pro left, quarterback rolls right, throws to the right end on a deep circle hook, and it is complete on about the seven-yard line.

Tried the outside belly series again; it was a bad pitch, and they fumbled the ball and Georgia recovered.

Pro left; we run the sweep left, which is—which at Georgia is 88.

Pro left fly, 19 overpass, throws to the right end, goes out of bounds.

Pro left, 30-2 pop.

Pro right, motion, Rakestraw rolling with the ball and tries to throw to the motion man and the pass is incomplete.

Pro right, fly, tries to throw to right end—left end, tries to throw to the left end, incomplete.

This is pro right, fly, 32 pop.

Pro right, fly, 029, and he pitches.

[fol. 616] A slot left, just a quick hand-off to the right halfback.

Lights.

Lights.

This is pro right, trap play to the left halfback.

Pro left, quarterback rolls back, throws to the right halfback in the flat.

Pro left, 33 pop.

Pro left, fly, 33 pop.

A slot left, sweep left, which at Georgia would be 88.

Pro left, fly, 029 keep. The quarterback the fullback and keeps the ball, goes right down close to the goal-line.

Slot right, sweep right, and he scored standing up for Alabama's fourth touchdown.

Slot right, completes it.

This is slot right, 99, it is a sweep.

Pro right, motion, F-29 screeno; away from the man in motion. We screened to the left halfback off of a drop back action by the quarterback, away from the man in motion.

Pro right, 99.

I'd like to point out here that we are running a sweep on this next play, the slot right 99, and our right guard swings behind the tackle and leads up through the hole.

This is pro right, sweep right, or 99, and again the right guard swings behind the tackle, blocks on the linebacker.

Pro right, straight ahead blocking, sweep right, 99.

Pro left, trying to throw a screen pass, would have been F-48 screeno, trying to screen to the right halfback crossing, faking a block, going up sitting in the flat, catching [fol. 617] a screen pass. The quarterback does not throw the ball, and he is thrown for a big loss.

This is a pro left fly, quarterback rolls to his right, throws to the right end, which goes down and breaks to his right. The pass is incomplete.

This is pro right, quarterback sneaks.

Pro right; it is kind of a bad exchange between the quarterback and the fullback. The play is 32 pop.

Slot left, fly, gives to the fullback, what would be 37 slant, 037 slant at Georgia.

Pro left, fly, quarterback keeps the ball on the outside belly series which would be 029 keep.

Pro right; this would be 31 trap in our terminology.

Slot right—I'm sorry; I couldn't see this man out here. This is pro right. They have got a man out left here who is not in the picture. He comes in at the last.

This is a pro right formation, a sweep right, which would be 99 in Georgia's terminology.

Pro left, a trap to the right halfback.

Pro right fly. This is the outside belly series, again, where he fakes to the fullback; quarterback keeps the ball, pitching out to the halfback coming around, and he scores for the fifth Alabama touchdown.

This is a pro right formation, quarterback rolls back, going to try to throw, but he kept the ball and didn't make it. It was a two points—extra point try.

Pro left, fly, and the play is 33 pop.

Pro right, sweep right, 99.

This is a pro right, fly, Rakestraw tries to throw but he is rushed real bad by this number 70 here.

Slot right, Rakestraw rolls to his left, tries to throw back to right end or what we call a bend in pattern at Georgia and the pass is broken up, incomplete.

Slot right, fly, going to be a screen pass to the left this [fol. 618] would be F-29 screeno, away from the motion man.

Slot right, Rakestraw rolls to his left, tries to throw back to the right end, Babb, and the pass is broken up, incomplete.

Lights.

Mr. Schroder: Is that the end of the game?

The Witness: End of the game.

The Court: All right, Mr. Schroder. Put the podium back up there, Mr. Marshal.

Mr. Schroder: I will get it.

The Marshal: I will get it.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Mr. Gregory, I believe you testified you are the head defensive coach at University of Georgia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your function or what is your job as such?

A. During the game it is my responsibility to call every defense from the sidelines.

Q. You mean every defensive formation that Georgia is going into on any play?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How is that called?

[fol. 619] A. I do it with a set of hand signals which relays the message to the defensive quarterback, who then calls it to the team.

Q. Could you give us an illustration?

A. Yes, sir. For example, if I fold my arms like this, that defensive quarterback, who is one of our guards, knows that that is 60 outside. He steps to the defensive huddle and gives the call. "60 Inside."

Q. How many different defenses do you have?

A. For the Alabama game—

The Court: You may sit down, sir.

A. (By the witness) For the Alabama game we had about—from eight or ten; I couldn't specifically say. We have a general defensive plan, as most schools do, and for certain games we pick out specific defenses that we want to use in that particular game. I can't say the exact number of defenses that we had prepared for the Alabama game, but I do have a written record of every defense that was used by the Georgia team in the game, because I have a manager that stands right beside me on the sideline, and as quickly as I give the defensive call he writes down the defense that was called, the down, the distance, the hash mark, and any comments that I have to make regarding the situation on the field.

Q. What is there that goes into the thinking of a defensive coach, such as yours, when he is deciding what particular defenses to have his team go into?

A. I am on the sideline. A team has twenty-five seconds in the huddle. During that time I have to make the decision, the score in the game, the down and distance, the position on the field, such as the hash mark, whether it is [fol. 620] on the right hash mark or the left hash mark, the middle of the field, whether I think they are going to throw the ball, their history has been; I have to study every team we play. Certain teams have a history of doing certain things at a certain spot on the field. I have to know all of this, and I have just a few seconds to determine in my own mind what I am going to call, and then I make that call, and it is given to the Georgia team.

Q. Is that commonly done by all schools, all colleges?

A. It is done by a lot of colleges; I can't say all of them; I don't know. I do know it is done by a lots.

Q. Coach Gregory, you referred during the running of the film here on several occasions to Georgia and Alabama, whoever might have had the ball at the particular time, running, I believe you said, 30-2 pop on one occasion; would it be 43 pop on another occasion?

A. We don't have a 43 pop; we have a 33 pop.

Q. 33 pop?

A. We have a 33 pop and a 32 pop.

Q. What is meant by the designation "pop"? Does that mean that something is particularly done on that play that is not done on another play?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is that, please?

A. That "pop" means that the halfback is going to lead through the hole and block the linebacker and that the linemen are going to turn out block, like that, in other words the linemen on either side of the hole, they will turn out and block out and block in on one side and out on the other, and the halfback is going to lead straight through the hole and block the linebacker, and the ball is given to the fullback, and he follows him through the hole.

[fol. 621] Q. All right, sir. Now, we use these numerals 32 and 33, 99, 88; what do the numerals indicate when you are describing a play, for example, that the University of Georgia has?

A. Well, for example, on 33 pop, the 3 means, in our numbering system, 3 is the fullback and the other 3, when we say 33, it means the number 3 back, the fullback is going to carry the ball in the 3 hole. We number the holes, odds to the right, 1, 3, 5, 7, and 9; evens to the left, 0, 2, 4, 6, and 8. We number the backs, 1 for the quarterback, the left halfback is 2, the fullback is 3, and the right halfback is 4.

Q. So, the first numeral in your two-numberal sets there, the first numeral indicates the ball carrier who is going to carry the ball?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If it would be the left halfback, it would be 2; if it would be the right halfback it would be 3—I mean, 4?

A. 4; yes, sir.

Q. The second numeral indicates which hole in the line he is going through?

A. That's right.

Q. If he is going wide, it is—you say odds were to the right; that would be 9?

A. 9; yes, sir.

Q. If he was going wide on the left, that would be 8?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Saturday Evening Post refers in its article to an Alabama player or Alabama players—no; strike that. It refers in its article to the fact that one of the Georgia players complained that Alabama players were saying "you can't run 'a 8-pop' on us." Does Georgia have an 88 pop?

[fol. 622] A. No, sir.

Q. Is it possible to run what—is it possible to run a pop off of a sweep?

A. No, sir.

Q. And a 88 would be a sweep?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: Just a moment, please, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Running through these notes right quickly—

Mr. Schroder: Could you hand them to the witness, please, ma'am?

The Clerk: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. I assume you have seen before a reproduction of the notes which you now hold in your hand?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you run over those briefly, without me necessarily questioning you about each, but just go through them briefly and tell us what each means to you insofar as it is related to the University of Georgia's football team?

A. Well, naturally "Bear" Bryant and Wally Butts on occasions, I have heard Coach Butts talk to Coach Bryant [fol. 623] on the telephone, and I have also been around Coach Butts and Coach Bryant in coaches' conventions and meetings of the Southeastern Conference, and things like that. I have never heard Coach Butts refer to Coach Bryant as "Bear". He has always called him "Paul". I have heard Coach Butts—I have been in his office when he has talked to Coach Bryant on the phone, and he'd say, "Paul, this is Wallace Butts." I have never heard Coach Butts refer to him as "Bear".

"Rissmiller, greatest in history". Rissmiller was a sophomore tackle who had good potential; he is a good athlete. It was his first college football game that he had ever played in as a varsity man against the University of Alabama.

Q. All right, sir.

A. He did a credible job in the game.

"Rakestraw to right" doesn't mean anything to me; I mean, any—any team has a quarterback that goes to the right or goes to the left; doesn't mean anything.

"Optional left pass if can block man on corner, keeps running." The optional left pass is a pass that has been used at Georgia previously and was last used against the University of Miami in 1961. This optional left pass, when we last used it, we used it off of a drop back action where the quarterback drops straight back, and he would not attempt to run on the corner. So, these notes here are wrong, if anything was used pertaining to these notes, it would be wrong, because—

Q. You mean if it regarded the University of Georgia?

A. If it regarded the University of Georgia; that's right. Now, also on an optional left pass, an opposing coach [fol. 624] would have to know the exact terminology of the opponent's team, or else he would not know what any one was referring to. I do not know as a coach, the exact terminology of other teams that we play.

Q. All right, sir.

A. "Well disciplined ball club." For a football team to win in the Southeastern Conference, it has to be well disciplined. To me discipline means they don't jump off sides; they don't fumble the ball; they don't get penalties that is unnecessary. It just means that they do things to perfection, and I would have to say that the Georgia team, in my estimation, was not a well disciplined football team. We made too many mistakes that hurt us real bad.

Q. Nothing unusual about a bunch of sophomores making mistakes, is it?

A. No, sir; they do it in every league.

Q. That's right.

A. And when you have to play them, they are going to make them.

"Added two coaches." We had lost some coaches at Georgia, and I reckon this is—I don't know what this is referring to; it could be referring to Alabama. I know they had added some coaches. We had added some coaches at Georgia. We added a boy named Frank Inman who came there last year from down at Richmond Academy in Augusta, and he wasn't there for spring practice. And then we added in the spring a coach that had come from the University of Nebraska, a Leroy Pierce.

Q. All right, sir.

A. "Onside guard pulls on sweep." It was not in the game plan against the University of Alabama to pull guards on sweeps. Since Johnny Griffith has been head coach at Georgia we have never pulled the onside guard [fol. 625] on a sweep. At the times, if the defense dictates such, we will swing the guard behind the tackle, and they will exchange blocks. In our terminology at Georgia, "swing" mean that the tackle and the guard are going to cross-block. They are going to switch assignments. A "pull" means that a guard is going to cross-block. They are going to switch assignments. "Pull" means that a guard is going to pull around the end and lead interference.

Q. All right, sir; next one.

A. "Don't overshift." The basic defense at Georgia last year was an overshift. We used an overshift practically the entire game against Alabama, because that was the basic defense from which all of last year was an overshift. We used an overshifted on us in the ball game quite a bit, especially when the ball is on a hash mark, and the wide side of the field is there, you want to overshift to the wide side to get your men over there in a position to protect that wide side of the field.

Q. All right, sir. The next one.

A. "Woodward commits fast-safety man." Woodward has had a history at Georgia, while he was a young sophomore, of coming up fast. That means that—by meaning committing fast, I am sure that that would be meaning that he comes up fast to the line of scrimmage on a running play and makes the tackle. If I were an opposing coach trying to use any information of those notes, and I knew that Woodward committed fast, all I would do would just fake a running play, make Woodward come up, and I would put the end down behind him, and I would throw over him for a touchdown. Alabama did not throw the ball in the vicinity or in the area in which Woodward's defensive [fol. 626] responsibility was in the ball game. They didn't throw a single pass in his defensive zone.

Q. All right, sir; next one.

A. "Weak defense, anybody except Blackburn." Weak defense, I thought the defense, to be honest, was a little better than the offense. The defense, in the year before, in the standings in the Southeastern Conference had finished sixth and the offense had finished eleventh, which is just one from the bottom. Now, "anybody except Blackburn", Blackburn was sick. He didn't practice much. He was—he had something wrong with his stomach, and he couldn't practice, and he was out of shape, and Blackburn did not play in the game except very little, right—I think right maybe at the end of the ball game he did play a little.

Q. Speaking of defense there for a moment, looking at the film a while ago that we saw, it appeared to me that Georgia covered those punts as well as any team that you could expect to cover any punt anytime?

A. Yes, sir; they hustled. They covered kick-offs well; they covered punts well.

Q. And looked like to me they were still hustling at the end of the game?

A. Yes, sir; they were still hustling.

Q. Next one.

A. "Bear slot right". That is just a standard formation, slot right. I reckon it is just—it says "Baer"; I guess they are referring to "Babb", I reckon that means it is a regular slot formation; it is just standard; most teams in football use it.

"Split right end out". I don't—that doesn't mean anything. I mean, the end splits—practically every team that plays football splits an end.

[fol. 627] Q. Would that be indicative of the lonesome end formation?

A. Could be; I mean a lot of teams, what we refer to in our terminology at Georgia as a lonesome end formation is an unbalanced line where we take an end and put him over on the strong side of the unbalanced line. That is what we call a lonesome end. I don't—"split right end out". I mean, you see both teams use split ends in that game.

Q. All right, sir.

A. "Long count, left half in motion." Every team in football has got different counts that they go on. Some of them go on quick counts; some of them go, for example, on one, or two, or three or four, just according to the play and what particular type of play they are going to run and what kind of snap count they want to use.

"Left half in motion." Everyone that could see the film, both teams were using motion men, I mean, backs going in motion one way or the other. I mean, that don't mean anything there as far as I am concerned.

"Best since Trippi, Porterfield." Well, I just say this, I never did have the opportunity to see Charlie Trippi play football. I know his reputation as being a great football player and an All-American football player. We have had a lot of good backs at Georgia since I have coached there that are much better than Porterfield. For example, we had Fred Brown in 1959. We won the Conference Championship. We had Bobby Walden who was a good back. We had Jimmy Orr who was a great back now playing with the Colts. We have had some good backs since I have been there.

Q. All right, sir.

[fol. 628] A. And I think they all were better than Porterfield. I mean, Porterfield is doing fine. He was a sophomore and he is a good boy. I think he is going to improve.

Again, it says "Baer on a hook"; I guess it is referring to Babb. Every team—every team—I know we do at Georgia, when we get down in scoring territory, we have a goal line offense. We have a particular set of plays that we use when we get down in scoring territory. When we get down inside the ten or around—close to the goal line, we have a goal line offense. Now, to my knowledge the last time that Coach Butts saw Georgia practice was on Saturday, September the 15th. At that time we did not have the goal line offense. We didn't make the final game plans for the game against Alabama until Monday, so I don't know about that.

Now, "Babb on a hook on the goal line"; you have to have a hook pass on the goal line, because you are limited down there by the end zone, and you can't run out of bounds, so you have to—a guy has to go down there and hook. Everybody has a hook pass. That is one of the simplest passes in football. Every team has a hook pass.

Q. If I remember your testimony—I mean, your statement while the reels were being shown, several passes were thrown by Alabama which you described as hooks?

A. Yes, sir; yes, sir.

Q. All right, sir. Next one.

A. "Slot to right, ends normal (three yards)."

Q. Does that say "end" or "ends"?

A. We don't have any double slot. That is what that would have to mean to me.

Q. All right, sir, go ahead.

[fol. 629] A. I mean—it says "ends normal (three yards)." We don't have—we didn't have a formation at Georgia where we split both ends.

Q. Next one.

A. "Right halfback on fly, left halfback, quarterback gives to left half, left guard pulling blocks on corner." I can't figure that one out.

The Marshal: Order, please.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. All right, sir, go ahead.

A. "Slot or wide slot"; the year before we had used a wide slot, but we didn't have a wide slot at Georgia for the Alabama game. We had what we referred to as a tight slot, but the year before I know against Georgia Tech, I think we scored a touchdown from a wide slot formation, we didn't have any wide slot for the Alabama game, didn't practice one.

Q. All right, sir.

A. "Can't quick kick." Well, since I have been at Georgia coaching there, we have—I know when we had Bobby Walden, he was probably the greatest kicker in the country, and he established the Southeastern Conference Record, and he led the Nation in kicking, and he is a great kicker, and we put in a formation which we got from the University of Texas which we kind of copied from them. We get this information from all schools. We copied this from the University of Texas. We call it the quick kick formation, which we kick quick from, and it is actually a double wing formation where we line up the man that is going to kick the ball about eight yards behind the center, and we snap him the ball and he can either quick kick the [fol. 630] ball or he can run or he can pass, and this doesn't change a single thing as far as our offensive playing is concerned. It doesn't change the blocking assignments or anything. We say "quick kick formation" and call the play. For two years Jake Saye has been kick quicking out of this formation, has been throwing the ball, and he was a good quick kicker, and we have gotten off some wonderful quick kicks.

Q. Is it Bobby Walden who used to kick from the same formation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In your regular punt formation, how far is the man who is to do the kicking, how far is he from the center?

A. Oh, about thirteen yards, any where from twelve to thirteen.

Q. You more or less leave that up to the individual to select how far back he ought to get?

A. Yes, sir; and it is according to how hard our center can snap the ball, how fast you can get it back there. Some of them are a little bit slow on that.

Q. Next one.

A. "Slot right, left half—" I can't—

Q. That is "right half on fly, screen to him."

A. Oh; "slot right, right half on fly, screen to him." We don't have any play like that. We screened in the Alabama game, but we screened away from the fly man. We didn't screen to the fly man. We don't have any such play as screening to any fly man.

Q. Next one.

A. "29-0 series." We don't have any 29-0 series. We have an outside belly series at Georgia which is an 029 or 048 or 037 slant or 036 slant.

"Babb catches everything they throw." Well, I mean, that is—[fol. 631] Q. A matter of opinion, isn't it?

A. As far as I am concerned, that is just a ridiculous statement. I don't think any pass receiver could catch everything they throw. I don't see how they could.

Q. Top of Page 7?

A. "Slot right, left end out 15 yards." Now, this, evidently, this says "slot right, left end out 15 yards." Well, that is a pro formation. This is the formation—

Q. That is what you know as the pro formation at Georgia?

A. Yes; in my terminology, in our terminology at Georgia that is a pro formation. Now, that was the formation that Georgia and Alabama used in the ball game. Also about this formation sometime in August last year Coach Butts called me in his office, and he had a boy there—he is now a doctor—his name was Dr. Virgil Peavy, who was the academic grades and so forth. See, the boys went to class and all that, so we went in the office and he told me that he had run into Coach Bryant somewhere, and Coach Bryant was talking to him about this formation.

Mr. Cody: I don't think that is admissible.

The Court: That is hearsay.

Mr. Cody: Let's do it in legal fashion.

Mr. Schroder: That's already been in the case, Your Honor, about Bryant notifying—

[fol. 632] The Court: I don't remember anything about Bryant and Dr. Peavy.

Mr. Schroder: No, sir; not about Dr. Peavy, about the bomb play, the first time Alabama got the ball. It's been already told—

The Court: This is hearsay.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Pass on to the next one.

A. "Drop end off, Georgia, contains with tackle (defense)." Well, that is standard in any defensive plan. You have to have a defense where you drop the ends off to cover the flat, and, of course, when you drop the end off, there is no way you can contain the passer unless the tackle does contain him or else you stun the tackle and the linebacker can contain him.

Mr. Schroder: That's all, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, sir, Mr. Cody.

Mr. Cody: Will you identify this for me, please, Defendant's Exhibit No.—what is that, 18?

The Clerk: That will be 19.

[fol. 633] Mr. Cody: All right.

The Clerk: Defendant's Exhibit No. 19 for identification is a copy of a letter dated March 26, 1963, to James H. Therrill from John W. Gregory.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Gregory, let me read you one paper and ask you if you signed it. It is addressed—dated March 26, 1963, heading: "Athens, Georgia."

Mr. Schroder: I don't believe it has been introduced in evidence yet.

The Court: He doesn't have to introduce it in evidence; he has to identify it first.

Mr. Schroder: He hasn't identified it if the witness hasn't seen it.

The Court: You have to refer to the date—the date and who signed the letter and so forth. You will have to properly identify it.

[fol. 634] Mr. Cody: It hasn't been introduced.

The Court: No, sir; you don't have to introduce it, not yet.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. This is a letter dated March 26, 1963, headed: March 26, 1963, headed "Athens, Georgia"; addressed to Mr. James H. Therrill, Assistant Attorney General for the State of Georgia. Is that your signature?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You mind if I read this to you just a moment?

A. No, sir.

Q. "After viewing the alleged notations made by George Burnett while listening to an alleged telephone conversation between Wallace Butts and 'Bear' Bryant on September 13, 1962, it is my opinion, as one of the coaches of the University of Georgia football team, that if such information was given to Coach Bryant before the opening game of the season, it conveyed vital and important information with respect to the offensive and defensive plays, patterns and formations that could have been of value to the University of Alabama football team, and could have effective the outcome of the game on September 22, 1962." You say you signed that?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: You can come down.

[fol. 635] Redirect examination.

Q. What were the circumstances under which you signed that?

A. I was called in to the—

The Court: Well, now, you—go ahead; go ahead.

Mr. Schroder: I think he's got a right to explain it.

The Court: I will let him explain it, but you can't impeach your own witness.

Mr. Schroder: Impeach him?

The Court: Go ahead.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. What were the circumstances under which you signed that?

A. I was called into the head coach's office, Johnny Griffith, by Johnny Griffith, and he told me that the Attorney General had sent these prepared statements over there, and that they were trying to keep the assistant coaches out of it, but looked like they were going to get involved in it, and he showed me these notes, and at that time, I just kind of glanced at them. I didn't have—I didn't study them. I just glanced through them, and so forth, and then Mr. Griffith carried me up to the President's office, [fol. 636] Dr. O. C. Aderhold, and had copies of this statement typed by his secretary. I was in the office and Coach Griffith brought this statement in there, and I borrowed Dr. Aderhold's pen and signed this statement. You know, the coaching profession is a little precarious, and I was afraid that if I didn't sign this statement and go along with the head coach he has the authority to hire and fire his assistants, at his own discretion, that my job would be in jeopardy.

Q. Was anything said about this record being kept out of the public?

A. Yes, sir. Johnny Griffith the head coach at Georgia, told me—

Mr. Cody: Your Honor, I think, that is—that is getting back into hearsay, Mr. Schroder knows that.

The Court: Yes, sir; I will let him go into it.

Mr. Schroder: I think he's got a right to go into it to explain—

The Court: I think he can explain it.

Mr. Schroder: —conduct.

The Witness: Johnny Griffith, the head coach at Georgia, told me that the statement would not be made public, that they were going to carry this over to the Attorney General's office, and it would be placed in the files and that no [fol. 637] one would have access to it, and it wouldn't be seen. And several days later it was published in the paper.

Mr. Schroder: Thank you. That's all, Your Honor.

Mr. Cody: You can be excused, Coach Gregory.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Was the statement true—is it true today?

Mr. Cody: Well, that is a conclusion; that is a conclusion.

Mr. Schroder: That is not a conclusion.

The Witness: You noticed in this statement I did not sign the statement.

Mr. Cody: He can't impeach his own statement.

The Court: Did you view these notations, Coach Gregory? Let me ask you this.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. Before you signed this statement, did you view these notations?

[fol. 638] A. I just glanced through them, Your Honor. I didn't—I didn't study them.

Q. When was this, on March the 26th?

A. Well, I can't recall the exact date.

Q. I mean, it was after it was published in the Saturday Evening Post?

A. Well, I don't even know the date the Saturday Evening Post article was published.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. But this was after—the Judge wants to know if it was after the Post came out?

A. This was when the Attorney General—

Q. Was it after the Post article was published?

A. Yes, sir.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. And had you seen and read the Post article?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you saw the notations—I imagine it was a photostatic copy?

A. I imagine so; it was just—just a copy.

Q. And it is your testimony—am I correct in this, I want to be sure—it is your testimony that Coach Griffith, and who else put pressure on you to sign it?

A. Well, I didn't—I didn't say anybody put pressure; I just said that I felt—I didn't say that. I said I felt that if I didn't sign the notes that it would jeopardize my job.

[fol. 639] JAMES WALLACE BUTTS called as a witness, having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Your name is James Wallace Butts?

A. Yes.

Q. You are the plaintiff in this lawsuit we are trying here today?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where do you live, Coach Butts?

A. 1490 South Milledge Avenue, Athens.

Q. How long have you lived in Athens, Georgia?

A. Since 1938.

Q. Where did you receive your education, Coach Butts?

A. I graduated from the Georgia Military College, in Military prep school, and later Mercer University in 1928.

Q. After you had graduated from Mercer did you then go into the coaching profession?

A. Yes; I coached four years at the prep school at Madison A. & M. School, and three years at my Alma Mater, the Georgia Military College, in Milledgeville, and three years at Male High School in Louisville, Kentucky. Then, of course, I moved to the University of Georgia as assistant coach, 1938. In 1939 I was made the head coach. I retired from that position following the 1960 season.

Q. What is your age?

A. Fifty-eight, sir.

Q. Other than the three years that you coached in Ken-[fol. 640] tucky, you have spent your entire time here in Georgia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the years that you were head coach at the University of Georgia, as head football coach, how many times did you produce a Bowl team?

A. Well, with the cooperation of so many good football players, we made eight Bowl engagements.

Q. Could you name those for me, please?

A. We played in the Orange Bowl three times, the Orange Bowl being the first Bowl game that the University of Georgia had ever played in. We played in the Rose Bowl, the Sugar Bowl, the Oil Bowl, the Gator Bowl, and the Presidential Bowl.

Q. Have you ever coached the College All-Star Teams when they were playing the Professional Football League Champions?

A. Yes; we coached in the All-Star game in Chicago vs the Professional Football League Champions four times, and we, of course, have been in other All-Star games over the years.

Mr. Schroder: May I address the Court a moment, please?

The Court: Sir?

Mr. Schroder: Could I have the original papers there?

The Court: Yes, sir; yes, sir. I have had them here. There are so many orders and things I don't think are pertinent, but the original papers are right on the bottom.
[fol. 641] Mr. Schroder: Just the petition, Your Honor.

If it please the Court, this is the—what I am holding in my hand here now is the original petition that was filed by Mr. Butts in this Court on March 25, 1963. Paragraph 4 has been admitted by the Saturday Evening Post, therefore I am not going to go into it, but I would like to read it at this time, if I may.

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Schroder: "Plaintiff," being Wallace Butts, "during his career, has enjoyed a national reputation as a successful and respected member of the coaching profession, and has been accorded many honors, among which was his election in 1959 as President of the Football Coaches Association, a national organization of football coaches throughout America. Upon invitation he has coached the College All-Stars, the Blue-Gray All-Star Game, and the North-South All-Star Game. Plaintiff has, during his career, been widely sought as a speaker and lecturer on various aspects of football, and has spoken at clinics, banquets, and other such public gatherings throughout the United States. In addition, Plaintiff has been approached and offered employment as head football coach by several colleges and professional football teams in the country, due entirely to his reputation as a successful member and leader in his profession."

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. At the end of the 1960 season, Coach Butts, you tes- [fol. 642] tified a moment ago that you resigned as head football coach at the University of Georgia.

A. Yes, sir; that is true.

Q. What were the circumstances?

A. I resigned at the end of the 1960 football season because I had had trouble with high blood pressure. The two last games of the season gave me a lot of trouble, and I resigned as the head football coach, knowing then that I would never return as a head coach in college football. I hoped, of course, that I might have the opportunity to coach a professional football team.

Mr. Cody: Your Honor, I don't think that is in response—

Mr. Schroder: Which part of it?

The Court: What is your objection, Mr. Cody?

Mr. Cody: About what he hoped to do. It is not in response to the question.

The Court: I will let Mr. Schroder question him. Maybe the word "hope" is not proper, but I will let Mr. Schroder question him and bring that out.

Mr. Schroder: Thank you, sir.

[fol. 643] By Mr. Schroder:

Q. During the past year, 1962, have you or not been in touch with a national football team with respect to employment?

A. Yes, sir; the Dallas professional football team of the National Football League contacted me.

Q. That—has anyone contacted you regarding future employment as a coach, or in any other area relating to coaching since the Saturday Evening Post article?

A. No, sir.

Q. That is Mrs. Butts and your three daughters seated there on the bench right inside the rail?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How well do you know Coach Paul Bryant of the University of Alabama?

A. I have known Coach Paul Bryant, first as a player at the University of Alabama when he played the end opposite Don Hudson. I knew him first as a coach when he was an assistant coach under "Red" Sanders at Vanderbilt University, during the seasons '40 and '41. And then, of course, I have known him real well since he was a member of the Preflight School in Athens in 1942.

Q. Have teams which were coached by you played teams coached by Coach Bryant?

A. The University of Georgia played against Coach Bryant when he was a coach at the University of Kentucky. I believe he was a head coach at that institution eight years. We played against him one time when he was at Texas A. & M.; and then, of course, Georgia and Alabama always play.

Q. During the years that you have coached football, what has been your custom—if you know the custom of other football coaches you might give that, too—with re-[fol. 644] gard to discussing football techniques, coaching points, and the like.

A. Well, Mr. Schroder, I will say this, that I have never turned down anyone who asked me a coaching point.

Q. What is a "coaching point"?

A. Well, any coach, for example, might know that on a particular pass play, that a sideline route is featured in this pass pattern, and at the University of Georgia, one reason, perhaps, that we have had some success is we not only require that the offensive football player running the sideline route run it, but that he be within four yards of the boundary line, which is a coaching point. When I was coaching the single-wing, I think we were perhaps the first in the business, instead of having the passer look for an open pass receiver, we looked at the defensive man in the area that we were throwing, or zone in which we were throwing, figuring that the defensive man cannot be right. That is a coaching point. Does that answer your question?

Q. Yes, sir; but I would now like to ask you, what is meant by teaching or coaching your boys that the defensive man could not be right? You don't get through to me.

A. Well, to explain that, Mr. Schroder, the way we worked out our pass patterns at the University of Georgia, we put a man to the right of a defender, to the left of the defender, and we occupied all of the others in the defensive plan, and for that reason we could say to our passer, if the man running the pass routes run the pass routes as they should, the defensive man cannot be right. Another example; we put one behind the pass receiver and one in [fol. 645] front. We occupy the other receivers with our plan. We then can tell the passer that the pass defender cannot be right.

Q. Well, he cannot be right if he's got to cover two people, could he? Is that what you mean?

A. Of course, Mr. Schroder, we cannot accomplish this on every occasion, but that is what we try to do.

Q. All right, sir. During the year 1962, in particular, did you or not have occasion to talk to Coach Paul Bryant over the telephone, as well as in person, and if you did, would you relate to the Court and Jury the approximate number of times that you did do that?

A. It would be impossible for me to—to tell the Jury or anyone else the number of times that I have talked to Coach Bryant, or called him, but I have called him several times, and I have talked to him several times. Of course, the first time that I called him during the summer of 1962 was in regard to certain rule changes, or rather, I learned in Buffalo that rules that had been a part of the Rules Committee, the enforcement of the same would be improved.

Q. Well, in that area, why were you in Buffalo? What was going on there?

A. When I was President of the College Football Coaches Association of America, the idea was originated that since there were so many All-Star games throughout America, that the football coaches should sponsor a game of that kind and it could, in time, become the best of them all. So we lined up the Eastern Kodak Company to back this project, and it was started during my time as the President of the Association. For the past two summers such a game has been played in Buffalo, New York. On that occasion it is customary for the Board of Trustees of the Football Coaches Association of America to meet, and as past President it was my privilege in 1962 to attend an [fol. 646] informal meeting in which this particular phase of football was discussed, and the coaches in the meeting that day were in agreement that defensive football was getting a little out of bounds, that football coaches, in their enthusiasm in teaching defensive football, and chasing in pursuit, which is chasing the football player and demanding that every defense man contact him with some part of his body, it was getting a little tough; and so the coaches themselves requested that, or planned to request that the officiating be strict in that area.

Q. Were you attending that meeting in Buffalo as a member of the Football Rules Committee?

A. Well, I was not an important member of the Rules Committee at the time; I was an interim member at large of the Rules Committee, but I felt that if I talked to Coach Paul Bryant, who, in my opinion, is the chief exponent of defensive football techniques, defensive football in general in this part of the country, and perhaps the United States, that I would be doing football, the game of football service.

Q. In what respects?

A. Of course, Mr. Schroder, the objective of most of the coaches that I have ever known is to win football games, but I have never—I have never known a football coach that willfully responds to anything that would cause unwarranted injuries, and I think defensive football at that time had reached that stage.

Q. And you discussed the topic with Coach Bryant because you say that he was one of the leading exponents, or what is it? I didn't exactly understand you.

A. Coach Bryant's record speaks for itself on defense. I sympathize with anyone who has to play him.

[fol. 647] Q. Was he, therefore, contracted as a leader of defensive football?

A. As a leader. I picked him out of all the Southeastern Conference coaches in this area; although I will say this, that Coach Frank Howard, of Clemson, is really the representative of the Third District of the N. C. A. A., the Third District would cover, of course, the Southeastern Conference. I'm not sure how many colleges or universities are represented in that group.

Q. Since your call to him—I believe you said it was either in July or August, 1962, when you came back from Buffalo?

A. I'm not sure about the date, but I think it was in late July.

Q. Had you previously discussed matters with Coach Bryant over the years?

A. Coach Bryant has been the head coach and athletic director at the University of Alabama for the past five years or six years, and since he returned to Texas A. & M.; I have called him many times.

Q. Have you called him, or talked with him since the conversation you have just related took place in July, 1962?

A. I have talked to him several times on the telephone. I have talked to him at least three times in person, that is, prior to the football season of 1962.

Q. Did you or not continue to talk with Coach Bryant throughout the season of 1962?

A. Yes, sir; the record will show that I did. I have called him many times, I am sure, on impulse, for no reason.

Q. On September 13, 1962, the Saturday Evening Post charges that you and Coach Bryant had a telephone conversation with each other, and that during that conversa-
[fol. 648] tion you gave Coach Bryant had a telephone conversation with each other and that during that conversation you gave Coach Bryant detailed information relating to the secret plays, formations, and defenses which the University of Georgia had in its game plan for the Alabama game. What is your answer as to that?

A. Emphatically no.

Q. Do you recall having any conversation at all with Coach Bryant on September 13, 1962, or on September 16, 1962?

A. Mr. Schroder, I have talked to Coach Bryant several times, many times over the years. I cannot positively identify one call from another, or give the date.

Q. The first time that that particular phone call, or those two phone calls were brought to your attention was some months after September, 1962?

A. The first time I heard about it was when I received a call.

Q. First time you heard about what?

A. The telephone call.

Q. What telephone call?

A. Purported to have been between Wallace Butts and Paul Bryant.

Q. On what occasion?

A. No date was given me; I received a call from Atlanta.

Q. When was the call made to you from Atlanta?

A. I—when I was attending a funeral in Philadelphia; I do not remember the date.

Q. Was it after the first of the year?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could it have been around the last day of January?

[fol. 649] A. I believe it was January the 30th, or late the night of January 30th.

Q. That would have been over four months since—after September 13?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. Now, who made that call to you? Just a moment; just a moment.

Mr. Schroder: Your Honor, this might be considered hearsay, and unless Mr. Cody would permit me to go into it—

Mr. Cody: I would like to know who it was.

The Court: You can ask—is it pertinent as to who called him?

Mr. Schroder: I think it might be linked up later; yes, Your Honor.

Mr. Cody: I have no objection.

Mr. Schroder: He has no objection, so I will go forward.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Who was the party that called you, and what was said by that party and by you on that occasion, January 30th or 31st, 1963?

[fol. 650] Mr. Cody: Well, I object to the contents of the call; I have no objection to who it was calling. That is the question you asked him.

The Court: Yes, sir. Well, I will sustain the objection.

Mr. Schroder: I did not want to go into it. I acknowledged it is hearsay, and I wasn't going into it unless Mr. Cody let me.

The Court: All right, sir.

A. (By the witness) Mr. John Carmichael called me.

Q. Who is he?

A. He is an acquaintance of mine.

Q. What do you mean by "acquaintance" of yours?

A. I have known him for a number of years.

Q. How well?

A. I have never known him too well. I know who he is, and he's always been friendly to me, and it's been the same in my case.

Q. You know him socially?

A. No, sir.

Q. Business-wise?

A. No, sir; I have never been in any business with him. One time Mr. Carmichael did sell me some stock, I believe. The company didn't thrive too well, and he refunded the money, and I appreciated that.

Q. Have you ever been in his home?

A. No.

Q. Has he ever been in your home?

[fol. 651] A. No.

Q. In that conversation was any mention made of a so-called telephone interception?

The Court: I believe you are going into conversation, Mr. Schroder.

Mr. Schroder: All right.

The Court: Of course, I realize there is going to be a certain type of hearsay evidence in this, but I think this particular kind is inadmissible.

Mr. Schroder: All right.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Throughout the years when you and Coach Paul Bryant, or you and any other coach have discussed football, has there ever been any occasion when you told Coach Bryant, or any other coach, what plans you, when you were coach, what plans Coach Griffith, who is now the coach, planned to use in any game involving Coach Bryant, or those other coaches?

A. I have never known the game plan of Coach Johnny Griffith.

Q. What is game plan?

A. The game plan is necessary for every game, because every team has quite a number of plays, all of which cannot be used in any one game, and usually the offensive and the defensive plan is outlined for the players. I am not [fol. 652] sure exactly what the plan is at the University of Georgia at the present time.

Q. Well, is your answer to the question I asked you "yes", or "no"; or do you remember the question?

A. I want the question asked again, sir.

(Whereupon the Reporter read back the question.)

A. Mr. Schroder, the question is a little vague to me.

Q. All right, sir. I admit it is too long and ambiguous, perhaps. Have you, in any conversation with Coach Bryant, over the telephone or in person, ever discussed with him what the University of Georgia planned to do in a game to be played between Alabama and Georgia?

A. No.

Q. Is there any doubt in your mind about that?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. Is Coach Bryant the only one in your profession that you talked to in person or over the telephone?

A. The records show that I have talked to quite a few coaches, and I will say that I have slowed down on that. I used to talk to a lot more than I have in recent years.

Mr. Schroder: Under the rules as I understand them, Your Honor, the witness can refresh his recollection from any document which he knows is accurate?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: I am not asking the witness to read from the document, but merely to read from it—but merely to read it, and after—

[fol. 653] By Mr. Schroder:

Q. After your recollection has been refreshed, tell us some of the coaches and other athletic people to whom you have talked over the last number of years.

The Court: As I understand, Coach Butts is not going to read the document; he is going to read the document and refresh his recollection, and then testify.

Mr. Schroder: That is what I instructed him.

A. (By the witness) I do not need this record, Mr. Schroder, to remember some coaches I have called. I have been close to Ray Graves.

Q. Who is he? Now, identify him.

A. The head football coach at the University of Florida.

Q. You say you have been close to him; have you talked with him over the telephone?

A. I have talked with him over the telephone. I have talked to Frank Howard, the coach at Clemson. I have talked to Coach John McAloson (?), at the University of Pittsburgh. I have talked to Bob Woodruff, the former coach of the University of Florida; now the athletic director at the University of Tennessee. I have talked to Coach Clyde Earhardt, coach at the Presbyterian College, Clinton, South Carolina. Coach Bob Ford, former coach at the University of Atlanta and the University of Kentucky. Is that sufficient, Mr. Schroder?

Q. In your conversations with these coaches that you have just named—well, I'll put it this way; is that all that you have talked to?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 654] Q. All right, sir. In the conversations which you have had with these various coaches and athletic directors, was or was not football in general discussed?

A. I have talked football with every football coach I have ever been around. I started my football career when I was fifteen years old as a football player at the Georgia Military College in Milledgeville, and I have talked and lived football since that time. That was a long time ago.

Q. Well, let's get it up to more recent years. Have you talked or have you not talked with many coaches in the last two years on the subject of football in general?

A. I have talked to several coaches about football in general the last two years, but actually, the coaching game has grown away from me just a little bit. A lot of the coaches that I coached against are not in the coaching profession any longer, so naturally that would cut down on the number of calls made to people of that kind.

Q. Now, as athletic director at the University of Georgia, what were your responsibilities?

A. My responsibility, of course, was to plan the budget covering all sports. I had responsibility for supervising the making of schedules, and general supervision of the entire athletic program at the University of Georgia.

Q. I believe it's been testified to already that Paul Bryant held the position as athletic director, in addition to the position of head coach, football coach at Alabama?

A. That's true.

Q. What were some of the things that you and Coach Bryant did talk about when you were talking to him, re- [fol. 655] lated to matters covering the University of Georgia and Alabama?

A. Well, of course, Mr. Schroder, football is a big business, and there are a lot of things business-wise that must be discussed between athletic directors.

Q. Such as what?

A. For example, in the case of the University of Georgia and the University of Alabama, it is very important to the University of Georgia that the football game be played every other year in Birmingham, Alabama instead of Tuscaloosa, for two reasons. It's tough enough to play Coach Bryant any place, but in Tuscaloosa it's awful; and the, of course, it's a difference of forty to fifty thousand dollars in the check that Georgia will receive, for that matter.

Q. Well, in that—

A. Then, of course, we have talked about the possibility of putting lights in at Athens. We have had some games over there when it was so hot that it was almost impossible for the spectators to survive. We have talked about moving the game back where it used to be, on a November date, which has proved impossible so far because the University of Georgia has so many national rivals playing in November.

Q. You talked about the difference in the game being played in Tuscaloosa and in Birmingham with respect to the financial aspects; where was the game scheduled to be played?

A. We have contracts with all of our opponents, and in the game contract between Georgia and Alabama, it is up to the University of Alabama to select the site of the game when it is played in the State of Alabama.

Q. In your conversations with Coach Bryant relating to playing the game in Birmingham, you have said, I think, [fol. 656] that it would mean forty thousand dollars more to each team because of the site where it was played?

A. That's about the difference, but I am giving only an approximate figure, the reason being that the stadium is larger. As another reason, the student body at Tuscaloosa takes up a lot of the seats, and some of them do not come to Birmingham. That is perhaps a selfish reason, but we did figure on it.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. What would be the total seating, Coach, for a game—without getting into percentages—like the Georgia-Alabama game, the game of '62?

A. Your Honor, our check is—

Q. Approximately.

A. —approximately ninety-eight thousand, which is about the same as the check we received in Jacksonville.

Q. That would be Georgia's share?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Roughly, it would be two hundred fifty or two hundred seventy thousand gross?

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. You have testified, I believe, that you and other coaches discuss these coaching points. Would you or not [fol. 657] have coaches come to you about your passing techniques?

A. Mr. Schroder, I hate to say this, but I had a very dignified gentleman in the coaching profession spend three days in my basement playroom, the late Gene Neyland. It is true that I was the first one to introduce the "T" formation in the South. I have had many coaches come to me for information; I have never refused one. The last lecture I made on pass offensive, for example, I had more than sixty letters requesting additional information, and I complied with the requests. I think you will find it true that the coaches that know a lot about football are perfectly willing to share the information they have.

Q. Have you sought information or help from other coaches?

A. Mr. Schroder, the University of Georgia has established the all time offensive record for the Southeastern Conference with the single-wing, and of course, it made me a good coach, but I got most of my information from two other coaches, Carl Snavely, then the coach at the University of North Carolina, and the late Dick Harlow of Harvard. I went up to see Coach Dick Harlow, and I asked him for information, and he was a little busy and I had to follow him around, and finally I told him to sit down and draw the whole thing, which he did, and we named the offensive for Dick Harlow, then the coach at Harvard. We called it Harvard 3, Harvard 4, Harvard 7. I did give him that much credit.

Q. It is true, from what you have said, then, in your profession coaches willingly, it's unwritten law that they do help each other when they are asked to on specific techniques or plays or coaching points?

[fol. 658] A. Well, to give you an example, Mr. Schroder, you know I have a contemporary, his name is Robert D. Dodd. I would not hesitate to go out and see Coach Dodd and ask him for information on coaching points, and I am sure Coach Dodd would tell me exactly how he ran his plays, giving the coaching points, if I requested this information.

Q. Speaking of that, and particularly the school where Coach Dodd is connected, how do you feel about knowing Bryant as well as you did, when Georgia Tech plays Alabama?

A. Mr. Schroder, I pull for Georgia Tech in every game they play except when they play the University of Georgia. That is rather strange, and I know it. I pull for Auburn to beat Alabama because of my friendship with Coach Ralph Jordan, who was associated with me at the University of Georgia for seven years. Of course, when he played —when Coach Bryant played Bud Wilkinson, I pulled for Alabama because they were representing the Southeastern Conference.

Q. Who is Bud Wilkinson?

A. Bud Wilkinson is one of the finest football coaches ever developed in America; President of the Football Coaches, and athletic director at the University of Oklahoma. Also, he head up the Kennedy Physical Fitness Program.

Q. You know him?

A. Very well.

Q. Wilkinson?

A. Yes, sir. In fact, I have called him many times.

Q. Passing briefly, or passing for the moment to the so-called Burnett notes, I want to ask you a few questions about those, and if Mrs. Stilwell will be kind enough to hand the original to you, you can follow me as I refer to [fol. 659] them. It is contended by the Saturday Evening Post that in a telephone conversation between you and Coach Paul Bryant on September 13, 1962, that you told Coach Bryant the following things, the first of which is, and I quote: "Reismueller greatest in history." I will ask you with reference to that quotation, first, whether you have ever discussed the man whose name I have just mentioned with Coach Bryant at any time, assuming in my question now that what they were talking about was what—what they were talking about here when they wrote it down here was Rissmiller, and not Reismueller?

A. Mr. Schroder, the answer to that is that I have talked to Coach Bryant about Rissmiller. Coach Bryant was a little concerned about the recruiting of Rissmiller for the University of Georgia, and I have talked to him about it, and I assured him that Rissmiller came to the University of Georgia because his uncle lives at Cedartown, Georgia, and because it was his desire to come to the University of Georgia.

Q. Is that—excuse me.

A. In connection with that, Coach Bryant has asked me: What kind of a football player is Rissmiller? The only thing that I have ever said to Coach Bryant, or anyone else about Rissmiller is that he is the finest physical specimens that I have ever seen in football. I have never told Coach Bryant, or any other coach, that Rissmiller could be trapped, that Rissmiller would or would not carry out his offensive assignment. I have never put my judgment up against the judgment of the coaching staff at Georgia in regard to Rissmiller. I would not pass on how good a [fol. 660] football player he was until I could watch him in group work, which I never have, and also I would have to have the benefit of the grades, which are kept on every football player—

Q. What sort—

A. —because for a football player to be good, he must be consistently good.

Q. What do you mean by grades kept on a football player? You mean in school?

A. I think it is true that every football player that plays in the Southeastern Conference, or any other place where the football competition compares to the competition in the Southeastern Conference, that everything that a football player—any position he does is graded.

Q. Graded by his coaches?

A. Graded by his coaches. The work is usually divided up among the coaching staff, and each coach is assigned one of the—one or more of the players.

Q. The information upon which a coach might grade the player to whom he is assigned is obtained how?

A. By studying the movies.

Q. You remember discussing with Coach Bryant something about the recruiting of Rissmiller? Was Coach Bryant likewise interested in getting that boy to go to the University of Alabama?

A. Mr. Schroder, I would like to say this. I enjoyed Coach Bryant's disappointment in not getting Rissmiller.

Q. Then I assume he was interested in getting him over there?

A. I think a lot of colleges and universities were interested in him, because he was selected in the State of Penn- [fol. 661] sylvania as one of the two or three best tackles in that State his senior year.

Q. Is what you have just said the extent of any discussion that you ever had with Coach Bryant that you recall, in which the name Ray Rissmiller was mentioned?

A. I repeat, I have never said to Coach Bryant, or any other coach playing against the University of Georgia, anything about the detailed play of Rissmiller.

Q. All right, sir. Let's pass on to the next one. I will read it; it's on Page 2. "Rakestraw to right", and there is a line drawn under that, and under the line is written, "optional left pass, if can block man on corner, keeps running". Now, I don't know whether the author or authors of these notes meant for that to be two separate entries or not, so I am going to ask you, first, to discuss the language above the line separately from that below the line, and then ask you to discuss the entry below the line; and, third, then discuss them as if they all meant the same thing. Now, "Rakestraw to right" means to you, if anything? Go ahead.

A. Mr. Schroder, that does not mean anything to me. I would like to say that I have never told any coach that Rakestraw goes to the right or left or forward or backward. I hope he will go forward in the football games next fall.

Q. Next entry reads: "optional left pass"—entry below that line to which I was referring a moment ago—"optional left pass, if can block man on corner, keeps running". What, if anything, does that mean to you, is my first question; and my second question is, whether or not you have ever discussed with Coach Paul Bryant information con- [fol. 662] tained in the quotation which I just read, to the best of your knowledge?

A. I would like to take the bottom part of that statement first.

Q. Do it as you wish, sir.

A. I think it would be true that every offensive plan, almost every offensive plan in football, as related to the passing game, has three types of passes, a drop-back pass, which the quarterback, for example, would drop straight back to the center approximately seven yards and set up to throw. A pass called a roll-out pass in which he would be required to fake usually to the fullback and the offensive set. And a sprint-out pass in which the quarterback would simply take the ball and sprint as fast as he could to the corner of his offensive man, watching for indications, reading the defensive plan.

Coach Paul Bryant, at times, however, has played entire football games without ever using—without ever using a drop-back type pass. He is an expert on the roll-out type pass, and it might be that since he has Joe Namath, that he is going to drop-back type pass. Coach Paul Bryant and Coach Bud Wilkinson are two of the best exponents of that type of football I know. I have learned a lot of football from them on an option pass, which in the case of Bud Wilkinson I am sure instructions are to the quarterback, sprint to the corner, and any time you can gain three yards, take the three yards and never throw, never throw until the receiver is wide open. That would mean the option pass I have described.

This "option left pass" to me describes the pass route which either originated with me or Coach Frank Leyhe of Notre Dame. We called it the same thing. We have had about ten coaching clinics at the University of Georgia dur- [fol. 663] ing my coaching time. This expression has been used, I am sure, that in the State of Georgia today there are fifty, a minimum of fifty high school coaches that would know exactly what you are talking about when you mention that pass route. Since I have lectured on the subject of football all over the United States, I am sure there are people all over the United States. If you would like for me to, sir, I will take the blackboard and show you the original plan which was completed seventy per cent of the time when we were employing the single wing offense, if that will—

Q. Seventy per cent of the time?

A. Well, if we threw it a hundred times, we complete seventy.

Q. Is that considered fairly good?

A. Mr. Schroder, we never thought we were doing very well unless we completed better than fifty per cent, but we have had a lot of passes that we had to drop because our percentage was very bad.

Q. You mentioned the fact that optional left pass was something that, I believe you said, you and Frank Leyhe of Notre Dame devised?

A. To my knowledge we were the first coaches that took advantage of the possibility of the same.

Q. Do you know whether or not the University of Georgia now uses that terminology?

A. I heard Coach Johnny Griffith testify that this pass was used in 1961 in the University of Georgia vs. the University of Florida football game at Jacksonville.

Q. Wasn't that the Miami game he was testifying about?

A. Well, you are right; it was Miami.

[fol. 664] Q. And it was called optional left pass? All right, sir, will you please show the Court and Jury what it is that we are talking about when you talk about optional left pass.

A. As I said, this was used first from the single wing. This is a tight line which is something you gentlemen studying football haven't seen much of.

Q. On the blackboard?

A. On the blackboard. Now, the halfback and the linebacker are the two men that we worked on on this offensive plan. First of all, it was our objective to keep the linebacker out of the pass defense so the ball was snapped directly to the fullback who executed a full spin, handing off to the tail back or left half who stepped in to take the ball from the quarterback, and then was back in passing position seven yards deep. The left end ran what we call a deep route, running to the inside of the halfback playing this position, and then heading for the flag. That, of course, is in the corner of the field. The onside end ran what we call a hidden route so that he would be in position either to continue that route or fake a block on the linebacker. And then he is usually about twelve yards deep. The safety man here had to be occupied because with this plan we were isolating the right defensive side back. The wing back was through the safety man. The tail back dropped back in passing position, and then we told him—of course, we were not always right in what we told him—the defensive man could not be right. As soon as you set up, you look for the defensive man playing that position. There would be a man in front of him and a man behind him. You know that your pass receivers are disciplined. They will be on the right. You throw to the man that is open. I imagine that Van Davis, [fol. 665] who was then playing the right end at the University of Georgia, caught more passes in one season than any football player has ever caught in the history of Southeastern competition, so that is what opticnal left means, to apply it to the T-formation.

Q. Don't go through—it is the same pattern in that T-formation?

A. Same pattern.

Q. All right, sir. Coach Butts, my second question relating to that entry, or those two entries is this: Do you have any recollection of ever having discussed that with Coach Paul Bryant before Georgia played Alabama in 1962?

A. Absolutely not, in regard to the University of Georgia. The University of Georgia had optional passes. I have never studied them or relayed this information to anyone going to play the University of Georgia.

Q. The next entry reads, "well disciplined ball club, added two coaches". What is your testimony, Coach Butts, with reference to whether or not you have ever discussed that topic with Coach Bryant before the University of Georgia and Alabama met in 1962, in September of that year.

A. Mr. Schroder, before the game between the University of Georgia and University of Alabama, I had never seen the University of Alabama—University of Georgia scrimmage the first team against the second team. I would have no idea how well disciplined the University of Georgia was under real competitive conditions that could be compared to game conditions. I thought the University of Georgia had a well organized team in that I thought in their group work they moved smartly and quickly to their different groups. They did not have lost motion on the field. I [fol. 666] had no way to know what kind of discipline they had, and I would like, if you will give me permission—

Q. Let me get an answer to my question, Did you discuss the discipline of the University of Georgia Football team with Paul Bryant at any time before they met in September, 1962?

A. Not that I know of. I can go to the blackboard and show you the application of discipline, and frankly under game conditions, although I do not care to criticize anyone. I can show you what lack of discipline under game conditions can do in a football game, and the reason I'd like to do that, I have been accused of rigging and fixing a football game, and I can show you where Alabama got easy touchdowns, and in so doing I will not blame any coach, I will not blame any players, because I understand that the University of Georgia had a number of sophomores, and I don't know any worse sentence you can put on anyone than to have them introduced into Southeastern Conference football in a game against the University of Alabama.

Q. When you say "going to the blackboard" you are referring to showing something that was on the film demonstrating what was done at the game; is that what you mean?

A. The gentlemen of the Jury have seen the pictures, but I doubt seriously if they have had enough experience with football to realize some of the things that happened.

Q. All right, sir, go ahead.

A. That is an offensive set which I would call slot left, right end split, called by the University, as I have learned since this case has been in progress, pro left. The first touchdown scored in the football game on September the [fol. 667] 22nd, 1962, in—first, I'd like to say to you that—would it be all right for me to tell them, sir, that I told the Georgia coaching staff about the fact that the University of Alabama was going to use this formation, or is that irrelevant?

The Court: I don't see any objection to it.

Mr. Schroder: You have already told them.

The Marshal: Let's have order, please.

The Witness: I went to the defensive coach in the presence of a boy named Virgil Peavy, whose job it was—

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. That is all right; go ahead.

A. All right. In other words, I showed on the blackboard head defensive coaches at the University of Georgia that this formation, told them that Paul Bryant would major in it against the University of Georgia. The first touchdown came from this thing, this formation, and the reason this formation is used, they've got the running strength, and they have got a defensive man isolated out here, and there cannot be but one man on the field that can possibly cover this man if he goes deep, the only man that can cover him is the man playing defensive position. So, early in the game this Williamson, playing right end for Alabama, did a right; that is what it is called. The defensive man playing for the University of Georgia had been coached [fol. 668] and coached everyday by the defensive backfield coach, a man towards him to the right, he is supposed to back up and make the pass receiver come to him, and if a pass is completed, make it happen in front. That is the rule we all go by. Instead of that, he moved with the fake, and it was a touchdown. That is an example of the lack of discipline as applied in football. You cannot blame this football player; he was a sophomore. It has happened to the best of them. That is an easy touchdown. There is not any way that could be arranged, but I was up in the press box.

Now, the second touchdown—I will not take them in chronological order or the way they happened in the game. As a result of a lack of discipline, self discipline and carrying out a plan, another touchdown was scored when this man went down on a deep in the end and this halfback was with him. The end was playing—was playing the triangle here off the line of scrimmage, approximately four yards.

Q. Are you referring to the defensive end?

A. The defensive end. The defensive end must cover the next man in the flat or deep flat because he is the only one that can. So the right halfback went out into the deep flat. The sophomore here can't be blamed, but football and football reaction must be a part of the football player. It's got to be instilled by discipline and coaching. This boy playing this position hesitated, and it was a touchdown for the University of Alabama. Georgia, all the time, was playing touch, hard-nosed football, in the line. They were covering kicks well; they were fighting to win. Two touchdowns were scored on that same plan that I have drawn right there, gentlemen.

[fol. 669] Now, we put Williamson out on the other side which would be, from the terminology that you should be familiar with now, at least in part, Williamson is out here, and we have the same setup, a defensive end off the line of scrimmage in a triangle. The University of Alabama employed a play that is used by Georgia; it is used by Georgia Tech; it is used by everybody, the outside belly play. A quarterback—all these men blocked away. The quarterback stepped back, placed the ball into the belly of the fullback, and faked to the fullback, faked in here. The right halfback was on a fly, and he had a wide position. Williamson, the split end, went backfield and carried this right side back of the University of Georgia absolutely out of the play. This end is the only man now who can take care of the pitch man in the event the quarterback keeps the ball, does not give it to the fullback, keeps the ball and pitches. Absolutely this end here, still a sophomore, and I have emphasized the fact that Georgia was handicapped because of this sophomore material, he went in for the fullback. The right halfback for the University of Georgia could have run a hundred yards. But there wasn't a soul on this side of the field, and that is the application of discipline on a football field under game conditions.

Q. Coach, we will pass on to the following or the next note at the top of Page 3 which reads, and I quote "onside guard, pulls on sweep." First I want to ask you, did you or not ever discuss with Coach Bryant prior to the Alabama-Georgia Football game any such thing as is in that note.

A. Mr. Schroder, the answer is "no"; I never discussed any type of guard play with him. I do not know of but two teams in America that pull onside guard on sweeps against [fol. 670] the type of defense that Alabama is known to employ, the two teams being the University of Missouri and the University of Delaware, and in the Southeastern Conference, I think if you pull the onside guard against a wide tackle six, a loose six defense, you will have extreme difficulty getting back to the line of scrimmage.

Q. All right, sir: Now, the next entry, reading "don't overshift." I will ask you the same question I have asked you or intended to ask you with reference to the other notes or other entries; did you on September the 13th or at any time prior to the Alabama-Georgia game discuss that entry with Coach Bryant as it related the the University of Georgia?

A. Mr. Schroder, that could not be possible. I do not know of any offensive plan that I could tell any coach any time that he would not overshift against that offensive set or that plan. The first—

The Court: What do you mean by "overshifting"? I am not clear on that.

Mr. Schroder: The lad from Alabama attempted to do it yesterday.

The Court: That overshifting has been in the testimony several different times.

The Witness: Well, Your Honor, sometimes when they don't overshift you can get into a lot of trouble; I can tell you that.

[fol. 671] The Court: Does that refer to the defense?

The Witness: Defense; yes, sir; it refers to the defense. Usually, if there was a normal defense, balanced defense, the guards would be somewhere in here, the tackle would be in the normal position, with the ends out in their position, but when you overshift, you would find usually—this is done different ways, but to make it as simple as possible, there would usually be a man here on the center, the guard would be overshifting, the tackle would be overshifting, and the end would be out there, and this man would be tight, this man would be tight, and you would compensate for the overshifting by moving your linebackers back to the other side. That is a simple picture of an overshift.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Wait a minute, whoa, whoa. In effect, what you are saying when you say "overshift" is related to defensive techniques, and it could only apply to a defensive technique?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —the defensive line, instead of playing in the regular—

Mr. Cody: Let him testify, Mr. Schroder.

Mr. Schroder: Thank you, sir.

[fol. 672] The Court: I didn't understand your question. I don't know whether it would be—let him ask this question.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: Young Mr. Pell uses a term "eye-to-eye"; when overshifting, you wouldn't be eye-to-eye; is that correct?

The Witness: No, sir. It would be eye-to-eye on this position here. This man playing head on the center, it would be looking right in the eye, would be eye-to-eye on him, but this football is so technical at times you line up on one eye and at times on the other eye, and it doesn't seem very significant, but it makes a lot of difference.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. The next entry reads, "Woodward commits fast-safety man." My first question is, Coach Butts, did you at any time discuss that entry or the contents of that entry with Coach Bryant before the Alabama game in 1962 in September?

A. Mr. Schroder, I do not even remember mentioning Woodward's name. Woodward—Brigham Woodward is a personal friend of mine.

Q. My question—answer my question first, and you can explain it. Did you or not discuss with Coach Bryant before the Alabama-Georgia game in 1962?

A. I don't remember ever discussing it with him any time.

[fol. 673] Q. All right, sir. Now, you can explain what it is that that means to you.

A. I would like to show you by demonstration my mental picture of Woodward, which I can do easily.

Q. Doing what?

A. I would like to show you—give me a ball carrier.

Mr. Lockerman: You have got a mighty poor one.

The Witness: Give me one young enough to run, the boy.

The Marshal: Let's have order, please.

The Witness: Will you stand there, please. Woodward is back, the distance will vary according to the situation, say, that he is back twelve yards. I would like to say to you, I have never thought of Woodward as being weak on pass defense. I have worried about him, however, with some of the things he does. He is very aggressive. He wants to make every tackle, and when he approaches the line of scrimmage, he is in an upright position. I am sure his coaches work on him all the time. I have seen them do it. In my opinion every football player playing the defense should be in a crouch. Now, the danger—first, I'd like to say in defensive football, all defensive football players play ankles. If I come in from this position, the play goes wide. It is possible for me to make tackles on or near the line of scrimmage without too much danger, because pursuit will be coming in that direction, to help [fol. 674] take care of the situation, but when a play breaks through the middle of the line of scrimmage, it is dangerous for any man playing safety man to take a chance, as pointed out by Coach Pierce. The safety man is supposed to prevent touchdowns being scored. So, when Woodward comes up fast, and a block approaches him—come on up, please, sir—and the ball carrier is coming; if the man in the safety position should commit to one side or the other, the ball carrier will certainly take advantage of it. So, what worried me about Woodward was the way he approached the line of scrimmage. I thought he should approach from the front and hold him off and hold up the play so that pursuit could help him. In the picture of the Alabama game, Georgia vs. Alabama, if it had not been for a great tackle by a linebacker—here is Woodward back here. The linebacker, Woodward came up, committed too fast, and went around a block. The Alabama ball carrier would have gone for a seventy-five yard run right down the middle if this linebacker hadn't made a great tackle. Now, that is the only picture I have of Woodward. I have never thought of him as being weak on pass defense. In fact, what he did last year I shall never forget in the homecoming game vs. the University of Kentucky. He came up with an interception which tied the game.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Now, would the fact that the safety man committed himself too fast or committed himself fast, would that fact be of any interest to someone who was preparing to play that team?

A. I can say this, that the offensive set over there, there is not any play that any coach could plan to take advantage [fol. 675] of a man playing the position as I described. Any plan he might overcommit, and frankly I always worry about it, but there wouldn't be any particular play that could take advantage of Woodward in his style of play. It might happen on any play.

Q. How about a—if he did that as a rule, how about a pass play; would that affect him or affect the success of the team playing against the team that Woodward was playing for?

A. Mr. Schroder, I have never suggested a pass play that I think would beat Woodward to anyone, but I think the thing that would beat him or any other player who plays it like he does would be to simulate a running play, make a play look exactly like a running play, and have one man fake a block on him, and get into a pass route.

Q. Well, that, in your opinion, would be the only way that this—

A. That would be the only way, and I know, of course, that at Georgia we have a safety man like that a few years back, and Red Phillips, who now plays right end for L. A. in the National Pro League, was one man out to pass, the first play of the game; it embarrassed us very much; he went eighty yards.

Q. Well, now, you saw the movies yesterday. Did you see at any time where Alabama passed in Woodward's zone where he was supposed to be defending?

A. I saw the picture of the Georgia-Alabama game yesterday, and I never saw a pass in his zone, and I'd like to repeat what I said a moment ago. I have never seen anyone take advantage of Brigham Woodward on pass defense, anyone.

[fol. 676] JAMES WALLACE BUTTS having resumed the stand, testified further as follows:

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. The next note, Coach Butts, reads as follows, "Weak defense, anybody except Blackburn". With respect to that entry, I want to ask you, as I have before in connection with other entries, did you at any time before the University of Georgia played Alabama in September, 1962, say anything that I just—like I just read to you to Coach Bryant?

A. Emphatically no.

Q. What does that entry mean to you, if anything?

A. It doesn't mean anything to me.

Q. All right, sir.

A. However, I am sure any coach playing against the University of Georgia would assume that since Georgia unfortunately had to play so many sophomores in one season, that they would have a weak secondary defense.

Q. Passing on to the next note on the top of Page 4 which reads, and I quote, "Baer, split right, split right end out." Did you at any time before the date of September 22, 1962, give that information or state that to Coach Bryant?

A. No; I did not. And I would never use such language.

Q. Passing on to the next note, "Long count, left half in motion." Between September the 1st and September 22nd, 1962, in any conversation with Coach Bryant did you give that information?

A. No; I did not give him any information at any time [fol. 677] about the University of Georgia's offensive plan.

Q. The last note on that page, reading, "Best since Trippi, Porterfield"; between September 1st and September 22, 1962, did you give that information to Coach Paul Bryant of Alabama?

A. No; n-o. I would like to say that Porterfield or any other sophomore back I have seen in recent years has some time to spend in developing before he will equal Charlie Trippi.

Q. The next note on top of Page 5, reading, "Bear on a hook on goal line." Did you at any time before September 22, 1962 give that information to Coach Paul Bryant of Alabama?

A. No, sir; I did not; but if Coach Bryant knew that, he would know that every team in America playing the defense—when playing a goal line defense has so small an area that any end or any back, for that matter, has very little room to maneuver. The pass route would have to be very simple against any goal line defensive plan.

Q. I was thinking about the pass pattern that Georgia used against Auburn when it was playing for the championship in 1960. That was on a goal line, was it not?

A. No, sir.

Q. Where was it?

A. It was too far out, about fifteen yards at that stage of the game. I was a little worried.

Q. Well, that was not a hook pass to Herring, was it?

A. All routes are named, Mr. Schroder, for every eligible receiver. The terminology that we used at the time—Bill Herring, playing the left end, in this particular pass pattern did a deep, which in simple language is down and out. [fol. 678] He faked the halfback and went for the flat, the corner of the field.

Q. And that is where Tarkington hit him?

A. That made me a better coach, Mr. Schroder.

Q. Next entry reads, "Slot to right, ends normal (three yards)"; did you at any time before the game in September, 1962, give that information to Coach Bryant of Alabama?

A. No, sir; I did not. In fact, I haven't seen that formation used in years, and I believe the last time we played against the University of Alabama with the University of Georgia, Paul Bryant used it.

Q. What's that, a double slot?

A. A double slot with the ends out, the halfbacks in position to get out and at the same time do a good job of blocking. Some people think it is superior in potential to a plain double wing where the ends are in normal position and the halfbacks outside.

Q. The next note or the next entry in the notes, reading, "right halfback, left guard pulling, blocks on corner"; before September 22, 1962, did you give that information to Coach Paul Bryant?

A. I did not, Mr. Schroder. Any left halfback that was given that ball by the quarterback would be unfortunate. They have enough men left for the men to fly to block the defense.

Q. Top of Page 6, entry reading, "Slot or wide slot 'till goal line"; did you at any time before September 22, 1962, give that information to Coach Bryant of Alabama?

A. I did not.

Q. The next entry reads, "Can't quick kick"; did you at any time before the Alabama-Georgia game in 1962, give that information to Coach Paul Bryant?

[fol. 679] A. No. And I'd like to say this, that the quick kicking plan at the University of Georgia at the first glance —if a football coach studied the position of it at first, he would not think it was very good, but I have watched the University of Georgia use it as copied from the University of Texas. It's been very effective, but if I had known that the University of Georgia had a man who played in normal position, left half or right half or fullback, and quick kiek, I certainly would not have given it to Paul Bryant, because in my opinion, that definitely affects the play of the safety man in a three-deep defense.

Q. Next entry, "Slot right, right half from fly, screen to him," before the Alabama and Georgia game in 1962, did you give that information to Coach Paul Bryant?

A. I did not, and I would like to say that all screen passes come off of pass protection action. A man who receives a screen must have an inside-out blocking punt. If a man called a screen like this, he would be definitely covered and it would be a very dangerous plan. I have never seen it used.

Q. Next entry, "29-0 series, Baer catches every game in 1962, did you give that information to Coach Bryant at any time, either in person or by phone?

A. I do not know—no; the answer is "no".

Q. I did not understand.

A. My answer is "No"; I did not give this information.

Q. Oh, yes.

A. But I do not know of any series of that kind. I have never heard of any series called that by any coach.

Q. The entry on the top of the last page reading "slot right, left end out, fifteen yards"; did you give that in[fol. 680] formation to Coach Bryant before Georgia played Alabama in 1962?

A. No. I would have to explain, again, as I showed at the blackboard, Coach Bryant showed me the formation and the potential of the formation, and that is the only discussion that I have had about it.

Q. Is that the one that you in turn discussed with the University of Georgia head defensive coach?

A. Yes. I showed him the strength of it running, the strength of it passing.

Q. The next note, "drop end off, contain with tackle"; before the game in 1962, at any time before that game, did you give that information to Coach Bryant?

A. No. And I'd like to explain that. When Coach Bryant returned to Tuscaloosa, Alabama, as the head football coach five seasons ago, six coming up, we played them in Tuscaloosa, and it was just like running signals out in the middle of the field, because he was dropping the ends off. But he would not cooperate with us down near the goal line, and we failed inside the ten yard line at least eight or ten times, we failed to score.

Q. In the conversation—I mean, in the article the Saturday Evening Post indicates that its informer says that you and Coach Bryant, in your alleged telephone conversation, said something about there being a phone call to be made on Sunday. In any conversation you might have had or that you did have with Coach Bryant before the game or after the game, I will restrict it to before the game, was there any mention about calling back on Sunday?

A. No; to me, no. I have known of Paul Bryant to set up a future telephone call to me.

Q. All right. That completes the notes, but before we pass your copy back to the Clerk's desk, we have been over [fol. 681] those notes in detail, and I want to put this question to you, and I am directing it to each entry individually in those notes. Did you at any time before the University of Georgia met Alabama in Birmingham on September the 22nd, 1962 to play football, did you at any time before that game give Coach Bryant any of the information contained in these seven pages of notes?

A. No; absolutely not. I haven't talked to him about any Georgia football plan at any time since I retired as head coach.

Q. Have you at any time talked to any other coach and given any other coach any information relating to the University of Georgia's football plan before the two schools were to meet?

A. No.

• • • • • • •

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Coach Butts, before the University of Georgia played Alabama on September 22, 1962, were you or were you not familiar with the University of Georgia game plan?

A. No. And I would like to enlarge on that. I have never seen a game plan to be used by the University of Georgia since I retired as head football coach.

Q. Before the game in September, 1962, did you or not know what formations the University of Georgia was going to use or planned to use in that game?

A. No. I did not know what formations they planned to use. I know something about almost every formation that has ever been used in football, but—

Q. My question, though, is: Did you know what formations Georgia had planned to use in that game?

[fol. 682] A. No; I did not, and I would like to add to that, I was amazed and surprised that they did not do some other things that they had done well, perhaps the reason being that they always got the ball or almost always got the ball in the Georgia-Alabama game in a very poor field position.

Q. Because of Alabama's kicking game?

A. Alabama always has a great kicking game, and I was proud of the Georgia kicking game. I have never seen better coverage of kicks than Georgia showed in that game.

Q. Before the game in 1962, did you know anything about what plays Georgia planned to use against Alabama?

A. The answer is "no"; I did not know any specific play they would use. I know their outside belly series. I know—I think I know that after thirty-two years as head coach I could take any formation and develop an offense that would cover—hit every hole and take care of every situation.

Q. Did you, before Georgia and Alabama met in 1962, discuss with Paul Bryant anything relating to the way the game was to be played or who was going to do what in the game?

A. The answer is "no"; I had no idea about the game plan or the philosophy to be employed in the game. In other words, football coaches who have coached for a period of time usually develop a football philosophy. They believe in certain phases of the game, and they emphasize the same. I absolutely have no idea at the present time what the Georgia plan is. To be successful in football, one in coaching must establish, first of all, something they can do real well, and then when the defense meets that situation it [fol. 683] gives them the opportunity to put in other plays or other plans.

Q. Who is Wayne Routh?

A. Wayne Routh, the first time I knew him, was connected with Communications International, an advertising firm, in some capacity. I think I saw him as a financial advisor.

Q. Have you had discussions with Mr. Routh in the offices of Communications International?

A. Yes, sir; Mr. Routh was trying to find the money—

Q. Well, have you had discussions with him?

A. I answer "yes".

Q. During the fall of 1962?

A. Yes, and later.

Q. All right, sir. Now, have you during your tenure as coach or as athletic director at the University of Georgia ever given any coach any information relating to what Georgia planned to do in a forthcoming game against that coach?

A. No. I have talked to a lot of coaches about coaching techniques, coach points.

Q. As related to the plans to be used by Georgia in a forthcoming game?

A. Absolutely no.

Mr. Schroder: Wait a minute. I have got to confer here. Mr. Cody, will you approach the bench with me, please? May we approach the Bench?

The Court: Yes, sir.

(Whereupon a conference was held at the Bench between the Court, Mr. Schroder and Mr. Cody.)

[fol. 684] Cross examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Butts, were you in the courtroom when Mr. J. D. Bolton testified?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall the evidence he gave as to the meeting you had in Mr. Cook Barwick's office on February the 22nd when you and certain University officials were present?

A. Yes, sir, I heard what he said, sir.

Q. Is there any error or correction in Mr. Bolton's testimony that you would like to point to?

A. Mr. Cody, I am not sure that I am qualified to correct Mr. Bolton. I would like to say, however, that in my opinion he, not deliberately I am sure, but he said something that I do not agree with, that being—should I tell you?

Q. Go ahead.

A. —that being when after the notes had been handed to me in Mr. Cook Barwick's office, he said that he quoted me as saying that the information in those notes was basically true. I have never said that. I said such a telephone call might have been overheard. I did not say—I did not evaluate the notes.

Q. Do you recall he asked you to sign an affidavit on that occasion?

A. You are referring to Mr. Cook Barwick?

Q. Anybody in that meeting.

A. Mr. Cook Barwick never, never asked me to sign an affidavit.

Q. Well, who did?

A. Not anyone in the room asked me to sign an affidavit. [fol. 685] They asked me to do something else.

Q. Was that take a lie detector test?

A. That is true, sir.

Q. And is it your evidence now, under oath, that no one in that meeting asked you to sign an affidavit?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. But you did hear Mr. Bolton testify to the fact that that request was made, and you take issue with him on that statement?

A. I do, sir. According to my knowledge I would like to—I would like to ask for permission to explain.

The Court: Yes, sir; you explain any answer you want to.

A. (By the witness) There was a little bit of pressure on me, Mr. Cody, when I walked in to that arrangement. I didn't know what they had—what the meeting was all about.

Q. You were among friends, though, weren't you?

The Court: Just—all right.

The Marshal: Let's have order, please.

A. (By the witness) You want me to answer that?

Q. Haven't you known Mr. Bolton and those University officials for many years?

A. Yes, sir; yes, sir.

Q. Coach Butts, hasn't the University of Georgia been pretty good to you over the years?

A. Yes, sir; they have given me a wonderful opportunity, and I appreciate it very much, and I might add, I will [fol. 686] always be loyal to the University of Georgia, regardless.

Q. Was it the next day that you resigned as athletic director?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall Mr. Bolton's testimony to the effect that you resigned in January previous to this particular resignation?

A. I recall that, Mr. Cody, but I would like to say the only official resignation, which is what I thought you were referring to, came Saturday following meeting in Mr. Cook Barwick's office.

Q. That would be February 23rd?

A. I will take your word for it, sir.

Q. Thank you. Now, what—why did you resign back in January?

A. I—I went to Dr. O. C. Aderhold, President of the University of Georgia, and told him that I would like to be retired as athletic director in June, I wanted to do some other things and get out of the job as athletic director.

Q. Well, now, tell us what the other things, Coach, are. That is important in connection with this case. What business were you going into?

A. Sir, it was my plan at the time to hold the interests I had, not particularly to enter into them. For example, I owned stock in a corporation known as Instant Loan Company. I have never had anything to do with operating that company, but I had planned to back them to great extent.

What I expected to and planned to do was to get a connection with a professional football team.

Q. Let's back up to the Instant Loan Company, now, just a minute. Who was it you went in business with in that company?

[fol. 687] A. Mr. Cody, originally I went into the business with Frank Childs of Gray, Georgia and Carl Westmoreland of Macon, Georgia.

Q. Was that a partnership?

A. It was—I heard that it was a partnership, but it was incorporated from the beginning, that is, in my opinion at this time.

Q. Isn't it true, though, Coach Butts, that when the Instant Loan Company was started, you and Frank Childs were partners?

A. We collaborated in the planning to get the loan licenses, but when the business started operating, Mr. Cody, Mr. Westmoreland was in it with one-third interest and it was a corporation. To my knowledge there's never been a partnership. Frankly, I don't know too much about the difference. But officially, when Instant Loan Company was started, it was a corporation, and I have named to you the owners of the stock, one-third interest each.

Q. It started out as a corporation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that—and that company operated in various cities over the State of Georgia?

A. Yes, sir. The home office is in Macon, Georgia. We have an office in Blackshear, Georgia; Ocilla, Georgia; Dawson, Forest Park, and Jonesboro.

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, could I inquire as to the relevancy of all this testimony?

The Court: What is your—

[fol. 688] Mr. Cody: I want to show, Your Honor, that he was devoting his entire time practically to outside interests other than athletic director, and that is the reason—that is the reason he resigned.

Mr. Schroder: I think he ought to just ask him that, about—

Mr. Cody: That is what we are talking about.

Mr. Schroder: Whether it was a partnership, a corporation, where they had offices, who the people were; just ask him what part he devoted to athletic director.

The Court: I will let you continue the line within limits.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. You didn't name Blackshear.

The Court: Yes, sir; he named Blackshear.

The Witness: Yes, sir; I meant to.

The Court: He named Blackshear.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. How about Conyers?

[fol. 689] A. I don't have one at Conyers, but it is a good place, though.

Q. Ocilla?

A. A license was issued for Ocilla, Mr. Cody, but it was exchanged for another location; I believe, Jonesboro.

Mr. Cody: Will you identify this, please?

The Clerk: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: That may have been identified once before.

The Clerk: It doesn't have a number—yes, it is; Defendant's Exhibit No. 10. It's been marked.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Butts, I show you what has been identified as Defendant's Exhibit No. 10.

Mr. Schroder: May I look at it, Mr. Cody? I don't believe I have ever seen it. I don't know what you are talking about.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Do you know what that is?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you—will you look on there and tell who—whether or not that is the business that we are taken about the Instant Loan Company?

A. Yes, sir; it is.

[fol. 690] Q. Does it show what type of business it is, that is, whether it is a corporation or partnership?

A. I don't know. You will have to show me. I am not very wise in business transactions. I can give evidence to that effect.

Q. You see question number 6 that you and Frank Childs are named as partners?

The Court: What is the purpose of this?

The Witness: Mr. Cody—

The Court: What is the purpose in whether it is a partnership or—of course, I don't know what your—

Mr. Cody: Your Honor, there will be some evidence about Mr. Childs.

The Witness: Mr. Cody, will you please consider the answer I gave you. When these licenses were issued, I am not sure, but when the business started operating Mr. Carl Westmoreland was a third owner in a corporation which was formed in Macon, Georgia, Bibb County.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Do you know if, Coach Butts, if your resignation in January of 1963, that the acceptance of it was held up because of all these business interests that the University—

[fol. 691] Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor, I don't think that is a proper question at all, does he know whether or not he was held up because of that.

The Court: What would be the relevancy, even if it was?

Mr. Lockerman: Yes; that is a further objection.

Mr. Cody: I withdraw it.

The Court: All right, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. It is your testimony now that effective February 28, that is, the resignation you made on February 23rd, effective February 28, that following that date, February 28, you were neither coach nor athletic director at the University?

A. That is true, sir.

Q. Coach Butts, do you remember giving your deposition in Mr. Schroder's office prior to the trial of this case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was on May the 3rd?

A. Well, I—I'll take your word for that, sir.

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, and while counsel was looking there, the witness has testified he did resign, but I don't believe he testified why he resigned on February 23.

[fol. 692] The Court: Well, you can bring that back out on redirect-examination; I will permit you to do so. All right, sir, go ahead with the Coach.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Butts, do you recall a statement that you made over television on March the 29th, 1963, as follows:

"Gentlemen, I came over here today to see the Attorney General of the State of Georgia, Mr. Gene Cook. My express purpose was to check with him things that I had read in the papers and heard on T. V., that in some respects might imply that I had at some time or another been connected with gambling interests. I assured Mr. Cook that I never had been interested in gambling. I have never been interested in associating with people that were known gamblers, and that I would like to repeat what I have said many times before. My greatest love of all and interest is in the University of Georgia, and I would never at any time and never have done anything that would injure the University of Georgia, and that is all I have to say."

Did you make that statement?

A. Mr. Cody, I have heard so many statements, and been around you lawyers so much, might be a few words out of line there, but I made a statement to that effect. I would like to say that as far as my services at the University of Georgia are concerned, that represents only my opinion.

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, this is about the second or third time that reference has been made in this [fol. 693] trial to the Attorney General. Now, I think that the Jury ought to be instructed that whatever happened at the Attorney General's Office, or before the Attorney General, doesn't have any bearing whatever on the issue being tried here today and cannot influence their deliberations in any way. That's been referred to yesterday in a statement, referred to again in this—in the testimony today.

Mr. Cody: We are not getting in to the results of that.

Mr. Schroder: I believe the Jury would be—ever the results of any other body might have been is not—should have no sway or bearing on your determination of the issue in this case.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Butts, you refreshed your recollection earlier in the morning about some telephone calls that Mr. Schroder asked you about. Will you take a look at that document, which is—which has been identified as Defendant's Exhibit No. 17.

Mr. Schroder: May Mr. Cody and I approach the Bench, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes, sir.

(Whereupon there was a conference at the Bench between The Court, Mr. Cody, and Mr. Schroder.)

[fol. 694] The Court: All right, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Now, you may refresh your recollection at any point in this testimony that you wish, Coach Butts, so I am going to ask you, first, to turn to such part of that list as discloses some calls in September of 1962, and ask you if it doesn't disclose—

A. Wait a minute, please, sir. May I ask a question, sir? Do they start on Page 22?

Q. They are in several different places, but I don't think you will have any trouble locating them.

A. What do you want me to do, sir?

Q. I want to ask you if that document refreshes your recollection with respect to ten or eleven calls that you made to a man named Frank Scoby, in Chicago. This is in September, 1962.

A. Without looking at the document, Mr. Cody, I will say that I have called him at least eleven times.

Q. During September?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall particularly calling him on September 21, 1962 on two separate calls?

A. No; I do not, sir.

Q. That would have been the day before the Georgia-Alabama game?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall—can you refresh your recollection from that document and tell me whether or not you called him on September 22, which was the day of the game?

A. I would not have remembered it exactly, sir, except that the gentleman that I called Mr. Scoby for read this in a newspaper and told me about it, said this call was made [fol. 695] to Mr. Scoby on the day of the Georgia-Alabama game for Mr. Joe Sargent, Lakeland, Florida, and I simply put him on the phone, and he talked to him.

Q. Did you know Mr. Frank Scoby was a pretty big gambler?

A. I did not.

Q. Have you found out since?

A. Well, they said you couldn't mention the Eugene Cook investigation; is that right? That's the first time I knew about it, sir.

Mr. Schroder: I understood the question was that he was not his—what is the question?

The Court: I believe he asked Coach Butts did he know that Frank Scoby was—

Mr. Schrober: Was—

The Court: —was a big gambler.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. How long have you known Frank Scoby?

A. I have known of him since, perhaps the early '40s. I met him following the 1946 football season in the summer of '47, when I was a member of the College All-Star coaching staff in Chicago. I met—

Q. Have you—

[fol. 696] Mr. Schroder: Let him finish.

Q. Go ahead.

A. I met him through Coach Frank Leyhe, then the coach of Notre Dame.

Q. Have you known him closely since then?

A. He is a real good friend.

Q. Has he visited you in Athens?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you seen him in Atlanta?

A. I recall seeing him twice in Atlanta; once when he came to the Georgia versus Georgia Tech game played in Atlanta in 1959, and I believe he has been in Atlanta at least once, or maybe twice on business.

Q. Have you ever seen him in Athens?

A. I have never seen him in Athens.

Q. On how many occasions have you met him in Chicago?

A. Many times; he's a good friend of mine.

Q. Have you met him in New York on a number of occasions?

A. On several occasions. Mr. Scoby not only was a distributor for the Miller High Life distributorship in Chicago, but he is the distributor of Miller High Life in New York City.

Q. When you visited him in New York City, were you up there at his invitation?

A. The answer is "No".

Q. Did he pay your expenses?

Mr. Lockerman: I think he wanted to explain something, Mr. Cody.

[fol. 697] By Mr. Cody:

Q. Go ahead.

A. Mr. Scoby has never paid my expenses to New York City.

Q. Has he paid them while you were there?

A. Yes; and I would like to explain, and I am not trying to—

The Court: You go ahead and explain.

A. —be funny at all, but Mr. Scoby is what people call a check-grabber, and with my financial setup, sometimes I have a hard time getting my hand out of my pocket.

Q. Did he arrange a loan for you in Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he endorse your note?

Mr. Schroder: Please—let the witness be instructed he's got the right to explain any answer.

The Court: Yes, sir; yes, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Go ahead.

A. Yes, Mr. Cody.

The Court: Any answer, Coach Butts, that you want to explain, you just say "I want to explain it", and then go ahead and explain it.

[fol. 698] The Witness: Thank you, Your Honor. You will understand, this is the first trial I have ever seen, much less been in. Would you please ask your question, sir?

The Court: He asked the question, did you borrow some money from Mr. Scoby.

By the Witness:

A. The answer is, I did not borrow money from Mr. Scoby, but through Mr. Scoby's influence at the Exchange National Bank in Chicago with a gentleman named Ralph Miller handling the negotiations I borrowed six thousand dollars, and at the present time I owe fifteen hundred dollars on it.

Q. When was that loan made?

A. I do not know, sir.

Q. Were you in Chicago when the deposition of Mr. Scoby was taken?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see him on that occasion?

A. I saw him for lunch, sir.

Q. Are you familiar with his testimony as to the number of telephone calls that he has made to you?

A. I have never seen that information; I have never been interested in it.

Q. Have you ever been off on any trips down into Florida with Mr. Scoby?

A. I think I have one time, sir.

Q. Where was that?

A. Miami, Florida.

Q. Have you entered into any business negotiations with Mr. Scoby?

A. I have never been in business with Mr. Scoby. Mr. Scoby has tried to help me with several projections I hoped to put over.

[fol. 699] Q. What's that?

A. I requested that he help me find money, if he could, for the loan companies, the reason being a loan company can afford to pay eight per cent for such loans, such monies. He also, when I was in the Orange River Groves, Inc., a corporation, he checked it out, thinking maybe it might be a good investment. His decision was that it was not a good investment.

Q. Well, it didn't take him long to decide that, did it?

A. No, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, you have lost a lot of money in that business, haven't you?

Q. Go ahead and answer it any way you want.

A. The amount of money that I will eventually lose in Orange River Groves, Incorporated, which still is operating, will depend on the honesty of two individuals that owe me some money in connection with that deal.

Q. Are you active now in the operation of that business?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, now, are there any other areas in which you have been negotiating with Mr. Scoby, any business negotiations in connection with any partieular business?

A. I—there is a concentrate plant at Lakeland, Florida, called Universal Foods, Incorporated. They were looking for some money because they wanted—they were underfinanced. I don't think Mr. Scoby ever took any particular interest in it.

Q. Is there any other business that you haven't mentioned that you have been discussing with Mr. Scoby that you both might be interested in?

[fol. 700] A. Mr. Cody, at one time when I was thinking about retiring from the University of Georgia as the athletic director, Mr. Scoby mentioned to me that he was introducing a new scotch whiskey into the country. I think the name of it was "James Douglas". He mentioned the fact that if I got a connection with a professional football team he might be able to work out something where I could get an override on all of the products sold in the South.

Q. For that particular brand of scotch whiskey?

A. Which he is planning to introduce into the country.

Q. What is the status of that negotiation now?

A. Mr. Cody, since the Saturday Evening Post story, I haven't had too many people talk to me about jobs.

Q. We are talking about Scoby now.

A. All right, sir.

He hasn't mentioned and I have not mentioned it sir.

Q. Could you refresh your recollection, Coach Butts—you can use that memorandum that you had a moment ago—and tell me about how many telephone calls you have exchanged with Mr. Frank Childs down at Gray, Georgia?

A. No, sir. If you will pardon me, I don't think that is necessary. I am willing to admit that I have had many calls from him and to him.

Q. Would it be several hundred?

Q. Have you ever been off on any trips with Mr. Childs?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Approximately how many?

[fol. 701] The Court: You going to connect all this up, Mr. Cody?

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

A. (By the witness) One time I went to New York with him to see a World Series game, and I have been several times to Miami with him in regard to the Orange Grove—Orange River Groves, Incorporated, business.

Q. Did you know that Mr. Frank Childs owned a part interest in a gambling casino?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. Do you know now whether he—

A. I have never known of Mr. Childs having any interest in any gambling casino.

Mr. Cody: I want the deposition—I think I have got a copy here.

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, I do anticipate counsel being able to prove what he is stating there as a matter of fact, that is, as to who or who is not a gambler, and who or who is not an owner of a casino. I mean, I am not—I don't know anything about it, but counsel is stating that as a fact, did he know that Mr. Childs was half-owner of a casino, and I think—I am just assuming he is going to be able to establish it. The witness said he didn't know.

The Court: I have to let him prove his case it is not ob-[fol. 702] jectionable, and you can come back and clear it up on direct.

Mr. Schroder: That is not my point. My point is, even on cross-examination, Mr. Cody can't state something for a fact something that has not been introduced in evidence.

The Court: I overrule the objection.

Mr. Schroder: All right.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. You say you remember the deposition which you gave before a court reporter on May 3rd, 1963 in Mr. Schroder's office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember this question and this answer: "Did you ever know that Frank Childs had a part interest in a gambling casino down near Gray, Georgia?" Answer: "No, sir; I read about it." Is that correct?

A. Mr. Cody—

Q. Just answer my question, and I will let you explain it later.

A. Okay.

Q. I want to ask you several questions and you make whatever explanation you want to.

A. My explanation for that is that I read about a raid on a gambling casino in the county in which Gray—I believe it's Greene County, but I did not read about Mr. Childs being connected with it in any way, but I do know, as a [fol. 703] matter of fact, that they had Mr. Childs up before a Grand Jury later in regard to the case but that does not prove to me that he was a part owner of a gambling casino.

Q. Well, Coach Butts, let's get back to the questions and the answers I put to you on Page 41 of your deposition given on the date which I mentioned. I want to ask you to state whether or not his question and this answer is correct that you gave on that occasion. I have several to ask you about. "Did you ever know that Frank Childs had a part interest in a gambling casino down near Gray, Georgia?

A. No.

Q. Your answer was, "No, sir; I read about it." Is that a correct statement of the question and answer?

Mr. Schroder: I think he has explained that, Your Honor.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Let's pass on to the next one, then. When was it—is this question correct that was submitted to you on that occasion: "When was it you read about—"

Mr. Schroder: I think it is not a question of whether the question is correct, but the answer.

Mr. Cody: It's both.

The Court: I think it is a proper way. Mr. Cody can ask Coach Butts on such and such a day, when you took his [fol. 704] deposition in Mr. Schroder's office, "did I ask you this question and did you answer accordingly, 1, 2, 3," whatever the questions were, and then at that conclusion Coach Butts should be permitted to explain why he answered that question in those depositions that way on that particular day. Do we understand each other?

Mr. Cody: I think, sir.

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor, wouldn't that be for the purpose of showing some contradictory statements, and there is no contradiction here.

The Court: I don't know whether there is or not. I don't know what Mr. Frank Childs or Mr. Scoby, I mean, I don't know what the nature of this testimony is, and if you recall I previously asked Mr. Cody was he going to be able to connect it up. Otherwise, I don't think it is admissible. But go ahead.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Reading further, and I will just read two or three questions and two or three answers, and you make whatever explanation you want. I am trying to establish, Coach Butts, that these questions and answers were submitted to you on that occasion. "When was it you read about it?"

Answer: "I read about it in one of the Macon papers. I don't know when." Let me finish.

[fol. 705] The Court: Yes, sir; go ahead.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. "Could you say approximately when?" Answer: "No, sir; I would not attempt to do that." Question: "Would it be in the year of 1963?" Answer: "I read about it, and I will not try to remember the date." Question: "Could it have been in the year 1962?" Answer: "I don't know. You have got me on that one." Do you recall now whether or not that is a correct transcript of what you said?

A. That is exactly right. May I explain?

Q. Yes, sir.

The Court: Go ahead and explain.

A. (By the witness) When you refer to "it", I was referring to an article about a raid on some kind of a gambling establishment near Gray, Georgia. That still does not mean to me that I at any time thought that Mr. Frank Childs, or that I knew or even thought that he had anything to do with it.

Q. All right, sir; very well. Do you recall in that deposition that I asked you this series of questions and you gave the answers: "Coach, did you resign as athletic director?" Answer: "Yes; I resigned as athletic director." Question: Effective when?" Answer: "Effective at the end of March." Do you recall giving those answers?

A. The answer is "yes", but I will tell you this, and you know it, at the next deposition I corrected that; I phoned my attorneys right after I thought about it. I got the months mixed up, and I resigned effective at the end of February, and, Mr. Cody, you know that, and you know [fol. 706] that I corrected it.

Q. But it was in—

Mr. Schroder: I might say that is absolutely correct and I think it is unfair.

The Court: Well, let's don't have comments there. I think you can clarify all this by direct examination. I will certainly let Coach Butts explain it as he goes along.

The Witness: Your Honor, sir, though, I don't want it implied that I lied deliberately in a deposition.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. You know, of course, that—

Mr. Schroder: Wait, I didn't hear that?

By Mr. Cody:

Q. —the date does have some bearing in this case?
A. State that again.

Mr. Schroder: What's that?
The Witness: I didn't understand that.
Mr. Cody: I will withdraw the question.
[fol. 707] The Witness: To answer that—
Mr. Schroder: Wait a minute; wait a minute. The question has been withdrawn.
The Witness: I'm sorry.

A. Freshman year and three varsity years.

Q. During the season of 1962, you completed your eligibility at the University of Alabama?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In order to familiarize the Court and Jury with your accomplishments, could you tell us what honors, if any, you received in football at the University of Alabama in your senior year?

A. I was selected on some All-American teams.

Q. Some?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Don't be modest.

A. Well, I was selected on some All-American teams, and I was chosen as lineman of the year by the Ohio Quarterback Club and SEC; I was on the SEC team.

Q. Who was captain of the Alabama football team?

A. I was captain.

Q. During the summer, this past summer, 1963, Mr. Jordan, did you play in any All-Star games?

A. Yes, sir; I played in two of them.

[fol. 709] Q. Were these college All-Star games?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Name the two of them, please, sir?

A. One was the East-West All-Star game in Buffalo.

Q. Now, what personnel were playing on those two teams?

Q. College?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you or not a part of the East All-Stars?

Q. Mr. Jordan, how long have you known Wallace Butts?

A. Well, I have been knowing him in football since my freshman year.

Q. Speak up, please.

A. Knowing him in football since my freshman year.

Q. At Alabama?

A. Yes, sir; at Alabama.

Q. Have you ever met or talked with him?

A. Well, I saw him last night for the first time and was introduced.

[fol. 710] Q. Last night is the first time you have ever been introduced to him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you known Paul Bryant?

A. Well, since I came to the University my senior year in high school and met him there.

Q. You are here today, having traveled from where?

A. Los Angeles.

Q. And when did you arrive?

A. Last night.

Q. Your plans call for you to return to Los Angeles when?

A. Tonight.

Q. During the fall practice at Tuscaloosa prior to the game between the University of Georgia and Alabama, what particular offensive formations, if any, was the Alabama team coached to expect?

A. Well, I think it was four formations that Georgia has used in the previous years that we had played them and we had seen films. They were slot formations and an unbalanced line formation, and a regular "T" formation, and slot with motion formation.

Q. Were those or not the four formations that you were coached or the team was coached to expect the University of Georgia to specialize in?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What special defense or what defense, if any, was the Alabama team put in, so to speak, that might be different from their regular defenses in order to make preparations for that game?

A. Well, we had put in what we call a rover defense which we had used before, and the only difference was we had moved me to the side away from the formation where we thought I'd go in on more plays that way.

Q. You were playing in what position as defender?

[fol. 711] A. I was linebacker, and was playing guard sometimes, and we had a defense we called a 'Bama defense. It was the same thing, only we would move the tackle in and I move outside further.

Q. Do you understand the formation—I may not describe it in the parlance that you might use—known as the pro-seat, or let me more or less try it this way. Does the regular slot formation with the weak end out, the end away from the slot out fifteen yards, mean anything to you?

A. Yes, sir; that is our formation we run.

Q. Was that formation employed by the University of Georgia against the University of Alabama in Birmingham on September 22, 1962?

A. Yes, sir; it was.

Q. What effect, if any, upon the defenses that Alabama had prepared did the use of Georgia of that formation have?

A. Well, the defenses we had prepared when they went into this formation, it took me completely out of where the action would be, the running plays, because the way we had to adjust for the split end was I would have to move completely out on him, and therefore trying to play for the pass, and it took me out of their running game or any plays that I usually play, because I play that better than I do the pass.

Q. Was it or not to you a surprise when the University of Georgia went into the formation, regular slot with the left end out fifteen yards?

A. Yes, sir; it was.

Q. What success, if any, did the University of Georgia have with that formation before Alabama adjusted its defenses, if Alabama did adjust its defenses?

A. Well, we had some good success. I think they had a penalty one time. It brought back a real good game that they had against us, and again they completed a couple of [fol. 712] passes. I know one of them was better than ten or twelve yards or more, and they ran that, I think, I don't know how many times they ran the first half, but they used that with their regular slot formation.

Q. During the halftime when the players went to their respective—excuse me—dressing rooms, was there or not any adjustment made in the Alabama defenses against that formation known as the regular slot with the weak end out fifteen yards?

A. Yes, sir. We used a type—a split six defense, we called it. It is a six-man line with the two linebackers more or less in the middle, and therefore we could adjust with our ends going out to the split end, and it would not take our linebackers out of place.

Q. The effect of the adjustment then was to bring you where, or to put you where?

A. Back in the middle of the formation.

Q. And instead of having you out defending or—defending against or guarding the split end, who, during the second half, was assigned to that function?

A. Well, it was the end to the way he was split, I mean, if he was split left, it would be the end to his side that would be covering.

Q. In your opinion, or do you have any opinion, as to the reasons for the thirty to nothing score of the Alabama-Georgia game?

A. Well, yes, sir. I think our passing game was a success. I mean we didn't know how good our quarterback was, and I don't think Georgia did either.

Q. The passes that were thrown in that game by Alabama were thrown in what area of the football field?

A. You mean where we were located on the field when we started out?

[fol. 713] Q. No, sir. Were they thrown side line passes or down-the-center passes—

A. Well, as I remember—

Q. —over the flat, I mean, rather than sidelines; excuse me.

A. As I remember, our first touchdown came on long pass down the side line and our end ran a pass down the side line, and it was completed for a touchdown.

Q. In your opinion, having played the game of football as long as you have testified you have played, in preparing to play a given game, would it mean anything to you as the coach to know what formations were going to be employed by the offensive team?

A. No, sir; I don't think so; because we always have the films, and we always see what every person does, I mean, all the formations used in the past.

Q. What is the type of information which the coach of the defensive team wants to know from scouting reports, from films, from watching the team he is going to play in previous games, what is it he is looking for primarily?

A. When he is going to run a play.

Q. Looking for what, sir?

A. Well, say the tendencies of a team on third down they are going to run so-and-so. They run it in every film we see. That is the only thing a defensive coach, I think, really looks for and works toward, is finding the trend of a team, and then you more or less have to go with what they have been doing.

Q. Is what you are saying that what the defensive coach wants to know is when the team he is going to play uses a particular play for formation?

A. That's right.

[fol. 714] Q. And that is established by the defensive coach from what information?

A. From scouting reports and films, breakdown of films.

Q. What was your weight when you started the Alabama-Georgia game that night?

Mr. Cody: Your Honor, I don't see what that's got to do with it.

The Court: No, sir; that is getting far afield. Let's get down to the issues. I sustain the objection to the question.

Mr. Schroder: Hand the witness the notes, please.

The Clerk: I will have to get it.

Mr. Schroder: I can use these copies; that's all right.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Mr. Jordan, have you reviewed before now the so-called Burnett notes?

A. Yes, sir; I have seen quite a bit in the paper.

Mr. Cody: May I see what you are showing him?

Mr. Schroder: I am showing him a copy of them, because we do not have the originals. The Clerk has gone to get them.

[fol. 715] Mr. Cody: Do you mind using a copy without your memo on it? I think it would be better, because it might suggest things to the witness, Your Honor.

The Court: Yes, sir. Where are the originals?

Mr. Schroder: The Clerk went to get them.

Mr. Cody: I see voluminous notes on them somebody has made.

The Court: I sustain your objection; I sustain your objection. Could you go on with him until the Clerk returns with the original notes?

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Have you reviewed the notes which I have shown you here or other copies that you saw? I haven't gone over these notes with you, have I?

A. No, sir.

Q. All right, sir. Will you take a few minutes and thumb through those notes, and I believe I can save time in going over them note by note. Now, Mr. Witness, you have reviewed the original to the document to which I—or documents to which I have just referred?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you please state to the Court and Jury whether there is anything in those notes which the University of [fol. 716] Alabama specialized in before its game with the University of Georgia in defending?

A. No; there is nothing there.

Q. Is there or not anything in those notes other than the names of players that would remind you of the University of Alabama?

A. Well, it only has "slot"; it has "slot" in here several times, and that is what we used, and everybody else, I guess.

Q. What sort of a slot does Alabama use?

A. Well, we use a slot with the end out on the other side.

Q. That is the pro formation we are talking about?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How about your regular slot or your normal slot?

A. We use the normal slot with the end in tight.

Q. During the week of the game that was played on September 22, were there any changes in the defenses which the coaching staff at the University of Alabama had prepared for the Georgia game?

A. No, sir.

Q. During the week preceding or during which the game in Birmingham was to play against the University of Georgia, were any of the names that you see on those notes emphasized with respect to Alabama defensive.

A. No, sir; no more than we emphasize anybody else on the team.

Q. In your opinion, as a football player during the years —I mean, during the years that you have played, is there any way in which the outcome of a football game can be rigged or fixed without participation of the football players themselves in it?

A. No, sir. It couldn't be done.

[fol. 717] Q. In your opinion, is there any way that two coaches could rig or fix the outcome of a football game without the players' knowledge?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Schroder: Just a moment, Your Honor, let me confer. That's all, your Honor.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Jordan, are you familiar with the statistics of this game?

A. No, sir; I am not; I don't remember them.

Q. If the statistics should show that Georgia gained only thirty-seven yards on the ground, that is, running with the ball, would you, as an expert, say that that indicated any surprise to Alabama?

A. Well, it surprised us on the part that they didn't make good against the first of the ball game until we adjusted.

Q. If the total gains were thirty-seven yards, the surprise would be that they didn't gain, wouldn't it?

A. Well, I believe that their gains were of somewhat a passing nature the first of the game.

The Court: That was thirty-seven yards total offense?

Mr. Cody: Total offense on the ground. That is not the —not the—[fol. 718] Mr. Schroder: There is a difference in total offense and total offense on the ground.

The Court: Offense on the ground; that is what I was asking.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Do you know what the statistics show as to the gains made by Georgia on passes?

A. No, sir; I don't.

Q. I see. Do you know—do you know the personnel, entire personnel of the Alabama coaching staff now?

A. Yes, sir; I think so.

Q. Could you name those for us? I'd like to get it in the record in this case.

A. Well—

Q. If you don't want to trust your memory—

A. As it stands now?

Q. —you might want to use this. Read those names. Start with Coach Bryant's. I just want to get those names in the record.

A. Head coach, Paul Bryant.

Q. Speak out loud where we can hear you.

A. Paul Bryant, Pat James, Sam Bailey, Carney "Dude" Hennessey, Jim Blevens, Ken Myer, Clem Grisco, D. Powell, Jimmy Sharp, Charles Pell.

Q. Last two are Sharp and Pell?

A. They were guard and tackle on our 1962 team.

Mr. Cody: You can come down.

[fol. 719] Mr. Schroder: Just a minute.

The Court: Just a moment. I think Mr. Schroder wanted to ask you some more questions.

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, there was a question I overlooked on direct.

The Court: All right, sir, go ahead, sir.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Mr. Jordan, it is stated in the Saturday Evening Post article published March 23rd, 1963, that the University of Georgia football players were complaining or stating that it looked like the Alabama team knew their plays. Let me ask you in connection with that, when a team is losing and the players are not carrying out their assignments, is that or not a common thing in football?

A. Yes, sir; that is real common. I know we had several in the Georgia Tech game last year.

CHARLES LOUIS TRIPPI called as a witness by the Plaintiff, after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

[fol. 720] Direct examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. For the record, will you please state your full name.
A. Charles Louis Trippi.
Q. Where is your home?
A. Athens, Georgia.
Q. Where did you receive your education, Mr. Trippi?
A. At the University of Georgia.
Q. What year did you finish at the University of Georgia?
A. 1947.

Q. While at the University of Georgia did you play football?

A. I hope I did; yes, sir.

Q. Since your—did you receive any honors upon your graduation from the University of Georgia, in football?

A. That, I did.

Q. Would you, without being too modest, explain or describe for the Jury that, in order to prove your qualifications?

A. Well, I received several honors, I guess. I was an All-American, I guess, in 1946; made All-Southeastern Conference '45-'46 received the Maxwell Award in, I believe it was in Philadelphia, and I received an award in Washington as the Outstanding Ball Player in the country that year; and a few other things I don't believe it's important to mention.

Q. All right, sir. Upon your graduation from the University of Georgia, did you continue your football playing? [fol. 721] A. Yes, sir; I played for nine years with the Chicago Cardinals.

Q. During that nine-year period, did you receive any distinctions as a football player?

A. That, I did.

Q. Just name a few of them for me.

A. Well, I was selected to the All-Pro team my first two years with the Cardinals.

Q. Now, in 19—did you subsequently—did you ultimately retire as a player in pro football?

A. Yes, sir; I retired in the year 1955, and the following year I was an assistant coach with the same organization for two years.

Q. Did you subsequently return to the University of Georgia?

A. That, I did. I returned in the year '59, and worked there until recently, when I accepted a new position with the St. Louis Football—St. Louis Cardinals.

Q. Well, the St. Louis Cardinals is the same organization that you have the franchise with?

A. Yes, it is; formerly the Chicago Cardinals.

Q. And you are now employed in a coaching capacity?

A. Yes, I am; I am offensive backfield coach with the St. Louis Cardinals football team.

Q. Mr. Trippi, you were on the coaching staff at the University of Georgia during the football year of 1962?

A. Yes; I was.

Q. In what capacity?

A. As offensive backfield coach in charge of offensive planning.

Q. In 1961 were you also with Georgia in the same capacity?

[fol. 722] A. Yes, I was.

Q. During the Alabama-Georgia game in 1962, did you attend the game?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What was your function, if any, during the game?

A. Of course, I was in charge of offensive operation. I sat in the press box and called the action from there; whatever was necessary to be done offensively.

Q. What are the mechanics in calling whatever needs to be done offensively from the press box?

A. Well, many things determine what you do up there. Of course, position, field position determines a great deal; the hash mark; and the score.

Q. How do you get that information relayed to the football team?

A. How do I get it relayed to them?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I phone it down on the field, and in turn they send it in to the quarterback.

Q. In the Alabama-Georgia game that we are discussing, about how many plays did you call offensively, using the system that you have just described?

A. Well, I would say that I called in the area of ninety per cent of the plays that were used against Alabama in 1962 from the press box.

Q. Who was the chief defensive coach at the University of Georgia during that game?

A. Coach John Gregory.

Q. And he remained in that capacity throughout the year?

A. Yes; he did.

Q. Is he still the chief defensive coach at Georgia?

A. Well, as of the day I left, he was.

[fol. 723] Mr. Schroder: The notes again, please.

The Clerk: All right, sir.

Mr. Schroder: Thank you. Let the record show, please, I am handing Defendant's Exhibit No. 12 to the witness.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Coach Trippi, will you please examine the document which I have just shown to you?

Mr. Schroder: And in order to conserve time, Your Honor, I don't plan to go over it one-by-one. I think we have done enough of that, but I want him to take his time and examine it and be prepared to answer some questions.

The Court: All right, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Just go through it, please, sir, those sheets, and I want to ask you a couple of questions after you have finished with them.

A. Mr. Schroder, I am well aware of these notes, so ask any question you may.

Q. All right. Coach Trippi, if, as a coach, you had to formulate your offense or defense from the information contained in those notes, assuming that those notes had to do with a team you were preparing to play, what, in effect, would you do or where would you start?

[fol. 724] A. Well, speaking offensively, the first thing I would do is tear them up because they are baseless; there is nothing in here that indicates any tendencies. When I coach offensive football, I have to know tendencies. By that, I have got to know what a team does on first down and short yardage, or first down and long yardage; I've got to know second down and short yardage, or second down and long yardage; and I've got to know the same thing on third down. That is what indicates to me my offensive planning.

Q. Ordinarily, would that information be sought by teams scouting others and exchanging film?

A. Will you rephrase that question again?

Q. How is that information ordinarily made available to opposing coaches?

A. Of course, we exchange films, and we get all that from films, and scouting, prior to playing the team, and a lot of times we are not quite sure. We watch who plays a football game; we watch films to find out and be exact what's going on because the action happens so fast.

Q. In the plans being formulated by the University of Georgia in the days preceding the Alabama game, what particular offensive formations were being stressed, if any?

A. Of course, we have always been a slot team. We have used that for five years at Georgia, and we, seems like we have got the best out of our football from the slot. You don't like to change your formations too much, because it changes responsibilities, and once a team learns to block a slot offense and has confidence in it, which you have got to put into a football team, you have got to make them believe that is the best thing for them, and when that [fol. 725] occurs, you had better stick with it, and what you can do the best.

Q. It has been testified here that in the Alabama game, in addition to the slot, which you say Georgia had been using for years, Georgia employed a formation described as normal slot with weak side end out fifteen yards. Now, was that anything—was that formation new for the University of Georgia, or had it used it before?

A. Oh, I'm sure it's been used before, and I have used it before with the University of Georgia, and it's been one of our basic offensive sets, especially when we like to throw the football.

Q. You say you were at the game in Birmingham when the University of Georgia went into that formation during that time, that game, during the first half. Was it or not successfully employed?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. During the second half of that game, you being in the press box, again charged with the responsibility of watching the Alabama defenses, did you notice changes being made, or having been made in the Alabama defenses when that formation was employed?

A. Yes, they did. They changed their defensive structure; they came out with an entirely different defense to defend the split inside.

Q. When you refer to Georgia being a slot formation team, would you please describe to the Jury and the Court what distance you coached the ends to play from the tackle?

A. Well, we have coached them to play different distances from the tackle. It all depends on who we are playing, and we have always told our ends, you might go into a game maybe with a two-three yard split, and a lot of [fol. 726] times we have trouble getting out, and we always tell them to take the split that is necessary to get the job done, whatever split is necessary to take you to get the job done.

Q. Then the end is not always told to go just three yards from the tackle?

A. No, sir. Our whole backfield plan is that way. We tell our boys to line up and chest forward, and wherever the game is going, and take advantage of the situation. We cheat them over on wide plays.

Q. I don't like that—what do you mean "cheat"?

A. I mean, if they ordinarily line up four yards on certain plays, we tell them to move up to three and a half yards; or if they line up behind their tackles, if they are going to sweep to the left half, we tell them to split the tackle. We always tell them to get in a position where you are at the advantage. That's football.

Q. What, if anything, do situations have to do with determining how wide the end is to play?

A. Well, I believe the type of play you are calling a lot of times determines the split.

Q. And what you have just said a moment ago was, I believe, that you leave that up to the ends—

A. Ends—

Q. —discretion.

A. They use their own discretion to play their position, because they are coached that way.

Q. In the Alabama-Georgia game that we are talking about, state whether or not there was anything that you saw that indicated that Alabama knew anything about what Georgia was going to do that had been prepared solely for that game?

A. There was nothing to indicate that. The only thing that was indicated to me was that Alabama blocked, tackled and ran harder than we did.

[fol. 727] Q. What effect, if any, do those basic fundamentals have upon the outcome of a football game?

A. Well, unless you do those things, you don't win in football.

Mr. Schroder: Let me check a minute, Your Honor.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Coach Trippi, based upon your experience as a college football player, as well as a professional football player, and also upon your experience as a college football coach and a professional football coach, I have this question to ask you: applying that experience and knowledge to the question, in your opinion can the outcome of a college football game be pre-arranged, fixed, or rigged without the participation of the players, or some of the players, themselves?

A. Definitely not. I do think any fix has got to be occurred by the participants, and if it can't be fixed in any other way, we are in serious trouble in football.

Q. I didn't—I didn't understand.

A. I said, if it could be fixed any other way, I think football is in serious trouble.

Q. What is that?

A. I think if you can pick up a telephone and call somebody and express an opinion about somebody and say it's a fix, I think we are in serious trouble; because I think we express opinions every day. We give more information to the press every week to promote the game than is being expressed in these notes right here.

Q. My second question; based upon the experience that you have had as a player and coach, which I just related [fol. 728] and will not repeat, is there any way, in your opinion, that the outcome of a football game can be prearranged, fixed, or rigged without the players' knowledge?

A. I believe they do have to have some knowledge of it. I don't believe that I, as a coach, on the same football team, can give an adverse offensive plan and still fix a game, because basically football is surrounded with blocks, tackling and running with the football.

Q. Therefore, your answer is that it would require prior player knowledge and participation knowledge in order to—

A. Fix a football game; that's correct.

Q. In your opinion as a former player and a present coach, is there anything in that exhibit which you are now holding in your hand which, in any way, could be used to affect or have influence upon the outcome of a football game?

A. I have studied these notes, and I believe I expressed my opinion of these notes when they first were announced; and I still contend there's nothing in here to substantiate anything of value in football planning.

Q. You, at present, are where? You came here from where?

A. I came here from our training camp in Lake Forrest, Illinois.

Q. And you plan—you came in yesterday?

A. I came in Saturday evening.

Q. And you plan to return—

A. I am returning this afternoon, if I can get away.

RAYMOND W. CLARK called as a witness on behalf of the Plaintiff, having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. State your name for the record.

A. Raymond W. Clark.

Q. Speak up so everyone can hear you, Mr. Clark. In 1962, where were you in school?

A. I was a senior at University of Georgia.

Q. Were you, in 1962, a member of the Georgia football team?

A. I was captain of the team in 1962.

Q. You were captain of the 1962 team that played Alabama in Birmingham?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your position or what position were you assigned to?

A. I was left end on the University of Georgia team.

Q. I believe the testimony is that you were injured and unable to play in the game?

A. Yes, sir; I was injured Thursday night before the game.

Q. Was that during a scrimmage, I believe you said?
[fol. 730] A. Yes, sir; we had a full scrimmage without tackling the night before the game in the stadium.

Q. Did you attend the game?

A. Yes, sir; I dressed out for the game, but I was unable to walk.

Q. Did you sit on the side lines there?

A. I stood on the side lines; yes, sir.

Q. You were how close, now, to the boys as they would be substituted for other players and as they came off the field?

A. I would talk to them as they came off the field, and more or less watching them. I was watching the ends pretty close. Barry Wilson had taken my place, and I was watching them and telling them what I could tell them what I could tell them to do to better themselves, and I was right there on the side lines as they came off the field.

Q. Was or not there anything said by any of those boys to whom you talked indicating that anything was wrong on the field?

A. No, sir; none that I heard on the side lines.

Q. Did you or not hear any of the Georgia boys come off the field complain that Alabama had an advantage over them—

A. No, sir.

Q. —because of knowing the plays or something?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you out for the rest of the season? Did you play any more?

A. Yes, sir; my leg was broken.

Q. It was broken?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Prior to the game played on September 22, 1962, you were, I assume, a regular participant in the practices until you injured yourself on Thursday night?
[fol. 731] A. Yes, sir; that's right.

Q. Mr. Clark, during that—strike that, please. Mr. Clark, when—as captain of the team I am asking you this question, when is the plan, the offensive plan that the University of Georgia was going to use against Alabama on February—on September 22, given to the team?

A. You mean our plan, to Georgia, when it was given to us?

Q. Yes.

A. We usually start running against the Alabama defenses on Monday. We will start running them on Monday. We will take offense for half the practice and defense for the rest.

Q. The plays and formations then that Georgia is going to specialize in against Alabama that year were finalized in the week of the game?

A. Yes, sir; we—see, we usually have the two weeks before our Alabama game each year, and the first week is more or less conditioning, strictly conditioning. We do sprints, and we scrimmage quite a bit, and the Monday of the week we start preparing ourselves for the game.

Q. Reference has been made to the pass pattern known as, in Georgia jargon, as optional left; does that mean anything to you—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —as an end?

A. Yes, sir. That tells us our pass pattern.

Q. Did you have such a play or not in the game plan for the Alabama '62 game?

A. An optional left?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. We had the play, but we didn't run it, I don't believe, in the game.

[fol. 732] Q. Had you used it in 1961?

A. Yes, sir; we used it, I believe, if I am not mistaken, against Florida, optional left and right.

Q. How long, to your knowledge, had that been one of the pass patterns for the University of Georgia?

A. I believe we have been running it ever since I have been at Georgia. It's been five years, I mean, the name may have changed, but it was always basically optional left and right.

Q. Who played quarterback for Georgia? Who was the first string quarterback in that game against Alabama?

A. Larry Rakestraw.

Q. Was he or not injured before the game also?

A. Yes, sir; his ankle was injured. He had it taped up during the game.

Q. Did that have any effect upon his ability to play during that game?

A. I believe it hindered him quite a bit. He could roll out, but it hindered him a lot, and he was confined on how far he could run.

Q. Were any of the other first string members of the Georgia team also in a hampered physical condition?

A. Well, were all leg weary. You also get leg weary with two a day, you are pretty tired, and we were all leg weary and just worn out.

Q. Who was your first string defensive center?

A. I believe it was Len Hauss.

Q. Was Hauss—did he have any injury before the game?

A. Yes, sir. He had torn ligaments in his leg, and he—he had to wear a steel brace on his leg during—[fol. 733] Q. Did he play during the game, too?

A. Yes, sir; he played.

* * * * * * *

ROBERT WALLACE WILLIAMSON called as a witness on behalf of the Plaintiff, after having first been sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. For the record, will you please state your full name?

A. Robert Wallace Williamson.

Q. To shorten this, are you a member or were you a member of the University of Georgia football team in 1962?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what position you played and what string it was.

A. Right guard on the first team.

Q. All right, sir. Did you play in the Alabama-Georgia game in Birmingham, September 22, 1962?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About how long did you play in that game?

A. Approximately forty or forty-five minutes.

Q. Mr. Williamson, was it your brother Willie Williamson—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —that went to Georgia Tech?

A. Went to Georgia Tech.

Q. During the game, did Georgia or not run any sweeps?

A. Yes, sir; we ran some sweeps.

[fol. 734] Q. What is a "sweep"?

A. Well, that is—

Q. Speak up, please, sir.

A. Well, the backfield motion it would be to the right or left with certain interference, the halfbacks leading.

Q. During the Alabama-Georgia game of 1962, did you, playing guard, ever pull on a sweep when you were the onside guard?

A. No, sir; I didn't.

Q. Does Georgia have any play where the onside guard pulls on a sweep?

A. No, sir; I don't believe so.

Q. Was or not that in the game plan for the Alabama-Georgia game?

A. No; it wasn't.

Q. You have been playing varsity ball at Georgia how long?

A. Past three years.

Q. During the time that you were on the field, I believe you estimated it as having been forty to forty-five minutes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The length of a game in actual playing time is sixty minutes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the time that you were on the field as a player, will you please tell the Court and Jury if there was anything done or said by the Alabama players which indicated they might know what Georgia was going to do?

A. No, sir; not a thing.

Q. And a guard plays where with reference to where all the plays are?

[fol. 735] A. Well, center plays in the middle of the lane and a guard plays on either side.

Q. You are right in the middle of where all the players are?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the, in your opinion, physical condition of the Georgia football team before the Alabama game in 1962?

A. Before, I don't think it was real good. I think a lot of the boys were pretty worn down; at least, I was. I don't know how the other boys were; a little bit weary.

Q. The Saturday Evening Post in its issue of March 23, 1963, in a story captioned "The Story of a College Football Fix" has this to say on Page 81, Column 3, and I quote, "The Georgia players their moves analyzed and forecast like those of rats in a maze, took a frightful physical beating". I want to ask you two questions about that quotation. Number one, at any time during that football game did you, who played forty to forty-five minutes in that game, ever feel that the moves of the Georgia team were analyzed and forecast as described in that part I read you?

A. No, sir.

Q. After the game was over, and I will read this part again, it says the Georgia players "took a frightful physical beating"; in your opinion, I will ask you after the game was over, had the Georgians taken a frightful physical beating?

A. I don't believe so. I know I didn't, and I played right in the middle of it.

Q. Were there any games other than this one in which the players took worse beatings physically?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How about Georgia Tech?

[fol. 736] A. We did by them.

Q. South Carolina?

A. South Carolina.

Q. What sort of team is Alabama insofar as—well, you describe it to me in relation to the others that you played; how do they play?

A. Their lineman is about my size—I am fairly small for a college lineman and real agile and quick and they pursue real well.

The Court: Any questions, Mr. Cody?

Mr. Cody: I don't believe he is through, Your Honor.

The Court: I understood he was.

Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Williamson, who was your best running back?

The Court: You referring to Georgia?

Mr. Cody: Georgia.

A. (By the witness) Well, we didn't have too many really good ones. Don Porterfield was a good one; Leon Arm-

[fol. 737] brester, our fullback, was good. I thought Leon Armbrester played the best offense game since—

The Court: Are you referring to the Alabama and Georgia game—

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: —or all season?

The Witness: Well, all season; he is the best back.

The Court: Armbrester?

The Witness: He picked up more yards, I believe.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Who was your best pass receiver?

A. I would say Ray Clark was before he got hurt, but I guess Mickey Babb was after that.

Q. Without being too modest, other than yourself, who was the best lineman you had?

A. I'd say Paul Holmes.

Q. Holmes?

A. He is up with the pros now. Len Hauss, before he was hurt bad, I thought he would be an outstanding linebacker.

[fol. 738] Q. Mr. Williamson, in acquainting the players with the game plan for this Alabama game, don't you know that the players themselves were not informed by the coaches of the game plan itself but only their particular assignments for particular plays?

A. I don't quite follow you.

Q. Prior—let's put it this way. Prior to the Alabama game, did you see any layouts of the game plan?

A. There was a layout for my group, the guards; we had our assignments.

Q. It is limited to that, isn't it?

A. There is an overall plan, too, they run.

Q. You didn't get a hold of that?

A. I don't pay attention to what the backs do.

Q. The coaches didn't tell you what the game plan for the backs were?

A. They didn't tell me.

Q. Well, that is what I'm asking you?

A. No, sir.

Q. And they didn't tell you what the game plan for the fullback was?

A. No. I knew the players that I was supposed to block for the fullback and halfbacks.

Q. And the game plan, so far as you were concerned, the only part that you were informed about was the part that you were to play in it; is that right?

A. That's right.

Mr. Cody: That's right.

The Court: All right, sir.

[fol. 739] Redirect examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. And that would be made clear to the team what—how long before the game, the game plan itself; when was it finalized?

A. Usually the Monday before—I mean, the Monday before the Saturday ball game.

Mr. Schroder: All right, sir. Come down.

Mr. Cody: One more question.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Recross examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Williamson, you started on Monday of the week of the game to specifically put into operation whatever your assignment was, and that is practice for the particular plays for that game, right?

A. Right.

Q. So that necessarily those plays had to be formulated the previous week; is that right?

A. Yes, sir; I imagine they were.

* * * * * * *

MICKEY BABB called as a witness on behalf of the Plaintiff, after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

[fol. 740] Direct examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Would you kindly state your name for the record?
A. Mickey Babb.
Q. Where is your home, Mr. Babb?
A. Atlanta, Georgia.
Q. Where are you now in school?
A. Athens, Georgia, University of Georgia.
Q. In 1962, were you a member of the University of Georgia varsity football team?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What position did you play?
A. Right end.
Q. Do you have or not another year of eligibility?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You will, therefore, be on the varsity team this coming fall?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Mr. Babb, prior to the Alabama-Georgia game in Birmingham, in September, 1962, what coaching was given you with respect to where you should play on Georgia's offensive formation known as the pro-set?
A. If I was going to swing or not?
Q. Yes, sir.
A. It was—the week prior to the game I was told that I was going to be the wide man on the pro-set every time; I would be the wide man.
Q. You use the word "swing" in describing your coaching or what was coached you. Would you please describe to the Court and Jury what "swinging" means?
[fol. 741] A. Well, we would run a pro-set, and if we say "pro-right", we'd use a slot formation to the right and send a left end out between and eight and fifteen yards; they told me the week prior to the game I would be the wide man on all the pro-sets. On pro left, I would be wide man right, and on pro right I would be the wide man left.

Q. When you say "the week prior to the game," will you tell us what you mean by that?

A. It was on a Wednesday that I was informed that I would be the swing man.

Q. How many days before the game was that Wednesday?

A. Three; it was Thursday, Friday and we played on Saturday.

Q. During the game that the University of Georgia had with Alabama on the evening of September 22, was that formation that you have just described used or not used by the University of Georgia?

A. It has been used in the past, and we used it prior to the game.

Q. Was it used or not used during the game?

A. Yes, sir; it was used during the game.

Q. And as I understand your testimony you were the end that was out, you say, eight to fifteen yards?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why do you say eight to fifteen yards? Is there any discretion to you in your hands?

A. Well, it is according to the field position where we have the ball. If we are near the side line, I can't split out as far as I could if we were in the middle of the field. It is according to how the field position is.

Q. When Georgia was in the normal slot formation and you were playing the slot end, how far from the tackle would you place yourself?

[fol. 742] A. Well, you vary it sort of how the defensive man plays. I would say between three and five yards.

Q. During the Alabama-Georgia game that we are talking about did you do what you have just described?

A. Yes, sir; I played according to how the defensive man played me.

Q. The pro-set that we talked about before we talked about the normal slot, do you recall about how many times

Georgia employed that formation during the first half against the University of Alabama?

A. It wasn't—I can't remember exactly how many times we run it. It wasn't too many times as I can recall, but I am not too definite on that.

Q. Do you recall with what success the University of Georgia employed that formation during the first half?

A. It was about the only way we were moving the ball against Alabama at the time. We had gone into a pro formation and had some gains off of that.

Q. During the second half of the same game, did or not the University of Georgia use the same formation?

A. Yes; we used the pro-set in the second half too.

Q. Compare for the Court and Jury, please, sir, the success that Georgia had in the first half and the success, if any, that Georgia had in the second half when employing that pro-set formation?

A. In the first half the pro-set was successful for us, but in the second half Alabama switched their defense around, and then kind of checked our defensive formation then.

Q. Mr. Babb, are you familiar with the pass formation described as optional left in the Georgia series of plays [fol. 743] that had been used by Georgia for—in the past?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that formation known as optional left in the game plan for the Alabama game of 1962?

A. No, sir.

Q. During the game in Birmingham were you in the position that you have stated you were in when Georgia was using the pro-set? Was the ball thrown to you on passes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the first half of that game would you relate to the Court and Jury whether or not you were in the open, so to speak, during the first half?

A. Yes, sir; I broke an open on a number of occasions during the game, but the ball was never thrown to me.

Q. During that game, without regard to what formation Georgia was in, did you, Mr. Babb, or not, catch everything that was thrown to you?

A. I didn't catch everything that was thrown to me; that is almost impossible.

Q. Was there or not anything, in your opinion, wrong with the physical condition of your quarterback, Mr. Rakestraw, during that game?

A. Larry's ankle was broken during the summer, and he was handicapped by his ankle.

Q. Did, in your opinion, that, plus pass protection, have anything to do with Georgia's passing in that game?

A. Well, our pass protection, our linemen just didn't block too well; they just seemed to fall down on their protection blocking. Larry was rushed, and he had to throw off balance a lot of times.

[fol. 744] Q. Mr. Babb, as a member of the Georgia varsity football preparing for the Alabama game, when was the final game plan formalized?

A. We put in our game plan the Monday before the game on Saturday. We diagram all the plays on the chalkboard, and that is when we get our game plan.

Q. Are all of the members of the squad present when that is done for the players?

A. Yes, sir; yes, sir.

Q. In the Saturday Evening Post article appearing in its issue of March 23, 1963, appears this, and I will read it. "The Georgia players, their moves analyzed and forecast like those of rats in a maze, took a frightful physical beating." Now, how many minutes, roughly, did you play in that ball game?

A. I played approximately fifty minutes.

Q. Out of sixty minutes taken to play the entire game?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In your opinion, were the moves of the Georgia players analyzed and forecast as described in that quotation I just read you?

A. No, sir. We didn't take a physical beating from Alabama. They don't play that type of ball game. They play a hit-and-run defense. They analyze your plays as quick as possible, and they are gone; they hit you and are gone.

Q. How does that compare with other teams that Georgia played during the season?

A. Well, other teams, like South Carolina, they play an entirely different ball game. They will stand there on the line and fight you. They don't hit you and go; they stand right there and fight you. Clemson does the same thing, and Tech plays on that type.

[fol. 745] Q. In the Georgia-Alabama game did you as a player feel that your move was being—each move was being analyzed?

A. No, sir.

Q. In that same article, and in that same column, Page 81, Column 3,—will you step down here or can you read this from there—reading in the lower part of that column, sir, and I am quoting directly from the column, "Later other members of the Georgia squad expressed their misgivings to Furman Bisher, sports editor of the Atlanta Journal, 'the Alabama players taunted us,' end Mickey Babb told him. 'You can't run eight-eight pop, a key Georgia play on up, they'd yell. They knew just what we were going to run and just what we called it.'" You have heard me read that portion, and you have stood here while I read it. Did I read it correctly?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I want to ask you, Mr. Babb, is that an accurate quotation from you?

A. That is inaccurate.

Q. Will you please use this mark and draw a sort of a parenthesis there and initial it, please, sir?

A. Right there?

Q. Yes, sir.

The Court: What page was that on? What column?

Mr. Schroder: Page 81, Your Honor, Column 3. It is the third from the last paragraph. You see it, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

[fol. 746] Mr. Schroder: All right.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. You were, evidently, interviewed by the party named as quoting you at some time about that game, were you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When were you—

The Court: What party is that? Mr. Bisher?

Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. When were you so interviewed?

A. It was the Friday before we had our G-Day game, spring practice. I don't recall the day. It was the Friday before the game.

Q. Would that have been some time in the spring?

A. It was—we had—

Q. February?

A. I believe it was March the 4th; I don't recall the date, but I believe—

Q. Now, in your conversation with the gentleman named, did you refer to the 1962 or the 1961 game, and, if so, what was there discussed?

A. That was the 1961 game I discussed with Mr. Bisher: What I said was not related any at all to the 1962 game.

Q. Did the University of Georgia in 1962 or 1961 have a play called "Eight-eight Pop"?

A. No.

[fol. 747] Q. Is it or not common, in your opinion, for a football player or players, when they are on the wrong end of the score, to complain a little bit about how they are being triple-teamed or double-teamed, or something like that?

A. Everybody likes to make up excuses when you lose.

Q. That is common practice; you do it yourself?

A. Yes, sir. We kind of get around and talk about the game, talking about why we lost, or something.

Q. That excuse will last about how long?

A. Until the next game. We, you know, talk about it.

Q. You see the movies after that?

A. Yes, sir. We see the movies on the Sunday afternoon after the game.

Q. What, in your opinion, was the physical condition of the Georgia team just before the Alabama game?

A. We were sort of run down. We had had two weeks of hard practice; our legs were tired, and I don't think we were physically able to play on that day.

Mr. Schroder: You may examine.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Babb, when Georgia had the ball in the middle of the field, that is, the middle of the field from the standpoint of the side lines, what instructions had you received [fol. 748] from the coaches as to how far out to go on this split end?

A. On the pro-set?

Q. Yes.

A. I split out fifteen yards.

Q. And then the only reason for you not going out that distance of fifteen yards would be on account of that ball being on the side line and not being able to go out that far?

A. We have a certain amount of yards that we can get to the side lines; six or eight yards. We just leave that line open, because you can't operate in that small a distance.

Q. Is it true, Mr. Babb, that you only receive your assignment for that particular game without knowing what the assignment of the other players were?

A. Well, we have meetings the week prior to the game, and the whole team splits up. The ends go in one room and the backs in another and the linemen in another room, and we receive our own instructions there.

Q. The ends know what they are supposed to do?

A. We know what we are supposed to do, and in a general form we know what everybody is supposed to do.

Q. They have the tackles in another room?

A. They have the tackles, guards and centers in another room.

Q. And you don't know what their instructions are?

A. I do in a round-about way.

Q. But indirectly they are not permitted to disclose that to you, are they?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 749] Q. Do you know what the assignment the halfback is?

A. I know in a general way.

Q. But not specifically?

A. I wouldn't know specifically because I am not a halfback.

Q. As a matter of fact, isn't it true that the—that the game plan itself is something that is within the knowledge of the coaches and not the players?

A. They diagram every play we will run on the chalkboard in front of the whole team. We watch what every man is supposed to do.

Q. When do they do that?

A. Monday prior to the game.

Q. So that is formulated prior to Monday?

A. I don't know when the coaches formulate theirs.

Q. Don't they draw up a—what is known as a game plan?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And put it on paper?

A. Uh huh; yes, sir.

Q. Did you see that before the Alabama game?

A. Yes, sir; they gave us a game plan.

Q. A complete copy?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What day was it that you say you talked to Furman Bisher?

A. It was on a Friday prior to our spring day game.

Q. That would be about the first of February?

A. I can't remember.

The Court: He said the first of March.

[fol. 750] The Witness: I believe we had our spring practice in February.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. What conversation did you have with him? You said in regard to the '61 Georgia game?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't discuss the '62 Alabama game?

A. No, sir. What I said to him was in regard to the 1961 game. I made it specific to him that is what I was talking about.

Q. What did you say in regard to the '61 Alabama game?

A. He said to me, he said, "I want to ask you a question. Did the—" he said, "Did the Alabama team seem to know your plays?" I said, "Not last year. If they did, it would have been more obvious in the 1961 game, if they did." One of the boys after the game—we have got friends on all the teams. One of my friends said, "You can't run this play." You know, just general football talk.

Q. That was in the 1961 Alabama game?

A. The 1961 Alabama game.

Q. Which was played in Athens?

A. Sanford Stadium.

Q. First game of the year?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were a sophomore at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was your first game?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your discussion did not center on the '62 game?

[fol. 751] A. I told him I didn't know if there was any talk on the line in the 1962 game.

Q. You didn't hear any talk, if there was any?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. Go back to the '61 game. What is that you said about the '61 game, that it was—if it happened at all, it would have been in '61?

A. I said it would have been more obvious in the '61 game if it had happened.

Q. You mean taunting back and forth?

A. I didn't hear—I just heard from a boy, it was a halfback—

The Court: That would be hearsay.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Did you have any play at all in your series that had a number "eight-eight" on it?

A. Eighty-eight, yes, sir. We had an eight-eight and a ninety-nine.

Mr. Cody: That's all.

The Court: Any further question of Mr. Babb?

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Can you pop off of eight-eight or eighty-nine?

[fol. 752] A. No, sir; that is two entirely different plays. The blocking is different and everything.

SAMUEL RICHWINE, called as a witness on behalf of the Plaintiff, having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. For the record, will you kindly state your full name?
A. Samuel Richwine.
Q. Where do you live, Mr. Richwine?
A. I live in Athens, Georgia.
Q. What is your occupation, Mr. Richwine?
A. I am the athletic trainer for the athletic teams at the University.
Q. In 1962 were you the trainer for the University of Georgia football team?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Mr. Richwine, on March 23, 1963, the Saturday Evening Post published an article entitled "The Story of a College Football Fix." On page 81, in column 3, that article reads as follows: "And Sam Richwine, the squad's trainer, told Bisher, 'They played just like they knew what we were going to do, and it seemed to me a lot like things were when they played us in 1961 too.'" Mr. Richwine, is that an accurate or an inaccurate quotation?
A. Inaccurate.
Q. You evidently did have—before I do that, will you come down here, please, sir; I didn't read that from the [fol. 753] board. What I just read, Mr. Richwine, is right here, and you can check it again to make sure I read it right.
A. Uh huh; yes.
Q. You say that is an inaccurate quotation?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Will you please make one of these marks there and put your initials out there? Go back to the stand.

Mr. Schroder: You may examine.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Richwine, when you were talking to Mr. Bisher, what game were you referring to, what game were you discussing?

A. The Alabama game of 1962.

Q. Did you get into any discussion of the 1961 game?

A. I made a comment about the '61 game.

Q. What was the comment?

A. I commented about what wonderful physical condition I thought they were in.

Q. Did you say anything to him about—about what knowledge the Alabama team had of the plays that Georgia was running?

A. No, sir.

Q. You were on the side line as these players came out of the game?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you personally hear any comment made by any of the Georgia players about what was going on in the game?

[fol. 754] A. Well, they make all kinds of comments about "this fellow hitting me" or something like that.

Q. Was any comment made about what Alabama knew about the plays they were running?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have any other subject matter that you discussed with Mr. Bisher?

A. No, sir. He just came over and talked to me the one day when I was in the training room working. He asked me—I made a comment I thought they were in wonderful physical condition in '62, and I said I thought they were in better shape in '61.

Q. Georgia?

A. No; I am talking about the Alabama team.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. What was—does he usually come over and talk to you, Mr. Richwine?

A. Oh, he comes over a lot to talk to the coaches and watch practice.

Q. What question did he propound to you when you said the Alabama team was in wonderful physical condition?

A. He asked me what I thought about the game.

Q. And that is all he asked you?

A. Made a statement like, "didn't"—something to the effect "didn't you get the opinion that they knew everything that we were going to do?" When he said "we", he meant "us".

Q. Yes, sir. What was your answer to that?

A. I told him I didn't know; I don't know one play from the other, no way for me to know that. I take care of the [fol. 755] physical conditions; I don't do anything.

Q. No semblance of anything told to Mr. Bisher in—didn't resemble this statement in any way?

A. Well, the resemblance—I referred to the physical condition of the men.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. But, in the article there, the statement, there is nothing about physical condition. That is what I said.

Q. You mentioned nothing to him in any way about any plays?

A. No, sir; I don't know—I don't know a play when I see one.

Q. The '61 game, did you discuss that?

A. I discussed the physical condition. I said I thought they were in better shape in '61 than in '62.

Q. And that's all?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was the only fact that you stated to him, they were in better physical condition in '61 than in '62?

A. Stated that they were in—they were in good physical shape in '62, and I thought they were in better shape in '61 than in '62.

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Cody: Come down.

The Court: You may step—are you through with him?

[fol. 756] Mr. Schroder: No, sir.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Shortly after the appearance of this article published by the Saturday Evening Post, did you discuss what you—the quotation that was in there by you with Johnny Griffith?

A. I discussed it with him the next morning; yes, sir.

• • • • • • •

Brigham Everett Woodward, called as a witness on behalf of the Plaintiff, after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Will you please state your full name?

A. Brigham Everett Woodward.

Q. Where is your home, Mr. Woodward?

A. Augusta.

Q. Augusta, Georgia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You attend the University of Georgia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Speak up, please, sir. You play football at the University of Georgia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During 1962 were you a member of the varsity football team?

[fol. 757] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you still have another year of eligibility?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You will play this fall, then?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you play in the University of Georgia-University of Alabama game in Birmingham in September, 1962?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What position did you play in that game, Mr. Woodward?
A. Safety man.
Q. That is on defense?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You did not play on offense?
A. No, sir.
Q. Were you in that game as the Georgia safety man every time that Georgia was on defense?
A. Yes, sir; as far as I know. We have to get in when we can.
Q. Sir?
A. We have to get in when we can. I usually get in first play on defense, most of the time.
Q. During the 1962 University of Georgia-Alabama game, state to the Court and Jury whether or not there were any forward passes thrown by Alabama in your zone?
A. There weren't any thrown in my zone at all that night. They were all thrown in the flat or to the halfback's zone.
Q. On March 23, 1963, the Saturday Evening Post published an article entitled "The Story of a College Football Fix", and in that article it states that "the Georgia players, their moves analyzed and forecast like those of rats in a maze, to a frightful physical beating." Now, with re- [fol. 758] gard to that statement—I am going to break it down in two portions. I want to ask you this question, first. In your opinion, were the moves of the University of Georgia players, did they appear to be analyzed and forecast by the University of Alabama players?
A. Well, defensively I would say "no", that would be the only thing I can answer, because I don't play offense.

Q. The second part of that portion reads, "the players took a frightful physical beating". You were with the players after the game in the lockerroom, were you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In your opinion, did the University of Georgia players take a frightful physical beating in that game?

A. No, sir; I wouldn't say so.

Q. Would you, as a defensive player, Mr. Woodward, be on the side line when substitutions were made on Georgia's offensive team?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. While on the side lines did you or not hear players running off the field stating that Alabama knew their plays and that they had been sold out?

A. No, sir; I never heard anybody say anything.

Q. What was the, in your opinion, physical condition of the University of Georgia football team before it went into the game in Birmingham?

A. We were all pretty tired. Most of us were leg weary. We had been practicing pretty hard before the game.

Q. Do you or not feel that the University of Georgia was ready for that game?

[fol. 759] A. No, sir; I don't think we were ready.

JAMES WALLACE BUTTS having resumed the stand, testified further as follows:

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Butts, when we adjourned and you left the witness stand, we were talking about four specific calls among other that you made to Frank Scoby in Chicago in September of 1962. You remember our discussion about those calls?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Two of the calls that we had—that we were discussing were, I believe, one the day before the Georgia-Alabama game?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. One call on the day of the game, and one call the day after the game; you remember that?

A. I remember you discussing the call on the day of the game, sir, but I do not remember the call that you mentioned the day after the game.

Q. Well, do you remember that I gave you access to this Defendant's Exhibit No. 17, which you may refresh your recollection from. I will leave it here where you can hold it if you want to.

A. All right, sir.

Q. Do you recall the nature of any of those four particular calls?

A. Yes, sir. The one that stands out in my mind is the one that was made somewhere around the middle of the [fol. 760] day on September 22nd, on the day of the Georgia-Alabama, the reason being already stated to you, sir.

Mr. Schroder: Let's go ahead—

A. (The witness) All the calls that I have made, Mr. Cody, to Mr. Scoby of Chicago have been for business reasons.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Well, if so, why did you charge those calls to the University?

A. Mr. Cody, I think you know that—I'm sure it has been reported to you that I thought when I made the charges to my credit card that I was charging them to my home. I explained that to Mr. J. D. Bolton, the Comptroller of the University of Georgia.

Q. But that was in April of this year you made that explanation, wasn't it?

A. Mr. Cody, it doesn't matter when it was made, it's the truth.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Did you ever discuss with Mr. Scoby this Continental Enterprises?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he have some money tied up in that company?

A. Well, I would put it this way, sir; he bought some stock in that corporation.

Q. Do you—

[fol. 761] Examination.

By the Court:

Q. Is Continental Enterprises the one you and Coach Bryant had, and Mr. Wolfson, Sam Wolfson, is that the same corporation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Continental Enterprises?

A. Yes, sir, Your Honor.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Do you know what the outstanding capital stock of that company was?

A. No, sir; I'm not a good businessman, sir.

Q. Do you know the par value of the stock?

A. Well, Mr. Cody, I have been a little afraid to check it lately; it's so low.

Q. Do you know what business that company is in?

A. Yes, sir; I know that the main thing they were trying to do was sell throughout America a projection type cap on a can that projected all kinds of fruit juices, chocolate and so forth.

Q. When you and Coach Bryant got into this particular company, did you—did you know whether or not it had a surplus or big deficit; did you know anything about the financial condition of the company?

A. I had a statement, but I'm not sure that I paid any attention to it, sir.

Q. What I'm trying to find out, Coach Butts, is whether [fol. 762] or not these telephone conversations which you had with Mr. Frank Scoby in September of 1962, whether or not that—the affairs of that particular company could have taken up a big part of these telephone conversations?

A. No, sir.

Q. I see.

A. I can explain, sir, that the businesses that did take up the telephone calls were loan companies which I did not operate in any way, but which I was trying to help and Universal Food Products of Lakeland, Florida, and also, as I explained to you once before, Mr. Scoby at one time checked out Orange River Groves, Incorporated, and as I told you, he did not think it was a good investment.

Q. And you also told me it didn't take him long to make that decision, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, getting back to this relationship with Mr. Scoby where you were to get a cut on the sale of scotch whiskey, what territory was that designed to cover, this arrangement, Mr. Butts?

A. Mr. Cody, this proposition never got past the talking stage, but we did discuss the Southeast, an override on all of the products sold in the Southeast.

Q. When did you begin your discussions with him on that subject?

A. Mr. Cody, I'm very sorry, I cannot give you an answer to that question.

Q. That's all right. Were you to pay him anything for this concession?

A. No, sir; he doesn't need it, Mr. Cody, he's a wealthy man.

Q. Did you talk about what your cut would be on this deal?

[fol. 763] A. No, sir.

Q. Did you discuss what your duties were to be?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were they?

A. The main duties I would have would be more or less a goodwill man, furnish the name. Of course, this could not possibly have happened if I hadn't also been able, at the same time, to line up a job with a professional football team.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. Mr. Scoby make it contingent on your getting a connection with a professional football team before he would give you this override on the scotch whiskey?

A. Your Honor, he did not, but that was—

Q. The understanding?

A. No, sir; in my own thinking.

Q. Oh, yes, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Well, Coach Butts, do you—do you see any inconsistency in being in that type of business, and also being connected with a professional athletic team?

A. No, sir. President Kennedy's father made two hundred million out of scotch, sir.

The Marshal: Let's have orc , please.

[fol. 764] By Mr. Cody:

Q. You are not attempting to recommend him to us, are you?

A. No, sir.

Q. At the time that you were talking to him about this arrangement, were you then athletic director at the University of Georgia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, can you give us any reasonable estimate as to the time when you first began to talk to him on this subject?

A. No, sir; but I'd like to explain to you one thing. There's not anyone any place that ever accused me of being lazy, and I was perfectly able to do everything that I was supposed to do at the University of Georgia and make some telephone calls.

Q. Let me ask you this question, Coach Butts. If it can be shown in this case by proper evidence that Mr. Scoby was a man who bet as much as forty to fifty thousand dollars on football games in one season, mostly college football games, do you think—do you see any inconsistency, as an athletic director of the University, in associating with a man of that type? I'm asking you to assume that he did?

A. Mr. Cody, I do not condone betting in any way, and in that direction you are picking the wrong man. I have never even played poker, and never even done what perhaps you and a lot of people have, bet on my golf game. I don't play golf.

Q. You talking about me and Mr. Schroder, now, aren't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Let's go back and answer—

[fol. 765] The Court: All right; we're going to have order in this audience back here or we're going to clear the room, and I mean it. These outbursts—the next outburst, that's it.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Suppose you answer my question, though, Coach Butts. If it can be shown by evidence in this case that this man bet on football games in one season between forty and fifty thousand dollars, mostly college football games, do you think it inconsistent for an athletic director to associate with a man of that type?

A. Mr. Cody, if the athletic director knew that, I will agree.

Q. Now, if that were the case, and if it can be shown that such a man did the thing which I described to you, don't you think that would hurt the University?

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, I don't think that is properly phrased. If the man did it, it wouldn't hurt the University, unless the man connected with the University knew. That's what the man just testified to. I don't understand the question, and I don't know whether the witness did.

The Court: Would you repeat your question, Mr. Cody?

By Mr. Cody:

Q. If such were the case, that is, the case which I described in the previous question, don't you think that it would hurt the university for that situation to be known?

[fol. 766] The Court: What is your objection?

Mr. Schroder: I still don't know what situation he's talking about. Is he assuming the athletic director associated with a man he knew did that, or is he assuming the director associated with him without knowing that.

The Court: Yes, sir; I think you ought to clarify that.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Suppose it were not known to you, Coach Butts, but suppose it was known to the public, don't you think it would hurt the University?

A. Yes, sir; but I don't think I could take responsibility for that, Mr. Cody, because I might have lunch any day at a table with people that I have no idea—

Q. I understand.

A. That's my point.

Q. Coach Butts, I'd like to pass on to another subject, just a moment. I'd like to find out from you if, since January the 6th, 1961, at various meetings which you attended as athletic director, if you have ever openly criticized the coaching staff, or the athletic board at the University?

A. I have never been conscious of doing that, sir, and I would like to add to that that I would like for my—the things that I have done to stand on record to show my regard for Coach Johnny Griffith over the years.

Q. Isn't it true that—isn't it true that before this Bryant affair came up that a representative of the athletic board [fol. 767] of the University notified you that they wanted your resignation?

A. No, sir; that's not exactly true.

Q. Well, what's the story on that?

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, I inquire as to the relevancy of this.

The Court: Yes, sir; I think it would probably be relevant on the question of general damages, Mr. Schroder; I will let him go into that.

Mr. Schroder: As to mitigation, not as to whether there was a liable committed. I assume all of this is on mitigation of damages.

By Mr. Cody:

A. Ask your question again, please, sir, if you will?

Mr. Cody: You want it read back?

The Court: Yes; read that back, Mr. Court Reporter.

(Whereupon the Court Reporter read aloud the question.)

A. (By the witness) The answer to that is no member of the athletic board has told me they wanted my resignation.

[fol. 768] Q. What was it you wanted to explain about that subject matter?

A. What I wanted to explain was that on an occasion, the day I do not know, about the time the Atlanta Touchdown Club meets every year, Mr. Cook Harwick invited me to come by his office and he said something along that line, but at the same time he intimated he would never vote against me.

Q. But he said he was the only one—

A. No; he—

Q. —that wouldn't vote against you?

A. No, he did not, sir.

Q. Well, did he tell you that the rest of the members of the board had that attitude?

A. No, he did not, sir.

Q. Well, didn't you resign at that time?

A. I went to see the President of the University of Georgia, and told him that I would like to retire as athletic director the last day of June.

Q. Now, can you pin-point the date of that conversation?

A. I have told you, sir, it was at the time that the Touchdown Club meets in Atlanta.

Q. Wasn't that about the 15th?

A. If you say so, I'll agree that's it.

Q. What I'm trying to straighten out, Coach Butts, is that this resignation as of February 23, subsequent to the one we are talking about now, was for a different reason. State to the Court if that is the letter you wrote President Aderhold, or a copy of it, on February 23?

A. One minute, please, sir. Yes, sir; I wrote this to the President of the University of Georgia, and I'd like to explain.

The Court: You go ahead and explain.

[fol. 769] By Mr. Cody:

Q. Go ahead; you can make any explanation you wish.

A. On Friday, I believe it was February the 22nd, and I do not—I don't want to be held strictly to the date, I attended a meeting in Mr. Cook Barwick's office here in Atlanta, and for the first time—

Q. This is a different meeting from the previous one you had in Cook's—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Go ahead.

A. For the first time—I rode over to that meeting with President Aderhold and Mr. J. D. Bolton. They did not mention anything that was to take place in the meeting. I thought it was to talk about a retirement plan, and in that meeting the so-called Butts-Bryan incident was discussed. The following day, Saturday—or let me go back to Friday night, please, sir. Friday night I received a call from Mr. Furman Bisher, sports editor of the Atlanta Journal, and he said: "I understand you are going to resign next week instead of June." I changed the subject, saying that "perhaps will see you at the Georgia Tech versus Georgia basketball game in Atlanta." But Mr. Bisher is a very persistent gentleman, and he asked me if I would be interested in professional football. I did not discuss it with him. The next morning, being Saturday, I think February the 23rd, I received a call from Mr. J. D. Bolton, comptroller of the University, and he said that he received a call from Atlanta, and: "I understand that Mr. Furman Bisher, in the Saturday afternoon Journal, will state that you are resigning at the University of Georgia." He said: "This will be embarrassing to the President." I then went to the President of the University of Georgia's office, and because I knew of the rumors related to the so-called Bear Bryant-Butts things as advertised around the country by [fol. 770] rumors, in order not to embarrass the University of Georgia I resigned, sir.

Q. Effective February 28?

A. Yes, sir.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. Let me get this straight. I think the Jury might want to get it straight, too. You had previously resigned, Coach Butts, effective June 30?

A. Yes, sir; I had requested that they release me from my duties as of—

Q. June 30?

A. With retirement, sir.

Q. And this second resignation is another resignation which just brings it up—up-dates it?

A. That was the official resignation.

Q. All right. You had already resigned effective June the 30th, or something like that?

A. Yes, sir; yes, sir.

Q. That's what I didn't understand.

The Court: You were talking about two different resignations.

Mr. Cody: That's right.

The Court: All right, sir.

[fol. 771] Cross examination (continued).

By Mr. Cody:

Q. In this letter of resignation dated February 23rd, you state that: "During the past two years I have developed business interests. I find that I am having to devote more time to these interests. It is for this reason that I submit my resignation as athletic director of the University of Georgia effective February 28, 1963."

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, that is somewhat different from the explanation you just gave. Now, what is it?

A. That was very well written, sir, by the Assistant to the President, Mr. Louie Griffith.

Q. He wrote the letter, not you?

A. That's right; and it was written in his office.

Q. You signed it?

A. I signed it.

Q. Will you describe for us, Coach Butts, what these business interests were at that time and how long they had been going on?

A. Mr. Cody, I had one-third interest, stock only, in six loan offices, the location has already been described to you.

Q. I remember that.

A. Yes, sir. I had offers from at least one insurance company, and I, of course, had been involved in the Orange River Groves, Inc., which, of course, I was out of at that time.

Q. Do you have any others you want to describe to us?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you devoting much time to this Continental Enterprises?

A. No, sir. All I did was about once a week call up and see how much it had dropped on the market.

[fol. 772] Q. Is that the company in which you lost a lot of money?

A. Well, Mr. Cody, it remains to be seen how much money I will lose. It hasn't been sold to date.

Q. Did you take part in the organization of the corporation known as the B. E. M. Corporation? Wasn't that a real estate venture?

A. No, sir. I have never taken part in the organization of a real estate organization.

Q. What was the B. E. M. Corporation; do you remember that?

A. No, sir; there—

Q. Did you have a company by the name of Coffee Break Sales?

A. No, sir. I had some stock in a corporation called Coffee Quick.

Q. You don't remember anything about the Coffee Break Sales and Service Company?

A. I think at one time, sir, I bought some stock in it, but I am not sure of the name, and I think my money was returned to me at a later date.

Q. What is the name of this other company, the Coffee Break Distributing Company, wasn't it?

A. The name of it was—please don't—

Q. Go ahead.

A. Coffee Break, Incorporated, I think, sir.

Q. Were you devoting much time to that, sir?

A. Not any, sir.

Q. What about that Universal Food Products thing?

A. I did not devote any time to that, sir, except making some telephone calls in that connection.

Q. What about that Orange River Grove?

A. Mr. Cody, I had a clear understanding when I went into that corporation that I would not spend any of my time, but I became alarmed because I was afraid some of the people who had purchased the contracts in this corpora[fol. 773] tion would lose their money, and I did put some time into it for that reason and that reason only.

Q. Getting back, Coach Butts, for the moment when we were talking about resignations when you resigned as coach following the 1960 season, did you intend, at that time, to ever get back in the coaching of any athletic team?

A. Mr. Cody, as I told you in my deposition, which you have—

Q. That is not in evidence yet. Let's keep it on the evidence in the courtroom.

A. Yes. I intended to try professional football if given the opportunity, sir. May I explain? Professional football is different from college football in that it is not necessary to teach positional play, and you can recruit the material in a much different manner.

Q. You mean by that, it is not as strenuous?

A. I believe, sir, while the game is going on, all football games are strenuous, but the college coaching game is about a twenty-four hour a day job.

Q. What did you tell the University officials when you resigned at that time?

A. Mr. Cody, I did not talk to but one official, that official being President O. C. Aderhold.

Q. What did you tell him?

A. I told him that my blood pressure was very high, and that I had a very hard time making it through the last two games of the season, and I thought because of my health that I should drop out of the picture as a football coach.

Q. Just wasn't physically up to it?

A. I told you exactly what I said, sir.

Q. Did you have anything to do—getting back now to these businesses you said you had developed over this two-year period, the two-year period mentioned in this letter, [fol. 774] did you have anything to do with a concern called the Trans-America Securities Corporation?

A. Mr. Cody, I was on the board at that company, Trans-American, and I attended only two meetings of the board, and I have to confess to you, I didn't know what the business was all about when I did attend the meeting.

Q. What about this—you had, previous to that, a few years ago, operated a restaurant in Athens, hadn't you?

A. Yes, sir; and I didn't have anyone to watch the cash register.

Q. You lost a lot of money in that?

A. I lost some.

Q. Was that the Huddle, what they call the Huddle?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What about the Frost Free Groves, Coach Butts? Were you interested in that company?

A. I never heard of that, sir.

Q. Didn't you have an interest in a lumber business?

A. No, sir.

Q. What about a trucking concern up in Philadelphia; didn't you have an interest in that business?

A. No, sir. The way you might—I don't think I need any explanation, unless you want it, but I have two friends there. One of them is deceased, Lewis and Leonard Tose had a very large trucking business, but I had no interest in it at all.

Q. What is this insurance business you said you were trying to develop?

A. Sir, I have not tried to develop an insurance business, but there was an insurance company started in Birmingham, Alabama, the home office is now in Dallas, Texas, that since the Saturday Evening Post story broke, they invited me out for a conference, but I wasn't able to make the connection, and so that is the status of that at this time.

Q. You are trying to get an agency in Georgia?

[fol. 775] A. That was the talk under consideration, sir.

Q. Coach Butts, weren't you, at the time you wrote this letter, interested in a couple of housing developments, one in Athens and one in St. Simons?

A. No, sir; absolutely not.

Q. Well, these businesses that you were devoting some attention to, do you see any inconsistency in that and trying to be athletic director at the University?

A. Well, Mr. Cody, you can make a case against anyone, but I would like for you to investigate of the members the faculty of the University of Georgia. And you would find that some of them own stock in different corporations.

Q. But not—not trying to run a business?

A. I have not tried to run a business, sir.

Q. Well, if you—if you devoted a lot of your time in the running of any of these businesses, don't you think that would have hurt the University of Georgia?

A. Well, to my way of thinking it did not, sir. That is my opinion, and it could—someone else could have another opinion.

Q. Coach Butts, let me ask you a few questions about where you made your headquarters when you came to Atlanta and made business calls. What—what offices did you use?

A. Well, the Rhodes—in the Rhodes-Haverty Building there was an office called Communications International.

It was convenient, and I used it at times to make calls. I think that is what you're referring to.

Q. That is the business that this fellow Werbell (?) had in Atlanta?

A. Yes, sir; it was an advertising agency, so to speak.

Q. You did make a good many trips to Atlanta during the year, is that true?

[fol. 776] A. Yes, sir; I made quite a few trips, and I made a lot of speeches all over the South.

Q. When you—when you had a lot of telephoning to do, did you use the office of this Communications International?

A. At times I did, sir.

Q. How many trips would you say you made to that office during the year 1962?

A. Mr. Cody, I have no idea.

Q. They were numerous, weren't they?

A. Several.

Q. Well, they were numerous?

A. Well—

Q. If you have no accurate idea about it, I don't insist.

A. I do not have an accurate idea about it, sir.

Q. All right, sir. Do you remember going to the office of Communications International, that is, here in Atlanta, on September 13, 1962?

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Do you remember being in Atlanta on that date?

A. Mr. Cody, as you know, I had a desk record, and I thought I was in Atlanta, as I told you. It doesn't show on the record. However, the telephone company's records show I was in Atlanta and did make a telephone call on that day.

Q. Do you have any independent recollection yourself—

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Do you remember receiving a telephone call from Coach Bear Bryant on September the 16th, 1962?

A. No, sir; I have received many calls from him, but I don't remember any particular call any time.

Q. You have no such memory, even though that call came to you at your home?

A. No, sir; I have had a lot of calls at my home.

[fol. 777] Q. Have you had a lot of calls that lasted an hour and seven mintues?

A. The amount of time on such a call doesn't impress me very much, because I have made many calls, long calls.

Q. But you remember nothing about this one?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recall that on May 3rd, 1963, I took your deposition in your attorney's office before a Court Reporter for the purpose of obtaining evidence to be used in the trial of this case?

A. I did not remember the date until you questioned me Friday, and you told me that.

Q. You remember the occasion, though?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you remember being under oath at the time to tell the truth?

A. Yes, sir; and I am under oath now.

Q. I'd like to read to you, Coach Butts—

The Court: What page are you reading from in the deposition?

Mr. Cody: I can't give you the page at the moment, but I want to quote it.

Mr. Schroder: I would like to have it so I can check it. Maybe one of his associates here can tell me.

The Court: Yes, sir. I think he is entitled to the page.

Mr. Cody: I don't believe I have the page before me at the moment.

[fol. 778] The Witness: Your Honor, may I get a drink of water?

The Court: Yes, sir. Bring Coach Butts a drink of water, Mr. Marshal.

The Witness: That is all right; I don't want to delay—

The Court: You are entitled to a drink of water anytime. You can just sit up there. Can you find the page number?

Mr. Cody: I can't.

The Court: Go ahead and ask him the question. If Coach Butts remembers the questions, we will save time.

Mr. Cody: These are the questions which appear in the pleadings under the motion to compel. It is a part of the record in this case.

The Court: All right, sir. Mr. Schroder can remember the questions. We will save time on it.

Mr. Schroder: May I just have the question—it is voluminous. May we see what the question is?

The Court: I think he said they were in the motion to compel.

[fol. 779] Mr. Cody: It is in the motion to compel.

Mr. Schroder: Wouldn't that have been in July, a different deposition?

Mr. Cody: No; it would have been in May.

The Court: All right, sir. Go ahead.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. I want to read to you about eight or ten questions that were propounded to you at that time by me, and when I have finished I'd like for you to state whether or not you refused to answer those questions.

The Court: Let the Jury go—

Mr. Schroder: Wait a minute.

The Court: Let the Jury go to the Jury room.

Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: This is not—

(Whereupon the Jury retired from the courtroom at 2:45 p. m.)

[fol. 780] Mr. Schroder: May I be heard on this, whatever is going on?

(Whereupon a conference was held at the Bench between the Court, Mr. Schroder and Mr. Cody.)

* * * * * * *

Q. Coach Butts, in football parlance, does the term "split end" refer to a formation?

A. The answer is 'no'. An end may be split from any formation used in football, and I'd like to call your attention to the fact, Mr. Cody, that when my first deposition was continued I corrected that in my continued deposition. In other words, Mr. Cody, to explain, you can have what they call a full set; every back in his normal position, just three men back, the normal T and split either end way out. You can split him out from a slot, from a wingback formation, from almost any formation used in offensive football today.

Q. Is the term "slot", does that refer to a formation?

A. Slot formation, if nothing else is added, refers to a simply slot formation with an end on one side moving out creating a slot with a halfback on the inside.

Q. What you are saying though, it would be variations?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. In this deposition that we—that you gave on July—in July, I'd like to read from one page there.

Mr. Schroder: May I again ask counsel—

Mr. Cody: 147.

[fol. 781] Mr. Schroder: Sir?

The Court: I assume we have an original here.

The Clerk: Yes, sir.

The Court: Open the original.

The Clerk: All right, sir.

Mr. Cody: I don't need the original; it's on Page 147.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. I will ask you, Coach Butts, if you didn't make this statement, referring to a quick kicker.

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, I don't think it is proper to read him that now until he asks him the question first, and if he testified to something different, then he can attempt to contradict him, but he can't proceed to read all the way through from his deposition.

The Court: I think he can ask him did he testify as to a quick kicker on such and such a date, and is that his opinion now.

Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir.

[fol. 782] The Court: All right; I think he can proceed that way.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Getting back to these Burnett notes and that particular phrase "can't quick kick", question—let me ask you if this is your evidence, Coach Butts. It is on Page 146 and 147. "Coach Butts isn't the main effectiveness of a quick kick, doesn't it lie in the surprise of the defensive team with the kick?" Answer: "Well, I don't see any need of quick kicking as Georgia used it as surprise, if that's the question you want, because they line up in a kicking formation. It would be stupid. What made it good at the University of Georgia was the fact that the safety man had to be worried about passing with Jake Saye in it."

Question: "Because Saye might pass?"

Answer: "Saye might pass, see. Well, when a team lines up in a kicking formation you have to be pretty dumb not to anticipate a kick. Now, Paul Bryant and Bobby Dodd are the two best proponents of the quick kicking game that I know of. And in a quick kicking game with a man in a normal position, lefthalf is in front of fullback quick kicks ahead of time, is very disconcerting. But we just haven't had that man."

That a correct transcript of your testimony?

A. I made that statement, sir, and I ask for the blackboard. I want to show exactly what I said.

Q. I am reading what you said.

A. I know, but I want to show this Jury—I am not worried about what you are reading.

Q. I am not asking you to use the blackboard.

The Court: You answer the question, and Mr. Schroder have you explain it on redirect.

[fol. 783] The Witness: I am not ashamed of that statement at all; I am proud of it; nothing wrong with it.

Mr. Schroder: I think perhaps Mr. Cody ought to complete the reading of the answer which he stopped in the middle of.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. That part of your answer is correct; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was your testimony?

A. If I made it, that is what I thought.

Q. Does Georgia belong to the National Collegiate Athletic Association?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has the Southeastern Conference, of which Georgia is a member, have they adopted the By-Laws and Constitution of the National Collegiate Athletic Association?

A. Yes, sir. The University of Georgia operates under the organization that you are speaking of.

The Court: You mean they operate under the Southeastern conference, or the N.C.A.A.?

The Witness: The Southeast, sir, they operate under the Southeastern Conference, but the Southeastern Conference operates—[fol. 784] The Court: Under the N.C.A.A.?

The Witness: —Under the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Let me ask you if you are familiar with this paragraph in the Constitution and By-Laws of the National Inter-collegiate Association?

Mr. Cody: It is on Page 5. I furnished you with a copy of this.

Mr. Schroder: Did you?
Mr. Lockerman: Just a moment.
Mr. Cody: On Page 5, Section 6.
Mr. Lockerman: Just one minute.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Are you familiar with this particular part of Section 6?

A. I haven't read it, sir.

Q. I am going to read it to you. "Individuals employed by or associated with member institutions for the administration the conduct or the coaching of Intercollegiate Athletics and students competing in Intercollegiate [fol. 785] Athletics, shall report themselves with honesty and sportsmanship at all times to the ends that Intercollegiate Athletics as a whole, their institutions, and they as individuals shall stand for the honor and dignity of fair play and the generally recognized high standards associated with wholesome competitive sports." You familiar with that section?

A. I haven't read it, sir, but I think it is a good—

Q. Let me read you this paragraph on Page 6, which is a part of the official enforcement program. "Individuals employed by or associated member institutions for the administration, conduct or the coaching on intercollegiate athletics are in the final analysis teachers of young people. Their responsibility is an affirmative one, and they must do more than avoid improper conduct or personable acts. Their own moral values must be certain and positive, that those younger and more pliable will be influenced by their example. Much more is expected of them than the less critically placed citizen." Are you familiar with that section?

A. No, sir; I have never read it, sir.

Q. Coach Butts, in order to establish the date of your approval of this list of calls that we referred to, will you state whether or not that is the letter you wrote to Mr. Bolton on the date mentioned?

Mr. Schroder: I don't believe any point has been raised as to the lack of authenticity of this.

The Witness: Yes, sir; I wrote the letter.

[fol. 786] Mr. Cody: I see.

The Court: I don't—I don't know exactly what you all are proving or disproving.

Mr. Cody: That is the date, I am trying to get the date straightened out.

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Cody: I believe that's all.

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Cody: This has been identified as Defendant's Exhibit No. 18.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. At the close of the hearing on Friday Mr. Cody at that time was asking you had you not, when your deposition was first taken, testified that the resignation tendered by you on February the 23rd, was to become effective in March rather than in February, and I believe you pointed [fol. 787] out to Mr. Cody that you had made a correction of that when your deposition was resumed later?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you read from your deposition the portion where that was corrected when Mr. Dody was present there in my office and asking those questions?

A. Are you sure, sir, that you have given me the right page?

Q. Is that Page 153?

A. No, sir; 152; excuse me. The part of my deposition that Mr. Schroder is referring to reads like this, quoting Mr. Schroder: "There are one or two things, Mr. Cody, that Coach Butts called to my attention that he would like to correct in connection with his previous deposition that he had reflected upon since it was taken in May, one of which had to do with the effective date of his resignation as athletic director."

Quoting Mr. Cody: "Well, let him state for the record what corrections he wants to make."

"Mr. Schroder: 'If you did say it was in March, what did you mean to say?'

"The Witness: 'Mr. Cody asked me the question in the previous deposition when my resignation was effective as athletic director. I think I gave the answer 'at the end of March.' The correct answer should be the end of February.'"

"Mr. Cody: 'Go ahead and state whatever corrections you have to make. I don't care to ask any questions about it.'"

[fol. 788] JAMES WALLACE BUTTS having resumed the stand, testified further as follows:

Redirect examination (continued).

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Mr. Butts, on cross-examination, you were questioned about a business association you had with a gentleman named Frank Childs. When you were discussing this business connection with Frank Childs, what was he at the time, and what business was he in?

A. He was vice-president of the Bank of Gray, sir.

Q. And you mentioned the name of Westmoreland; what is his first name?

A. Carl Westmoreland.

Q. What is he?

A. He is a lawyer in Macon, Georgia.

Q. On cross-examination you were asked about a telephone call made by you from Birmingham on September 22 to Frank Scoby in Chicago, and you stated that you did recall that telephone call. Did you explain how you happened to remember that call?

A. I am not sure, sir, but the reason—

Q. You are not sure you explained it, or you are not sure of what?

A. I am not sure I explained it.

Q. All right, sir, would you please explain it?

A. Well, Mr. Schroder, it seems that an article occurred in a Tampa newspaper about this matter, and I received a call from Mr. Joe Sargeant, who lives at Lakeland, Florida, not too far away. He was—in explaining, I'd like to say Mr. Joe Sargeant has a dairy at Coleanor, Alabama, [fol. 789] which is sixteen or eighteen miles out of Birmingham. He met me for lunch the day of the Georgia-Alabama game, and he wanted me to speak to Mr. Frank Scoby about some business negotiations that he had, so I called Mr. Scoby and put Mr. Joe Sargeant on the telephone, and he talked to him at that time. That is the reason I can identify the call, because Mr. Joe Sargeant reminded me of the same.

Q. Within the past couple of months?

A. Well, it would have to be since the article was written about Mr. Frank Scoby.

Q. After this publication, after the March 23 issue of Post?

A. Mr. Schroder, I am not sure that it came after that time—yes; I am sure it was. I was confused with another investigation that went on here in Atlanta; yes, sir; it came after the Saturday Evening Post, sir.

Q. All right, sir. Now, much was asked you on cross-examination about investments that you had made. Would you please now describe to the Jury and Court just what your present financial situation is?

A. Mr. Schroder, the best to describe it and get to the point, I am insolvent at this time.

Q. What is your income?

A. I have no income.

Q. On cross-examination it was pointed out to you that in the Saturday Evening Post article that you had been requested to submit yourself to a lie detector machine examination, and that you at that time refused to do so. Now, will you please inform the Court and Jury what your reasons were for so declining?

[fol. 790] A. Mr. Schroder, at that time I considered it, more or less, an insult, and that was my reason for not taking the lie detector test.

Q. Have you since taken one at my insistence?

A. Mr. Schroder, you know that you insisted on me taking a lie detector test.

Q. All right, sir. Now, before the issue came out in question, I believe you were testifying the other day that prior to that time that you were engaged in negotiations with the National Football League team known as the Dallas Cowboys; is that true or not true?

A. That is true.

Q. I am just going to ask you this: Since the date of the publication of the article in question, have you heard further from the Dallas Cowboys?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Cody: He has already testified to that, Your Honor. He is just repeating what's already been said.

The Court: I believe you brought it out on cross-examination. I will let Mr. Schroder ask him about that. I will overrule the objection.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. In checking through these toll tickets, telephone toll tickets which were brought into Court by Mr. Fleming, have you been able to tell the Court and Jury where you were on September the 11th, two days before the so-called telephone conversation?

A. Mr. Schroder, in checking my record of speeches I [fol. 791] made, I find that I was in Cullman, Alabama, at that time.

Q. On September the 7th?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the State of Alabama?

A. Yes, sir. I made more than ten speeches in Alabama during the last season.

Q. All right, sir. On September the 11th, two days before this so-called interception, while you were in Alabama, did you at that time get in touch with Coach Bryant and meet him anywhere to discuss anything about the game?

A. No, sir.

Q. On the first page of the Saturday Evening Post article in question the editors of the Saturday Evening Post had written this, and I want to read it to you. "Not since the Chicago White Sox threw the 1919 World Series has there been a sports story as shocking as this one. This is the story of one fixed game of college football. Before the University of Georgia played the University of Alabama last September 22, Wally Butts, athletic director of Georgia, gave Paul 'Bear' Bryant, head coach of Alabama, Georgia's plays, defensive patterns, all the significant secrets Georgia's football team possessed. The corrupt here were not professional ball players gone wrong, as in the 1919 Black Sox scandal. The corrupt were not disreputable gamblers, as in the scandals continually afflicting college basketball. The corrupt were two men, Butts and Bryant, employed to educate and to guide young men. How prevalent is the fixing of college football games? How often do teachers sell out their pupils? We don't know yet. For now we can only be appalled." Does that editorial con- [fol. 792] tain any truth insofar as you, Coach Wallace Butts, the Plaintiff in this lawsuit, is concerned?

A. No. And I would like to explain that for a time I hid from people, but not any more. I am looking them in the eye, because it is not true.

* * * * * * *

JAMES WALLACE BUTTS having resumed the stand, testified as follows:

Recross examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Butts, are you sure you feel like continuing with this examination?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you, Coach Butts, what appears to be a certified copy of a financial statement which you furnished to the Comptroller General of the State of Georgia, in July, 19[illegible]. Do you remember preparing that statement or having your auditor do so?

A. No, sir; I do not remember the details of it, sir.

Q. You have testified a few minutes ago, though, that you are now insolvent?

A. I am insolvent.

Q. Did you sign that statement?

A. That is my signature.

Q. Take a look at this statement and see if it doesn't show that you have a net worth in excess of two hundred thousands dollars as of that date?

A. I have never been worth a hundred thousand dollars.

[fol. 793] Q. You mean by that, that that is a false financial statement?

A. Mr. Cody, this statement was filled in. I signed it. I didn't know anything about what was in it.

Q. Let me have it a minute.

A. All right.

Q. Why did you sign it? What was the purpose of the instrument?

A. I don't know what the purpose was, because such a statement was not required of any such amount.

Q. Well, I mean, what were you driving at when you signed this statement and turned it over to the comptroller General of the State of Georgia? What were you after?

A. We had some applications for loan licenses, sir.

Q. Was that these small loan businesses that you had throughout the state, sir, the Instant Loan Company?

A. Yes, sir; they were small loan licenses that I had some stock in?

Q. You don't deny that this statement shows you have a net worth of two hundred five thousand nine hundred eighty-eight dollars?

A. Mr. Cody, there's been a big change in my financial status since that time, and I do not know exactly what I was worth at the time.

Q. This is July the 17th, 1961. If you had—if you had a net worth of two hundred five thousand nine hundred eighty-eight dollars as to that time, what has happened to it?

A. Mr. Cody—

[fol. 794] Mr. Schroder: I suggest that counsel—

A. (The witness)—I spent—

Mr. Schroder: Wait. May I suggest that counsel let the witness see the statement so he can see what is listed on there as assets.

The Court: I presume a financial statement would be broken down in to "real estate," "insurance policies," "liabilities," whatever it might be.

The Witness: Mr. Cody, for example, my residence and furniture is rated at ninety thousand, ninety thousand dollars. When the property was sold it brought forty-one or forty-two; I am not sure of the exact amount. Let me ask you this question.

Mr. Schroder: Let him go on with the assets.

The Court: Let him go on with it.

The Witness: Since that time my stock values have gone down to—quite a bit, and I do not know exactly how much. What else you want to know, sir?

By Mr. Cody:

Q. What stock values were you talking about?

[fol. 795] A. Well, Continental Enterprises has gone down from six to less than a dollar a share. I had to drop some other things—

Q. Let me have that back when you get through.

A. All right, sir.

Q. That is the company that you and Wolfson and Coach Bear Bryant were involved in?

A. Mr. Cody, I was not involved with anyone in the company, I owned some stock in the company, and so do many other people.

Q. Did you see—

Mr. Schroder: Whoa, whoa; let him finish.

The Witness: Many people own stock in that company.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Did you notice this instrument was signed by Thomas L. Williams, A. C. P. A.?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is he your auditor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does he handle the preparation of your tax returns and instruments of that nature?

A. Yes; he does, sir. But I might add, my income tax has been checked very carefully for years.

Q. I am not asking you that. Just answer my questions, Coach Butts.

A. All right, sir.

Q. But it is your testimony that at the time you signed this, you didn't know what you were signing; is that, in [fol. 796] substance, what you are undertaking to tell this Court?

A. Yes, sir.

The Court: What is the purpose in filing a statement with the Comptroller General? Does he handle small loan licenses?

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir. He has control over it under the law of Georgia. It is a discretionary matter as to the issuance of those licenses. Also has supervision over the operation of them after they are granted.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Do you still have your interest in these small loan businesses?

A. It is in my name, Mr. Cody, but it is used as collateral; it is being used as collateral at this time.

Q. Do you know, Coach Butts, whether or not the Comptroller General of the State of Georgia has withdrawn several of those licenses that were heretofore issued?

A. The Comptroller General of Georgia—at the present time?

Q. Yes.

A. Mr. Cody, I prefer, if the Court will permit, this as an answer and you will accept it, I prefer that you consult with Mr. James Bentley, Comptroller General.

Q. Well, don't you know? Can't you answer my question?

A. I can answer the question that he has never taken one away from me.

[fol. 797] Q. Well, had—

A. If that is the answer to your question.

Q. Well, have any of the licenses to operate this business been cancelled by him, that is, licenses heretofore issued to the Instant Loan Company?

A. Well, I—

Q. You would know that, wouldn't you, Coach Butts?

A. I can answer your question, Mr. Cody.

Q. What is it?

A. I turned in one, but I had a clear understanding as to the future status of this company.

Q. Is that the only license that's been withdrawn?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Coach Butts, you have explained some of the things—some of the nature of the telephone conversations with this Mr. Scoby. Now, do you—I assume you have had an opportunity to analyze some of these telephone calls just like I have or at least your counsel has; he's had a copy of this list?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You and your secretary, Mrs. Malcolm, actually helped in the preparations of that list, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With Mr. Bolton?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when it was finished you approved it in every respect, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You found no error in it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, did you know that—let's just take the month of April 1962, that there—did you know that there were no calls to Scoby by you? Have you checked that? Let me [fol. 798] point out to you what I have found, and you and your counsel can correct me if I am wrong, and it will give you an opportunity later to do it. Did you know that there were no calls in April and May of 1962?

A. Mr. Cody, that is of no significance to me.

Q. Well, it might be to me or to the Court. Let me give you my summary, and see if you have any contest about it. No calls in April or May, five in June, two in July, four in August, and then fourteen in September. Why the difference?

A. I might point out, Mr. Cody, if you check you won't find any since that Saturday Evening Post story broke.

Q. I am not asking you about that, Coach. Suppose you just answer the question instead of arguing with counsel about it.

That is all I am trying to do is solicit some answers from you.

A. Mr. Cody, my answer is this. By your implication you are implying that I have called him in relation to gambling. I have never—

The Court: No, sir.

Mr. Cody: I am not implying anything. I am asking you a fact.

The Court: Probably we'd move faster if you will answer or not, and your counsel can—

The Witness: Ask me the question, please, sir.

[fol. 799] By Mr. Cody:

Q. You find anything wrong with the tabulation that I just related about these calls?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, did you know that—aren't you familiar with the deposition that has been taken which indicates—

Mr. Schroder: I don't believe counsel can state what a deposition indicates. If he wants to read it, he is at perfect liberty to read it.

The Court: Yes, sir; I sustain the objection.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Do you remember approximately how many calls Mr. Scoby made to you in 1962?

A. Mr. Cody, I have never read his deposition.

Q. I see. That is all right; that answers my questions. I have one or two more questions to ask you, Coach.

A. All right, sir.

Q. Do you remember that on October the 20th of 1962 that Georgia played Florida State College down in Florida?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember that two days before the game, namely, on October the 18th, that you telephoned Coach Peterson from Atlanta and talked to him for a period of fifty-seven minutes?

A. I am not sure where the call was made, sir, but I remember making the call, and I want to explain.

[fol. 800] The Court: All right, sir, go ahead and explain.

A. (By the Witness) I made the call in behalf of the University of Georgia. The head defensive coach came to me and he had seen pictures of the University of Miami versus L. S. U. football game, and in this picture L. S. U. was using what is called a crack block; in other words, putting a flanger out what we call opposite, a counter flanger. This flanger was going in motion and hitting the Miami ends from the rear. L. S. U. furnished Coach Peterson, the coach of F. S. U., Florida State University, and I called him in behalf of the University of Georgia, and I did a good job, because I talked him out of using this crack block in the football game to be played with the University of Georgia.

Q. Well, let me ask you this question. Do you remember mentioning to him that in that coming game two days later that Georgia might use the Utah pass?

A. No, sir; I don't remember that.

Q. You know what I am talking about in calling it a Utah pass; that is the shovel pass, isn't it?

A. I was the first one put it in in the South, so I know it; yes, sir.

Q. Did you know that Georgia hadn't used that pass up until that time in the 1962 season?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Cody: I believe that's all.

[fol. 801] Examination.

By the Court:

Q. I am confused. What is the relationship between L. S. U. and F. S. U.? I mean, I am not—

A. Your Honor, sir, L. S. U. employs the same type of attack as does F. S. U., because Coach Peterson was a member of the Paul Dietzel coaching staff at L. S. U., and of course, evidently I didn't know it, but the members of the coaching staff at the University of Georgia knew that F. S. U. had this crack back block which injured two or three men in the L. S. U. versus Miami football game, and they were concerned about it, and I want to explain further that I did not call as an interim member of the Rules Committee at Large; I called them simply to help the University of Georgia, which I did.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Is the block to which you are referring to a crippling block?

A. Well, Mr. Schroder, if you want to be the end, I can demonstrate.

Q. No, sir; I don't care about that.

The Marshal: You will have to remain quiet in the courtroom, please.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Did the chief defensive coach at the University of Georgia tell you in connection with that call—

[fol. 802] Mr. Cody: Your Honor, I object to that for two or three reasons. It is leading, it—

The Court: I think, Mr. Schroder, it is leading.

Mr. Schroder: Sir?

The Court: It is leading.

Mr. Schroder: I will withdraw it and rephrase it.

The Court: All right, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. What did the University of Georgia chief defensive coach tell you that he was teaching his boys in connection with that game if that block was used on Georgia?

A. He advised me that the University of Georgia had put in the same plan, and that if Georgia—Florida State University used it against the University of Georgia, the University of Georgia would in turn use it against Florida State University.

Q. With the results being what, in your opinion?

A. In my opinion the sort of fiasco was pending with penalties, and another thing, I wanted Georgia to win the football game, and I knew that if Georgia started into a new plan of this kind they'd be awkward in carrying out the [fol. 803] plan and would have a better chance to get penalties in using that plan.

Q. State whether or not—did you say you were successful in keeping Florida State from using that against Georgia?

A. It was not used in the game, sir.

Q. All right, sir. Let me turn to this statement, financial statement that was—that you were being questioned about under the heading of "Assets" is listed four thousand eight hundred dollars in the bank. Under "Marketable Securities" is listed fifty-two thousand six hundred sixty-two dollars, which includes a footnote, seven thousand shares of Continental Enterprises stock. Now, your testimony is that when that statement was prepared by an accountant in July, 1961, the market value of that stock was what, approximately?

A. About six dollars per share, I think.

Q. And today, the market value of that—of that seven thousand shares of stock is approximately what?

A. Less than one dollar, sir.

Q. Also included in that item is thirteen hundred shares of Georgia International Life Insurance Company stock. Where is that stock or shares of that stock?

A. Mr. Schroder, I had to sell that stock because of recent events.

Q. What events?

A. Well, right now I am unemployed.

Q. Under the item "Investments in Closely Held Corporations" is listed ninety-three thousand five hundred dollars, footnoting that, Orange River Groves, Inc., seventy-eight thousand five hundred dollars. What is that worth today?

[fol. 804] A. Mr. Schroder, that stock is not worth anything, and the value as shows in this statement was estimated on the value of the receivables held by Orange River Groves, Inc., at that time.

Q. Under the same caption "Investments in Closely Held Corporations" ninety-three thousand five hundred dollars is listed, Hollywood Estates, Inc., fifteen thousand dollars. Where is your equity in that investment today?

A. Mr. Schroder, the way that figure was arrived at, someone in my office called the President of Hollywood Estates, Charlie Evans—

Q. That is not my question. My question is: Where today is your investment in that corporation?

A. The stock was sold to pay a loan and was paid on a loan at the Hubert State Bank.

Q. Well, you don't have that anymore?

A. I do not have it.

Q. All right, sir.

A. No, sir.

Q. Eighty thousand dollars under "Assets" is listed as cash surrender value of life insurance, approximately; it says eighty thousand. What has happened to that asset?

A. Mr. Schroder, since that time I have had to borrow all I could on my insurance.

Q. Then there is quite a difference in your financial picture then and your financial picture since the Saturday Evening Post article came out?

A. Yes, sir; there is quite a bit of difference in my financial status.

Mr. Schroder: Let me check, Mr. Cody, and see if I have another question here.

[fol. 805] The Court: Just a moment. I think he wanted to confer with them.

Mr. Cody: Okay.

Mr. Schroder: I don't think I said I was through, yet. Just a minute.

The Court: Just a moment; he is not through yet.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. This so-called crack block that you were describing, what is the present situation of that so-called block insofar as it being legal or illegal today is concerned?

A. Mr. Schroder, I would never have made the call to Florida State except for the benefit of the University of Georgia, because—

Q. That is not my question. Is that block today legal or illegal?

A. It is legal if the blocker has his head in front of the man he is blocking. Therefore, in explanation, Mr. Schroder, I would like to say I kindly felt I was fooling with someone else's business, namely, Florida State's, and I did it for the University of Georgia.

Q. In any conversation, without regard to what month it took place in, that you have ever had with Frank Scoby, has there ever been discussed between you and him betting or gambling or anything to do with the outcome of any contest involving the University of Georgia?

[fol. 806] A. Absolutely not.

Q. To your knowledge has Frank Scoby, without regard to what year it might be, ever placed any money on the outcome of the game engaged in by the University of Georgia?

A. I am sure he has not.

Q. To your knowledge has he ever bet any money on the outcome of any game, no matter whether Georgia was in it or not?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. Schroder: You can examine.

Recross examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Butts, you referred a moment ago to this Georgia International Life Insurance Company Stock.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know that at the date of that statement that stock was worth seven dollars a share?

A. No, sir; I did not know that.

Q. Did you know what it was worth?

A. No, sir. I know what I paid for it, sir.

Q. What?

A. Five dollars a share.

Q. Did you know that it is worth thirteen dollars a share now?

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, it is worth more than that.

[fol. 807] The Court: It's twenty-two dollars a share today.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. When did you sell it?

A. I don't know, sir. It was sold by Goodbody and Company in Athens, Georgia, I think.

Q. When?

A. It was—when, I don't know the date, sir.

Q. You made a nice profit on that, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir; bought it at five and sold it at something; I don't know what it was.

Q. You sold it around thirteen, didn't you?

A. I am not sure, Mr. Cody.

Q. Well, now, Mr. Schroder was trying to illustrate to the Court that by selling this stock you hurt your financial statement, but on the contrary, you helped it, didn't you?

Mr. Schroder: I don't believe counsel has stated what I was demonstrating.

The Court: Let's don't put it in that way. I think he can ask him questions, not in the form in which he asked it; I agree with you, Mr. Schroder.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Well, if the sale of that stock changed your financial condition, it bettered it; isn't that true?

A. Yes, sir; Mr. Cody,—

Q. That is all I wanted.

[fol. 808] Mr. Schroder: Let him answer your question.

The Witness: If you are trying to prove I am a poor business man, I am with you a hundred per cent.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Well, that is not exactly what I am trying to prove, Coach Butts.

A. Well—

Q. You said—you said on the witness stand that you are now insolvent.

A. That is not hard to find out, sir.

Q. Who was it that got you in this Orange River Groves deal?

A. Mr. Cody, the Orange River Groves, Incorporated, was started by a building corporation called Jones and Frederick in Coral Gables, Florida. I thought it was a good opportunity, and I would have to be frank with you in telling you that I put more into it then I expected in trying to protect people who had bought contracts in that company. I was unselfish in that.

Q. Now, when you—when you signed this financial statement that we are discussing you named four banks that you owed money to. You left out the Bank in Chicago. Was that Mr. Williams' mistake or yours?

A. Mr. Cody, I cannot be sure, but at that time I do not believe I owed the Bank in Chicago.

Q. What about—what about a bank in Knoxville? You left that out.

A. Mr. Cody, that loan was effected at a more or less [fol. 809] recent date and endorsed by a wealthy gentleman living in Knoxville, Tennessee.

Q. What about this bank loan at Bridgeport, Pennsylvania? You left that out. Is that Mr. Williams' mistake or yours?

Mr. Schroder: Is there any evidence that that was a loan outstanding at that time, or is Mr. Cody testifying again?

The Court: I will let him ask that, Mr. Cody; I will let him ask him if it wasn't outstanding, and Mr. Butts can say yes or no or he doesn't remember.

The Witness: Mr. Cody, I don't know why, but I will try to explain. This—I have a contract with a canning company in Bridgeport, Pennsylvania.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. For what purpose?

A. For the purpose of canning Coco-Colas in the Philadelphia area, and this loan, when arranged, was supposed to be paid from the income from the royalties that I would receive on each case of canned Coca-Colas, and I think it is one penny per case.

Q. But you did sign the Bridgeport loan?

A. Yes, sir; endorsed by Mr. Lewis Tose, T-o-s-e.

Q. Coach Butts, haven't you had a loan outstanding for several years and prior to the time this statement was prepared that was payable to the Northside Bank at Jacksonville, Florida?

A. That loan, Mr. Cody, is less—I don't know the date of the loan.

[fol. 810] Q. But it was prior to this financial statement, wasn't it?

A. I do not know, sir.

Q. Well if—can I ask you who endorsed that loan?

A. Mr. Lewis E. Wolfson.

Q. Don't you know that that loan had been outstanding for about a year before this financial statement was prepared?

A. Mr. Cody, I am not sure about date.

Q. As a matter of fact, Coach Butts, you owed considerable more money than is disclosed by this financial statement as of the date of that statement; isn't that true?

A. I am not sure. You seem to know more about it than I do, sir.

Q. Well, you should know more about it, though, shouldn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, since the date of this financial statement, which is July 17, 1961, you drew your salary from the University up until the time you resigned, they have paid you that, haven't they?

A. Yes, sir; they paid me through February of this year.

JOHN CARMICHAEL called as a witness on behalf of the Plaintiff, after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Will you state your name please, sir?

A. John Carmichael.

[fol. 811] Q. Where do you live.

A. 4392 East Brookhaven Drive, Atlanta.

Q. Speak as loud as you can so that counsel back here can hear you.

A. All right, sir.

Q. How long have you lived in Atlanta?

A. All my life; I was born in Atlanta, sir.

Q. What business are you in?

A. I am in the real estate, insurance and sales promotion business.

Q. Mr. Carmichael, do you know George Burnett?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you known him?

A. Since 1960.

Q. Have you had any business connections or dealings with him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Directing your attention to the period back to the time of September 13, 1962, were you and George Burnett connected in in any kind of business together?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state briefly what that type of business was?

A. It was a business that I owned. The name of the business was the Institute of Oral Hygiene. It was—

Q. Did that have to do with toothbrushes and—

A. It was a sales agency for the sale of a toothbrush sterilizer.

Q. Did you have an office for use in connection with that business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where was it located?

[fol. 812] A. At Number 72 Eleventh Street.

Q. That was here in Atlanta?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Prior to that particular association, had you been in any business association with George Burnett?

A. Yes; he had been working for me for about a year.

Q. In some other business connection?

A. Yes, sir. He had been working for me as an insurance agent for Foundation Life Insurance Company, which I was district manager for Foundation Life.

Q. You were the district manager for Foundation Life, and he worked for you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you get a leave of absence or something?

A. Yes, sir; and in the last part of June of '62, we both got a leave of absence from the company.

Q. Now, this Institute of Oral Hygiene, was that your company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Directing your attention further to the date of September 13, of 1962, do you happen to remember that date?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall approximately what time you arrived at your office on that date?

A. Well, I was a little late getting there that morning, usually got there about 9:00 o'clock, but that morning I had a dental appointment and I got there about 10:30.

Q. About 10:30?

[fol. 813] A. 10:30 or 10:35; somewhere right in there.

Q. Did you have in your offices there that you have referred to, an office that was more or less your office?

A. Yes, sir; I had an office.

Q. Private office?

A. Yes, sir; private office.

Q. With a desk and phone on it?

A. Right, sir.

Q. When you went into the office that morning, was George Burnett there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state to the Court and Jury just what you found with reference to George Burnett when you arrived at your office that morning?

A. Well, when I went in the reception room our secretary hadn't come to work, and she didn't come to work all day that day, but I walked on in the reception into my office, and Mr. Burnett was sitting at my desk, and he had the telephone to his ear, and when I walked in he put his finger to his mouth like this, and I turned around and walked out.

Q. Will you turn to the Jury so they can see?

A. I turned directly around and walked out.

Q. Will you show the Jury what you meant by the motion of your hand?

A. Well, he had the phone to his ear, and when I walked in, he took his finger and put it to his mouth like this, and I turned right around and walked outside the door, and I sat—there's a little secretary's desk right outside the door, —I had a seat there and started looking through the morning mail.

Q. Now, the secretary's desk that was just outside the door, I assume you mean the door of the office where he was seated at your desk?

[fol. 814] A. That's correct, sir.

Q. Approximately how far, now, from the desk where he was seated, was the secretary's desk where you went and sat down?

A. Well, it was about—actually two desks, wasn't over three feet apart, if you got down to measuring the distance between the desks, but there was a wall separating them and a door in the corner, so I guess if you had to walk around it, it would be six feet from one desk to the next desk.

Q. The door, then—

A. Six or eight feet.

Q. —was open in to the office where he was seated?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And so you were about six feet from—six or eight feet, walking through that door, to where he was seated?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe you stated there was no secretary there. Was anyone else in the office?

A. No, sir; not that day, no. She didn't work that day.

Q. Was there any sort of commotion or noise or disturbance going on?

A. No, sir; not at all.

Q. Now, approximately how long after you walked to the door where he was seated in the office and then turned and went back to the secretary's desk, about how long was it before anything happened with reference to you and George Burnett?

A. Well, I would say approximately five or six minutes.

Q. During that five or six minutes, was there any con-
[fol. 815] versation by George Burnett over the phone that he was listening in on?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was there anything said by George Burnett to anyone into the receiver of that phone?

A. No, sir.

Q. While—after you got there?

A. No, sir.

Q. What was the first thing, then, that was said by George Burnett after you sat down to that desk, and after you had gotten there?

A. Well, he called my name.

Q. And when he called your name, what did you do?

A. I got up and went into my office.

Q. Relate to the Jury what George Burnett said to you after you went into the office and the desk where he was seated?

A. He said: "John?"—and he called my name,—"John?" I said, "Yes". And I got up and went into the office. I said, "What is it, George?" And he just said, "I heard a conversation between Coach Wally Butts and Coach 'Bear' Bryant." He says, "Seems funny to me that one coach or athletic director would be calling another one before game time." And he said, "I made some notes about it." And he had these notes in his hand, and he proceeded to tell me a little bit about the conversation.

Q. All right, sir. Now Mr. Carmichael, were you in a position to where you could have heard anything that George Burnett would have said to, into that phone receiver, had he said anything?

A. Yes, sir; if he had said anything at all I would have heard it.

[fol. 816] Q. Now, this article of the Saturday Evening Post of March 23 states this, and I quote, with reference to what Burnett is supposed to have heard. Let me show you, Mr. Carmichael, this reproduction of the Saturday Evening Post article which states in the second column, on Page 81. "Suddenly,"—talking about Burnett—"he heard an operator's voice. 'Have you completed your call, sir?' Burnett stated. 'Yes, operator. By the way, can you give me the number I was connected with?'" Did you hear George Burnett make any such statement to any operator on the phone at that time?

A. No, sir; and he didn't make it.

Q. If he had, you could have heard it?

A. That's right, sir.

Q. The next thing I read from here is: "The operator supplied him with a number in Tuscaloosa, Alabama, which he later identified. Burnett—" Then, going on down—"Burnett then dialed Jackson 5-3536, the number he originally wanted. This time the call went through normally, and he reached a close friend and former business associate named Milton Flack." And it quotes Burnett as saying: "Is Wally Butts in your office now, Milt?" Burnett asked, and it quotes Flack as saying: "Well, he's in the back office making a phone call, I think. Here he comes now." Did George Burnett make any statement over that phone to Milton Flack, or anyone else, as stated in this Post article?

A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. If he had, could you have heard him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. This article comes down—no, it's on the first column, Mr. Carmichael, on Page 81 of this article, and states here, after referring to the claim that Burnett heard the oper- [fol. 817] ator say Coach Bryant was on the phone ready to speak to Coach Butts, th n— "Hello, Bear," Butts said." Then it goes down to say, "As Burnett listened, Butts began to give Bryant detailed information about the plays and formations Georgia would use in its opening game eight days later." After you started to talking with George Burnett, when he called you into the desk there where he was seated, did he tell you at that time, which was moments after it—after he had listened on this conversation, that Butts had given to Bryant detailed information about the plays and formations Georgia would use in its opening game eight days later?

Mr. Cody: Your Honor, I am going to object to this form of questioning. I think he can ask the witness what Burnett said, what he heard.

The Court: Yes, sir; I agree with you. I think you are leading your witness, Mr. Lockerman. I think you can ask him what was said, but you can't suggest to him what his answer might be. I sustain the objection.

Mr. Lockerman: All right, sir.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Will you state to the Jury just what George Burnett said to you as to what he had heard in the conversation that he claimed to be listening to?

A. Well, he said that Coach Wally Butts had called Coach Bear Bryant and that he had got hooked up in the conversation and that in the conversation Coach Butts [fol. 818] had said that some football player, and I have forgotten the name of the player because it didn't—don't strike a bell with me, was a great football player; and also the statement he made to me was that Coach Butts said that Georgia had two new coaches, and the Coach Bryant —they talked a few minutes, and Coach Bryant asked him if he was going to be home Sunday. Now, outside of that, there was nothing else particularly involved in it, except the general conversation which he admitted to me between the two coaches.

Q. General conversation about what?

A. About football in general.

Q. Yes, sir. And was that what Mr. Burnett told you at that time, moments after the conversation?

A. That's right, sir, except he did add a little bit more than that. He says: "It seems funny to me that an athletic director from one school would be calling another school before a football game." And he said, "You think we should bet anything on this game?"

Q. Who? Was that Burnett said that to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whether you thought that the two of you should bet anything on that game?

A. That's right, sir.

Q. That was his statement?

A. That was his statement to me.

Q. All right, sir; what did you say with reference to that?

A. I said: "Well, George, from what you tell me, it's nothing there to lead me to believe you would know who to bet on. Do you know who you'd bet on? Was there anything said to lead you to believe that there would be some favorite in the game?" And he said, "No". I said, "Well, [fol. 819] from what you tell me, I can't judge that either, so I think the best thing we should do is forget it."

Q. Was anything else said about that conversation until sometime, say, later in the afternoon of that day?

A. Not after that. There was nothing else said about it until about, oh, I guess roughly about 2:00 o'clock that afternoon.

Q. Were you still at the office about 2:00 o'clock, or 2:30 that afternoon.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What brought about something else being said about it, about 2:00 or 2:30 that afternoon?

A. Mr. Milton Flack came by the office.

Q. Let me ask you there, who is Milton Flack?

A. Well, he's a gentleman that was the President of Sterilray, and at one time Mr. Burnett had worked for him in the capacity of sales agent for Sterilray, for this same toothbrush sterilizer.

Q. Had you been—did you have some previous business connection with Mr. Flack, also?

A. Well, the only other business I had had with Mr. Flack was when Mr. Flack was hired in the Public Relations Department, United American Life Insurance Company while I was on the Board of Directors of that company.

Q. You were on the Board of Directors of United American Life Insurance Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. And he was hired as a public relations man for the company.

Q. All right, sir. Going back to that afternoon, then, on September the 13th, you indicated that Milton Flack [fol. 820] came to the office of Oral Hygiene. Relate what took place when he arrived.

A. Well, we talked for a moment or two, and then George, Mr. Burnett, rather, proceeded to tell Mr. Flack about the same thing he had told me that morning in regard to the conversation that he said he had heard between Coach Butts and Coach "Bear" Bryant, and he asked Mr. Flack the same question that he had asked me earlier in the morning. He say, "What do you think about putting a bet on the game?" Mr. Flack asked him about the same thing that I did, too, and told him that he didn't think there was anything to it, and that—he asked him if he knew which side to bet on, and he said, "No." And he said, "Well, I don't know either." And he told him just about the same thing I did, and told him he didn't see any way to bet on it, or wouldn't know which way to bet on it, and told him that he thought the best thing to do was to forget about it.

Q. And as far as you are concerned—

A. But—excuse me. He had also told him this, though, Mr. Flack told him that—he said, "What time was that call?" And he told him it was about 10:30 in the morning, and he said, "Well Coach Wally Butts was up at the office of Communications International this morning."

Q. Is the Milton Flack telling George Burnett that Coach Butts was at the office of Communications International that morning?

A. That's right, sir.

Q. Had—up to that moment, had George Burnett said anything to you or to Milton Flack indicating that he had any idea—

[fol. 821] Mr. Cody: Your Honor, that is the same objection. Now, Mr.—

The Court: Yes, sir; I think you are leading your witness, Mr. Lockerman. I sustain the objection.

Mr. Lockerman: All right, sir.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Had George Burnett—will you state whether or not George Burnett had said anything to you or to Milton Flack—

Mr. Cody: Same objection, Your Honor; I think—

The Court: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. What, if anything, did George Burnett say to you or Milton Flack concerning where Wally Butts was?

A. Well, he didn't know where Wally Butts was, I don't believe; if he did, he didn't say anything to either one of us about it, and, in fact, Mr. Flack is the one that told him where Coach Wally Butts was that morning.

Q. All right, sir.

[fol. 822] (Atlanta, Georgia; Tuesday, August 13, 1963, 9:30 a. m., in Chambers.)

EXCEPTIONS AND RULINGS THEREON

The Court: Mr. Cody, I believe you stated you wanted to make certain exceptions in the record, and I think it would be better to make them outside, and I want you to preserve every right you have got, and I thought this would be the proper time.

Mr. Cody: I have understood from the very start, the way it should be done so as not to ask any questions that prejudicial to this Plaintiff, I mean, the question, the answer to which would be inadmissible.

The Court: All right sir; you just proceed where we can get it on the record.

Mr. Cody: We wanted to show, Number one, by Mr. Bolton, J. D. Bolton, that telephone calls to the extent of twenty-eight hundred dollars were made by the Plaintiff and charged to the University of Georgia, which calls were made between October, 1961, and February 1, 1963.

The Court: Is that—

Mr. Cody: That these telephone calls which were charged to the University were not known to the University until an investigation was begun in the latter part of 1962, that [fol. 823] these calls involved people of questionable character, one of which was a woman by the name of Evelyn Lindsay, and that in excess of three hundred of these calls were to her.

The Court: Well, now, are you through?

Mr. Cody: That is one time; yes, sir.

The Court: All right, sir; the Court feels that, and it is the ruling of the Court, that the fact that these calls were charged to the University are irrelevant to the issue at hand. Now, I have permitted you to— The Court has permitted you to ask questions in regard to Mr. Scoby.

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

The Court: I can see no relevancy in the calls to E. C. Lindsay.

Mr. Cody: Judge, I didn't think this morning we were going to get into a discussion of—

The Court: I was just making the ruling for the record. I thought it would be for the record, the Court's ruling would be on the record.

[fol. 824] Mr. Schroder: May I make a comment?

The Court: Let me get cleared up with Mr. Cody. What are you attempting to show here, Mr. Cody?

Mr. Cody: That none of these telephone calls were in connection with University business, and to charge these calls to the University—

The Court: You are simply attempting to show that the calls were charged to the University which were personal calls?

Mr. Cody: Right.

The Court: Well, I don't think that is relevant to the issue, and I rule it out.

Mr. Cody: All right, sir.

The Court: Go ahead.

Mr. Schroder: Your Honor—

Mr. Cody: Then, in that—

[fol. 825] Mr. Lockerman: May I make this statement for the record also, that if you have any names of suspicious characters, as you refer to, other than Evelyn Lindsay and Mr. Scoby, that I think the record ought to show who you have reference to other than those.

The Court: That is the reason I asked him the question, the basis of his contention that they were admissible and he said they were charged as calls to the University, personal calls, and I put my ruling on that basis. Now, if you have got another basis for them, let me hear from you.

Mr. Cody: Now, with respect to all of these matters which I am about to mention, I take the position that I have a right to cross-examine the Plaintiff on this subject in order to develop other evidence along the same lines and to substantiate the correctness of the records. Now, Number—maybe I should go into a little more detail.

The Court: All right, sir; go back to whatever detail you want.

Mr. Cody: —into the discussion of the admissibility.

The Court: Go into anything you want to.

[fol. 826] Mr. Cody: I want to prove by Evelyn Lindsay that she has traveled with Coach Butts on numerous occasions, some of which are to football games made by the University of Georgia, that he visited her in her room, that on two occasions he was seen drunk, that he paid her expenses on these trips and exhibited her to members of the football team, associating with her in their presence. I want to offer proof that on the night of Tech-Georgia, the Georgia-Georgia Tech game, 1961, in Atlanta, following that game Coach Butts had dinner with this woman and spent the night with her at the residence of Mr. Leon Froshin here in Atlanta.

The Court: Well, I would say on that point, I don't think specific acts of misconduct are admissible, entirely disconnected with the libel action. I don't believe that a man has to come in and defend every act that he has ever committed during his whole life.

Mr. Cody: I think I understand that.

The Court: And for that reason I exclude the evidence and rule it out.

Mr. Lockerman: And, Your Honor, for the sake of the record, let me say this also in behalf of Mr. Butts.

[fol. 827] The Court: I don't want to defend every act I have ever done.

Mr. Lockerman: According to the testimony given by Evelyn Lindsay that he referred to, in each instance she said that whenever Coach Butts visited her in her room at any hotel or any other place, there was someone else present. Also, with reference to the—

Mr. Cody: Judge, let me interrupt him just a minute.

The Court: I am assuming everything he says is correct or could be correct, and I still think it is inadmissible and I rule it out.

Mr. Cody: I don't think we ought to get into a discussion in the brief time we have allotted here in the brief time—

The Court: I am letting you get your record for any appeal.

Mr. Lockerman: I do want the record to show that we take the position that the factual statements that he is making, that are incorrect in a number of instances as indicated, I know that he is not deliberately making incorrect statements, but I think if he checked the depositions carefully he would find that some of these statements of what he expects to prove are incorrect.

[fol. 828] Mr. Cody: I don't want to get into a discussion with him about what his position is.

The Court: That's all right. I want you to get your record straight, and I will rule on it.

Mr. Cody: I want to show that—

The Court: I might state this, that under the case of Kessler versus Best, which is a New York case which you cited, I read numerous cases which hold to the contra, and I believe that the majority of the cases, and also the case of Cox versus Strickland in the 101 Georgia is authority for my ruling.

Mr. Cody: I am not going to touch on the reasons for admissibility until I get through with these instances.

The Court: Go ahead.

Mr. Cody: I think I should state on this last point that we would undertake to prove by Mr. Hendry Ogdon the fact that Coach Butts did get drunk on the evening of the Tech-Georgia game in 1961 and spent the night with Evelyn Lindsay at this place. He, as well as Evelyn Lindsay, would be witnesses in that respect.

[fol. 829] The Court: All right, sir. I overrule—I exclude the evidence as being irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Lockerman: Let me say this; we take exception to that statement.

Mr. Cody: I understand you—

The Court: You don't need to take exception if I am ruling on it.

Mr. Lockerman: All right.

Mr. Cody: We expect to—we want to be permitted to prove that Coach Butts on a number of occasions during the time he was coach or athletic director visited the Domino Lounge in Atlanta in company with Evelyn Lindsay and several others, and also another nightspot called the Copa Cabana, at which places liquor was served and floor shows were put on, including—which shows included the so-called strip tease artists.

The Court: I rule that evidence out for the same reason as being irrelevant and immaterial to the issue involved.

[fol. 830] Mr. Cody: We expect to prove not only by the records of the airlines but the records of the University of Georgia that Coach Butts traveled with Evelyn Lindsay to various places, Birmingham, Miami, Nassau, Chicago, Los Angeles, Lexington, Kentucky, one or two where they did not travel together there but on some traveled back together, that he bought her ticket and paid for it, and paid her expenses, and in most of those cases charged the airline transportation charges to the University of Georgia.

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor, Mr. Butts is here, and I think he can state into the record—

The Court: I don't think he need state anything. Let's just rule on the facts.

Mr. Lockerman: That is not a true statement of fact.

The Court: Are you through?

Mr. Cody: No, sir. In connection with those—several of those trips, the airline tickets which were charged to the University of Georgia are under a fictitious name, an assumed name was used for Evelyn Lindsay, namely, E. C. Smith and E. Smith, and subsequently when he was confronted by one of the University officials with respect to these particular transactions he admitted his indiscreetness, that one of those trips was to Nassau with Evelyn [fol. 831] Lindsay, he and Evelyn Lindsay alone, and that he paid the entire expenses of that trip, and in connection with one of those trips he put Evelyn Lindsay up at the Phoenix Hotel in Lexington, Kentucky, arranged for her to be registered under the name of E. C. Lindsay and wife, and that the University of Georgia, all of that was put on University of Georgia bill and paid by the University of Georgia without knowing what it was for, who it was, that Coach Butts subsequently paid that bill and admitted that this involved Evelyn Lindsay, stating also that he, having already testified in this case by deposition, he doesn't know anybody by that name, E. C. Lindsay. We would expect to show by Dr. Bolton—by J. D. Bolton that previous to that he had instructed Mr. Bolton when confronted with this bill to send the bill to E. C. Lindsay at 50 Biscayne Drive, Northwest, Atlanta—Northeast, which is the address, the address of Evelyn Lindsay. I believe that's all on that point.

The Court: All right, sir. I rule that that evidence is irrelevant and immaterial to the issues involved.

Mr. Cody: I think I should mention for the record, Your Honor, that we would expect to prove those facts by the airline records. I don't think I mentioned that, by the hotel records themselves, two witnesses for the—two employees of the hotel having given their depositions and identifying the records, and we would also prove a part of those statements, records, by Mr. J. D. Bolton and also by the cross-[fol. 832] examination of Mr. Butts. If Your Honor thinks

I should at this time name the two employees, the employees of the Phoenix Hotel, I will put that in.

The Court: You do what you want to.

Mr. Cody: One of them is named Anderson, Mr. Anderson, and Mr. Bachelor, who have testified by deposition in this case and have identified these records. And by Mr. Tracy of the Delta Airlines who identified the transportation tickets and has also testified by deposition.

The Court: All right, sir. You ready? Is that all?

Mr. Cody: Yes.

The Court: All right, sir, I rule that evidence irrelevant and immaterial to the issues involved.

Mr. Cody: We expect to show by Evelyn Lindsay that she sent to California by plane in 1960 to the Georgia-California game, and that Butts paid for that trip, and visited her in her room while she was there at the hotel. We expect likewise to show by her that the Georgia-Auburn game in 1962, Butts paid her expenses to Columbus, Georgia, where she stayed at the Royston Hotel, and he paid her expenses there and transportation expenses. We expect to show by her that in Jacksonville in November, [fol. 833] 1962, at the Georgia-Florida game she stayed at the Robert Myers Hotel, and Butts paid her expenses there, and that he visited her in her room during her stay there, and also that he was—he was on one occasion doing that weekend drinking heavily. We expect to show by two of the University officials that Coach Butts bought from Boomershine Motor Company in Atlanta a new Pontiac and gave it to Evelyn Lindsay, which incidently embarrassed some of the University officials in that the retention title contract on that car was recorded in Athens, and a record of it published in one of the publications that are issued in Athens. I don't know the name of that publication; I don't have it at the moment now, but it was published, and we would expect to show he was confronted by one of the University officials about his indiscreetness in doing that, and that he told that official that he did not buy this car for Evelyn Lindsay but simply helped finance it temporarily for her brother. In that connection we would expect to show that insofar as we have been able to ascertain that she has no brother. We expect to show you—prove that Evelyn Lindsay has a private unlisted telephone number which Coach Butts has called on many occasions in excess of a hundred times during the period I mentioned heretofore, all of which calls were charged to the University and included in this twenty-eight hundred dollars. We also expect to show that Coach Butts has visited many times in Evelyn Lindsay's apartment on Biscayne Drive while he was coach and while he was athletic director at the University of Georgia, and made this known to others who talked about it, and caused common gossip to be spread about it, which has embarrassed the University of Georgia.

[fol. 834] The Court: All right, sir, is that all?

Mr. Cody: I believe that's all.

The Court: All right, sir, I rule that evidence is irrelevant and immaterial to the issues involved. All right, sir, anything further?

Mr. Cody: Let me see. I think I have—like also, in connection with this trip to Lexington, Kentucky, I expect to show that on the return to Atlanta from that city that Coach Butts was with Evelyn Lindsay and also on that plane were five football players on the University of Georgia team, and on that visit none of Coach Butts family was on that trip. We would expect to show by Coach Butts and by Evelyn Lindsay that in the purchase of the Pontiac, in addition to the Pontiac automobile he purchased for her he bought her a mink stole. Now, I want to—I want to perfect the record, Judge, if such need be done, with reference to these seven or eight questions I wanted to ask Coach Butts yesterday.

The Court: Let me rule on that. I rule on that last statement, what you intend to prove, that it is irrelevant, and immaterial to the issues involved. All right, sir, go ahead.

Mr. Cody: With reference to these several questions?

[fol. 835] The Court: No, sir; I haven't heard those.

Mr. Cody: I wanted to prove yesterday with Coach Butts on cross examination that he refused to answer these seven or eight questions, I may be wrong in the number, which I showed to Your Honor yesterday and which had to do with the time when he was in Atlanta round September 13th or whether or not he made any calls to Coach Bryant, undertaking, of course, to show by this evidence that he was evasive and—

The Court: I think I am familiar with the questions, and I—

Mr. Cody: That's right; you looked at them.

The Court: —informed you at that time you could ask him those questions. My recollection was that you stated that you wanted to show he would not answer the questions at the time the deposition was taken—

Mr. Cody: That's right.

The Court: —and my recollection was that he was advised by his attorney not to answer the questions—

Mr. Cody: That's right.

[fol. 836] The Court: And I couldn't see where any benefit would be derived. I assumed that if a party is represented by counsel, and those questions were not answered at that time, but I told—I informed you on yesterday that you could ask the questions again. If you are making any real issue on the point, I will permit you to ask Coach Butts why he didn't answer the questions or refused to answer them, and I think it comes back to the same thing.

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor, let me make this statement into the record. The questions that Mr. Cody is stating that Coach Butts refused to answer, in which he did refuse to answer, were questions that were put to him on May 3, 1963 where there was pending before Your Honor certain motions—

The Court: Some interrogatories.

Mr. Lockerman: —with respect to the admissibility of the questions that he was seeking the answer to. Thereafter the Court ruled—

The Court: That he did have to answer.

Mr. Lockerman: —that he did have to answer, and that I have in my hand here the deposition that Mr. Cody resumed of Coach Butts on July 16th, 1963, at which time he put those questions to Coach Butts, and Coach Butts did [fol. 837] answer those questions, after Your Honor had ruled that he should answer them, and for him to come back now and seek to ask him questions, and he refused to answer on advise of counsel on May 3rd, but which he did answer on July the 16th, certainly doesn't illustrate anything.

The Court: Yes, sir. That was a disputed legal point, and I can't see how you could impeach your witness when the matter was—the matter was to be determined by the Court and was later determined by the Court, and thereafter the questions were answered.

Mr. Joiner: Of course, even if their legal position was correct—

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Joiner: —Plaintiff had his right to waive the benefit and give the whole truth of the circumstances.

The Court: Mr. Joiner, if it was a legal question that had to be determined, I would certainly think witness should follow the advice of his counsel.

Mr. Cody: It is still a question for the Jury to determine whether or not it is trying to be evasive.

The Court: No; no, sir.

[fol. 838] Mr. Lockerman: That's right.

The Court: I don't think that is a proper method of impeachment or discrediting.

Mr. Cody: It is not under impeachment.

The Court: What is it under? What is the reason for asking it?

Mr. Cody: His demeanor on the witness stand. The Jury has a right to consider the trustworthiness of a witness.

The Court: That is what you are getting back to.

Mr. Cody: That's right.

The Court: Same thing that I said. I don't think that is proper, and I rule that out.

Mr. Cody: All right. We expect to—we will expect to prove by Coach Butts that he has testified that he does not know any person by the name of E. C. Lindsay. This, of course, comes under the heading of impeachment.

Coach Butts: Your Honor, I didn't say anything—

[fol. 839] The Court: We are just on a legal issue, Coach. Haven't we been over—didn't you go over that when we first started? Didn't you make—

Mr. Cody: We discussed it privately in front of Your Honor at the Bench.

The Court: I thought you started on that today.

Mr. Cody: No, sir.

The Court: All right, sir, anything further?

Mr. Cody: I would—I would propose to ask Coach Butts if he—if he is acquainted with—with his own reputation.

The Court: No; that is not the proper way to prove reputation.

Mr. Cody: Well, I believe that covers it.

The Court: The law sets out how you can prove reputation, and there are three specific questions—three specific questions, yes, and that is the way you can prove it, and that is the only way. I will let you prove it that way as the law provides, but you can't ask of the party, nor can [fol. 840] the party testify to his own good reputation.

Mr. Cody: Well, in order to perfect the record I would like to be permitted to ask him the further questions as to whether or not his reputation is good or bad. That is in the same category.

The Court: Well, I exclude that as being an improper question.

Mr. Cody: That's all I have.

The Court: All right, sir, anything further?

Mr. Cody: No, sir.

JOHN CARMICHAEL, having resumed the stand, testified further as follows:

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Mr. Carmichael, when Court adjourned yesterday, I believe we were discussing the events of the afternoon of September the 13th, that took place in your office, the Institute of Oral Hygiene, after Mr. Flack arrived. I believe you had stated to the Jury that Mr. Flack told Mr. Burnett [fol. 841] about the fact that Wally Butts had been in the office of the Communications International that morning; is that correct? Have I stated that approximately correct?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. All right, sir. Now, I believe you had also testified Mr. Burnett went over with Mr. Flack the same things that he had told you immediately after he had hung up the receiver from listening in on that conversation he claimed he heard; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Did he tell Mr. Flack substantially the same thing that he told you—had previously told you?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And what was the decision made, if any was made, about what to do, if anything, about that matter?

A. Well, Mr. Lockerman, I don't know whether you'd call it a decision was being made or not, but Mr. Burnett asked Mr. Flack approximately the same thing he had asked me in regards to betting on the game.

Q. Speak so counsel can hear you.

A. He asked Mr. Flack what he thought about placing a bet on the game, and Mr. Flack said, in brief, "Well, there's nothing there that would lead me to believe which side to bet on, and I think we had better not make a bet on either," or words to that effect, which is about the same thing I told him.

Q. Was that, in substance, what took place about the matter after Mr. Flack arrived?

A. That's right, sir.

Q. Of course, as you have stated, that was on September the 13th. Now, directing your attention to the date of [fol. 842] September the—the Monday morning following the game on September the 22nd, was anything said between you and Mr. Burnett on that day concerning this matter, and if so, what?

A. Well, on Monday morning I think that Mr. Burnett, to the best of my recollection, about the only thing was said was he said: "Well, John if we had bet on Alabama Saturday, we'd have won." That was Monday after the game had been played, now.

Q. Yes, sir. Now, from that date, the Monday following the game on the 22nd, did anything else occur about that matter between you and Burnett, or you and Flack, or you and anyone else until the date of January 30, of this year, 1963?

A. No, sir.

Q. Will you please relate to the Jury what occurred concerning this matter, if anything, on that date?

A. On January 30?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Well, let me back up just a minute, Mr. Lockerman, with your permission, and say—

Q. All right, sir.

A. —we closed this business of the Institute of Oral Hygiene the latter part of October, and in November Mr. Burnett went back to work for the insurance company, and in December I went back to work for the insurance company, but Mr. Burnett was not working for me at this time. He had been put in another district before I went back, and I went back in December, and I didn't see too much of Mr. Burnett during the month of January because he wasn't working for me, but on the morning of January the 30th I went into the office of Foundation Life Insurance Company and I walked into the agency room

[fol. 843] and Mr. Burnett was in the agency room on telephone by himself. When he hung up the telephone he turned to me and he said, "John," he said, "I have got myself in an awful trap, and I don't know what to do about it." I said, "What do you mean?" He said, "Well, a few weeks ago I was talking to Bob Edwards,"—Bob Edwards is the Division Manager for South Georgia for Foundation Life, and he says, "I was talking to Bob Edwards, and I happened to mention to him that I heard a conversation back in September between Coach Wally Butts and 'Bear' Bryant, and he said he's a good friend of Johnny Griffith, or Coach Griffith, and I didn't know that he was going to run over there and talk to him, but," says, "he's went over there and talked to him about it, and next thing I know," he said, "They had me down talking to some of the Georgia officials, including an attorney and President of the college," and he says, "I've got myself in a trap here, and I don't know what to do about it."

Q. Now, following that conversation on that date with George Burnett, did you, yourself, do anything about this matter that day or that evening?

A. Well, I asked George that morning, I said, "George," when I was talking to him, "I don't know what you have told these people, but I want to ask you a question." I said, "did you say that I was there when you were supposed to have heard the conversation, or did I listen in on the telephone in the conversation?" And he said, "No, I did not". I said, "Well, I'm glad of that, because if you said I listened to the conversation, I'd have to say it's a lie." And that was, in essence, about all that was said about it there.

Q. Well, let me ask you this. Then, just to get down to the question that I have in mind, did you communicate [fol. 844] with Wally Butts at any time that day or that evening about the matter?

A. Well, that night I went home, and I told my wife about what had happened, and I says, "I just don't think it's right—"

Q. Well, now, don't go into conversation with your wife.

A. Okay. Well, anyway, the facts of the case is that I decided to call Coach Wally Butts and tell him about it.

Q. Well, let me interrupt you about it and ask, did you know Coach Wally Butts?

A. I have been an acquaintance of the Coach. I have never been a friend of the Coach, but I have known Coach in a casual way for about fifteen years.

Q. Who introduced you to Coach Wally Butts?

A. To the best of my recollection it was Coach Frank Leyhe from Notre Dame.

Q. About fifteen years ago?

A. Yes, sir; about fifteen years ago.

Q. All right, sir. Now did you—did you reach Coach Butts on the telephone on the evening of January 30, or any time during that night?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Where did you reach him? Where was he?

A. Well, I called his home in Athens and he wasn't there, and I finally, you know, they told me Coach was off on a trip, and he was in Philadelphia, I believe he was in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and I called Philadelphia, and he was in a hotel in Philadelphia but he wasn't in when I called, and I left my number for him to call me back, and he did that night.

Q. He called you back that night?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 845] Q. What conversation took place between you and Coach Butts when he called you back?

A. Well, I didn't know whether Coach Butts would know who I was or not, at first, so I told him over the phone who I was, and I asked him if he remembered me, and he said: "Yes, I do, John." And so then I told the Coach what Mr. Burnett had told to me on the morning of September the 13th, when he received the telephone call, and I told the Coach what Mr. Burnett had told me that morning on January 30th, what he had done, and the Coach said to me, he said: "Well, John, I appreciate you calling me, but," he said. "I'll tell you this," he said: "I am sure there is nothing to it, because I don't know whether I called Coach Bryant or not, but I will tell you this," he said, "I talk to a lot of coaches, and I don't remember making a call on that particular day, but if I did," he says, "I will assure you there was nothing to it, because I would never do anything to hurt Georgia." And he thanked me for calling him, and it was a very short conversation. It only lasted three or four minutes at the most, and that was all there was to that conversation.

Q. Had you previously, at any time, said anything to Coach Butts about this matter prior to that time?

A. I hadn't even seen Coach Butts prior to that time.

Q. As a matter of fact, did you know Coach Butts socially, or did you ever visit his home, or he in yours?

A. I have never been to his home in my life, never met any members of the family in my life; he has never been to my home, and I have never been out with him socially. [fol. 846] Q. Have you ever had any business transactions with Coach Butts?

A. One time in my life.

Q. Will you state what that was?

A. I believe it was in 1958, I organized a company, a corporation, rather, in the State of Georgia, known as the Coffee-Break Sales & Service Company. I believe it was a corporation; I believe that was the name of it. It was a business that was—it was organized for the purpose of selling coffee and hot chocolate out of vending machines in small locations, and I went to about twenty people who were prominent people, and I got these people to put two thousand dollars or fifteen hundred dollars apiece into this corporation to buy stock into it.

Q. Will you name some of the people?

A. Well,—

Mr. Cody: I don't think that is relevant, Your Honor.

The Court: Yes, sir; someone brought out about the Coffee-Break Company yesterday; I will let him go into it.

Mr. Cody: All right, sir.
The Court: Go ahead.

A. (By the witness) Dr. Chris. McLoughlin, who was killed in the Paris crash, was one of the people.

Q. Was he a practicing M. D. in Atlanta?

A. He was a practicing physician here in Atlanta. He was also, I believe, President of either the National Asso-
[fol. 847] ciation of Georgia Doctors' or an association of some kind. Mr. Wylie Moore, Jr. was one of the people in this. I was in Athens; I went to see Coach Butts, and Coach—I explained the situation to Coach Butts, and he said: "This sounds like a very good idea," and I says, "Of course, we'd love to have you come in. We believe it will make some money, and we believe that you could probably help us up this way, if we come up this way to distribute our machine." And he purchased some stock in the company. Another gentleman was Mr. Robert Hogg. I don't remember all the people, but I will tell you it was a pretty good bunch of people we had in it.

Q. I see, and he put some stock in it?

A. He bought some stock in this corporation.

Q. I believe there's been some testimony about a refunding of the money to Coach Butts reference to that stock; will you state what that is?

A. That's correct.

Q. What did you have to do with that?

A. Well, I was President of the corporation, and, of course, the people that put their money in this corporation, they didn't know anything about the machines. They put it in there because I told them it was a good deal, I believed, and I had a contract with a company that was manufacturing these machines, and they guaranteed to me to do certain things, and they did not live up to the specifications they were guaranteed to me for, so I broke my contract with the manufacturer on the machines after about three months' operation. I saw it wasn't going to do the job, and I called the stockholders' meeting, and I refunded every penny of money to every stockholder that had purchased stock in this corporation, even though we had spent some of the money. I personally refunded every penny [fol. 848] of the money to every stockholder in the corporation that had put a penny in it, and gave Coach Butts and everybody else involved in it a check for the full amount they had put in the corporation.

Q. Now, that was some personal loss to yourself?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right, sir. That included, of course, as you say, Coach Butts?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you testified a moment ago that you were introduced to Coach Butts about fifteen years ago by Coach Frank Leyhe of Notre Dame. Will you explain to the Jury how Coach Leyhe happened to introduce you to Coach Butts?

A. Well, at this time I was operating a restaurant on West Peachtree about a block from the Biltmore Hotel, and Coach Rupp and Coach Leyhe and a lot of other coaches who brought their teams to Atlanta, needed a good place for these people to eat, for the players to eat, and I was feeding quite a few football teams, and as a matter of fact, I was feeding most all the high school teams when they had their tournaments here in Atlanta. Some of the personnel I knew. Sid Scarborough, who was Director of Athletics, I believe, for the City of Atlanta, and a lot of these people eat with me, and I would feed the whole teams, and it happened that Coach Frank Leyhe and some of his players there, and I was feeding them dinner or lunch, I don't remember whether it was dinner or lunch, but anyway, I think I had met Coach Frank Leyhe, of course, when he came in and made arrangements for it, and we were serving these players a meal and Coach Butts came in and Coach Leyhe asked me if I knew Coach Butts. I said, "I have never had the pleasure." I shook [fol. 849] hands with him, and if I remember right, Coach Butts sat down and had dinner with them.

Q. All right, sir. Now, you have read the article in the Saturday Evening Post that is the subject matter of this law suit, haven't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state to the Jury whether or not there is anything in that article that George Burnett told you he had overheard during the conversation with—that he listened in on, which he claims he listened on?

A. Well, the only thing that I can see in that article that even comes close to what Mr. Burnett told me was he did mention the fact, of course, that he had heard the call. He did mention the fact that—there was a mention that he made to me that some football player was a great football player. I do not remember the name of this player, however. And also the fact that Coach Bryant asked Coach Butts if he was going to be home on Sunday. And outside those three things, there is nothing in that article that appears—pertains to the conversation that Mr. Burnett had with me that morning.

Q. I believe you stated that all that Burnett said about the—about Sunday, the Sunday matter, was that Coach Bryant asked Wally if he was going to be home on Sunday?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. And is that the extent of what he said about that?

A. That is exactly it and nothing more.

Q. All right, sir. Speaking of people that you have discussed this matter with, have you at any time ever [fol. 850] discussed this matter with a lawyer here in Atlanta by the name of Pierre Howard?

A. No, sir; I have not.

Q. You know Mr. Howard?

A. Yes, sir; very well.

Q. But you have never discussed this matter with him?

A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Carmichael, going back to the date of September the 13th when George Burnett called and asked you to come to the desk where he was seated where he had been listening in on this phone, I believe you testified yesterday that he had some notes on the desk there in front of the two of you; is that correct?

A. That's correct. I sat down beside the desk and he had some notes he had in his hand.

Q. Did you see those notes?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. Do you think you would recognize those notes if you saw them again?

A. I believe I would, sir.

Mr. Lockerman: May I have the notes that were introduced as Defendant's Exhibit No. 12?

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. I hand you what has been represented in this case by Mr. George Burnett to be the notes that he claims that he made during that telephone conversation while he was actually engaged in listening to it. Now, they have been put into evidence by the Defendant and marked as Defendant's Exhibit No. 12. I ask you, please, sir, to look at them [fol. 851] carefully and state whether or not those are the notes that George Burnett had immediately following the telephone conversation when he called and asked you to come in and you discussed the matter with him?

A. No, sir; these are not the same notes that Mr. Burnett handed me.

Mr. Lockerman: All right, sir; you may cross-examine.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Carmichael, I believe you started out our testimony by saying you were in the real estate insurance business?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. You don't have a license issued by the Georgia Real Estate Board, do you?

A. No, sir; But I own twenty percent of the stock in a real estate development company and I am vice-president of the company. It is well rated in Dun & Bradstreet.

Q. Well, answer my question.

A. I believe that puts me in the real estate business.

Q. Answer my question, then, without arguing.

A. I do not have a real estate license.

Q. You don't have an insurance license, do you?

A. Yes; I do.

Q. Issued by the—

A. State of Georgia.

Q. Insurance Commissioner?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that issued to you?

[fol. 852] A. It was issued January of this year, sir. It's signed by Mr. Bentley; I don't remember the exact date.

Q. Do you remember when your deposition was taken?

A. I don't remember the date; no, sir.

Q. About in June of this year?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state whether or not this is a correct transcript of the question and answer that was transcribed in this deposition?

Mr. Schroder: What page are you reading from?

Mr. Cody: Page 8.

Mr. Schroder: Sir?

Mr. Cody: Page 8.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. "Did you see the notes which Burnett said he made of the conversation?" Answer: "Yes, sir." Question: "Did you examine them?" Answer: "I did not take them in my hand, no, sir. He sat back down at my desk and I sat down in a chair next to it, and he was telling me—he laid these notes out and he was telling me the things I just mentioned. He laid the notes down on the desk. They were laying there and I did see them, but I did not pick them up and look at them."

[fol. 853] A. That's true, sir.

Q. Well, if you didn't look at them—

A. I did look at them.

Q. You testified you—

A. I said I didn't take them in my hand. I saw the notes, sir.

Q. But you said; in answer to the question that I just read you, that "I did not pick them up and look at them."

A. I also said—

Mr. Schroder: That is what he's saying now.

The Court: That's all right; you can bring it out on redirect examination.

A. (By the witness) I also said I saw them in the deposition, sir, but I didn't say I picked them up in my hand and looked at them.

Q. What was the name of this business you had on Peachtree?

A. It was Peach Blossom Inn, sir.

Q. Did you even operate a business known as "The Gypsy Room?"

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was that?

A. It was at two locations. When I originally opened it, it was on the Clermont Hotel.

Q. On Ponce DeLeon Avenue?

A. Yes, sir. And then I closed the business in the Clermont hotel, and I moved to Pine Street, to Number 26 Pine Street.

Q. Well, now, let's back up just a minute. What sort of a business was that?

[fol. 854] A. It was a supper club, sir.

Q. Where you served liquor?

A. Well, we served whiskey; yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, what relevancy could that have to this case, whether he operated a supper club, or whether or not he did or did not sell whiskey.

The Court: Well, he went in, Mr. Schroder, to the type of businesses he operated, and the fact—if he had certain football—I will let him continue with that line, if he can connect it up.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Did you have a floor show in that business?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Coach Butts ever visit you at that place of business?

A. I don't believe he did; no, sir.

Q. You are not sure?

A. Well, I couldn't swear to everybody that's ever been in there, but I never saw him there.

Q. You don't remember seeing him there?

A. No, sir.

Q. Where was it you said you moved that business to?

A. I moved to Number 26 Pine Street, between the Peachtrees, but I kept the same name. The business operated under the same name.

Q. Did you ever operate a business by the name of The Circus Lounge?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Where was that?

[fol. 855] A. It was at the same location. The building caught on fire at The Gypsy Room, and we remodeled the business, remodeled the building, and when we did we put a different motif in it and called it The Circus Lounge.

Q. Is that the business on Pine Street between the two Peachtrees?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. Is that business in operation now?

A. I believe somebody is operating it; I don't know who.

Q. You don't have anything to do with it now?

A. No, sir; I never have been in it since I left.

Q. Did you ever operate the Wieuca Inn?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that your business?

A. Yes, sir; I owned it.

Q. Did you ever operate a business on the Marietta Highway known as the Casa Rio?

A. On the old Marietta Highway. Yes, sir.

Q. That in business now?

A. No, sir; I don't believe it is.

Q. Did you ever operate a business known as the Rhythm Ranch?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. You ever heard of Rhythm Ranch?

A. Vaguely. I have heard the name; I don't even know where it's at.

Q. You say it was about fifteen years ago that you met Coach Butts?

A. I would estimate it to be about that; yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever— Did you ever get in any trouble, Mr. Carmichael?

[fol. 856] Mr. Lockerman: If Your Honor please—

The Court: That is not the proper way to prove that, Mr. Cody.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Have you ever been convicted of a crime?

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor, please, I don't think that is the proper way.

The Court: No, sir. Let the Jury go out.

(Whereupon the Jury retired from the court room at 10:44 a.m.)

The Court: Mr. Cody, my recollection of the law in regard to impeachment, I think you can ask him whether he's ever been convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude—

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

The Court: —and if he admits he has, then you can, or whatever the particular crime, you can refer to the particular crime. I don't know what the nature of your question is, what crime you are talking about, and then if he admits it, then there is nothing further; if he denies it, you can introduce a certified copy, if such is in existence.

[fol. 857] The Witness: Your Honor, may I ask a question?

The Court: No, sir. May I see that when—

Mr. Schroder: I have never seen it before either, Your Honor.

The Court: But a nolo contendere is not admissible.

Mr. Cody: It is not a nolo contendere, Your Honor.

The Court: And it has to be a crime involving moral turpitude, which would be a crime charged for more than a year and a day.

Mr. Cody: It involves moral turpitude.

The Court: I don't know what the law of Ohio is in regard to this particular crime which he was charged with.

Mr. Lockerman: He'd have to prove that.

Mr. Cody: It's a charge—it's a charge of larceny. Our courts have held that it involves moral turpitude, a charge of larceny.

[fol. 858] The Court: Well, under the Ohio statute, did —was it a misdemeanor or was it a felony?

Mr. Cody: Well, there are—we can furnish you some Ohio authorities on the subject.

The Court: Well, it's difficult for me to keep up, certainly, with the Ohio law.

Mr. Cody: I understand that.

The Court: I just don't know. Until I am convinced—you know the rule; it's got to be a crime which would involve more than a year and a day.

The Witness: It wasn't, Your Honor.

Mr. Cody: Doesn't have to be a felony, Your Honor. Your Honor is mistaken about the length of time of the service of a sentence as having any connection with moral turpitude. The question—the question involved is simply one of whether it does involve moral turpuitude, and according to the decisions in Georgia, larceny is—

The Court: The crime with which he is charged has got to be a crime which involves a sentence of more than a [fol. 859] year and a day. Now, if there is a plea of guilty, or if there is a conviction, then it is admissible. I agree with you.

Mr. Cody: Well, there is a conviction, as Your Honor will see by that record, but not a sentence of a year and a day. I think Your Honor is mistaken.

The Court: You don't have to have a sentence, but the crime with which he is charged must have been a crime which was punishable by more than a year and a day.

Mr. Cody: I have an Ohio decision, Your Honor, if you'd like to take a look at it.

The Court: Let me hear it.

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor, may I be heard on that just a moment?

The Court: Yes, sir; I will let you be heard on it, too.

Mr. Lockerman: The only way he can prove a statute of Ohio is to have a certified copy of it, properly certified, of the law.

The Court: I know that. I don't know whether he is required to go that far or not on proving statutes. If he was proving the statute which he was suing on, I agree with [fol. 860] you, but what I am concerned with is whether or not this particular crime involves—was a crime involving moral turpitude.

Mr. Cody: Under the Georgia law, Your Honor, it would be, and we—

The Court: We don't have such a law under the Georgia law. We have petty and grand; this is petty.

Mr. Cody: Well, it's larceny under our law. This is where he is giving evidence, and this is where the Courts of this State have to decide whether it involves moral turpitude or not. I offer it for that.

The Court: What I want to know, is the Ohio statute of this crime which is charged here, did it involve—could he have been sentenced to more than a year and a day under that crime. That's all I want to know.

Mr. Cody: That's not the—that is not the purpose of offering the evidence in this respect.

The Court: What is it?

Mr. Cody: We say under Georgia law it involves moral turpitude.

[fol. 861] The Court: Sir?

Mr. Cody: We say that under the Georgia law it involves moral turpitude, in which event he can be impeached on proof of conviction. Now, that is the purpose for which we are offering it.

The Court: I agree, if you can show that it involves—it was a crime involving moral turpitude, under the law of Ohio, it would be impeachive.

Mr. Lockerman: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: You can prove—you can prove the law of Ohio by the decisions of the Ohio Courts.

The Court: Read me what the Ohio Courts say.

Mr. Cody: In the case of Burch, in re Burch, which is in the 54 Northeastern 2d., at Page 803. "If a crime is one involving moral turpitude, it is because the act announced by the statute offends the generally accepted moral code of mankind."

And here is the definition under Ohio law of moral turpitude, in the Bostwick case, quoted in the 181 Northeastern 1095. "Moral turpitude is defined as an act of baseness, violence or depravity in the private social duties which man owes to his fellowman or to society in general, con-

[fol. 862] trary to the accepted and customary rule of right and duty between man and man."

Moral turpitude is otherwise defined by another court as "Anything done contrary to justice, honesty, principle and good morals."

The Court: Well, a misdemeanor could be that, but it's still got to be a felony.

Mr. Cody: It could be but I think Your Honor is wrong about the felony. If Your Honor should be right on that question, then it wouldn't be—then it wouldn't be admissible.

The Court: That's right; that is the point I am raising.

Mr. Cody: But I think Your Honor is mistaken about the distinction between a felony and a misdemeanor because a misdemeanor could involve moral turpitude.

The Court: No, sir; not under the Georgia law.

Mr. Cody: I think this does involve moral turpitude.

The Court: That is what I want to know, what is the statute; what is the statute of Ohio? How much could one who was convicted of that crime in Ohio? What was the [fol. 863] maximum sentence which such violator would have received.

Mr. Cody: I can't answer that question. I don't have the statute before me, but I take the position that under the Georgia law that the conviction of this crime involves moral turpitude, which conforms to our impeachment statute. That is the position that I take. It is the Georgia law that prevails, and not the Ohio law, on what is moral turpitude.

The Court: You are bringing in a certified copy of a conviction in Ohio—

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

The Court: —for larceny, for a particular kind of larceny. In Georgia, if that had been simple larceny, if I recollect my criminal law correctly, it would be a misdemeanor, but it would not be a method of proving moral turpitude, it would not be admissible. But if it had been grand larceny, it would be admissible. The question I am asking is, this particular crime to which this certified copy of the Cincinnati statute, I mean, Ohio, in Cincinnati, was that a crime for which the violator could have received more than a year and a day?

Mr. Cody: I am not prepared to say.

[fol. 864] The Court: Well, that is the controlling point to me, and until it is cleared up, I—

Mr. Cody: May I take a look at the 94 Georgia Reports, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: Do you have 94 Georgia Reports here? Do we have a Georgia Reports up here?

The Court: There is a particular charge, Mr. Cody, that quite often we give in the case. I have given it many times. The Code Section provides how you may impeach a witness. That is one of the methods, but it's got to be a crime involving moral turpitude; it can't be a misdemeanor,—

Mr. Cody: That's right.

The Court: —and I believe under the full faith and credit clause we do have to recognize what the Ohio State —Ohio Courts held was a crime involving moral turpitude. We have no such crime by this particular name in Georgia, if I remember my Georgia criminal law correctly.

[fol. 865] Mr. Cody: This is the case of Coleman against the State in 94 Georgia, Page 85, which holds that a conviction of a witness of larceny is admissible in evidence to impeach him.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: Doesn't make any difference where the conviction was. That is our position. Now—

The Court: Which larceny?

Mr. Cody: It doesn't matter. Our position is that it doesn't matter.

The Court: Well, I have got to be convinced that the Ohio statute under which the violator was charged would have to be a crime involving moral turpitude; otherwise, I think it would be reversible error, serious error.

Mr. Cody: I understand Your Honor's ruling about—

The Court: If you can show me what the Ohio statute is—I understand I'm supposed to take judicial cognizance, but I will be frank, I don't know what the Ohio law is on this point. If you can aid me in knowing what the law is [fol. 866] in Ohio—I assume that, I don't know whether Martindale or some of the—I know the statutes of Ohio are available at the State Capitol.

Mr. Cody: We will take an opportunity to look at it so as to be on the safe side.

The Court: I will let you put this witness back up if you can show me some authority during the noon hour; otherwise—

Mr. Cody: I have one other question to ask this witness after the Jury gets back.

The Court: Let the Jury be brought back in.

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor, before the Jury come in, will you instruct the Jury to disregard the question he asked about conviction?

(Whereupon the Jury returned to the courtroom at 10:59 a.m.)

The Court: Members of the Jury, just prior to the time you were directed to leave the courtroom certain questions were propounded in regard, on cross-examination, as to whether or not the witness had ever been in trouble or had ever been convicted. At this time I would direct that you disregard any such statement, or any such evi- [fol. 867] dence, completely from your mind until such time —until a later date.

Mr. Cody: May I proceed, Your Honor?

The Court: Sir?

Mr. Cody: May I proceed?

The Court: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Carmichael, did I understand you, in your direct testimony, to say that you have never discussed this so-called Butts-Bryant affair with Mr. Pierre Howard?

A. That is correct, sir; I have never discussed it with him. I know—

Q. Did you ever—did you ever tell him that you bet some money on the Georgia-Alabama game of 1962?

A. I never told him, or nobody that, because I didn't bet any money on it.

Q. I see.

The Court: Any further questions?

Mr. Cody: That's all.

[fol. 868] Redirect examination.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Mr. Carmichael, do you have any interest one way or the other in this law suit?

A. No, sir; not at all, sir.

Mr. Lockerman: You may come down.

The Court: Any further questions of Mr. Carmichael?

Mr. Cody: No further questions.

The Court: You may step down.

(Whereupon the witness was excused from the stand.)

The Court: Mr. Carmichael, do not leave, you will be required, probably, to come back on the stand, so remain in the anterooms.

Mr. Carmichael: Thank you, sir.

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Schroder: If it please the Court, we have perhaps [fol. 869] two witnesses whose testimony we plan to introduce from the stand in the event it might become necessary after the rebuttal, so, with that in mind, I will not call them at this time but will proceed with the reading of the deposition which we started last Wednesday, I think.

The Court: Now, I believe, Mr. Schroder, under the Rules, that if you—if they are to contradict some evidence which has been presented now, you will be required to put them up now.

Mr. Schroder: I understand, but they have the rebuttal. I don't know what they are going to put up in the way of rebuttal—

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: —but I may have witnesses that may rebut their rebuttal, in other words, surrebuttal.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: So that is the reason I am not putting them up at this time. Of course, if there is nothing for them to surrebut, they won't have to go on at all.

The Court: It's got to be strictly in rebuttal.

[fol. 870] Mr. Schroder: Exactly.

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, we will resume reading the deposition of Frank Graham, Jr., the author of the article in the May 23 issue of the Saturday Evening Post. Of course, Mr. Graham's deposition was being taken for discovery and/or use as evidence by us, but we are not adopting him, of course; he is an agent of the opposite party.

The Court: He is an adverse witness.

Mr. Schroder: Adverse witness; yes, sir.

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Schroder: I have forgotten where I stopped. Do you have any idea?

Mr. Lockerman: I think it is Page 55.

Mr. Schroder: Sir?

[fol. 871] Mr. Lockerman: 55.

Mr. Schroder: Well, I will ask a couple of questions so we can get back in the middle of the stream where we were when we reached last Wednesday. The question at the top of Page 55, Mr. Cody, Line 5.

FRANK GRAHAM, JR. testified further by deposition as follows:

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. What do you have in your notes pertaining to that sentence that I have just read?

A. I just have—I asked him about that and he didn't elaborate. There was nothing more for me to add, so I just said "No quick kickers," and referred back to the affidavit.

Q. Skipping on down to the third from the last paragraph in that first column, there is a quotation which reads:

"'Butts also said that Rakestraw (Georgia quarterback Larry Rakestraw) tipped off what he was going to do by the way he held his feet. If one foot was behind the other it meant he would drop back to pass. If they were together it meant he was setting himself to spin and hand off. . . .'" What is the source of that quotation?

A. That did not come from Burnett. Burnett was trying to recall other things that had happened and Flack and Howard told me the first morning one of the things they thought they remembered him saying was something about Rakestraw, and this was it.

[fol. 872] Mr. Schroder: Of course, the article itself, Your Honor, says that Burnett said that. Now, the point here was that he now says it didn't come from Burnett; that was after the thing was published.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Will you please refer to your notes and read me what you have in your notes pertaining to that which I have just read?

A. Yes. George Burnett later said, when the article came out, that he had not recalled overhearing this remark.

Oh, he mentioned in there—he did mention that there was reference to what he called pass patterns or the passing game, was discussed by Wally Butts.

Q. Well, I am—

A. I have no specific thing on Rakestraw. This was told to me by Flack and Howard in the office that morning, and it was to be checked against the notes, if we got them.

But Burnett heard something about Rakestraw, but he does not recall this exact—but he does not recall the phrase as Flack and Howard mentioned the details.

Q. When did you discover that Burnett denied making that quotation or denied overhearing that?

A. He said he did not recall overhearing this. I learned that after the article was published.

Q. What was the source of that information?

A. The source of that information was a reporter for the Post named Oberdorfer, who was a native of Georgia, and who talked to Burnett after the article came out, who [fol. 873] was down there in Georgia at the time the article was published.

Q. Oberdorfer says that he talked to Burnett after the article was published?

A. Yes.

Q. And Burnett says that that quotation, insofar as his recollection is concerned, was erroneous?

A. So far as—he could not recall having heard that.

Q. Was there anything else that Oberdorfer told you that he learned from Burnett after—

A. No, I didn't speak to Oberdorfer directly. This came through Davis Thomas, the managing editor, who talked to Oberdorfer.

Q. Did Mr. Thomas indicate to you that Oberdorfer had told him anything else pertaining to his conversation with Burnett after the article was published?

A. Yes, that—there was a—he said that during the conference in the room when he disclosed this information to Johnny Griffith, he had remembered Johnny Griffith saying, "We knew somebody had given our plays to Alabama, but we had no idea it was Wally Butts."

Q. Will you pinpoint that for me in the article?

A. Yes, it is on Page 82. There is a heading there that says "Suspicions Confirmed."

Q. In the right-hand column at the bottom?

A. Yes, lower right-hand column, and it is in that second paragraph, where he said, "But we had no idea it was Wally Butts."

He said later that he had thought that Griffith had said that, and Griffith denied having said this sentence and Burnett said, on recollection, it was—he believed it to be

Edwards, the other man in the room at that time, who [fol. 874] was very close to Johnny Griffith.

Q. So that Burnett has, in effect, denied that quotation, on further recollection?

A. That's right, on further recollection he thinks that Edwards actually said that.

Q. Who was Edwards?

A. He was the friend of Johnny Griffith who took Burnett to see Griffith.

Q. Did you meet Edwards when you were in Atlanta?

A. No.

Q. Had you ever met him?

A. No, I haven't.

Q. Have you ever talked to him?

A. No, I haven't.

Q. Going back to Mr. Oberdorfer again, did Mr. Thomas indicate to you that Oberdorfer, after talking to Burnett, since the article was published, had Burnett told Oberdorfer anything else was incorrect in the article?

A. No, not that I know of.

Mr. Schroder: Passing on, Mr. Cody, to the bottom of Page 62, Line—

Mr. Cody: Why not read what is in between.

Mr. Schroder: I will pick what I want to read, and—please the Court, I understand I have a right to read what I want to read and he can read whatever he wants to read. [fol. 875] Mr. Cody: Well, I think the rule—

The Court: Sir?

Mr. Cody: I think the rule requires him to read it, read all the evidence on a particular point.

The Court: No, sir; that is not the law. Many times in patent cases we have certain parties that will read the other party's depositions, and they can just read what they want. It is available to you.

Mr. Cody: May I show the Court one rule on this subject?

The Court: Yes, sir. Let the Jury go to the Jury room. Just let them go to the Jury room.

(Whereupon the Jury retired from the courtroom at 11:10 a. m.)

Mr. Cody: I think it is rule 26 (d) (4), Your Honor, which provides that if only part of the deposition is offered in evidence by a party, an adverse party may require him to introduce all of it which is relevant to the part introduced.

The Court: Yes, sir. Well, you can read—you can read [fol. 876] any part of the deposition that you want to that he omits to read.

Mr. Cody: I realize that—

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: —but I was relying on this rule.

The Court: What rule?

Mr. Cody: 26 (d) (4) which requires that we can require him to read it.

The Court: What rule are you citing?

Mr. Cody: Rule 26 (d) (4) under the use of depositions. If only part of a deposition is offered in evidence by a party, an adverse party may require him to introduce all of it which is relevant to the part introduced and any party may introduce any other part. We have both.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: We can require him to do it or we can use it ourselves, but on this particular point he's left out—

[fol. 877] The Court: I think you can come back and read it yourself, Mr. Cody.

Mr. Cody: All right, sir.

The Court: Let the jury be brought back in.

Mr. Schroder: Passing on, Mr. Cody, to Page 62, at Line 22.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. In the next sentence you have written, "But he recorded all that he heard." Is that what Burnett told you?

A. He said he made constant notes. After he—he had listened for several minutes to this and he said he was amazed as it went on and finally he pulled over a note pad which was on the desk, took out a pencil and began to make notes. But for several minutes he had not been making any notes.

Q. My question is related to the language that you have used, sir, that I have just read, "But he recorded all that he had heard." Is that what he told you or is that your own language?

A. That is my own language.

Q. He gave you the impression, though, that he recorded everything that seemed important?

A. Well, he recorded—

[fol. 878] Q. He recorded in writing everything that he considered to be important?

A. After he started to jot down notes, yes.

Mr. Schroder: Mr. Cody and Mr. Lockerman, I am passing to Page 66, Line 4.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Below the caption "Putting the pieces together," in the second column of Page 81, what was the source of your information for that full paragraph, beginning, "In the next few hours . . ." and ending " . . . from the field"?

A. Part of it was Furman Bisher. I would say most of the paragraph is based on information given me by Furman Bisher, and the last sentence was " . . . outspokenly bitter about his removal from the field."

Q. What were you saying about that, sir?

A. That came from both Bisher and from Pierre Howard, talking about Georgia football.

Q. Was that information given to you—at least that part of the information which you say Bisher gave you—was that given to you at the meeting with Bisher in the Manhattan Hotel in New York?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you make notes of it?

A. No, I was just told that by Bisher.

Q. The way the paragraph reads, it would indicate that this was coming from Burnett, because the lead sentence says:

"In the next few hours Burnett tried to piece together what he knew of Georgia football." But that is not what he knew of Georgia football, was it?

[fol. 879] A. That was to fill the reader in on the background.

Q. But that is not what he knew of Georgia football, what follows—

A. I assume that he knew that, too, because in various conversations in the presence of Pierre Howard and Milton Flack, et cetera, this information was mentioned several times. I believe it was mentioned in the Heart of Atlanta Motel, a little bit of the background of Wally Butts, et cetera.

Q. I understood you to say that much of that was given by Furman Bisher.

A. But this was checked, too. I checked the "native of Milledgeville," et cetera. On that, also, there was a story which appeared in the Atlanta Journal on Saturday, which was the 23rd, written by Furman Bisher, headlined "Butts to Resign At Once, Hopes For Job With Pros." And this information was also in here, about Bisher—

Q. When did you get that?

A. On the Saturday that I was in Atlanta.

Q. In that paragraph that I have just referred to, there appears this language:

"Then prominent University of Georgia Alumni abruptly soured on him, . . ." Who gave you that information?

A. Howard.

Q. Did he say what prominent University of Georgia Alumni he had in mind?

A. No.

Q. Did he use the word "sour" or was that your language?

A. The word may be mine, "soured," but it was substantially that, that they had begun to think that he should be removed.

Q. And Bisher—

[fol. 880] A. Yes, and Bisher told me that.

Q. He confirmed that when he was in New York?

A. Yes.

Q. Who did you say it was that told you about Mr. Butts being outspokenly bitter?

A. First it was Howard and then Bisher.

Q. Did you make any notes of your conversation with Pierre Howard?

A. No, just casually I jotted down a name.

Q. Do you have anything in your notes which would indicate the information that is contained in that paragraph which I have just read?

A. About him being replaced?

Q. The whole paragraph.

A. The whole paragraph?

Q. Yes.

A. I have it in this clipping here, some of that information.

Q. Will you let me see the clipping, please?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, there is nothing in that article about his being bitter or about his being—

A. No, I said some of the information which is contained in this paragraph is in that clipping.

Q. Let's pass on to the next paragraph, please, Mr. Graham, which refers to a speculation in Florida orange groves.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Wherein it is stated, "Butts had lost over seventy thousand dollars." What is the source of that information?

A. The first—first, I was told in the room by Howard and Flack, who were talking about this. They told me they believed it was over eighty thousand dollars. Later, I asked [fol. 881] Bisher on that, about that, and Bisher gave me this figure.

Q. That that amount of cash had actually been lost?

A. That is what he said, yes.

Q. You didn't investigate it any further?

A. No.

Q. Passing on to the next paragraph, beginning "That afternoon Burnett told Flack what he had overheard." Do you have a note on that?

A. I don't know. No, just from talking to Flack and Burnett.

Q. You mentioned—

A. I think that is—

Q. You mentioned the name Carmichael earlier in your testimony, in connection with Burnett and Flack. Did they tell you that Carmichael was also aware of this alleged overheard conversation?

A. They did, and they said he wanted absolutely nothing to do with it, and that he was angry that they had reported the conversation; that they thought—Mr. Carmichael thought the conversation should have been kept secret.

Q. What do you have in your notes supporting what you have just testified to?

A. Nothing. I made no notes on that.

Q. You made no notes on Carmichael at all?

A. No.

Q. Sir?

A. No.

Q. In that same—but you did know that Carmichael had been present—

A. Yes.

Q. (Continuing) —at the time this conversation was intercepted?

[fol. 882] A. I had heard that, and they didn't want to talk about it. They said, "We don't want to mention Carmichael."

Q. No, sir, my question is this: Burnett and Flack told you that Carmichael had been present?

A. I asked them if he was present.

Q. At the time of the conversation?

A. At the time of the conversation. And they said, "John Carmichael does not want anything to do with this. In fact, he is angry that George told Edwards about this."

Q. Did they tell you that he was present at the time it was overheard?

A. No.

Q. Did they tell you that he knew anything about it?

A. They told me about this—I believe Howard mentioned it once, that—he said that—I think it was Pierre Howard who told me that Carmichael had called Wally Butts about this later on.

Q. I am speaking about the time of the interception or so-called interception of the telephone call. Flack and Burnett discussed Carmichael with you?

A. I brought up the name.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. The name of Carmichael, because Flack told me before that these three men had been friends for some time, Flack and Carmichael, Burnett, they knew each other, and so on, and I said, "What about John Carmichael, did he overhear any conversation? Was he in the room?" And they both said that Carmichael didn't want to be brought in on this, and so—and he was angry at Burnett.

Q. Well, he mentions Carmichael in his affidavit, does he not?

[fol. 883] A. He does.

Q. That he told Carmichael about the contents of the so-called intercepted conversation?

A. Right.

Q. When you asked them had Carmichael been present when the conversation was overhead, they didn't deny that he had been present?

A. They didn't deny it.

Mr. Schroder: Page 77, Line 22.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Now, you, having known, as you have testified to, that Mr. Carmichael was in on this at the beginning, and that it has been included also in Burnett's affidavit, that he discussed this with Flack and Carmichael together, and you also having been informed that Carmichael, I believe you said, was mad about it—

A. Yes.

Q. It didn't occur to you to check this story out with Carmichael?

A. No, I didn't want to talk to Carmichael.

Q. Why?

A. They said he didn't want to be brought into it and wouldn't talk about it.

Q. You made no effort to contact him at all, even though you had reason to believe that he might disagree with the whole thing?

A. There was no reason for me to think he would disagree with what he overheard. He was supporting a man that he knew.

Q. But you didn't consider that for the Curtis Publishing [fol. 884] Company's good you ought to interview him, too, just to check it out?

A. No, I didn't think it was necessary, because according to what they told me, he would have denied it—

Q. And you knew that when you wrote the article, that he would have denied it?

A. I knew he would not talk to me.

Q. You said he denied—

A. No, I corrected the word "denied." I said he didn't want to talk about it.

Q. And you made no effort to get in touch with him?

A. No. I came back after I had gotten the affidavit.

Q. That was on a Saturday that you came back?

A. Yes.

Q. You arrived in Atlanta when?

A. On a Wednesday evening.

Q. So that you were there for two and half days?

A. Yes.

Q. And you knew about Carmichael on the first day that you had the meeting in Howard's office?

A. I knew the name Carmichael.

Q. You knew the name John Carmichael when you took the affidavit from Burnett?

A. Yes.

Q. Until this day you have never checked him out?

A. Never have.

Q. Did you tell the people with Curtis when you came back to New York about Carmichael?

A. I showed them the affidavit and I said that Carmichael didn't want to play any part in this.

Q. Did you indicate to them that you learned that from Carmichael?

[fol. 885] A. No, no: I told them that Burnett told me.

Q. Did they agree with you that Carmichael shouldn't be interviewed before the article was written and published?

A. They didn't ask me to.

Q. But you told them about him?

A. Yes, I told them—the name Carmichael had originally been mentioned by Dave Thomas to me.

Q. As being with both Flack and Burnett on the day that the conversation was supposed to have been overheard?

A. As being with them.

Q. And that you had been told by Flack and Burnett that he would not in effect go along with them?

A. Right, that he wanted no part of this and insisted on being left out of it.

Q. They knew that before the story was published, the Post, you told them about that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On the top of column 3, or the third column on that page, there is the sentence reading:

"The Georgia team was composed chiefly of unsensational sophomores."

What is the source of your making that statement?

A. I wrote "The Georgia team is composed chiefly of sophomores." One of the editors put in that word and apparently it is in reference to the previous sentence," " . . . with an effective attack built around a sensational sophomore quarterback named Joe Namath." And there was no player on the Georgia team that could be described in any sense as sensational, as this Joe Namath of Alabama was.

Q. Who was the editor who inserted and used that word in the article?

[fol. 886] A. Either Roger Kahn or Davis Thomas.

Q. The next sentence:

"Various betting lines showed Alabama favored by from 14 to 17 points." What do you mean by "betting lines"? Was that your language?

A. Yes, the odds which were in the newspapers before the game.

Q. Did the newspapers refer to them as betting lines?

A. Yes, I have been—often seen that in connection with football games.

Q. In connection with this article, I mean, sir. Do you have any notes on that?

A. Well, I have the fact that it was favored. Yes, I have here 11 to 17-point underdogs. I later checked—

Q. Do you mind if I see that note?

A. Yes, it is on the very top right-hand side.

Q. Where is it?

A. On the top left-hand side.

Q. I am sorry. You have written here, "11-17 point underdog."

A. Yes.

Q. Did you get that out of a newspaper?

A. Yes, I got it from various newspapers, I checked it out, and I asked down there before—I believe I asked Howard about the odds, and he thought 11 would be a little understating it. It wasn't that close. He thought 14. Then I had seen 14 in another paper. So I used 14 to 17 points.

Q. But you have referred in your article to that being a betting line.

A. Yes, that is what it is.

Q. Well, is it in the paper that way?

A. I believe it was.

Q. Sir?

[fol. 887] A. I believe it was.

Q. But you don't have any note to substantiate that?

A. No. That is what the papers generally refer to it as.

Q. The next sentence in that same paragraph:

"If a man were to bet on Alabama he would want to be pretty sure that his team could win by more than 17 points, a very uncertain wager when two major colleges are opening the season together and supposedly have no reliable line on the other's strengths and weaknesses."

Is that your language?

A. That is my language.

Q. What do you mean by it? What is the significance of that?

A. The significance is that, just as it says—

Q. Well, what are you suggesting there?

A. I am suggesting that George Burnett overheard a rather extraordinary and unethical conversation, and certainly there would be—in such a story you could suggest certain motives.

Q. Go ahead. What motive are you suggesting here?

A. I am suggesting here that somebody bet on the game, I don't know who. But people won money on the game, people lost money on it.

Q. Let's get down to brass tacks. Are you suggesting that either Butts or Bryant bet on the game?

A. I have no means of knowing whether they did or not.

Q. That is not my question. Are you suggesting that?

A. No—

[fol. 888] Q. Are you attempting to suggest to the reader that this was a reason for this or motive—

A. No, I am not suggesting that. I am just taking into consideration motives which could lead to the passing of information.

Q. Motives as applied to whom?

A. Anyone. I have no idea. I mean if I were writing this story, this would be one of the questions which would be asked, what a person reading the story about passing information would want to know about all the background on the game, and this certainly belongs in a story of a game about which there was a very questionable conversation.

Q. Well, it is your thinking, of course, because it is your language, and it was backed up by your thinking when you wrote it.

Now, is it your position that you didn't mean to suggest or indicate that either Butts or Bryant was betting on this game?

A. I didn't mean to accuse. I am just putting in this information. And this is background on the game. If a man were to bet on Alabama—

Q. Without using the word "accuse," just "suggest." Were you suggesting to your readers that maybe that was the motive behind this telephone call?

A. I am suggesting that this could be.

Q. Are you suggesting that it is?

A. No. I have no idea what the definite motives for these men were behind the telephone conversation.

Q. Obviously, you do not. But are you suggesting what they might be?

A. I am putting forth one of the suggestions of—[fol. 889] Mr. Lockerman: Line 14.

Mr. Schroder: Go ahead; I don't have to say "Sir."

A. (by the witness) I am putting forth one of the—a suggestion as to what could be one of the motives, for anyone passing or getting information on a football game.

Q. So that you are suggesting—

A. I am not suggesting—

Q. This is a motive?

A. Or even a motive.

* * * * * * *

FRANK GRAHAM, JR., testified further by deposition as follows:

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. The quotation further down in the column which you attribute to Bryant, "The only chance," et cetera, what is your source of that information?

A. That was a newspaper article in an Atlanta paper which I found in the library.

Q. Do you have that quoted in your notes?

A. Yes.

Q. May I see it, please?

A. It is on the upper left-hand page.

Q. You don't remember what paper it was?

A. No.

Q. I don't believe you refer to it there in your notes.

A. No.

[fol. 890] Q. And the next paragraph, you use the language—

A. It would be in the Atlanta Constitution.

Q. Are you through?

A. Yes.

Q. In the next paragraph you have written:

"Coach Bryant (he neglected to wear a black hood) snapped every trap."

Is that your language?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you mean by it?

A. I meant that he had information which gave him an advantage and these boys were in a sense walking right into a trap. A coach with a strong team—which a coach with a strong team had set.

Q. What does the "black hood" refer to?

A. I said the game itself would have been enjoyed most by a man who gets kicks from attending executions. It was the kind of a game which for instance in boxing would be referred to as a pig-sticking, a one-sided game in which one team had no real chance.

Q. Did you see the game?

A. No.

Q. Where did you get your information about it?

A. I read the Atlanta Journal and Constitution in the days before and after the game.

Q. Did you read the quotation from Coach Griffith to the effect that Georgia lost the game because they didn't block and didn't tackle?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Where is that in the article?

A. I don't believe it is in the article. I remember reading that. That was a very typical coach's statement after the game.

Q. You didn't think of putting that in and acquainting [fol. 891] your readers with what the coach thought about losing the game?

A. Oh, here, I put—

"Asked about the game by reporter Jim Minter, he said: 'I figured Alabama was about three touchdowns better than we were. So that leaves about fifteen points we can explain only by saying we didn't play any football.'"

Q. Did you read the quote I just gave you?

A. No, I think this was the one. I may have, but I don't recall it. This is the one that I—

Q. And you have a quotation from Jesse Outlar of the Atlanta Constitution:

"Every time Rakestraw got the ball he was surrounded," etc., et al.

You have here that Jesse Outlar was the—I mean that he wrote in the Sunday Journal?

A. He writes generally for the Constitution, but on Sunday the Constitution is not printed.

Q. What do they call the Sunday paper?

A. The Journal, that is what I saw.

Q. That is what you saw?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that taken out of context or do you have his full quote? Do you have his full quote in your notes?

A. I have the quote. I wrote it down—

Q. Let's put it this way: Did the Curtis representative named—I believe you said Oberdorfer.

A. Oberdorfer, yes.

Q. Did he interview Jesse Outlar after this article was published?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know whether he told the representative of the Post that Outlar says he was misquoted?

[fol. 892] A. No, I don't.

Q. The next—

A. Let me—I will try to come across that.

Q. I will wait on you.

A. Yes, I have it here.

Q. What does it say?

A. Jesse Outlar in the Sunday Journal. It is on the top left-hand side there.

Q. Mr. Oberdorfer, to your knowledge, hasn't talked to Outlar?

A. No.

Q. At least it hasn't been related to you?

A. Not to me, no.

Q. The next full paragraph, there is this sentence:

"Georgia could do nothing right, and Alabama nothing wrong."

Where did you get that information?

A. Well—

Q. Was that your own language?

A. That is my own language.

Q. Where did you get the information?

A. From talking to—from reading the account of the game and from talking to Pierre Howard, who saw the game—heard of the game—from Mr. Beddow, because he and Howard were talking about the game when I was in the office and I asked them what had happened in the game.

Q. We have already discussed the interview or the quotation from Jim Minter and Coach Griffith in the next paragraph:

"I figured Alabama was about three touchdowns better than we were. So that leaves about fifteen points we can explain only by saying we didn't play any football."

[fol. 893] A. Right.

Q. Did it ever occur to you that that might be the reason for the score?

A. I would say that is a typical coach's statement after a game.

Q. I say did it ever occur to you that that might have been the reason for the thirty-five to nothing score?

A. It might have been, but the other information that I had here tended to discount that.

Mr. Schroder: Dropping to the bottom of Page 91, Mr. Cody, at Line 24.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. The next paragraph, Furman Bisher is quoting End Mickey Babb as follows:

"'The Alabama players taunted us,' end Mickey Babb told him. 'You can't run eighty-eight Pop (a key Georgia play) on us,' they'd yell. They knew just what we were going to run, and just what we called it.'"

Was that taken from an article in the paper by Bisher?

A. No, he gave that to me in a telephone conversation.

Q. He did?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have a note of that telephone conversation?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the date of it, please?

A. That was on Friday, the—it was the Friday after [fol. 894] Washington's Birthday, exactly a week later, which should be March—

Mr. Strubing: February 29th—.

The Witness: Yes—no, it would have to be March 1st, wouldn't it?

Mr. Strubing: Yes, that's right, March 1st. The 28th was Thursday. There were only 28 days this time.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Mr. Bisher called you in New York and I assume that he was in Atlanta.

A. Yes, he was.

Q. He told you that he had interviewed Babb since he had seen you in New York?

A. Yes.

Q. And this is what Babb told him?

A. Yes.

Q. You made this note, which I will read:

"They taunted us, you can't run eighty-eight Pop on us, they would yell. They knew just what we were going to run and just what we called it."

Q. In your notes you have underscored "Eighty-eight Pop." What significance does that have?

A. It was the name of a play which should go in quotation marks or in italics in the article.

Q. And this is word-for-word what Bisher gave you over the telephone?

A. That's right.

Q. He didn't say Babb said anything else other than [fol. 895] what you have put down?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. You would have recorded it, if he had told you?

A. Yes. I didn't write down everything he said to me—

Q. I know, but when he was quoting from someone you wrote that down?

A. When he was quoting, that is what I wrote down.

Q. The next paragraph includes a quotation from Sam Richwine, the trainer.

A. Right.

Q. "And Sam Richwine, the squad's trainer, told Bisher: 'They played just like they knew what we were going to do. And it seemed to me a lot like things were when they played us in 1961 too.'"

That is exactly as Mr. Bisher gave you over the telephone from Atlanta on Friday, March 1st?

A. That is what I have written.

Q. You have that written down the same way that you have the other?

A. Yes.

Q. May I see it, please?

A. Yes.

Mr. Schroder: Passing over to Page 96, Line 21.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. What is the significance of the quotation John Logue got from Wally Butts, "Potential is the word for what I saw"?

A. Wally Butts was involved in this and the only quote that I can find in a newspaper after the game from Wally Butts was this one, because the story concerned Wally Butts, and I wanted a remark from him about this game, [fol. 896] whatever he said, and this was the—

Q. But you used the language preceding that quote:

"Only one man in the Georgia camp did not despair that day."

What did you mean by that?

A. Everybody else seemed pretty down about what happened. Wally Butts was looking to the future.

Q. You indicated that you did want a quotation from Wally Butts as to his feelings after the game?

A. Right.

Q. You knew where he lived, didn't you? You knew he lived in Athens?

A. I knew he lived in Athens. I quoted these players right after the game, themselves, and I wanted a quote, and this was the one that was in the newspaper.

Q. Say that again. You did what?

A. I said I wanted a quote from Wally Butts, who was obviously implicated in something which we considered to be an amazing and, let's say, unethical conversation, and I wanted to know what he said about the game directly afterwards, and I found it.

Q. You said you took these quotes from football players right after, but Babb didn't give you a quote—

A. No, not Babb. I wanted Butts.

Q. Richwine didn't give you one right after?

A. No, he didn't.

Mr. Schroder: Dropping down to Line 13.

[fol. 897] By Mr. Schroder:

Q. All right, sir. Have you ever talked to Wally Butts about this whole thing?

A. No, I haven't.

Q. Have you ever talked to Mr. Bryant about it?

A. No.

Q. So far as you know, has Curtis Publishing Company ever had either one of these gentlemen interviewed as to whether this was all true?

A. No, because obviously we knew if this information was brought to them, they would immediately deny it, and, of course, they subsequently have.

Q. Just as in the case of Carmichael?

A. Well, Carmichael plays no part in this thing in the sense that Butts and Bryant do.

Q. You mean as to the truthfulness of the whole thing?

A. You just asked me a question about Butts and Bryant.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. And I said to ask them about this was immediately to get a denial, and, of course, they have.

Q. But before you published this story, or the Post published the story, it didn't interview either of these men, so far as you know?

A. No.

Q. And didn't interview Carmichael?

A. No,

Q. The next paragraph has to do with the whole matter weighing heavily on George Burnett. Do you have notes covering that?

A. I have notes on George Burnett, who told me the matter has been—had weighed heavily on him for a long time and he was worried and upset about it and that is [fol. 898] why he originally told his story to Edwards.

Q. Will you find that in your notes for us, please?

A. No, this was just from what he told me in the time I spent with him.

Q. You gave a quotation in that article directly from Burnett. Do you have a note on that?

A. No. He had mentioned this, I believe, in the room at the Heart of Atlanta Motel. He brought up the—

Q. But you have no note to back up that quotation?

A. No, I don't take notes as a rule on things like that. I don't take notes on general conversations.

Q. You quote directly from conversations?

A. No. I say an exact quote, which I would want to be precise, I take notes on that. On the other, I make a mental note, jot down a word or two, from which I remember.

Q. But this is a direct quote?

A. A direct quote, which is common practice in journalism, to recreate what this man said to me.

Q. On a direct quote?

A. Yes. I didn't make it up. I recreated it from what he told me. These are approximately his words.

Q. Your next paragraph reads:

"On one sense Burnett knew it would be easiest to keep the notes in the drawer. While every citizen is encouraged to report a crime to authorities, the penalties against the man who talks are often more severe than those against the culprit. Burnett wasn't worried about physical retaliation. But there might be social and economic ones. Football is almost a religion in the South; the big-name coaches there are minor deities."

Is that your language?

[fol. 899] A. I don't believe I wrote this sentence.

Q. Sir?

A. I don't remember writing this sentence. I believe it was put in by the editor.

Q. The first sentence or the whole paragraph?

A. I would say none of that paragraph was mine, as I recall it.

Q. Do you know who wrote it?

A. I believe either Mr. Kahn or Mr. Thomas.

Q. Do you have with you there a copy of what you did submit to the Curtis Publishing Company?

A. No, I haven't. No, I brought—

Q. Do you have one anywhere?

A. Yes, I do. I believe it is back in Mr. Kahn's or Mr. Thomas'—either Mr. Kahn or Mr. Thomas would have it.

Mr. Schroder: Turn to Page 104, Line 7.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. The next paragraph, was that yours, beginning:

"On January 4 of this year he sat in his office with Bob Edwards . . . "?

Was that yours?

A. Yes, he gave me that.

Q. The paragraph following that:

" 'You know, Bob,' . . . "

That was also given you by Burnett?

A. Yes.

Q. That was your language?

A. This is what he told me. This is almost exactly as he told me. He said:

"This has been eating me up for a long while," and then he told me the rest of this.

[fol. 900] Q. Do you have notes to support that—both of those paragraphs?

A. Part of it comes from the affidavit, and the rest is from my memory of what he gave me, what he told me the conversation had been like.

Q. You don't have any notes?

A. No, because he could not remember the exact words himself.

Q. In the next column on that page, there appears in the second paragraph this sentence:

"Griffith pressed to meet him, . . ."

Where did you get the information about Griffith pressing to meet him?

A. From Burnett. Burnett said that he had asked Edwards to keep him out of it, but Griffith said he wanted very much to talk to him.

Q. In your next paragraph you refer to the Georgia Tech-Alabama game in Atlanta and in the paragraph following that the same topic is discussed. What is the significance of that?

A. The significance is that this was a popular topic of conversation, which—at the time. Burnett recalled hearing talk of it around the hotel and Howard said there was talk of it, too, that he knew it.

Q. What did you mean to imply when you put that in there? How is that connected with the so-called telephone conversation?

A. It connects because the name of Bryant is involved in both the telephone conversation and in this talk which was around at the time.

Q. I will put it to you directly: Did you intend to imply by that that Bryant had a bet on the Georgia Tech-Alabama game?

A. No, I just wanted to imply that there was this talk around. I will not imply it because I didn't know, but it [fol. 901] was a curious coincidence that there was talk about the strange finish of this game going around at the end of the season.

Q. You did attach, shall I say, some suspicions about the outcome of the Tech-Alabama game, insofar as Bryant was concerned?

A. I am just reporting what happened in the game and mentioning that there was talk about this, that there was talk, and apparently suspicions, about this, and I thought that had a place in the article.

Q. So that you intended to indicate to your readers that there was something suspicious about the way the Alabama-Tech game ended?

A. Just that people were suspicious. I don't know that there—

Q. That was why you put it in the article?

A. Yes.

Q. It related to suspicions?

A. Yes.

Q. Further on down in that column you quote Burnett:

"'I didn't believe you until just this minute,' . . ." I don't mean quote Burnett—excuse me—you say Burnett told you that Griffith told him this, and I am quoting:

"'I didn't believe you until just this minute,' he told Burnett. 'But here's something in your notes that you couldn't possibly have dreamed up . . . this thing about our pass patterns. I took this over from Wally Butts. When I became coach, and I gave it a different name. Nobody used the old name for this pattern but one man. Wally Butts.'"

Your obvious source for that was Burnett?

A. Burnett.

Q. Do you have some notes to support it?

[fol. 902] A. Yes, this brief mention down here on the bottom. It says, "Up until this minute." The bottom left —bottom right, I am sorry.

Q. I will quote from your notes:

"Up until this minute I didn't believe you, but only Butts called . . . "

A. Called it by this name.

Q. Sir?

A. It refers to the fact that only Butts called the play by that name.

Q. You have used in your quotes, though, from Johnny Griffith, "pass patterns." What pass patterns did Burnett indicate to you that Griffith had in mind or referred to in his conversation with Burnett?

A. I have no—I got no specific information on plays.

Q. Your notes don't refer to pass patterns. At least not the part that you gave me.

A. That information came from—here, in this conversation with Bisher, he referred to pass patterns.

Q. Well, I quote from your notes—this is from Bisher?

A. Bisher.

Q. "Nobody ever used that name for that play but one man."

Is that the part of your notes that you are relating to this quotation from the article that I just read?

A. Yes, I put that together from that phrase from both Bisher's remembrance and Burnett's recollection.

Q. Where did Bisher tell you that he got that information?

A. From Griffith.

Q. Sir?

[fol. 903] A. From Griffith.

Q. He told you that Griffith told him that is what he, Griffith, told Burnett at the Biltmore Hotel?

A. Yes, he said: "Burnett's notes were read to me and I knew that he knew what we were going to do against Alabama." That is what Griffith told Bisher.

Q. Bisher has called you on the telephone and quoted Coach Johnny Griffith as having told him, Furman Bisher, —say that again, please, sir—the following—and you read—

A. "As Burnett's notes were read to me, I knew that he knew what we were going to do against Alabama."

Q. Unquote?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, did he say whom he meant by "he"?

A. Burnett.

Q. He said that Burnett knew what Georgia was going to do against Alabama?

A. He said that the man who had these notes, Burnett —that is what he—

Q. That the man who had these notes, meaning George Burnett?

A. Yes.

Q. Knew what he, Johnny Griffith, was going to do—

A. Yes, he said "what we were going to do against Alabama."

Q. In short, Bisher called you and told you that he had interviewed Johnny Griffith?

A. Yes.

Q. And Johnny Griffith had told him, Furman Bisher, that when he, Johnny Griffith, read Burnett's notes, that George Burnett knew what Georgia was going to do against Alabama?

[fol. 904] A. He said the man who had these notes could —as Burnett did—knew "what we were going to do against Alabama." The man—now, I don't know—this was just what he said.

Q. All right.

A. And I didn't use this because it was a little vague as to whether he meant Burnett himself or Wally Butts, who gave the information. But is as I got it.

Mr. Schroder: Page 113, Line 17.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. The next paragraph says: "Griffith has since spoken of his feelings when he had finished reading Burnett's notes. . . ." What is your source for that?

A. Bisher.

Q. When did Bisher give you that information?

A. On that Friday.

Q. That was a telephone conversation he made to you on March 1, 1963?

A. Right.

Q. The quotation is as—the quotation in the article as given to you by Bisher, which reads: "I don't think I moved for an hour—thinking what I should do. Then I realized I didn't have any choice."

A. Yes?

Q. Do you have that quote as given to you direct by Furman Bisher?

A. Yes. It's at the bottom there.

Q. Where is the part about "Then I realized I didn't have any choice"?

A. He told me that on the phone.

[fol. 905] Q. You didn't make a note on that?

A. No, I just put that in to refresh my memory.

Q. Your next paragraph has to do with what Griffith did later. You said: "Griffith went to university officials, told them what he knew and said that he would resign if Butts was permitted to remain in his job." What is the source of that information?

A. Burnett. Burnett told me that he was told that by Cook Barwick.

Mr. Schroder: Passing over to 116.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Mr. Graham, I hand you an exhibit identified by the Reporter as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 1, and ask you to identify that, please, sir.

A. Yes, I wrote this. It is a carbon of my article.

Q. Is that a copy of the original manuscript that you submitted to the Curtis Publishing Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Of the article subsequently printed or published in the March 23rd issue?

A. That's right.

Q. Not that I have any doubt that anything might happen to this, but will you kindly, at your convenience, initial each page here, please, sir?

A. Right (complying). Incidentally, there is an error there in the first page of that story in print. George Burnett—do you want me to wait?

Q. I am listening.

A. George Burnett was still waiting to get his notes, and he had recalled the date of the conversation between Butts and Bryant as a Friday. When he got his notes [fol. 906] back, he saw that he had dated his notes the 13th.

Q. That explains the mistake in the very first sentence of the article?

A. Yes.

Q. Which in the article says Friday, the 14th?

A. Yes.

Q. Whereas, it was Thursday, the 13th?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Graham, you have demonstrated several pages of notes during the morning and used them to refresh your recollection with respect to various matters asked you.

Do you have any objection to my having reproductions made of those notes here today?

A. That is all right with me.

Mr. Schroder: Passing over to 118, Line 9.

Mr. Lockerman: Line what?

Mr. Schroder: Line 9, n-i-n-e.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Now, the remaining part of that paragraph, ending with: "Shortly afterward he was seen in Atlanta at a Georgia Tech basketball game." Was furnished to you by whom?

A. Parts of this were furnished by Pierre Howard and Milton Flack, and I checked, for instance, the date—the dates as January 28th and June 1st, with Furman Bisher.

[fol. 907] Q. Therefore, you are now testifying that the contents of that paragraph were furnished you by Furman Bisher, Pierre Howard and Milton Flack?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have notes on that, sir?

A. No, I don't see the notes on that.

Q. What I have particular reference to is the so-called rumor that is referred to by you as being the wildest one, that being that Coach Butts was mysteriously and suddenly ill and had entered the State Hospital at Athens.

Do you know who it was that gave you that information, as to the substance of that rumor?

A. The rumor was given me by Howard and Flack before I met Burnett, but they said this rumor had been around town, they had heard it, but that Howard said that he had seen Wally Butts at a Georgia Tech basketball game and I later checked that with Furman Bisher, and he said that the rumor was false, that Butts may have had a physical examination in connection with his retirement some time during the winter, but that he was never a patient in the hospital or anything like that.

Q. Did any of your informants indicate that Coach Butts was to be placed upon a pension, as indicated by your article?

A. Yes, this story was—was a matter of fact, Bisher indicated that this physical examination had to do with his resignation and application for a pension.

Q. Did you look into that further by checking with the State Hospital at Athens?

A. No. When he told me there was no truth to this rumor, we dropped it.

[fol. 908] Q. Well, you didn't indicate in your article that there was no truth to the rumor.

A. Yes, I do—yes, "This was quickly scotched. . . ." I say that. They "maintained Butts merely went for the physical check-up."

Q. Required for his university records?

A. Yes.

Q. What official—

A. "Shortly afterward. . . ."

Q. That was given to you by Pierre Howard, who said he saw them?

A. Yes.

Q. What university official scotched the rumor immediately before that?

A. Apparently from Bisher through Cook Barwick.

Q. From Bisher through Cook Barwick?

A. Yes.

Q. The next paragraph, having to do with the meeting in Cook Barwick's office, what was the source of that information?

A. Let's see. This was Burnett.

Q. Reference is therein made to a lie—polygraph lie-detector test.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know who authored the editorial in the Saturday Evening Post of May 4, 1963, entitled "The Polygraph-Happy Pentagon"—

A. No, I don't.

Q. (continuing) —in which four individuals were praised for declining to take the polygraph test?

When I say "were praised," I will read: "Only four persons (God bless them) declined to take the polygraph tests."

A. No.

Q. You don't know who authored that editorial?

[fol. 909] A. No.

Q. In your next paragraph under "Phone Company Check", the statement is made that: "Next an official of the Southern Bell Telephone Company checked and found . . ." et cetera, can you identify the official of the Southern Bell Telephone Company?

A. No, I can't.

Q. Can you tell me the source of that information?

A. It was Burnett and later Bisher who said that he had heard the same thing.

Q. From whom did Bisher say he had heard it?

A. I don't know. I didn't ask him.

Mr. Schroder: Turning to 123, Line 21.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. The next paragraph begins: "February 21 was a painful day for George Burnett.", et cetera. What is your source for that information?

A. Burnett.

Q. Do you have any notes on that?

A. Yes, I have. Here, on this.

Q. Point it out to me, please.

A. Here. February 21. And this was some of the conversation.

Q. Your notes read: "Last meeting, February 21. You were on probation when you heard this conversation. Now I am on trial." Is that the part of your notes that you give as your source for the information in the paragraph beginning "February 21 was a painful day for George Burnett"?

A. Yes.

Q. In the next paragraph you wrote: "From the start, Burnett sensed a mood of hostility in the air." And I [fol. 910] emphasize the word "Hostility." Is that your language?

A. No. Burnett himself used the word "hostility."

Q. Is that in your notes?

A. No.

Q. And the remaining part—

A. But he could not pick out anyone who was actually hostile to him, but he was a little shaken up by the manner in which this hearing took place, particularly when they asked him, "is there anything else in your past you're trying to cover up?"

Q. But in his conversation with you he could not point out any particular party who attended that conference or that meeting as being hostile to him?

A. Well, he thought that this regent who sprang this question to him, who said, "Is there anything else in your past you're trying to cover up?", he thought that he was hostile. And there was a man there named Hartman and he didn't know who Hartman was, but he felt—

Q. What did he tell you specifically about Hartman and what Hartman had to say to him?

A. He said Hartman—there were no questions asked by Hartman. He just said that he had the feeling that Hartman was there as an observer, a friend of Wally Butts.

Q. Although nothing was said by Hartman, he had the feeling, however, that Hartman was hostile toward him?

A. Yes, unfriendly.

Q. Just by being there?

A. Yes, he sensed this mood in the air. In connection with Hartman or anyone, he didn't say it was hostile, but he said the whole atmosphere was hostile and he mentioned that Hartman, he had the feeling, was there as a [fol. 911] friend and—an observer and friend of Wally Butts, and he said Bernie Moore, after shaking hands with him, didn't look at him for the rest of the meeting.

Q. Did he tell you that anyone at the meeting told him in what capacity Hartman was there?

A. No.

Q. It was just a feeling on his part?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you mentioned in that article that Burnett was confronted "with a report that he had been arrested two years before for writing bad checks and that he was still on probation when he overheard the conversation between Butts and Bryant."

Didn't that alert you to look into further such incidents on the part of Burnett?

A. We understood later, when I came back here and made my report, we understood later from Furman Bisher that this full investigation had taken place with the university.

Q. I am talking about you, sir, not the university.

A. By the time I came back here I was out of the actual investigating and so on. I came back here, made my report, on these men I talked to, and on the affidavit that I brought back. Then it was shown to the editors and they were to decide whether or not to go ahead with the article.

Q. So that you put that information before the Curtis Publishing Company editors about Burnett having been arrested two years before for writing bad checks and left it to them to decide, after investigation, whether there were other such incidents?

A. Yes, and then through Bisher we had corroborating evidence that a full investigation had been made.

[fol. 912] Q. Did you ask Bisher whether the university looked into the question of whether or not there were other such incidents?

A. None had come to light—

Q. I said did you ask him—

A. I asked him to get all the information that he could.

Q. About bad checks?

A. About Burnett.

Q. About bad checks on the part of Burnett?

A. Well, it would include bad checks.

Q. Did you include bad checks—

A. Yes, we mentioned bad checks and anything else that would be of interest.

Q. You and Mr. Kahn, representing the Post, at this meeting with Bisher, asked him to look into the matter of whether or not there had been other incidents of bad check-writing on the part of Burnett?

A. Not specifically, no.

Q. Well, generally?

A. Well, generally—

Q. Tell me how it was brought up and talked about.

A. I can't remember that.

Q. Generally. You have remembered a lot today.

A. We just said that Bisher would go back down there and accumulate every other bit of information which would be useful to us in this, particularly in talking to the university authorities. Then there were no specific—he had no specific instructions.

Q. Did you and Mr. Kahn, when you met with Bisher and commissioned him to represent the Saturday Evening Post in its field research in connection with this story, ask him to look into the background or look any further into the background of Burnett?

A. No, that had been thoroughly gone into.

[fol. 913] Q. I am asking the question. Did you?

A. I didn't.

Q. Did Mr. Kahn ask Mr. Bisher to look any further into the background of Mr. Burnett?

A. I don't know.

Q. You were present, were you not?

A. Not when I was present. He had other conversations with him.

Q. You were present in the conference in the Manhattan Hotel with Mr. Kahn and Mr. Bisher. Did you hear Mr. Kahn ask Mr. Bisher to look into any background of Mr. Burnett with respect to his bad checkwriting?

A. I didn't hear anything specific.

Q. Did you hear anything generally?

A. Bisher was to talk to Cook Barwick. Anything of interest was to be reported back to me.

Mr. Schroder: Passing on to 131, Line 9.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Now, in your third beginning paragraph on the last column of your article, you say: "Burnett was frightened and angry" when the matter of his bad checkwriting came up before the meeting.

Did he indicate to you why he was scared and why he was angry?

A. No. He said he wasn't—he was not angry at that having been brought up, but he was frightened and angry at the manner it was brought up, particularly, "Is there anything else in your past you're trying to cover up?"

Q. But your article does not state that he was frightened and angry at the manner. It just says—

[fol. 914] A. It follows up the quote, yes.

Q. Is that what he told you, that he was frightened and angry?

A. Yes, that is what he said.

Q. Insofar as you know, because you have not checked into it, the only two bad checks that he admits having written and being convicted of are those included in the fourth paragraph in the last column, which say, "I was way behind on my bills and two of the checks I wrote—one was for twenty-five dollars and the other for twenty dollars—bounced." Those are the only two that you know about?

A. Those are the only two I know about.

Q. And you haven't looked into the question of whether there were any more?

A. No.

Q. In the next paragraph, the next to last sentence reads: "He cared about his reputation." Is that Burnett?

A. Burnett.

Q. Did he indicate to you that he cared about anybody else's reputation, other than his own?

A. That is my sentence.

Q. That is your sentence?

A. Yes.

Q. He didn't tell you that?

A. No.

Q. The next paragraph, what is your source for the quotation attributed to Burnett there, "Doctor Aderhold was always very kind . . . " et cetera?

A. It was Burnett, the day he came back to the Heart of Atlanta Motel in the afternoon, after the meeting.

Q. You have no notes to support that?

A. No, I don't find any here. He told me that then and [fol. 915] he repeated it, as I remember, on the way to the airport on the Saturday that we—that he took me out there.

Mr. Schroder: Over to Page 134, Line 19.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. My question is much simpler than that. It simply is this: do you, representing the Post, attach any significance to the refusal by Coach Butts to take a lie-detector test?

A. As I, representing the Post, no. Individually, I attach some significance to it.

Mr. Schroder: Turning to Page 137, Line 16.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Now, in the third from last paragraph in the article you say: "The chances are that Wally Butts will never help any football team again." Is that your language?

A. That is mine.

Q. Is that your opinion?

A. That is my opinion.

Mr. Schroder: Page 138, Line 17.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. You felt, and the Post felt, or Curtis Publishing Company felt, that when this article was published that was the death of Wally Butts in his chosen profession?

[fol. 916] A. I would say that it would be very difficult for him—

Q. That is your opinion?

A. That is my opinion.

Q. The next to the last sentence of that same paragraph, you say: "But careers will be ruined, that is sure." Is that your language?

A. That is my language.

Q. Whose career were you referring to?

A. To Wally Butts.

Q. You knew and the Curtis Publishing Company knew that when that article was published it would ruin Coach Butts' career?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. I see.

A. Because the conversation took place—if the conversation took place as Mr. Burnett said it did, I don't think there was any university that would hire him.

Q. How about professional football, is that a career? You meant to include that, too?

A. I was thinking of colleges here, but—

Q. You didn't limit it to colleges, though, did you?

A. I don't think I thought about it.

Q. Well, read it, sir: "Careers will be ruined, that is sure."

A. I don't think there is any reference to professional football here, no.

Q. Well, you meant careers as coaches in the profession, did you not?

A. I am talking here only about college football. I don't know what professional hiring standards are or anything. I say: "A great sport will be permanently damaged. For many people the bloom must pass forever from college [fol. 917] football." That is all that I was thinking of.

Q. But you just said, sir, at the beginning of that paragraph: "The chances are that Wally Butts will never help any football team again." And that would apply to any football team?

A. I said "the chances are."

Q. So that you were not limiting—

A. I wasn't thinking of that. I was thinking of college football.

Q. Your article did not mention that?

A. It only says college football.

Q. Does it say "any"?

A. The first sentence, yes.

Q. Does that include pro?
A. Yes.

(In chambers)

The Court: What I got you in here for was on the question of impeachment of Mr. Carmichael. I think probably I was in error in regard to larceny not being a crime involving moral turpitude. After looking at the charge, I think it is a crime involving moral turpitude, but the period of time of 30 years, I feel, renders that testimony inadmissible, and I will be glad to cite you some cases on that. The Fifth Circuit says—

Mr. Cody: I think it is largely a discretion—in the discretion of the Court, isn't it?

[fol. 918] The Court: If it had been in the last five years, I'd have no hesitancy, but that boy was 18, according to the thing, he was 18 years old, and that was—occurred in 1933, September of '33, almost 30 years ago. There are some Supreme Court decisions on that, and my ruling on that would be that the crime for which—charged against Mr. Carmichael to which he entered a plea of guilty does involve moral turpitude, but the lapse of time which shows by the record that he entered a plea or was tried, convicted, I don't remember which, was in September, 1933, and being so remote, I do not feel that it would be proper to impeach him by a crime of such—which occurred over such a long period of time ago. The law, I think, permits a man to make amends at some time. If you have got anything in the last five or ten years, I will let you—

Mr. Cody: I haven't.

The Court: All right, sir. But I think I placed my ruling on the wrong ground. I was almost sure it was a year and a day, but larceny is not such a crime, and it would be proper if it is that period of time. I'd like the record to show that.

Mr. Schroder: I don't know that there is any place in the record for what I am going to say, but Mr.—

The Court: All right. What did you want to say?

[fol. 919] Mr. Schroder: Mr. Cody just indicated before we discussed the point that you just completed that some, if not all of his rebuttal evidence would be to the effect that the Plaintiff—I mean, would go to the Plaintiff's—character witnesses against the Plaintiff, and I don't think that would be proper rebuttal testimony.

The Court: I do, Mr. Schroder, for this reason, that the burden is on Mr. Schroder to establish the truth.

Mr. Schroder: No, sir; "Cody."

The Court: Mr. Cody, I beg your pardon, I was looking at him and—

Mr. Schroder: The record wouldn't show it.

The Court: And then the burden is on you to show damages.

Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir.

The Court: Punitive damages and general, and I think properly in mitigation of damages character evidence would be admissible.

Mr. Schroder: Would that be made clear, of course, to the Jury?

[fol. 920] The Court: I am going to charge them.

Mr. Cody: You can't offer character evidence, Your Honor, against the Plaintiff until he testified.

Mr. Strubin: It goes to credibility.

Mr. Cody: It goes to credibility too. If you made a charge to the Jury that such as that is in mitigation of damages, I think you would be committing an error.

Mr. Lockerman: Of course, when you—

The Court: What I was advancing was a theory, I don't recall exactly—

Mr. Cody: There is—

The Court: My charge to the Jury is going to be to the effect that a man with a good character is entitled to recover more than a man with a bad character. That is my theory.

Mr. Strubin: That is all right.

[fol. 921] Mr. Schroder: No, no.

Mr. Cody: That is different from what we are talking about.

Mr. Joiner: Impeachment.

Mr. Cody: It also comes under impeachment, and the Jury has got a right, if they think he has been successfully impeached, not to believe him at all.

The Court: Well, what is going to be the nature of your impeachment? There is two different—you can ask one question: Do you know the Plaintiff? How long a period have you known him? Do you know the character and reputation which he bears in the community in which he lives? Is that good or bad? And that is it.

Mr. Joiner: Would you believe him under oath?

The Court: And you can proceed on the other: Do you know the Plaintiff? How long have you known him? Do you know his reputation of truthfulness or truthfulness and veracity? Would you believe him under oath? I don't know which one you intend to proceed under.

Mr. Cody: That might vary, depending on the witness.

[fol. 922] The Court: We will have to get to that bridge when we—cross that bridge when we get to it. You have got me talking—

Mr. Cody: You can never offer evidence of that type regarding the Plaintiff until he has already testified in the case.

Mr. Lockerman: Except in the case where the issue is reputation, such as this, and you carrying the burden.

The Court: Well, I don't believe that is the burden he carries under a plea of justification. I don't believe he gets into character. I think it is admissible.

Mr. Schroder: Well, we may have—

Mr. Cody: I have nothing else.

Mr. Schroder: We may have a discussion as to whether or not the character is being—character evidence is being offered to impeach him as a witness or to go to mitigation.

Mr. Cody: I don't think I have to commit myself on that.

The Court: I don't think so, Mr. Schroder.

[fol. 923] Mr. Schroder: Just let it be known sometime before the charge to the Jury.

The Court: I believe he—I believe my charge will cover that point. If it doesn't, you call it to my attention and except to it.

Mr. Schroder: I have to—

The Court: This is not on the record.

FRANK GRAHAM, JR., testified further by deposition as follows:

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. In the paragraph I just finished when I was discussing the careers of Wally Butts, or the career; there is this statement about two-thirds of the way down: ". . . Motion pictures of other games are being scrutinized." What is the source of that information?

A. Furman Bisher.

Q. Is that your language?

A. Yes. I don't remember the words—writing the word "scrutinized." I might have.

Q. Do you know what other games motion pictures of were being scrutinized?

[fol. 924] A. No, we just heard that pictures of all Georgia games—

Q. "We heard"?

A. Yes, I got that.

Q. Who heard?

A. I heard it from Bisher.

Mr. Schroder: Page 144, Line 14.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Have you looked into whether or not the so-called betting line changed in any degree before the game?

A. I heard it did not.

Q. From whom did you hear that?

A. From Pierre Howard and also by checking the newspapers. There was no indication that the betting line had wavered on that—

Q. Do you know what effect upon the betting line a substantial bet one way or the other will have?

A. A very large bet in a national game might have some effect on it or it might—a very large bet might even prompt some of the bookmakers to take the game off their boards.

Q. Was this game taken off the boards?

A. No, it wasn't.

Q. According to the information that you have there—strike that, please. According to the information that you have there was no change in the betting line prior to the Alabama game?

A. As far as I know there was no change. I mentioned in here there was 14 to 17 points. It may have fluctuated slightly. I saw it at different times, at different points, [fol. 925] but so far as I know there was no major significant shift in the betting spread.

Q. Let me ask you this: Was there, according to your information, any shift, and if so, when did it occur?

A. None whatsoever.

Q. Now, before you wrote your article for the Curtis Publishing Company, also at the time you were writing it, and furthermore, at the time that you had completed it and submitted it to Curtis Publishing Company, you had told them and they knew that you did not have available to you at any time the so-called notes that were taken by Burnett during this conversation?

A. That's right. We kept trying right up until the last moment to get them.

Q. Before you wrote your article, at the time you were writing it, and after you had completed it and delivered it to the Curtis Publishing Company, they knew about John Carmichael and they knew that he had not been interviewed by you or anyone else for them?

A. They did. Carmichael was mentioned in the affidavit.

Q. They knew what I just said?

A. Yes.

Q. That you had not interviewed him, nor anyone else for them?

A. That's right.

Q. Is that correct?

A. That's right, so far as I know.

Mr. Schroder: Page 148, Line 9.

Q. Mr. Graham, in researching this article before you [fol. 926] wrote it, did you review any articles written about the games played by the University of Georgia in the year 1961?

A. No, I didn't. I stayed with 1962.

Q. When they telephoned you from Curtis Publishing Company, when they first contacted you to come in, that they had an assignment for you, did I understand it correctly when you testified this morning that you were to go to Atlanta and to make negotiations or to negotiate for Curtis regarding the acquisition for them of the exclusive right to publish this story and also to undertake whatever research down there was necessary to substantiate it?

A. Chiefly I was told to go there, hear what the story was about, and if necessary get an affidavit, which was set up for me between Mr. Beddow and Mr. Howard, and then to come back to New York after talking to all of these principals originally named, Howard, Flack and Burnett, and let them—let the Post see what I had.

Then at the same time when I was down there, I was told to offer this money to Burnett or Howard.

Q. In other words, your mission to Georgia was not only to negotiate for the—shall we call it purchase of the story, but also to verify it through talking to these other people?

A. Yes, to talk to them.

Q. And to check it out with them?

A. Yes.

Mr. Schroder: Dropping down to Line 24.

[fol. 927] By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Have you written any articles in the past on football and, if so, what are they?

A. I have never written a major article on football. When I was at—at Sport Magazine, I was assistant managing editor, and I covered various events and talked to football players and coaches, as part of my duties. But I never—

Q. How long ago was that?

A. That was from 1955 through 1958, the beginning of 1958.

Q. Can you identify for the record any football coaches and football players that you interviewed at that time?

A. I can't at the moment.

Q. Sir?

A. I can't at the moment. I am trying to think.

Q. Have you ever authored any article that might deal with a so-called fixed or rigged athletic event?

A. No, I haven't.

Mr. Schroder: Page 153, Line 10.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Have you ever in your history as a sportswriter, ever heard of a football game even attempted to be fixed by coaches and not players?

A. I have never heard of it. This is the first—

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. One more question, Mr. Graham. What have you [fol. 928] been paid by the Curtis Publishing Company in connection with your services in writing this article?

A. Two thousand dollars.

Q. Their agreement was contingent upon your furnishing a story that fitted in with their policy—

A. I was told—I have been working regularly on repeated assignments for the Post since December. In fact, I now have a contract which guarantees me so much a year from the Post, and I was told to go down and investigate this story and I would be paid whether or not the story was published.

Q. But the amount would be contingent upon the type of story that you ended up with?

A. We didn't discuss that. They just told me that I would be paid, but it would be no money out of my pocket, because if this story didn't work out, I would be immediately assigned to another one, which I was right after this.

By the time the story came out, I was in Florida working on an auto racing story.

Mr. Schroder: Page 156. Mr. Cody asked a couple of questions which I want to read. This question is by Mr. Cody.

The Court: I believe Mr. Cody probably should ask his own question; I mean, any that you want to omit, I will let Mr. Cody ask, but any question Mr. Cody asked, I think it would be proper for him to read it.

Mr. Schroder: Every one I have read up to now is by me. If he doesn't read it I will have the chance?

[fol. 929] The Court: You will have the privilege of coming back; yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: All right, sir.

The Court: Mr. Cody, did you wish to read part of the deposition at this time?

Mr. Cody: Just a moment, Your Honor.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Cody: I don't believe so at this time, Your Honor.

The Court: You don't care to read any of it? All right, Mr. Schroder, I will let you read those two questions.

Mr. Schroder: "By Mr. Cody."

Mr. Lockerman: What page?

Mr. Schroder: 156.

[fol. 930] By Mr. Schroder:

Q. I have one or two questions to ask you, Mr. Graham.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. In your direct examination by Mr. Schroder you mentioned that you had access to the Atlanta newspaper in preparing some portions of the article. Where did you go to get access to those papers?
A. To the public library.
Q. In Atlanta?
A. In Atlanta.
Q. In this article that you wrote, did you intend in any way to suggest that Coach Butts or Coach Bryant bet on any particular game or any game?
A. Not after looking over all the information. I had—of course, this was in my mind at all times. When I got through with the article, when I had gone over all the information and had re-read the article and brought it in here, I didn't intend to—I certainly—there was no idea of making an accusation.
Q. Did you make any such intimation in the article?
A. No, I don't believe I did, because I don't know that these two men bet on the game.

Clay D. Blair, Jr. called as a witness on behalf of the Plaintiff, after having first been duly sworn, testified by deposition as follows:

[fol. 931] Cross examination.

By Mr. Smith:

Q. State your name, please, sir?
A. Clay D. Blair, Jr.
Q. Are you employed by the Curtis Publishing Company?
A. That's right.

Q. In what capacity?

A. I am editor-in-chief of the Curtis Publishing Company, sometimes called editorial director, also.

Q. How long have you been with Curtis, Mr. Blair?

A. Since March of 1957.

Q. What was your job—what were you employed as, that is, what position did you occupy, when you were first employed?

A. I was first—I was a staff writer in the Washington office.

Q. Who was editor of the Saturday Evening Post at that time?

A. Mr. Ben Hibbs.

Q. Who was president of Curtis?

A. Robert E. MacNeal.

Q. Mr. Culligan is presently president of Curtis?

A. Mr. Matthew J. Culligan, I believe—I believe the Board of Directors made him Chairman of the Board this week. I think Chairman of the Board is his correct title.

Q. Who is President of Curtis?

A. I think he is President and Chairman of the Board.

Q. When did Mr. Culligan first come with Curtis as President?

A. July 9, 1962.

[fol. 932] Q. And he replaced—

A. Mr. Robert MacNeal.

Q. Was there also an editorial change made at the time Culligan came with the Post, or who was out at that time?

A. The editor of the Post at the time Mr. Culligan came to Curtis was Mr. Robert Lee Sherrod, born in Georgia.

Q. Mr. Sherrod is no longer with the Post.

A. Yes, he is. He is the editor-at-large of the Post.

Q. Editor of what?

A. Editor-at-large. He is a roving editor, around the world.

Q. Who is presently editor of the Saturday Evening Post?

A. I am.

Q. How long have you been editor?

A. Well—

Q. Of the Post, that is.

A. Well, let me see. I have to think a minute. In March of 1962, I was made managing editor of the Saturday Evening Post, and in June of 1962, I was promoted to Vice-President and Editorial Director of Curtis, and on or about October 24th, when Mr. Sherrod began his travels. I assumed the responsibility as the chief executive of the Saturday Evening Post, editorial executive. So that in effect I have been the editor since October of 1962, although it really doesn't show in the masthead that way.

Q. Are you also editor of the other four publications or any one of the other four Curtis publications?

A. No, I am not. I am editorial director and, as such, I have responsibilities for the editorial content of the other Curtis publications, but I am not a day-by-day editor of [fol. 933] the other four magazines, as I am on the Post.

Mr. Smith: Go to Page 11, line 17.

By Mr. Smith:

Q. Were you directly involved in the employment of Mr. Graham to write this Butts story, this Butts-Bryant story, in his selection as a writer?

A. No.

Q. You were not?

A. No.

Q. Who—

A. Let me make this clear. As Chief executive officer of the Saturday Evening Post I bear the responsibility for what is published in the magazine. I do not—I cannot, on a day-to-day basis, make assignment of articles or editors and so on.

Q. I can appreciate that.

A. Yes.

Q. What I want to know is who was directly in charge of that particular piece of writing?

A. That particular project?

Q. For you or for the magazine?

A. For me?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, directly responsible to me would be Davis Thomas, who is the managing editor of the magazine.

Q. Was he more or less in touch with this particular article, in making the decisions concerning the article, for you and thus for the magazine?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Roger Kahn working with him in that direction? [fol. 934] A. For him. Roger Kahn is a sports editor who works under Thomas, and, of course, Graham was working for Kahn, in effect.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the decision, the final decision to publish the article?

A. Yes, I did. Before the article was committed to—irrevocably committed to press, I read it, all of it, and at that time I could have made the decision to pull it out, but you might say by not making the decision to pull it out, it had my approval.

Q. In other words, Davis Thomas made the decision to publish it and you didn't veto it; is that right?

A. That's about it.

Mr. Smith: All right. Page 17, Line 4.

By Mr. Smith:

Q. Will you list the five magazines that the Curtis Publishing Company publishes?

A. Yes. The Saturday Evening Post, The Ladies Home Journal, the American Home, Holiday and Jack and Jill, a children's publication.

Q. Are any of these five magazines what you might call showing a profit at this present time, operating in the black?

A. However, I will answer the question this way: that for the first quarter of 1963, Curtis Publishing Company showed a loss of about $1.1 million, compared to a loss in 1962 for the same quarter of $4.7 million.

Mr. Smith: On Page 20, Line 9—Line 8.

[fol. 935] By Mr. Smith:

Q. From 1962 to 1961, there was a decline of approximately eighteen million in advertising revenues. Is that true?

A. In the 1961, by the same PIB figures, I believe the figure was eighty-six million.

Q. Do you also recall what it was for 1960?

A. I think it was one hundred, six million.

Q. One hundred, six million?

A. Yes.

Q. I believe you said that Mr. Culligan came in as President of Curtis in March of 1962?

A. No, in July.

Q. In July of 1962?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you were made a vice-president in June of 1962?

A. That's right.

Mr. Smith: Go to Page 29, Line 4.

By Mr. Smith:

Q. Now, what connection is there between circulation and the amount of lineage and the revenue that you can expect from advertisers? What importance is placed on circulation by advertisers?

A. Well—

Q. Is this not one of the factors that affects advertising revenue?

A. In marketing advertising?

Q. Yes.

A. Definitely so. Your demography, the profile of your subscriber, where he is, who he is, whether or not he lives in a metropolitan or rural area, the very size and numbers; [fol. 936] and also part of the demography would be the income level, education level, et cetera, et cetera. The size of your circulation. The entire advertising rate structure is based on how big your circulation is. In other words, if you have a circulation of three million, then an ad might cost fifteen thousand dollars in your magazine. But if you have a circulation of six million, it costs thirty thousand dollars. So that it is absolutely vital. Together with the demography, I mean. I mean, all circulation in Russia would not be appealing to General Motors.

By Mr. Smith:

Q. Well, your advertising revenue has fallen considerably, as you testified, since 1960, to a—from an all-time high?

A. No. One hundred six million to, 1960—fell to eight-six in 1961 and about sixty-six or sixty-eight or sixty-nine in 1962. That is revenue.

Q. So that you aren't satisfied with that trend, are you, Mr. Blair?

A. I mostly certainly am not, no.

Q. And were you—

A. Would you be, if you were a responsible—

Q. No, sir, I would be most unhappy, as I am sure you are. Is that not a fair statement?

A. Right.

Q. I mean, this is an integral part of running a profitable operation, is it not?

A. Absolutely. Let me say that I am not unhappy, but I would be hopeful we could have more advertising revenue in the Post.

[fol. 937] Mr. Smith: Page 40, Line 13.

By Mr. Smith:

Q. There is one further statement I wish to ask you about, and that is in the March 29, 1963 issue of Time. You were quoted as saying:

"'The final yardstick,' said Blair, in a memo to this staff, 'is the fact that we have about six lawsuits pending, meaning that we are hitting them where it hurts . . .'" Did you make such a statement?

A. I didn't make the statement, but I wrote a memo—

Q. I am sorry, you did or didn't make it?

A. I wrote a memo. I didn't make the statement. I wrote a memo. But that statement is not accurate. The quote is not correct.

Q. Was the statement taken from a memorandum?

A. Yes.

Q. Was the memorandum in writing?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have a copy of the memorandum?

A. I could get you one. I don't carry it around with me.

Q. Sir?

A. I could get you one. I don't carry it around with me.

Q. All right, sir, will you make that available to us?

Mr. Smith: Mr. Strubing said "Yes".

A. (By the witness) Yes, surely.

"The final yardstick is the fact that we have about six [fol. 938] lawsuits pending, meaning that we are hitting them where it hurts . . ."

Now, where is that incorrect? How is it inaccurate?

A. I think—I would have to get the memorandum, but I think the sentence goes on to say:

"". . . with solid, meaningful journalism."

Q. Well, who is them, "hitting them"?

A. "Them" is the general phrase to refer to the whole United States of America.

Q. Hitting everybody in America where it hurts? Is that the meaning that you intended to convey?

A. Not quite so literally as this: You are really asking me now about the whole philosophy of this magazine when you ask a question like that. I can't answer without telling you what my philosophy is.

Q. Is the quote about the number of lawsuits incorrect?

A. Yes.

Q. There are more than that?

A. Less.

Q. Less than that?

A. Yes.

Q. All of these are libel suits?

A. Yes.

Q. Sir?

A. Yes. But I mean the figures aren't accurate.

Q. Among them is the one Wally Butts filed against the Post—

A. No, no.

Mr. Smith: Page 43, Line 10.

[fol. 939] By Mr. Smith:

Q. Do you recall the writer that interviewed you for that article or that quotation?

A. No one interviewed me.

Q. No one interviewed you?

A. No.

Q. You made the memorandum available?

A. I certainly did not. Somehow the memorandum found its way to Newsweek.

Q. It wasn't intended, really, for publication?

A. Absolutely not. The entire memorandum, if you read it, as I assume you will in time, was meant to be a laudatory, congratulatory memorandum to the staff on the magazine that they were putting out, and the lawsuits, I think that was actually a facetious—to tell you the truth, I think that was actually facetious.

Mr. Smith: Next page, Line 17.

By Mr. Smith:

Q. And you were not being facetious when you used the phrase, "sophisticated muckracking"?

A. No.
Q. You meant it then?
A. Yes.
Q. And you mean it now?
A. I mean it now.

By Mr. Smith:

Q. To get away from muckraking, sophisticated or otherwise, you have been quoted as being concerned with the [fol. 940] image of the Post and in trying to get a new image, portray a different type of magazine; is that correct?

A. Very definitely, yes.

Q. Generally speaking, you want to change the image of the Post?

A. I did change the image of the Post.

Q. All right.

A. "Image" is very bad. It is worse than "muckraking."

Q. I agree. Is the March 23, 1963 issue of the Post representative of the new type magazine that Curtis is interested in publishing, that is, the history—

A. Could I refresh my memory by looking at it?

Q. Yes.

A. Does this contain an article of some interest to you?

Q. This is the Butts issue.

A. Oh, yes. I would say that we have perhaps come perhaps 25 per cent of the way with this issue.

Q. This is not representative of the "image" that you are trying to—

A. I would say we have gone 25 per cent toward the goal of the magazine that I envision.

Q. In other words, this issue is a step in the right direction, in your opinion?

A. Yes, along the way, yes.

By Mr. Smith:

Q. I am reading now from—I think it is one edition of Webster's Dictionary, in which it is stated:

[fol. 941] "The original allusion . . ." and this is "muckraking" ". . . was to a character in Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress so intent on raking up muck that he could not see a celestial crown held above him." I believe you alluded to that yesterday, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. You have no quarrel with that particular statement?

A. No. That is the origin of that.

I am not sure. It might have been in Shakespeare prior to that; I don't know.

Q. The dictionary states further,

"On April 14, 1906, President Roosevelt delivered a speech in which he used the term 'muckraking' in attacking the practice of making sweeping and unjust charges of corruption against public men and corporations, after which the term obtained wide currency." Do you have any quarrel with that particular definition of muckrake," or the use of the term "muckrake"?

A. No. I mean that was the way Roosevelt used it. I am pretty sure of that. I have never read the speech or anything.

Q. You were acquainted with the term, were you not, Mr. Blair, prior to using it in the interview which led to the article in Newsweek on November 19, 1962? You were acquainted with the term? The most common usage of the term "muckrake" at that time?

A. I was, yes.

Q. And this you testified yesterday, by adding to the term the word "sophisticated" you sought to alter the most common usage of the term "muckrake"; is that correct?

A. That is really correct, yes.

Q. Now, let me ask you if you agree with this. I am [fol. 942] reading from the same dictionary, which, as I said, is an edition of Webster's. Here the term "sophisticated" is defined, one, as follows:

"Not in its natural, pure or original state, adulterated, amended unwarrantedly." Do you have any quarrel with that particular definition of "sophisticated"?

A. Well, let me say this, that the word "sophisticated" has many connotations, and very definitely I won't prolong this with argument and semantics here, but as for that definition that was not the definition I had in mind when I used the word "sophisticated."

I was thinking in terms, for example, you would talk about the Nike Zeus or the Skybolt as being a very sophisticated weapons system. By that I meant to imply complex, high order of development, rather than that.

I believe the word "sophisticate"—the origin of that word must be sophistry, is it not?

Q. Let me read this. "Sophistication" is defined:

"1. sophistry; sophistical reasoning; misrepresentation or falsification and argument, also a quibble; a sophism."

Do you adopt that definition of the term "sophistication"?

A. Well, I know that is—I mean, I can't quarrel with the dictionary, but very definitely, you must know that in common usage in our language, if you talk about a sophisticated person or a sophisticated society or a sophisticated weapons system, as I was with the Newsweek people, and I went on in this quote as to what I meant by "sophisticated," I was talking about something else, which is, you know, not quite—

Q. Well, you were speaking in the sense of expose, were you not, and in the sense of provocation?

[fol. 943] A. I was speaking in the sense of—if you want to use the word "expose", I want to look that up.

Q. Did you use the word yourself in this interview?

A. "Expose"?

Q. Yes.

A. I probably did.

Q. I am reading from the Newsweek article and I have written it down in longhand and I think it is accurate—this is from Newsweek, November 19, 1962:

"Blair says he intends to 'restore the crusading spirit. . . .'"

A. Right.

Q. (continuing) "'. . . the sophisticated muckraking, the expose in the mass magazines . . .'"

A. Yes.

Q. Is that accurate as far as you can recall?

A. I am sure it is. The interview was an hour and a half or something like that, and I certainly would not quarrel with the fact that I said that during the course of it.

Mr. Smith: Go to the bottom of that page, Line 22.

By Mr. Smith:

Q. In the same sentence with "sophisticated muckraking," the term "expose in mass magazines" was used?

A. Right.

Q. And these were used in aid of one another; is that right? "Expose" is a further amplification of your use of the term "sophisticated muckraking"; isn't that true?

[fol. 944] A. Talking precisely to the point here, yes, but I think in all fairness, we are just dealing with words, and you have to—maybe that is what you lawyers do. I am sure you do.

Q. You are very much concerned with words yourself, are you not?

A. Yes, but I am also concerned with the development of what are we talking about, rather than just the words themselves.

Mr. Smith: All right; go to Page 59, Line 10.

By Mr. Smith:

Q. Further quoting from this same Newsweek article of November 19, 1962, the writer says, and I quote directly from the article, which is quoting you:

"We are going to provoke people, make them mad.'"

A. Yes.

Q. Did you make such a statement?

A. I am sure I did. I would not quarrel with that.

Q. You don't quarrel with the statement now, do you?

A. No.

Mr. Smith: Page 70, Line 5.

By Mr. Smith:

Q. A statement is contained in the Butts' article:

"But careers will be ruined, that is sure." You have already testified that you read the article prior to publication.

A. Yes.

[fol. 945] Q. Do you have any quarrel with that statement?

A. May I see the statement?

Q. Right here.

A. Oh, I see, it is the windup, yes.

Q. Right here?

A. Well, I have no quarrel with that.

Q. Is there any question in your mind but that careers have been ruined as a result of this article?

A. Well, I really don't know, because I don't know the status of the employment—career—here I use the term "career" to apply to employment—I don't know the status of all these people.

Q. This statement says, " . . . careers will be ruined, that is sure," and it can't apply but to two people, and that is Wally Butts and Bear Bryant. Would you not agree with that?

A. Well, I would say that they were the principal figures in this story and I can't quarrel with that, no.

Q. Butts' career is one of the careers that reference is made to in that statement, isn't that correct?

A. I think so.

Q. Is there any question in your mind about that?
A. I don't think so.

By Mr. Smith:

Q. Were you also concerned that this matter be checked out thoroughly?
A. Absolutely.
Q. As to the truth of the article, prior to publication?
A. Absolutely, as we do with every article.
Q. Did you impress this on your staff, that they must [fol. 946] be absolutely certain of what they published in this Butts article, to satisfy you as to the truthfulness and accuracy of it?
A. Absolutely, as we do with every article.

Mr. Smith: 75, Line 14.

By Mr. Smith:

Q. Yesterday I asked you about an inter-office memo which was reported in one of these national publications, a quotation from you, and you have been kind enough to supply that to me today, which I have identified as Exhibit P-2. Is that the memorandum?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. Is that your memorandum?
A. That is my memorandum.
Q. These are your words?
A. My words.
Q. This is the entire memorandum?
A. My words, not very brilliant, but mine.
Q. This was not prepared for publication, but in some fashion it leaked or got out of the office here; is that right?
A. That's right, yes—no, it was strictly a strictly inter-office—I believe I started the memo by saying "I wish I had time to visit each one individually," but I didn't.
Q. One statement in the memo which we discussed yesterday, and I don't recall just what you said, but it is my impression that there was some question as to whether or not it was accurate.

A. Yes.

Q. Here is the statement. Let me read it again:

"The final yardstick: We have about six lawsuits pend[fol. 947] ing, meaning we are hitting them where it hurts, with solid meaningful journalism."

A. Yes.

Q. Now, that is an accurate quotation, is it not?

A. That is exactly what I wrote, yes. What I guess is inaccurate about it, I guess, is the number of lawsuits.

Mr. Smith: 81, top of the page.

By Mr. Smith:

Q. Do you remember a phone call from Wally Butts' daughter? Did you have a phone conversation with Jean Butts?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Do you remember about when that was?

A. This is the girl that lives in Mississippi?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes. I really don't remember when that was. It was —I have a recollection it might have been like a Thursday or sort of in the middle of the week, like.

Q. Was it prior to the publication of the Butts' story?

A. Yes, it had to be, yes.

Q. What was—

A. She wanted—she was trying to find out if we were doing the story, I think, or if we were, when it would be out, something like that. It was a very incoherent conversation because she was very emotional and crying, and I had a hard time determining exactly what her point was here.

Q. The substance of the conversation was a request on her part, was it not—

A. Well,—

[fol. 948] Q. (continuing) —direct to you?

A. Well, my impression was that she was trying to find out (a) if we were doing an article involving her father, and (b) if we were, when it was coming out. It seemed to me that was what she was trying to get at, but it would be presumptuous here or any other time for me to try to interpret what any woman is really getting at when she talks to you.

Q. Well, you told her (a) that you were going to do an article, and (b) that it was coming out soon, didn't you, or gave her the publication date, perhaps?

A. No, I don't think I did give her the publication date.

Q. Did you tell her an article was going to be published concerning her father?

A. I swear to you, I can't remember. I am not trying to dodge your question. I am—I get a hundred phone calls a day, you know, more or less, and it is hard to remember, but I—I don't know whether I told her specifically whether we were coming out with this article or not. Definitely, I know I would not have told her when, you know, if I said we were publishing it, because we don't ever give a release as to when we are going to publish something, to anyone. This was a strange and almost incoherent telephone conversation, where I couldn't really figure out what she was after. She was crying through the whole thing and—

Q. You got the impression that she was asking you not to publish the article?

A. Oh, beyond any doubt, that if we had any—I mean, her whole thing was to try to find out if we were, and certainly the undertones of the thing, all this weeping and crying was that if you—you know—"Please don't."

[fol. 949] Q. If you do publish—

A. "If you plan to, please don't."

I didn't make any notes on this conversation or anything else, I mean. And I don't know when the telephone conversation took place, and I am sure that you could look it up in the—I understand the Telephone company keeps very accurate records of the telephone conversations, long-distance calls.

ROGER KAHN, called as a witness on behalf of the Plaintiff, after having first been duly sworn, testified by deposition as follows:

Cross examination.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Will you state your full name, please?
A. Roger Kahn.
Q. How old are you?
A. 35.

Mr. Smith: Line 19.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. How long have you been with the Post?
A. Since January 1st of this year.
Q. What is your title with the Post?
A. On the masthead it is listed as senior editor and in my contract with the Post it is listed as sports editor. You can probably define it as senior editor in charge of sports.

[fol. 950] Mr. Smith: Page 7, Line 13.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. When did you first receive any information concerning the Wallace Butts-Paul Bryant matter that was the subject of the article in the Post of March 23rd of this year?
A. It was on a Tuesday. Without a calendar—
Q. Here is a calendar.
A. Thank you.
It would have been on Tuesday, February 19th.
Q. How did you receive the information that you did get on February 19th, concerning the matter?
A. I was about to go to lunch when Davis Thomas, the managing editor of the Saturday Evening Post, came to my office and reported to me that he had heard this—had heard of the phone call, and that we were to talk after lunch, which I indeed agreed we ought to.

Mr. Smith: Line 16.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Then I assume you did go to lunch and conferred with him again after lunch?

A. Yes, after lunch, Mr. Thomas, Mr. Don A. Schanche, who is the executive editor here—the three of us met, conferred, and discussed what we had and what we ought next to do.

Mr. Smith: Next page, Line 16.

[fol. 951] By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Did Mr. Thomas tell you where he had gotten the information that he was then giving to you?

A. Yes, sir. From Mr. Strubing.

Q. Who is Mr. Strubing?

A. Mr. Strubing is an attorney for the Saturday Evening Post.

Q. Mr. Strubing wasn't present, was he?

A. No, he was not.

Q. What did Mr. Schanche have to say about the matter at that time?

A. Well, we all felt, each of us, that it was well to look into and it is hard to recreate what each of us said, but we did feel a certain skepticism about the story at that time, but it was a story that had to be checked out.

We realized that it was a very unusual story, not something that was in any way routine. But we did feel, the three of us discussing this, that we had indeed to proceed on investigating the story.

Q. But you were quite skeptical about it, the correctness of what had been told to you?

A. Not quite skeptical. Skeptical and surprised.

Q. On that date of February 19th, when you were conferring with Mr. Thomas and Mr. Schanche, were you aware of the lawsuit that was pending against the Saturday Evening Post and Furman Bisher, the sports editor of the Atlanta Journal, involving an alleged libelous matter at that time?

A. I was aware of it in broad outline. I had not been sports editor when Mr. Bisher's article appeared, so that I was not conversant with all the details. But I was aware that there was such a suit, yes.

Q. Had you discussed with Mr. Thomas and Mr. Schanche the fact that Frank Graham was your choice?

A. Yes, I did.

Mr. Smith: Page 14, Line 15.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Had you ever used him on any assignment in which you anticipated or knew that by writing the type of story that would be involved, that careers and characters would be ruined?

A. I didn't really know what type of story Mr. Graham was going to write. Mr. Graham didn't have an assignment to write a story. Mr. Graham had an assignment to investigate as well as he could and if in his judgment there was a story, he was to proceed.

Mr. Smith: Page 17, Line 24.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Did you instruct him that you wanted him to make a very thorough investigation of this matter?

A. As thorough as he could.

Q. As thorough as he could?

A. As thorough as he could make, yes.

Q. I believe you used the expression a moment ago, in speaking of what you wanted Mr. Graham to do, the term that you wanted him to go down there and dig; is that correct?

[fol. 953] A. I don't know if I used that term, but that would be a fair paraphrase of what I meant, yes.

Q. By using that term, you meant to really dig into the story and find out all the facts about it?

A. All the facts that were available, yes, indeed.

Mr. Smith: Page 21, Line 21.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Going on with that same discussion, what else was said by Mr. Thomas or Mr. Schanche to you and Mr. Graham about this matter?

A. It was general agreement that Frank's first course of investigation should be with Mr. Howard and with Mr. Burnett. There was probably some fee discussion for Mr. Graham.

Q. Give us your best recollection of that.

A. I said something like, "I won't give you a fee now. If the story does not work out, Frank, it will depend on how much time you spend and how hard it is."

It is standard in many magazine relationships that you don't have a contract. You have a handshake.

Q. A what?

A. Handshake. Agreement between writer and editor who have worked together before. You don't have a formal contract on most magazines.

There was some discussion about the fee to be paid Mr. Burnett. I believe that was handled by Mr. Thomas. Mr. Schanche was going to work on the contract which was to be made—drawn between Mr. Burnett and the Saturday Evening Post, and we told Frank that if the story seemed to be working out, not to worry about money, that that was [fol. 954] not his function. Not to worry about a rate for what Mr. Burnett would be paid. That was the Post's function and not his.

Q. Then it was your understanding at that time that the story was for sale to the Post; that is correct, is it not?

A. That Mr. Burnett's information was for sale, yes.

Q. By Mr. Burnett?

A. By Mr. Burnett or Mr. Howard.

Q. Or Mr. Howard?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was on February 20th?

A. That's right.

Mr. Smith: Page 28, Line 4.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Now, what instructions did Mr. Thomas or Mr. Schanche give either you or Mr. Graham in that conference about what the two of you were to do on this very unusual matter?

A. Frank was to go to Atlanta. If an affidavit were obtainable from Mr. Burnett, he was to get the affidavit. He was to determine all of the circumstances that he could determine about the intercepted phone call. He was, if possible, to get a copy of Mr. Burnett's notes on the intercepted phone call. He was to check the library and the newspapers for information on the game; and he was, generally, while down there, since he had never covered SEC football, to familiarize himself with newspaper clips, through newspaper clips, as best he could with the teams.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. What, if any, instructions were given by either you or Mr. Thomas or Mr. Schanche as to whether or not Mr. Graham should refrain from interviewing Coach Bryant?

A. Well, at this point he was going only to Atlanta to see what he could get on the story in Atlanta. A trip to Alabama I don't believe was mentioned.

Q. You had previously already told Mr. Graham not to interview Coach Butts?

A. Yes.

Q. I believe you just stated that a moment ago.

A. Yes, that's right.

Q. Are you familiar with the geographical relationship of Birmingham with reference to the City of Atlanta, generally?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you familiar with the fact that either from Atlanta to Birmingham or to Montgomery is only a matter of about less than an hour's flight time by air?

A. I knew it was a short flight.

Q. You did know that?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. You were also familiar with the fact that telephone communications could be had from Atlanta to almost any point in Alabama?

A. Yes.

Q. That goes without saying, doesn't it?

A. Yes, indeed.

Q. And you were familiar also with the fact that the Town of Athens, Georgia, where the University of Georgia [fol. 956] is located, is also a very short distance from the City of Atlanta?

A. Yes.

Q. And that Tuscaloosa is a very short distance from Birmingham?

A. I don't know where Tuscaloosa is, but I will take your word for it.

Q. You knew it could be reached in a relatively short time?

A. I knew it was in the same state, yes.

Q. Did you specifically instruct Mr. Graham to go only to the City of Atlanta?

A. Only to the City of Atlanta? I believe I did, yes. Bearing in mind that this was in the nature of a preliminary—could have been a preliminary investigation. We had no idea for sure what Mr. Graham would get. It's in the nature of journalism that you first familiarize yourself with as much background as you get before you make any decision on how you will finally handle the stories, so that these instructions were to go to Atlanta, see Mr. Howard, see Mr. Burnett and if Mr. Graham called and said, "I have to go somewhere else," that could have been changed.

Q. There would have been no objection to his going somewhere else?

A. No economic objections, no, it would depend on how the story developed.

Q. Of course, the story, as you already said, was a very unusual type of story, wasn't it?

A. I have never seen another story like it.

Q. Did you place any time limitation on how much time Mr. Graham was to spend in Atlanta or on this investigation?

A. On this story, I think we wanted him to move with all deliberate speed, and get back as quickly as possible [fol. 957] after doing as complete an investigation as he could. There was no specific date, no.

Q. But you wanted him to make a complete investigation?

A. Yes.

Q. Then he was not given any time limitation within which to do that, was he?

A. I don't believe he was, no.

Q. Now, have you told us all that was said by Mr. Thomas and Mr. Schanche or yourself to Mr. Graham on February 20th, when you were discussing this matter?

A. There was a little small talk—not small talk really: "Be careful, Frank, this is a big one." Which I said in more of an informal way to him. You know, "Be careful, do a good job and let me hear from you." That was about all.

Q. And to dig into the story and make a thorough investigation and get all the facts?

A. "Be careful, Frank, this is a pretty big story." I said something like that to him.

Q. And you had reference to making a careful investigation; is that right?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Because you were interested in getting the truth of the entire matter, weren't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What amount was discussed as to what would be paid for the facts that you understood at that time to be for sale by Mr. Burnett?

A. I believe Mr. Schanche drew the contract between—I don't know whether it was between Mr. Howard—I guess it was between Mr. Burnett and the Post—and the sum I think was $500—I am sorry—$5,000.

[fol. 958] Q. Was that contract drawn at that time for Mr. Graham to take along with him?

A. No, it was not.

Q. And that would have been on the 20th; is that right?

A. On February 26.

Q. Was there any breakdown of the five thousand dollars in any periodic payments or was it just a lump sum of five thousand dollars?

A. I believe really Mr. Schanche would be the best source because I believe he wrote the contract, but I believe that it was in two installments, one of which would be payable on the furnishing of information which in our editorial judgment constituted a story, a printable story, and the other sum would be paid on or about the publication date, when the story was exclusively in the Post.

Q. And of course it was—provision was made for it to be an exclusive matter, wasn't it?

A. We aren't against exclusives, no. Certainly we were not upset that the story wasn't everywhere else.

A. We would like it to be. We wanted to have it to ourselves, yes.

Q. And that is the way it turned out, wasn't it?

A. Yes, it was. Although there were numerous offers of "Please make a deal and let us have your story" before the story came out, from other magazines.

Q. Now, what discussion was had at that time, still talking about the 20th, about a party by the name of Milton Flack, in this matter? You remember his name, don't you?

A. Yes, indeed. It is a very unusual name for a publicity man. I know that the name amused us. Flack, in the show business argot, is a publicity man.

[fol. 959] Q. Is that why you say it was unusual?

A. Yes, it is kind of funny, because a move press agent is called a flack.

Q. What does that mean?

A. It is a press agent and not a public relations counselor. A flack is someone who comes around from the studio to push the picture. I am not sure—I guess it is spelled "f-l-a-c-k," too. It is a kind of Hollywood term.

Q. Does it have the same connotation as a promoter, so to speak?

Q. Works for a promoter?

A. A press agent.

Q. A press agent is more or less a promoter, too, is he not?

The Court: What is the purpose of going into what Mr. Flack's name means? We are wasting time here. Let's go on.

Mr. Smith: I think we have just about run out of that, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Smith: Line 20.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. What was said about payments to be made to Mr. Flack for whatever part he played in this matter?

A. At that time there was no contemplation of paying Mr. Flack.

[fol. 960] Q. Well, when did the contemplation of paying him money in this matter come up?

A. Some time afterwards, and Mr. Thomas handled that particular payment, and you would have to get from him exactly when. I am sure there is a record of when he was paid.

Q. But Mr. Flack was paid some amount of money?

A. I believe five hundred dollars eventually, yes.

Q. Your recollection is five hundred dollars?

A. Yes.

Q. Eventually?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your understanding as to the purpose for paying him five hundred dollars?

A. Gosh, I think, you know, something would go with the check which would explain that. Payment for editorial services rendered, for helping.

Q. Did he render editorial services in connection with this matter?

A. I think, yes, he talked with Mr. Graham.

Q. He talked with Mr. Graham?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you call that editorial services?

A. Backgrounding is a service for which we will pay under many circumstances.

Q. Speaking of background, what did you know about the background of Mr. Milton Flack?

A. Personally, nothing, nothing about his background.

Q. What do you know about his background now?

A. Well, that he has been involved in a number of adventures, that germicidal venture of his—well, that he has been involved in a number of business ventures, that is all that I can really say.

[fol. 961] Q. But at that time you didn't know anything about Mr. Flack?

A. No.

Mr. Smith: Drop down to line 20.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. You knew at the time that you were having these discussions with Mr. Graham on the 19th and the 20th that this alleged intercepted telephone conversation had arisen in a rather unusual manner, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. I assume, then, that you knew that Mr. Burnett was claiming that he had listened in on an alleged conversation between Coach Butts and Coach Bryant?

A. Yes. Now, at one point we had been told that the conversation was overheard, and I had the initial impression that it was a conversation overheard—I believe we were told "by a student, and—"

Q. By a student?

A. By a student at the University of Georgia. The initial report was not what the facts later brought out.

Mr. Smith: Next page, Line 3.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. When did you get the information about Mr. Burnett allegedly overhearing it?

A. I believe on the 20th.

Q. Where did you get that information from?

[fol. 962] A. I heard it from Mr. Thomas.

Q. Well, had you in the meantime talked with Mr. Howard?

A. No.

Q. Mr. Thomas was doing the talking?

A. Yes.

Q. During that period of time?

A. Yes.

Q. With Mr. Howard?

A. No. With Mr. Strübing.

Q. Mr. Thomas was calling Mr. Howard about this matter in Atlanta?

A. No.

Q. And then you learned, apparently, that one George Burnett had allegedly intercepted a telephone conversation between Coach Butts and Coach Bryant?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. When did you understand that the interception of the telephone conversation had taken place?

A. Eight days before the game, which I believe at that —at that point I don't believe I knew the date, any more than that it was several days in advance of the game.

Q. And you are now referring to the 1962 game between the University of Georgia and the University of Alabama?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Smith: Next page.

[fol. 963] By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Now, knowing that Mr. Burnett occupied the status of an eavesdropper onto an alleged telephone conversation between two coaches in the Southeastern Conference, being made from one state to the other, what instructions did you give Mr. Graham about making a thorough and complete investigation of the eavesdropper?

A. I told him to—along the lines of—"check out Mr. Burnett."

Q. Is that about all you told him?

A. That's right.

Mr. Smith: All right, go to page 51, Line 11.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. I believe that you had something to do with the editorial that appeared in the April 27, 1963 issue of the Post entitled "The Name of the Game"?

The Court: Just a moment. Are we going into that editorial?

Mr. Lockerman: That is in the deposition, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, sir. I was under the impression that you were not going to get into that editorial.

Mr. Schroder: There were two of them.

[fol. 964] Mr. Smith: This will prove relevant.

The Court: I thought the editorial in the issue of April the 27th, that is the one I am referring to.

Mr. Schroder: The one we went into this morning was the other one.

Mr. Cody: My understanding is that that is out.

The Court: Sir?

Mr. Cody: My understanding is that that is out.

The Court: There was some discussion; I don't know which one it was. Could I see that one? I think it had some statements in there you wanted to exclude, but if it gets in there is going to be a wide door open.

Mr. Schroder: Probably still be here next week.

The Court: Yes, sir

Mr. Smith: Well, that covers only about one reference there which—[fol. 965] Mr. Schroder: Pass on to the next one.

The Court: I would instruct the Jury to disregard the last question and answer propounded by Mr. Smith to Mr. Schroder who was reading the deposition in regard to any editorial later printed by the Saturday Evening Post.

Mr. Smith: We will go to Page 54, Line 11.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. After Mr. Graham got to Atlanta and undertook this investigation, when did you next hear from him?

A. There was a party in Brooklyn—as a matter of fact, it was for my sister's birthday, and I had said to Mr. Graham, "When you get back to New York, get in touch with me right away."

At this party, which was on the Saturday night which was the day after Washington's Birthday, February 23rd, I went to the party and Mr. Graham arrived presently and I said, still with a kind of journalistic skepticism, still with the skepticism of somebody who does indeed believe in football coaches and in integrity, I said, "Nothing much down there, Frank?"

And Frank said, "Nothing much except this affidavit," and he reached for it in his pocket as I am doing now, and held out a paper, and I said, "We will talk business on Monday."

Q. That was the first word that you had from Frank Graham from the time he left to go to Atlanta on this matter?

[fol. 966] A. Yes, myself, yes.

Mr. Smith: Page 56, top of the page.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. So that then he, so far as you know, was in Atlanta on the 21st?

A. Yes.

Q. The 22nd?

A. Yes.

Q. Of February?

A. Yes.

Q. And then he was back in New York, and at the party in your sister's house or for your sister on the 23rd?

A. On the evening of the 23rd, having, I believe, taken a late plane on the 23rd. By "late plane," I mean a plane at about the dinner hour.

Q. So that you didn't discuss the matter with him any further at the party and you told him that you would see him later?

A. That's right.

Q. When did you see him next?

A. Monday, on Monday, the 25th. He had been working through the weekend on a rough draft of his story. On this same Monday I received a call from Furman Bisher, who was known to me as a good reporter and a sports editor of the Atlanta Journal.

Mr. Bisher called. He was in town on some business. I don't remember exactly. He was in New York on some business, I don't remember exactly, and he called me and he mentioned vaguely a major story in the South involving colossi of Southern Football, and did I know about it, and [fol. 967] was I interested in it? These were questions that Furman Bisher asked me.

Since at this time we were not certain what the story was or would be, and had decided on a policy of not discussing any of our reports with anybody, I said no, I didn't.

Mr. Smith: Go to Page 60, top of the page.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Did Mr. Bisher name any names of the colossi that were involved?

A. No, sir.

Q. He didn't?

A. No. He just said he had a big story and I ought to know about it.

Mr. Smith: All right, sir, 63, Line 13.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. After talking with Mr. Thomas about your call from Furman Bisher, did you then call Bisher back that day and change the appointment that you had made for the 26th, or did you keep that appointment?

A. No, I changed it to the 25th.

* * * * * * *

Roger Kahn, testified further by deposition as follows:

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Did you or did you not feel that quotes from Alabama players, would also be significant as a part of this story?

A. Yes, I did.

Mr. Smith: Page 81, Line 23.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. You also knew at that time that Mr. Graham had reported to you that a man by the name of John Carmichael was supposed to have been present when the alleged telephone conversation was intercepted. You knew that, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Smith: Page 100, Line 22.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. What do you mean when you say he would talk with those players or those coaches that good journalism would indicate?

A. If we could get Alabama players to talk about the specific coaching that they were given in the days leading up to the game, that would be helpful, too.

Mr. Smith: Page 112, Line 11.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. To what extent did they tell you that it was a fact [fol. 969] that Georgia didn't have anyone who could quick kick?

A. This is Graham quoting George Burnett.

Q. That is Graham quoting George Burnett?

A. Yes.

Q. And beyond that you did not go in your investigation to determine whether or not it was, in fact, true, did you?

A. No, sir, we accepted the statement from Mr. Burnett.

Q. You accepted that from Mr. Burnett?

A. Yes.

Q. Dealing next with the second point that you made, upon which you based your conclusion to accuse him of fixing and rigging, I believe you stated that it was based on the statement, again presumably by Burnett, that,

"Butts also said that Rakestraw (Georgia quarterback Larry Rakestraw) tipped off what he was going to do by the way he held his feet. If one foot was behind the other it meant he would drop back to pass. If they were together it meant he was setting himself to spin and hand off."

That was very significant, I guess, from what you have said in convincing you that the game had been fixed and rigged?

A. It's one fact in many, is what it was.

Q. One fact in many?

A. One fact in many facts.

Q. It was one of the facts among those that you just named as having led you to this conclusion?

A. Yes, one of a half dozen facts.

Q. One of about a half dozen facts?

A. A half dozen or so, yes.

[fol. 970] Q. Did you check with Mr. Burnett any further to determine whether or not he had in fact heard Coach Butts make any such statements as that which I have just read and quoted from?

A. No, sir, I did not check any further.

Q. You now know, don't you, as a matter of fact, that no such statement was made by Mr. Burnett to Mr. Graham, don't you?

A. No, sir, I don't know that no such statement was made. I am under the impression that the statement, as published here, is incorrect, but I don't know whether it was an error by Mr. Graham, by Mr. Burnett. I understand, as I say, that this statement apparently is wrong.

Mr. Smith: Page 115, Line 17.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Did you check to see whether or not in fact any passes were thrown to Woodward?

A. Into Woodward's zone?

Q. Into Woodward's zone.

A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't check on that?

A. No.

Q. Did you have anyone check on that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you, at any time before you made these charges for fixing and rigging against these two coaches, did you or did you have anyone review the films that were made of the game involved, to see actually what did happen?

A. I asked that that be done and I believe Mr. Bisher said they were unavailable.

[fol. 971] Q. But you did ask that that be done?

A. Yes.

Q. Who did you ask?

A. I think Mr. Bisher. I think on the Monday, the 25th, in that discussion, I think I asked Mr. Bisher to take a look at the movies.

Q, So you went ahead, though, and printed the story without having looked at the movies or without having had anyone look at them?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Smith: Page 118,—make that 121, Line 10.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Then it is not unusual for one college football team to be defeated by another by such a lopsided score as thirty-five to nothing, is it?

A. No, it's not at all unusual.

Q. In the editorial block that you wrote for this story, on Page 80, to which we have referred, you meant by what you said there, did you not, to imply that this game had been fixed and rigged by these coaches because of some betting angle, betting by the coaches, didn't you?

A. No, I did not.

Mr. Smith: 129, top of the page.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Did you have any information that there was any payment of any money or any other consideration that passed between Coach Bryant and Coach Butts for the [fol. 972] fixing that you say that they entered into?

A. No, sir. No indication of any money changing hands.

Mr. Smith: Page 130, Line 13.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. Do you know now that since the publication of this article, that Coach Griffith has disclaimed having said that you quoted him as having said, that is:

"I never had a chance, did I? I never had a chance."?

A. I understand he has and I understand that Mr. Bisher, who was the source of that remark, affirms that it was said.

Q. But you do now understand that Coach Griffith denies that he made any such statement?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Smith: 134, Line 11.

By Mr. Lockerman:

Q. So the fact is that you had no evidence of any motive whatsoever for the fixing and rigging, as you claim, of the game?

A. No evidence of motive.

WILLIAM C. HARTMAN, JR. called as a witness on behalf of the Plaintiff after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

[fol. 973] Direct examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. For the record will you please state your full name?

A. William C. Hartman, Jr.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Hartman?

A. 342 Dearing Street, Athens, Georgia.

Q. Are you a graduate of the University of Georgia?

A. Yes; I am; Class of 1937, B. S. in Commerce.

Q. While at the University of Georgia did you play football?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. What position did you play?

A. I played fullback most of the time. In my senior year, I played quarterback, halfback and fullback; not at the same time of course.

Q. You were the captain of the team in your senior year?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And after you left the University of Georgia, did you play professional football?

A. Yes; I played tailback for the Washington Redskins in 1938.

Q. Where were you born, Mr. Hartman?

A. Thomaston, Georgia.

Q. You have been a Georgian most of your life?

A. Yes. I have lived in Thomaston, Madison, Milledgeville, and Athens.

Q. After you retired or left the pro ranks, did you then engage in coaching?

A. I became backfield coach at the University of Georgia January 1st, 1939.

[fol. 974] Q. How long were you on the University of Georgia coaching staff?

A. I was there from that date until January the 16th, 1942, when I was ordered to active duty as a Second Lieutenant in the Reserves. I returned about February 1st, 1946, and remained on the coaching staff until about December, 1956.

Q. And you then retired from the coaching profession?

A. Yes.

Q. And your business is now what?

A. I am a life insurance agent.

Q. And your headquarters are in Athens?

A. Right.

Q. How long have you known Coach Butts?

A. Since 1928.

Q. 1928. That was before he came to the University of Georgia?

A. Yes, sir. When I was playing high school football in Madison, why he was coaching at Madison A & M.

Q. When you were on the coaching staff there at the University, was Coach Butts at that time the head coach?

A. At Madison A & M. I did not go to Madison A & M.

Q. I don't believe you understood. When you returned from the Washington Redskins and joined the University coaching staff, who was the head coach at that time?

A. He had just been selected as head coach at the University of Georgia.

Q. Was Coach Butts the head coach during the entire period that you served on the staff?

A. Yes.

[fol. 975] Q. Did you—your name was mentioned here previously by Mr. Bolton, I believe, as being one that attended a meeting in the office of Mr. Barwick that was attended by Coach Butts?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you attend more than one meeting—

A. Yes.

Q. On this subject?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Hartman, I think the meeting that was attended by Coach Butts, he only attended one meeting, did he not?

A. Coach Butts only attended one meeting.

Q. And that would be on Washington's Birthday, February 22?

A. It was Friday, February the 22nd.

Q. Will you, Mr. Hartman, tell us what was said by Coach Butts at that meeting as best you can recollect what it was.

A. Well, we started the meeting shortly after 10:00 o'clock, and we moved over from Cook's individual office to Alexander Wilson's office across the hall, because it was a larger office. At the meeting, I was there, Cook was there, Dr. Aderhold was there, Mr. Bolton was there, Mr. Colwell was there, Jim Dunlap was there, Bernie Moore was there, and Coach Butts and myself.

Substantially what was said, Dr. Aderhold opened the meeting by stating to Coach Butts that they had had a very serious situation arise and he guessed that Coach Butts wondered why they had asked him to come over all the way from Athens to Atlanta to this meeting, and that Cook, as a law member or the only lawyer on the Athletic Board had done most of the investigation in this situation, that he [fol. 976] would ask Cook to state and give him some idea of what the meeting was about. And so, Cook took over and related to him that on such and such a date that a man had come forward named—no, he didn't call his name, I don't believe, at that moment—and stated that he had come forward with a story that he had overheard a telephone conversation between Coach Butts and Coach Bryant of Alabama, and that during the course of that conversation he had made certain notes on football terminology which he had brought forward to the University's attention, and that was the reason for this meeting.

Q. What did Coach Butts say when he was presented with that statement?

A. Well, actually, I believe, when Cook got to that point he either handed or handed the notes to someone and asked Coach Butts to look at them, and I was watching fairly closely at the time, because—if I may digress a moment, Coach Butts didn't have glasses, and he can't read that type of information without his glasses.

Q. How do you know that? Do you have some background?

A. Well, from 1950 to 1956 it was my duty in every game that we played to type on cards about that size—I don't know what dimension they would be, but cards that you could carry in your pocket, the offensive information and plays that we wanted to use in the game and the defensive information and plays that we wanted to use in the game. This presented quite a problem, because if you were in San Francisco or Los Angeles, or wherever you might be, you had to look up a public stenographer, and it was always a real problem to get a public stenographer who had a typewriter with large enough type so that he [fol. 977] could see it, and we did type that information which is similar information to that contained in the notes on these cards, and we would give him a copy and he would keep them in his pocket, and we'd give a copy to several of the coaches, and the reason that, as I say, that I was wondering how he was going to read that, we had to double space the cards during the course of these ball games over a period of six years in the largest type available, and I was watching him at that point, and I believe, if I am not mistaken, that he borrowed J. D. Bolton's glasses to look at them, and my impression was that he looked at the front page and then he riffled through these succeeding pages, and I didn't think that he really had much knowledge of what information was contained in those notes at that point.

Q. What, if anything, did he say after he had, as you say, riffled through the notes or the sheets?

A. At about the time he got the notes and after he had looked at the front page, his remark was that he had talked with Bryant many times and that it was possible that a telephone conversation could have been overheard, and that he didn't even want to know the name of the individual concerned who overheard the conversation, but that it had been misconstrued, that he had—he had made many telephone conversations to Bryant, and I broke in at that time and I said I could—I knew from my own knowledge that since about 1948 or 1950 that Coach Butts had talked with Bryant many, many times and usually the football—the discussion was about football.

Back in, oh, the later 40's or the early 50's we had a play at Georgia called "37-H," which is a fullback off tackle with the right halfback diving into the line and blocking the defensive guard. At that time it was a right unusual play, [fol. 978] because you didn't usually call on your halfbacks to block a big guard as he dove into the line. And Kentucky, when Bryant was in Kentucky in the late 40's, actually that was the first time I ever saw that play, and I saw it in the movies of the Kentucky games, and I remember specifically at that time we took the play from the movies and used it, and I know at that time they had some discussion about 37-H, and over a period of time and since that time to the present he has talked to Bryant many times on football terminology.

Q. You being a coach in the past and being associated with coaches in professional and college ranks, is there anything unusual about coaches talking at some length about football in general?

A. It has always been true, and since World War II, when the T-formation came into play in the American picture, 98 per cent of the teams used the T-formation. That is the first time they had a real common language, because most of all of your T-formation plays have common names. A 29-tear play is probably the 29-tear play at Wisconsin, and this T-formation terminology came into being shortly at the end of the War or after the War.

Now, before that you had your single wing back; you had your double wing back; you had your short front; you had your Notre Dame box. Those plays were not easy to relate to each other.

When I was at Georgia playing under the Notre Dame box, running off a tackle was a 21-1 play; at the same time Alabama using the Notre Dame box it might be a 38 play. There was no similarity at all. But since the advent of the T-formation, there is a common language, and I met a high school coach on the street today, the chances are be- [fol. 979] fore we had talked very long I would ask him how the 31 trap was doing this year, and he would say, "pretty good," or "we are not getting the timing on the guard pulling."

Q. Does the University of Georgia, like universities throughout the country, hold any clinics during the summer attended by these high school coaches and other coaches throughout the area?

A. Since about 1946 or '47 we always had a clinic at the University and used the Georgia coaching staff in the lectures. I think probably that has been discontinued about 1960, but certainly from the time, a period of ten or eleven years there, we did have a coaching clinic, and attendance would be anywhere from 150 to 200 coaches, mostly high school coaches, in some cases college coaches, and the Georgia staff would lecture.

For example, if it was my job to lecture on pass defense, I would get up and say, "Here we are using a 5-4 defense pass, and if you are going to stop a 29 tear pass, you have to do this." The exact terminology is used that we used at Georgia, and it was copied down in many instances, and in many instances by the coach attending the clinics.

Q. The effect of which would be that high school coaches throughout the State would know the designation of Georgia plays?

A. Without question. They would have that in their notebooks by name, number and terminology. I was curious about this about three weeks ago and was playing golf with a high school coach and asked him what the 29 tear pass meant, and he said, "Of course, I know. I have got it in my notebook from your clinics." And I said, "How many [fol. 980] high school coaches would know that?" And he said, "Everyone, practically, that ever went through your coaching clinic."

Q. In these clinics, do the high school coaches throughout the area, are they also taught about the various formations that are used by the University of Georgia?

A. They are given verbatim our complete offense and defense. At that time it was generally in the spring and summer. There are really no secrets in football or any more since the moving picture taking of the games have come into play. I would be able to almost diagram a Tech off tackle play right now, having seen them in the Georgia Tech-Georgia game. It is all basic terminology.

Q. After Coach Butts borrowed from J. D. Bolton his spectacles or glasses, as you say, to take a look at the notes, what did he say?

A. He said—

Q. Or have I gone into that?

A. He said substantially that, "I have talked with Bryant many times, and it is possible that this gentleman, whoever he is, I don't want to know his name, could have overheard a telephone conversation and misconstrued the football language that was in the conversation."

Q. Was there any suggestion by anyone present at that meeting that Coach Butts sign an affidavit?

A. Absolutely not. There was never a mention made of an affidavit, except in one connection, and that was with the affidavit that Burnett had made me ten days or two weeks previously, and there was no mention of an affidavit being required of him by anyone in the room.

Q. You, or are you familiar with the notes which Mr. [fol. 981] Burnett said that he made at the time of the telephone conversation?

Mr. Schroder: And, Your Honor, I do not intend to go through them one by one. I think we have had enough of that. But I did want to ask him some general questions.

The Court: Let me ask him something.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. Mr. Hartman, you said the only mention of an affidavit in that conference was with reference to an affidavit which this other party, Burnett had signed; that is the only time?

A. That is the only time the word "affidavit" was used in reference to Burnett's affidavit.

Q. I believe you said his name wasn't mentioned at that time?

A. His name was not mentioned at that time.

The Court: What was your question, Mr. Schroder?

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Take a look at Defendant's Exhibit No. 12, please, sir, which you now hold in your hands, and tell me whether or not you are familiar with copies of those that you have seen?

[fol. 982] A. Well, I have seen these and also copies too. Of course, it's been some time since I have seen them. There are two items in this that are untrue. One is "can't quick kick." I assume they are talking about Georgia. Well, everybody knows that a T-formation quarterback from the T, lining up in the quarterback position, can't quick kick; he'd kick his center in the rear if he did, because there is only one foot behind; he is only one foot behind him, but everybody in the Southeastern Conference in the business of coaching football knows that the University of Georgia did quick kick, and they quick kicked by using that second string quarterback Saye, and they would put him about six to eight yards back of the center in a double wing formation or a shotgun formation or a short punt formation or some similar formation of that type where he would take the direct snap from the center and would have room to quick kick.

If I had been coaching Alabama and Coach Butts had told me that Georgia can't quick kick, I would have thought he was setting me up for a kill, because Georgia can quick kick and has done so in 1961.

Q. If you were, as you say, coaching the University of Alabama in preparation for a game to be played with the University of Georgia, and the information contained in those notes which you have there in your hands was given to you nine days or eight days before the football game to be played, state to the Court and Jury what assistance that would be or would not be to you in preparing your team to play the University of Georgia?

A. Well, I don't think it would be of any significance at all, because most of the technical information in these notes are basic T-formation plays. The University of Alabama, LSU, or anybody else, anybody in the United [fol. 983] States, somewhere in their offense has all of these plays.

And Georgia, for example, there is a lot of reference in here to slot right and things of that type. Georgia, in 1961, did use a slot right, and Alabama must have seen at least three or four movies, if they follow standard procedure on scouting, they saw the spring practice game of Georgia in 1962, and Georgia, in 1961, did use a slot right, and Alabama opening game of the year, would have to use slot right in the practice or they would not have been prepared to play it the first game.

So that if I had been Bryant, and my assistant coach had been scouting Georgia through movies or through the spring practice game, by August the 15th or certainly August the 25th, I think I would have known that Georgia had been in a slot right so many times, had been in a slot left so many times, that from slot right they would run a 27 play so many times from slot right, they would run a 46 play so many times. That is the type of statistical information that you really need to know in order to know the pattern that your opposing team is going to take.

Another item in this thing is a well disciplined football team; a "well disciplined ball club" is the way it reads. That is not true, because Georgia was not a well disciplined ball club, and most of your references here to personnel would be a matter of opinion.

Now, here is one. I don't know whether they go together or not, but there is a line that says "29-0 series, Babb catches everything they throw." If that term "Babb catches everything they throw" is related to 29-0 series, it would be impossible. 29-0 series is a series which means 29 over-

[fol. 984] pass. The 2 back, the halfback, that is part of the designation of the signal. The 9 means the hole, the widest hole to the right. It means the 2 back and the 9 hole is going to catch the overpass. I will coach it by going out and lining up as a flanker or they will put him in motion in the 9 hole. The 29-0 series, it would be very unlikely the end would catch the pass. It is designed to go to the man in motion or the man flanking.

Q. Then your testimony is, as I understand it, that if you were preparing to play the University of Georgia's football team, and that was given you, those notes were given you, you do not feel that you would make any use of them because they wouldn't be of any help to you?

A. No; I don't think it would be of any help to me. I would rely on my own scouting information I had gotten through statistical study.

Q. I forgot to ask you this a minute ago. Since your graduation from the University of Georgia, had you any connection with the Alumni Association?

A. Yes. I was President of the University of Georgia Alumni Society in two years and running; I think it was '51 or '52. I was President of the entire University of Georgia Alumni Society, and I am on the Board of Trustees now of the University of Georgia Foundation. I am at the present time Joint Chairman for the Georgia Side of the Joint Tech-Georgia Development Fund Drive over the State outside of the Atlanta area, and I did that job last year also, and I am repeating it this year.

Q. Since Coach Griffith became head coach at the University of Georgia, have you on occasion had the opportunity of discussing the team or the coaching staff with Coach Butts?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

[fol. 985] The Witness: Could I get a glass of water?

The Court: Sure. Bring Mr. Hartman a glass of water.

The Witness: You want me to go ahead and start answering or wait?

Mr. Schroder: You better wait.
The Witness: What was that question, now?
Mr. Schroder: Read it back.

(Whereupon the last propounded question was read aloud by the Reporter.)

A. (By the witness) Yes. Coach Butts and I, of course, have been talking about football for twenty years or more, and it is very seldom that we get together that the discussion doesn't get around to some sort of technical football discussion. Back when he resigned as head coach, whenever it was, '61, maybe, we were discussing the change in the coaching staff, and Johnny had just been made head coach at Georgia, and Coach Butts' statement to me at that time was that he thought Johnny was a conscientious young fellow who was a good organizer and who would do well in recruiting in his contacts with the Alumni, and [fol. 986] he thought the cause of his organization ability that he had a good chance of being successful. At the time I didn't agree with him, and we don't always agree on football, because I thought that he lacked—that he lacked Southeastern Conference experience, but he had mentioned to me a number of times since then that he thought that he would do a good job from the standpoint of being willing to work and having the organizational ability, and given time that he would be successful. And I always said, "I hope so." But I didn't know because the lack of coaching experience is a big factor when you get in the SEC.

Now, from time to time we have discussed the defensive and offensive plays of the football team from a professional objective standpoint. Most of the time Coach Butts would say, "Now, you can't talk about this to the man on the street because they wouldn't understand. It would have to be confidential." But we discussed the end play on the loose 6, the tackle play on the loose 6, the line backer play of the loose 6, and among other things, reference to defense, and we thought the tackle play was not good, that they were not getting across the line of scrimmage and not making contact and were ending up in the defensive secondary lot. The linebacker in many instances was being caught on the inside on a lot of things, and it was that type of professional criticism. We do the same thing about Auburn. We do the same thing about Georgia Tech. Any good football teams in this area, when two coaches get together, you are bound to get into a professional critique, you might call it.

One of the last discussions we had was on Lotheridge at Tech, and we agreed he did a real good job when he im[fol. 987] provised and got to running around back there, but he probably ought to get back in the pocket quicker and stand up straighter and improve his basic techniques. That is not a criticism of Lotheridge; that is just us two football coaches talking.

Q. Making an observation?

A. Yes.

Q. When Coach Butts was head coach at the University of Georgia, who was his most severe critic?

A. He was. Also my most severe critic at times from a football standpoint.

Q. Well, you have, from what you have said, gathered the impression that Coach Butts was a supporter of Coach Griffith at the University?

A. In all my conversations with him he was—he has, certainly up until recently, he has said he still thought that the boys on the coaching staff were—would hustle enough and would be organized enough to come out on top, and certainly he—he made that statement many times in the face of much opposition from a lot of people.

Q. Coach Hartman, over the years has Coach Butts or not had, shall we say, clear sailing with some member of the Board?

A. Well, anytime you are trying to build a successful team in the Southeastern Conference, it is a terrific job, and I would say that over a period of time from 1939 until 1958 or '59, '60, along in there, it's been a terrific struggle because of the dollar problem. The University of Georgia is not a rich school from the standpoint of the gate receipts, and we have had a problem for getting enough dollars for the number of scholarships permitted by the Southeastern Conference. The Southeastern Conference permits 140 scholarships, basketball, football. At Georgia I was chair- [fol. 988] man of the Scholarship Committee from '53 through '56, and in many instances we knew when we started the season that we could sign 140 boys, that we had sufficient dollars for that, and, of course, the SEC didn't mind how many you signed as long as you didn't sign over 140, but we also had to take into consideration our dollar problem, that we would set up definite schedules that if we signed up 140 and entered them in the fall quarter, we'd have to lose ten of them by January, the winter quarter, because we would not have the dollars to pay for 140 scholarships at the winter quarter registration, and we'd have to lose another ten by the spring quarter and get down to 120, so that we had the constant problem of trying to recruit and fit our personnel inside the dollar budget, whereas many schools in the Southeastern Conference had no dollar problem and simply got the 140 boys, and that was it.

Q. Did that result in some sort of feeling of some sort between Coach Butts and some of the faculty members?

A. Well, I think definitely he had a running battle over a period of years with them on this question of—he wanted to win football games, and, of course, they wanted to stay within the budget, and it was a problem, I think, between he and Mr. Hickman and J. D., and maybe one or two other members of the Athletic Board, the problem of trying to get enough football players on the dollars that you had.

Q. Did you find that you, as an assistant coach there, were also suffering from that same situation?

A. Well, I think anybody who was coaching at Georgia realized that they were competing with the giants of the SEC; they were suffering from the limited amount of dollars available.

[fol. 989] Q. And whose responsibility was it to put a winner on the field?

A. The head coach.

Q. Coach Butts?

A. That's right.

• • • • • • •

Cross examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Hartman, I understood you to—I understood you to say that Georgia had a play which you—which you called the 029, which is the one that you referred to?

A. I testified a moment ago about 29-0, which is a play enumerated.

Q. Did Georgia have an 029 play?

A. They have a current 029 play. It is a different play altogether. 29-0 is a pass, and 029 is the—

Q. There is a difference between the two?

A. Yes.

Q. Two different plays?

A. Two different plays altogether.

Q. You mentioned a moment ago something about Coach Butts' dissatisfaction with some of the coaches procedures down there. Did you ever hear him say they didn't have anybody on the coaching staff that was SEC material?

A. Not to me; no, sir. In fact, he was very emphatic, he thought they were good enough to succeed, given time.

Q. What was the nature of the criticism that you heard him make of Coach Griffith?

A. Well, his chief criticism was about the techniques. [fol. 990] It wasn't necessarily of Johnny; it was the whole coaching staff; and I think he felt like maybe Johnny, because of inexperience on the side line, was not able to recognize what was going on.

Q. Would that include Coach Trippi?

A. Yes. At times he was critical of me while I was coaching.

Q. You have been gone from there quite a while?

A. Several years; yes sir. But in football he is a perfectionist, and many a time he has told me to get the pass defense right, and I have heard him—

Q. But, as a—

Mr. Schroder: Let him finish the answer.

A. (By the witness) I have heard him say, I don't know how many times, from a technical, professional standpoint over there that he wasn't critical of it.

Q. Don't you know, Mr. Hartman, the extent of that criticism has been such that the Alumni of the University have been generally talking about it?

A. To my own knowledge I have never heard him say any critical—

Q. How about the Alumni?

A. People have told me; yes.

Q. Did you know Coach Butts had made speeches in which he openly was caustic about this entire coaching staff?

A. I have been told that.

Q. Haven't you been to two or three meetings yourself where that subject was discussed?

A. Mr. Cody, I don't ever recall going to a meeting and hearing Coach Butts talk, in the last two years, anyway; I don't ever remember attending a meeting in which he [fol. 991] had made a speech, except the Athens Touchdown Club in Athens, and he was not critical at that time.

Q. In the travels you make over the state in connection with your work for the University, and you do some Alumni work?

A. Yes. I don't do any paid work for the University.

Q. I understand. Isn't it true that there is hardly a place that you have been in in the last two or three years where this subject was not discussed?

A. No; that is not true. Hardly a place, I have been some places where it has been discussed.

Q. Well, how many places?

A. I couldn't say.

Q. But it is—

A. I go to many places every day.

Q. But it is a good many places, though, isn't it?

A. That is the report I have been told.

Q. Now, do you have any idea, Mr. Hartman, when this so-called criticism started, can you give us any date or an estimate of it? I am not trying to pin you to any exact date.

A. I really first heard about it seriously, in any quantity, probably last fall, late in the fall.

Q. That was after he became athletic director?

A. Yes, sir; about eighteen months after he became athletic director.

Q. In Mr. Barwick's office when you met there with these representatives of the University, is this a statement that was subsequently made by you concerning that meeting: "My comment after reading the notes—"

Mr. Schroder: Where are you reading from, please, sir?

[fol. 992] Mr. Cody: On Page 42.

Mr. Schroder: Thank you. Just a moment; let me catch up with you.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. "My comment after reading the notes was that I didn't see how a man could overhear this in a telephone conversation, not being familiar with football terminology, and be able to write such specifics down there."

A. I made that.

Q. Then by that you mean that these notes do not contain some reference to specifics?

A. They contain reference to specifics in all T-formation football that is played in the United States.

Q. Mr. Hartman, from your experience in football, haven't you found that the important—one of the important things about an opposing team is when they play to use a particular play or formation, not what the formation is but when they intend to use it; isn't that true?

A. Well, I would think prior to a ball game I would be more interested in their pattern which is established by review of movies and things of that nature; in other words, if Joe Doaks came to me and said, "Georgia Tech is going to shift on you in the first ball game," that would be interesting, but I do know that Georgia Tech's basic bread-and-butter plays are the sweep, the quick pass to the end, and four or five other things that I ascertained statistically.

Q. Isn't it true, Mr. Hartman, in modern football there [fol. 993] are only about eight or nine formations in all; isn't that true?

A. Are you sub-dividing the T-formations into the various slots, flankers and flys?

Q. That would be a various of each formation, but basically there are only about eight or nine formations.

A. As practiced in American football, there is not but one now, to any degree, and that is the—Tennessee is different—it is a single wing back. UCLA—

Q. I mean, formations used by different teams, basically, there are only about eight or nine?

A. I have never really counted up the number in the T-formation. If you are subdividing the T-formation, is that what you are doing?

Q. I can't testify. I am asking you. I can't help you on that.

A. Well, ask your question again.

Q. I am asking you if in modern football that there are only about eight or nine basic formations?

A. I would say there are not but about three.

Q. Now, when you—when you are training a team for the first game of the season, would it be helpful to an opponent to know what they were training for, which formations they were training for?

A. Well, if they had specific information on that it might be, although they would probably already know, because I would have to train them for the first game, the same stuff I used in the spring practice game. I can't teach them in two weeks—

Q. You wouldn't be able to teach a young team, by the first game of the season, all the formations that you intended to use during the entire season; is that a fair statement?

A. Now, you and I have got a different conception of [fol. 994] "formations." I would say that the T-formation is one formation, and that in spring practice you would install your basic task series your going to use, your basic slot series you are going to use, your basic trap series you are going to use, and your basic sweep series you are going to use, and your basic passes, so that the stuff you used in your spring game would be the stuff you'd have to use in the first game, especially when it was that close, that early.

Q. Now, Mr. Hartman, when Mr. Schroder went over with you the nature of the notes—

A. Uh huh.

Q. —which you have in your hand there, or a photostatic copy, sort of a blown up copy of them, did he go over in detail with you the testimony of Mr. Burnett which enlarges on the information in those notes?

A. I don't believe I have ever discussed with Mr. Schroder anything about the notes.

Q. Well, have you discussed it with anybody in his office?

A. I don't recall seeing any blown up things. I saw these, and I saw the photostatic copies.

Q. Who have you discussed these notes with?

A. With Mr. Bondurant, primarily.

Q. How about Mr. Schroder's office; who, in that office, have you talked to?

A. I think I talked with Mr. Smith and Mr.—

Q. Lockerman?

A. —Lockerman about several months ago but not in much detail.

Q. Did they show you the deposition that had been given by Mr. Burnett?

A. No.

Q. What was this you said a moment ago about the [fol. 995] statements made by Coach Butts that were confidential? Will you repeat that? I didn't—

A. I said that in our many discussions about football, we discussed a lot of teams, and when he was talking about Georgia in recent months, he always said, "Now, of course, I couldn't go out and say this to the man on the street because they wouldn't—they don't know what we are talking about. They wouldn't realize the implications of this thing, and I would be severely criticized." That was his implication, that if he went out and told that to the man on the street—

Q. Do you—

A. It is a very technical discussion. You can't—all you have got, you look at a football team playing, you come back subconsciously with definite implications to you what that football team does well, and, naturally whether it be Georgia or Auburn, or whoever it may be. And I remarked to him on many times the way to beat Georgia was to run wide, run off into the flat. Nothing traitorous about that. I have spent a lot of time out there on the field for Georgia, but that is just a true thing. I think I told Dr. Aderhold that last fall. It is just a sad situation that is brought about by many things, but that is the type of criticism.

Q. When you were talking about that criticism you were discussing—you were discussing his resignation in the early part of 1961, were you not?

A. Coach Butts' resignation?

Q. Yes.

A. No. We were talking mainly about the '61 football season, during the course of the 1961 football season and during the course of the 1962 football season as they were played. You couldn't criticize in '61 the problems of the [fol. 996] football season of '61; it hasn't been played.

Q. Let me ask you this question, then. Do you recall when your deposition was given before a Court Reporter on June the 11th—

Mr. Schroder: Page, please.

Mr. Cody: On Page 29.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. —that this question was asked you, and I want to ask you if you gave this answer. "Did he indicate to you"—meaning Coach Butts—"any bitterness over his resignation or resentment about it?" And you gave this answer: "Well, I think he indicated that insofar as the four people that we have been discussing, that he felt like that they were pretty less than loyal to try to use those tactics to get him out." Was that your answer to that question?

Mr. Schroder: I don't remember the witness having testified to anything contrary to that today.

The Court: Wait just a moment; what is that, Mr. Schroder?

Mr. Schroder: I said I do not remember the witness having given any testimony in that area today. I don't know the purpose of reading the deposition to him. Ordinarily [fol. 997] it is to discredit the witness or prove contradictory statements previously made by him.

The Court: I think he had him on cross-examination, Mr. Schroder. I think he can go into statements he made previously concerning his termination as athletic director. I will let him answer.

The Witness: Mr. Cody, that is a true statement, but it didn't involve any members of the coaching staff or the university. They were four outside individuals.

Mr. Cody: I see.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Coach Hartman, did you testify that while you were coach on Coach Butts staff at Georgia that you had a play described as the 29-0 series?

A. 29-0 was an abbreviation. It is 29 over; that is the 29-0 referred to here.

Q. Did you know that that name or description of that play is not being used by the present Georgia coaching staff, that is, was not used in 1962?

A. Are you asking me whether I knew that 29 over was used in 1962?

Q. Right.

A. I don't know. I don't recall seeing it, because it involves a man in motion, or it recalls a man stationed wide as a flanker where the quarterback—where the quarterback gets behind the center, takes the ball like that and [fol. 998] throws to a flanking back who is out about twelve yards or to a man in motion.

Q. Did you know that none of the coaches, present Georgia coaches who have testified in this case have recognized this description, but that now you recognize it as a play used by Coach Butts while he was the head coach at Georgia; is that your statement?

A. No; I didn't know that. All I know is what 29-0 means to me.

Q. I want to ask you this question now, Mr. Hartman. At this meeting that you attended in Mr. Barwick's office, did Mr. Barwick have with him at that time an affidavit signed by Mr. Burnett?

A. I would say if he did I don't remember seeing it.

Q. Do you know whether or not he acquainted those present at that meeting with the substance of that affidavit?

A. I believe he did, without revealing the name, but I don't think he ever showed it at that meeting.

Q. Will you state to the Court whether or not Coach Butts ever denied at that meeting that the conversation referred to in that affidavit did not take place?

A. The only thing I remember him saying about that at all was the fact that he had made many telephone calls to Bryant, and that if a person overheard a telephone conversation that he had made, that it could—he could have misconstrued some reference to football terminology. The only thing that he denied was that he had ever done anything to hurt Georgia, and he repeated that several times.

Mr. Cody: I believe that's all.

[fol. 999] Redirect examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. He didn't deny that; he asserted it, did he not?

A. He asserted it.

Q. When Mr. Bondurant of Mr. Cody's office was over there discussing those notes with you, did he show you Mr. Burnett's deposition?

A. No. I don't recall ever seeing Burnett's deposition.

Q. Did you—the first time you saw those notes was sometime in January, 19—let me return those to the Court Reporter before we get them all soiled. The first time you saw these were in January, 1963?

A. Wednesday, February the 13th.

Q. You don't know when they were made?

A. Have no idea.

Q. Don't know who made them?

A. Nothing other than what they told me.

Q. Who said that, Burnett, the man who said he made them?

A. Who?

Q. Burnett?

A. I believe Burnett, when he came before us in a meeting that we had, did say he made the notes.

Q. That is all you know about it?

A. That is all I know about it.

Q. When Wallace Butts resigned as head coach, did he not recommend Johnny Griffith as the head coach?

A. That was my opinion.

Mr. Cody: That is not in rebuttal of anything, Your Honor.

[fol. 1000] Mr. Schroder: Rebuttal? I am putting up my case.

The Court: I think it is admissible. I will let him testify to it. I overrule the objection.

The Witness: I might qualify that. Dr. Aderhold told me that.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Dr. Aderhold told you Coach Butts had recommended Coach Griffith as the head coach to succeed him?

A. (witness nods affirmatively).

Q. Answer so the Court Reporter can get it down. Just say "yes".

A. Yes, yes.

* * * * * * *

WILLIAM C. HARTMAN having resumed the stand, testified further as follows:

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Hartman, you understand you are still under oath in this case as a witness?

A. Yes, sir; I do.

Q. Do you recall that following the 1960 football season that you had a conference—

A. Yes, sir; I recall.

Q. —with Mr. John Bailey, Mr. Hicks Mizell, Mr. Dan Whitmire, and Mr. Dan Spain?

Q. I don't believe it was following the 1960 football sea-
[fol. 1001] son; I think it was in late November of the 1960 football season.

Q. Was that conference in Atlanta?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was it?

A. Capitol City Club.

Q. Was Mr. Harold Walker there?

A. I think he was; I am not sure.

The Court: Who are those parties you mentioned? I know Mr. Harold Walker. How about the other parties?

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Would you describe who they are?

A. You want me to name them?

Q. Who is Mr. John Bailey?

A. Mr. John Bailey is a boy—a graduate of the University of Georgia. I believe he is a native of Georgia who is in the insurance business now.

Q. Went to the University of Georgia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was Mr. Dan Whitmire one of the recruiters for Georgia?

A. I would think you would class him as one of the alumni recruiters; yes, sir.

Q. By "recruiter" you mean one of the young men that contacted prospective players?

A. Right. He'd go out and—.

Q. Undertake—

A. He was not an official representative, of course, like the University, but like many of the supporters of the University of Georgia he would try to influence boys to come.

Q. More or less a voluntary assignment?

[fol. 1002] A. Right.

Q. Inducing young men to come to the University of Georgia that were athletes?

A. I wouldn't say "induced them"; try to get them to come to Georgia.

Q. And Mr. Hicks Mizell, who was he?

A. I didn't know Hicks too well until that meeting. Hicks, I believe, is a manufacturer's representative here in Atlanta, and I assume that he is a graduate of the University of Georgia.

Q. Well, what did you discuss at that meeting with—

Mr. Schroder: Your Honor, that is out of the presence of the plaintiff.

The Court: Yes, sir. I am not going—

Mr. Schroder: You said, what did he discuss.

The Court: I think he can ask what was discussed. That would be hearsay.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Did—did the subject matter of Mr. Butts come up?
A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: Same objection.
[fol. 1003] The Court: I think that would be hearsay, Mr. Cody.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Now, after that meeting did you have a conference with Coach Butts?
A. I went back and talked to him.
Q. Did you tell him what transpired at that meeting?
A. I did.

Mr. Cody: I think now, Your Honor—
The Court: That is not hearsay; that is in his presence.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Will you tell the Court what transpired in that conversation with Coach Butts?
A. With Coach Butts?
Q. Yes.
A. I told him that these boys, young boys in Atlanta were extremely upset over the recruiting in this section, in the Atlanta area particularly, and they felt like that with him as the coach at the University of Georgia they could not do a good recruiting job.
Q. Why?
A. Because of their—what they told me—

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor please, unless he went into that with Coach Butts, it would not be admissible.
[fol. 1004] The Court: I assume he went into this with Coach Butts. I understand this is a conversation between Mr. Hartman and Coach Butts; is that correct, Mr. Hartman?
The Witness: Yes, sir.
The Court: I overrule the objection.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Tell us what that was.

A. They objected to his activities in what was referred to as the Night League.

Q. The Night League?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you understand it to be?

A. I understand it—I understood it to be—

Mr. Schroder: I don't think it is important what this witness understood it to be but what Coach Butts might have thought it would be. What this witness understood somebody else to say and put his interpretation on it—

The Court: Yes, sir; I sustain the objection to that, but I will let him continue the conversation with Coach Butts.

Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir.

[fol. 1005] By Mr. Cody:

Q. Tell us the entire conversation you had with him.

A. Well, let's see; that was quite a while ago. In substance, it was mainly that these four boys—there was another gentleman there too, Frank Spain who was not a graduate of the University of Georgia, that these four boys objected to him as a head coach at the University of Georgia.

Q. Do you mean to tell the Court now that that is the full conversation you had with Coach Butts?

A. That is the sum and substance of it; yes, sir.

Q. Would you like to refresh your recollection by referring to the deposition which you gave several months ago?

A. Yes.

Mr. Cody: May I see his deposition?

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, may I inquire as to the relevancy of this?

The Court: I believe Coach Butts testified under direct-examination, or he stated that he resigned in 1961 because of high blood pressure—

Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir.

The Court: —in the last two games.

[fol. 1006] Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir.

The Court: And I think it is relevant for the defendant to show, if he can, or if he cannot, that that was not a true statement. I presume that is what it is for.

Mr. Schroder: Is that what this is directed towards proving, that that was an untrue statement?

Mr. Cody: Right.

The Witness: You don't have this indexed, do you?

Mr. Cody: I will give you the page number.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. First look at Page 8, Mr. Hartman. Do you—can you now state whether or not Mr. Arthur Montgomery was the other gentleman you mentioned who did not attend the University of Georgia?

A. No, sir; I didn't say Mr. Arthur Montgomery didn't attend the University of Georgia. I said Mr. Frank Spain did not.

Q. Was Mr. Montgomery at this meeting?

A. Yes, sir; Mr. Montgomery was at the meeting.

Q. Now, first—the first reason that you gave which I believe, if you refer to Page 8, see if that refreshes your recollection.

A. Yes; I stated—I stated here, I imagine, it did say it [fol. 1007] was on account of Coach Butts' activities in the Night League in Atlanta. "What do you understand by activities in the Night League to mean? I would assume that would mean appearances in various nightclubs in Atlanta."

Q. Did you have any—did the conversation with Coach Butts include any discussion about who he was with at these nightclubs?

A. No.

Q. Did it include the subject matter of his—of his conduct at these nightclubs?

A. He never has discussed that with me.

Q. Was that any part of this conversation that you had with Coach Butts?

A. Mine with Coach Butts, no.

The Court: As I understand it, Mr. Hartman, or am I incorrect, Mr. Arthur Montgomery is a Georgia alumni?

The Witness: Yes, sir. Mr. Arthur Montgomery is a Georgia alumnus, and he is very active in alumni work.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Look at Page 21, Mr. Hartman, and see if that refreshes your recollection to the extent of correcting any statement that you have just made. I want to know now if you informed Coach Butts of anything else which is the subject matter of this complaint by these Atlanta alumni.

A. I presume you have reference to this question: "Did you inform him of these rumors which are being referred to by this Atlanta group?" And I said, "Yes, sir, I did. [fol. 1008] What did you tell him the rumors were? The same as we have already discussed here, that these boys seemed to think that he was making appearances in public places over there, such as nightspots and so forth, with groups, girls, and so forth. Did you indicate to him there was any implication of an immoral relationship with any of the girls with whom he appeared in these nightspots?" And then there was some—my answer was: "Other than association I didn't tell him, I believe. I don't believe I had any specific immoral situations called to my attention in that connection other than just association."

Q. Now, in relating the substance of this conversation, Mr. Hartman, was there any other subject which you communicated to Coach Butts at that time other than what you have related?

A. No; nothing other than what I have related.

Mr. Cody: I believe that's all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Mr. Hartman, Coach Butts did discuss with you about the plans he had to resign as head coach because of the last two games, that he had a condition on the side?

A. Coach Butts told me that it had been an uphill fight all the way, and with his high blood pressure and the flood of the heat he had had on the sidelines he didn't think the flutter he had was worth it.

The Court: The flutter he had?

[fol. 1009] The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. The four individuals you named that made, what you indicated a moment ago, complaints, did not include Arthur Montgomery?

A. They did not include Mr. Montgomery.

The Court: How did Mr. Montgomery—I am not sure; how did Mr. Montgomery get in?

Mr. Schroder: He was just at a meeting, that he and Mr. Hartman attended a meeting at these boys' request.

The Witness: Mr. Montgomery was vice-chairman of the Georgia Student Education Fund at the time, and I am the chairman, and in coming to Atlanta I contacted Mr. Montgomery and asked him to be with me.

Mr. Schroder: Just a moment, please.

Mr. Cody: I have a couple of other questions, Mr. Hartman, I want to ask you.

Recross examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. After you had this conference with the Atlanta alumni that you mentioned, did you then tell Coach Butts [fol. 1010] that if he didn't resign they were going to the Athletic Board about this subject.

A. I told him it was my opinion there was a probability of him going to the Athletic Board.

Q. Didn't they tell you that?

A. In the first part of the conversation, but in the latter stages of the conversation he indicated a weakening of that desire.

Q. You had something to back up your opinion, factual matter?

A. It was my opinion they might go to the Athletic Board.

Q. Let me ask you this question, Mr. Hartman. You, I believe, have already testified, and I want to go along with you one hundred per cent, but you are one of the prominent alumni of the University?

A. No, sir; I have not testified that I was a prominent alumnus of the University. I am an alumnus of the University of Georgia.

Q. I will concede to that. What—what is your opinion, if these factual matters that you have mentioned were true, what is your opinion with respect to whether or not it would hurt the University?

A. Insofar as my personal knowledge is concerned of these matters, I know of no situation that would hurt the University.

Q. Let's assume, for the sake of argument, that they are true; would they or not, in your opinion, hurt the University?

A. Well, I think you are asking me to make an assumption I never have made. I don't see any reason for me to make such an assumption.

The Court: I think Mr. Hartman can testify as an expert [fol. 1011] on football, but I don't think he can testify as an expert on assumption of hypothetical facts such as that.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Can you pinpoint the dates of this conference you had with Coach Butts?

A. With Coach Butts?

Q. Yes.

A. In my opinion, it was after the Georgia-Auburn game of that year which would mean we have an off week there before the Tech game, so it must have been approximately the third week in November of that year.

Q. When did he resign?

A. I believe his resignation was announced the last week in December or the first week in January.

Mr. Cody: I see. That's all.

The Court: Do you have any further questions?

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. These four boys or any four of the boys indicate they were representing any group other than just themselves?

A. No; I don't recall them—I had known these boys fairly well, with the exception, maybe, of Mizell, and they did not indicate, I don't believe, at the time that they were speaking for anyone other than themselves.

[fol. 1012] Recross examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Did you—did you acquaint any members of the Athletic Board with this situation?

The Court: I believe that would be hearsay.

Mr. Lockerman: That would be hearsay, Your Honor.

Mr. Cody: Not what he did, Your Honor, what they did.

The Court: I will let him testify if he acquainted them, not what he said.

The Witness: I am not certain, but it is possible that I told Cook Barwick.

Mr. Cody: I believe that's all.

Mr. Schroder: I have no further questions.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. Are you on the Athletic Board, Mr. Hartman?

A. No, sir; I am not.

Q. Who makes up the Athletic Board?

[fol. 1013] A. You want the composition of it?

Q. I don't care about the individuals; in various categories or what.

A. To the best of my knowledge there are eight faculty members. I forgot whether that includes the President of the University; he is on the Athletic Board and chairman. Whether that eight includes him in the figure, I don't remember. And there are seven non-faculty members on the Athletic Board, two of whom are selected each year by the Alumni Society of the University of Georgia.

Q. In other words, the faculty members could control the Athletic Board if they saw fit?

A. If everybody block-voted, I guess you could say the faculty could control it.

CHARLES DAVIS THOMAS called as a witness on behalf of the plaintiff, after having first been duly sworn, testified by deposition as follows:

Cross examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. You have told the reporter your name is Charles Davis Thomas?

A. Yes.

Q. Where do you reside?

A. 135 Central Park West.

Q. What is your present occupation?

A. I am managing editor of the Saturday Evening Post.

Q. As such, what are your responsibilities?

[fol. 1014] A. Well, under the—I edit the magazine under Clay Blair, Jr. I am the second editor, second managing editor of the Post.

Mr. Smith: Next page, line 20.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. How old are you?

A. 34.

Q. How long have you been employed by Curtis or the Post?

A. I have been employed by Curtis since of February of 1961.

Mr. Smith: Go to Page 34, line 18.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Let me point out to you the statement in this story which says, and I read from Page 83, at the bottom of the second column:

"But careers will be ruined, that is sure." So that you knew what was involved in this story before it was published? You knew that the careers of two men would be ruined as a result of the publication of the story, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. And you would make certain that every source available to you, or every source that might be made available to you, was thoroughly investigated to the nth degree before you would let such a publication as this go before your 18 million readers?

A. Perhaps I might clarify things if I said "every significant source."

[fol. 1015] Q. Or 23 million. Let the record show 23 instead of 18. Is that right? How many readers do you have?

A. We claim 23 million. That is what our circulation people tell us.

Q. The standard of conduct followed by the journalism profession certainly would demand that the most particularityness of care be exercised before it would publish any article which it knew in advance would ruin the career of a man or careers of two men?

A. Yes, and that is the policy we pursued in this case.

Q. Now, when the affidavit which Mr. Graham took from Mr. Burnett was brought back here by Mr. Graham and read to you and to Mr. Kahn, you knew then that a Mr. John Carmichael had been present and discussed these notes with Mr. Burnett on the very day that he says that he wrote the notes and heard the conversation, and you knew that then, didn't you?

A. If this is in the affidavit, yes. If not, subsequently hereafter.

Mr. Smith: Page 39, line 19.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. The affidavit, you said you attached a great deal of significance to the affidavit, which you said supported your belief that he was telling the truth?

A. Yes, sir; he swore to it.

[fol. 1016] By Mr. Schroder:

Q. At that time, of course, you were familiar with the fact that he had been arrested and convicted of passing bad checks. You know what a bad check is?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What are you representing to the person that you are writing that check to when you give him the check?

A. That you have funds to cover the draft.

Q. Well, is that a lie when you don't have the funds?

A. Excuse me?

Q. Is it a lie when you represent to the man that you have the funds and you don't have them?

A. Yes.

Q. And that didn't affect your belief in the credibility of one George Burnett just because he swore to you that this was true?

A. It was a matter that we took into consideration.

Q. Did you take it into consideration to the extent that you made any further investigation as to how many other bad checks he had written?

A. We were aware that there were possibly others at the time, yes.

Mr. Smith: Page 60, line 17.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. You deliberately didn't interview him?

A. Not deliberately. We didn't see any point to it. He told Burnett—

Q. You made up your mind not to interview him, didn't you?

A. Yes.

[fol. 1017] Q. When you, as a responsible journalist, have under consideration the publication of an article which you know will ruin the professional careers of two men, you feel the necessity of relying on more than just plain hearsay evidence, don't you? You want to go and get the real facts, don't you?

A. Well, I expect my writer to.

Q. I mean the Post. I don't mean you individually.

A. All right, all right.

Q. The Post?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Smith: Page 62, line 24, bottom of the page.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Now, there were other items which occurred to your sports editor yesterday as being highly important to be checked out before this story was published. One was the notes Burnett said he took at the time he overheard that telephone conversation. Do you agree with that?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever see those notes?

A. I have, yes.

Q. When?

A. After publication of the article.

Q. You went on and published it even though you didn't have that source of information available to you, which you thought was so important you went ahead and published the article without getting that information—

A. We knew the notes existed.

[fol. 1018] Q. But that is not—you wanted to see the notes before you published the article?

A. We would have liked to see the notes, yes.

Mr. Smith: Page 65, line 4.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Another item which Mr. Kahn—now, whether you agree with him or not, you let me know—told Mr. Bisher he thought the statement from the Alabama football players ought to be obtained.

A. Yes.

Q. But that was never obtained or those were never obtained, were they?

A. It was my understanding that Mr. Bisher was unable to come up with a player that he thought would add anything to the research on the story.

Mr. Smith: Page 66, top of the page.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. In other words, what you are saying is this: had Alabama football players been interviewed and said, "No, we saw no difference in the way we were prepared for this game than the way we had planned for it in spring practice," you would not have put that in the article?

A. We might have.
Q. The chances are that you would not?
A. No, I would not say that.
Q. You might not?
A. I said we might have put it in the article.
[fol. 1019] Q. Might have?
A. Yes.

Mr. Smith: Page 68, line 20.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. But don't you know that if your reputation and your character were at stake and about to be ruined, don't you think that you would like to have the full story presented to whoever was going to judge this thing?
A. It depends on what you mean by the full story.
Q. Carmichael's story.
A. The full story—perhaps we should have gone further into Wally Butts' financial connections, and his personal life, and we didn't. That is part of the story, too, but we didn't print that. There wasn't room. It wasn't germane.
Q. What is the objection, as a responsible journalist, to writing the pros and the cons of a story, particularly when a career is involved? As a responsible journalist.
A. There is no objection. One has to narrow—you have to narrow the field somehow to get an article written. Otherwise, you could spend five years writing the article.

Mr. Smith: Page 71, line 23.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Now, you have gone to some length in explaining your reliance upon what Coach Johnny Griffith had to say. Now, don't you know that he has denied having said three direct [fol. 1020] quotes from him in this article?
A. I am aware of that.
Q. Did you submit this article to him to check out his quotes before you published it?

A. No, it is not our practice to submit articles to people who are involved in the article for their approval.

Q. You think—

A. This is true in journalism. You rely on your reporters.

Q. Do you think it is fair to the man who is being quoted or to your 23 million readers to put what you would term as important quotations from that man, when not accurate?

A. At the time we publish them we believe they are accurate.

Q. Have you taken any steps to inform your 23 milllion readers that they were inaccurate quotations?

A. I am not convinced that they are inaccurate.

Q. Even though the man you are relying on says they are inaccurate?

A. It may be a question of the context, and I am not sufficiently familiar with the detailed sources of those quotes to be able to say one way or the other. I am not questioning Coach Griffith's veracity.

Q. Let me put it to you this way: You thought enough of the quotes from Coach Griffith to put them in your article, in order to, as you say, ruin the career of two men. You thought enough of them to put them in there, didn't you?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you relied upon them?

A. Yes.

[fol. 1021] Q. And your 23 million readers read what you were relying upon?

A. That's right.

Q. It has now come to your attention that he has denied making three of those quotations. What corrective steps have you taken in order to clarify the atmosphere with your 23 million readers?

A. We have taken none.

Q. There is another—

A. Had Coach Griffith wanted to write us a letter pointing this out, we would have been happy to publish it in the "Letters" column of the magazine.

Mr. Smith: Turn to the next page, line 9.
Mr. Joiner: What page, please, sir?
Mr. Smith: Next page.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Furthermore, the careers have already been ruined, at least the one of Wallace Butts.

Now, you rely again—and you checked this article before it was published? You read it very carefully because it was such an important, shocking, significant story?

A. Are you talking about the article or the editorial?

Q. Yes, the article.

A. Yes.

Q. I am now quoting from the left column on Page 81, which is the first column in the story. This is a quote from [fol. 1022] Burnett, directly, you were quoting from Burnett:

"Butts also said that Rakestraw (Georgia quarterback Larry Rakestraw) tipped off what he was going to do by the way he held his feet. If one foot was behind the other it meant he would drop back to pass. If they were together it meant he was setting himself to spin and hand off."

That would be, in your opinion, a right vital bit of information for the defensive football team to know about the offensive quarterback of the other team?

A. Yes.

Q. And that is why you put it in the article?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know that George Burnett has now said that Butts didn't say that to Bryant?

A. I understand that is true, yes, but—

Q. Have you done anything in connection with correcting that bit of misinformation that you were giving your 23 million readers?

A. No, we have not.

Mr. Smith: Page 83, line 9.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Do you intend to imply anywhere in this article that there was any betting on this game indirectly or directly by the principals involved?

A. No.

Mr. Smith: Page 92, line 17—18, rather.

[fol. 1023] By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Are you familiar with the fact that I, as Coach Butts' attorney, wired the Curtis Publishing Company on March 11, 1963, requesting that the article which I had learned through the grapevine was to be published, that it not be published, and in that telegram I wired as follows:

"As Coach Butts' attorney I am informing you here and now of the falsity of the charges contained in the proposed article and to respectfully request that you in the interests of fair and accurate reporting refrain from publishing or otherwise releasing said article so as to avoid totally unnecessary damage to my client. Letter follows."

A. Yes, I saw a copy of that telegram.

Q. Why was it never answered?

A. I referred it to counsel.

Q. It was never answered, was it?

A. I don't know that. I didn't answer it.

Q. I also on that same date wrote a registered letter, return receipt requested, again calling to your attention the absolute falsity of the article and pointing out to the Post the damage or destruction that it would do to my client's reputation and again requesting that it not be published. Did you know that such a letter had been written?

A. Yes.

Q. That also was not answered?

A. I don't know. I didn't answer it.

Q. The article in the issue of March 23, 1963, did come out, as it had been printed?

A. Yes.

Mr. Smith: Page 101, line 21.

[fol. 1024] By Mr. Schroder:

Q. You referred to a portion of the article a moment ago that was changed because you wanted some editorial information from Burnett about the "ordeal" he said he was going through. Did you ever consider it somewhat suspicious that he sat on this matter for almost four months without going to the law about it or without going to the coach of the Georgia football team about it or without going to anybody about it?

A. I thought it a matter of interest, which is why I asked that a fuller explanation—a fuller explanation of why he didn't, be written into the article.

Q. Don't you think if one had done what he claims he did and was interested in football, that he would have done something about it before the game was played, had he actually thought it was to be a rig or a fix?

A. I can't speak for Mr. Burnett. I think—

Q. You would have done it, would you not?

A. Yes, I would have, but I don't expect everyone to behave in the way that I do.

Robert Henry Edwards, called as a witness on behalf of the plaintiff, after having first been duly sworn, testified by deposition as follows:

Direct examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Give me the circumstances now as to what took place [fol. 1025] and what was said when you saw him on January 5th?

Mr. Schroder: "Him" being Burnett.

A. He brought notes in and I looked at them.

Mr. Schroder: Your Honor, I now want to read another portion of Mr. Edwards' deposition, Page 66.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. When is the next time that you had any connection at all with the Butts-Bryant story?

A. The next time was, I got down to Dublin and I stopped in Dublin to get a cup of coffee and I placed a call to Johnny at that time and reached him and he was getting ready to go out to the West Coast to a football clinic or coaches' conference or something.

Q. That was on January 5th?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you called him at any time before that on January 5th?

A. No, sir; no, sir.

FURMAN BISHER, called as a witness on behalf of the plaintiff, after having first been duly sworn, testified by deposition as follows:

Direct examination.

Q. Was any conversation had at that meeting pertaining to reviewing movies of the game?

[fol. 1026] A. To my knowledge, no. There might have been, and if it did it didn't figure importantly in any of our discussions. I would have said that it would have been a very good idea, though.

Mr. Schroder: One further question.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Did Mr. Graham or any representative of the Post ask you to check with Alabama players in your investigation?

A. No.

Mr. Schroder: Now, if the Court please, it will be remembered that during the depositions yesterday references were made to what Mr. Bisher had informed the writer of the story. I want to read a few sections from Mr. Bisher's deposition relating to those topics which the writer says Mr. Bisher had furnished him.

The Court: You adopting Mr. Bisher as your witness?

Mr. Schroder: I am adopting him as my witness for this purpose; yes, sir.

The Court: If you adopt him as a witness, he is a witness for all purposes.

Mr. Schroder: All right, sir, I have no objection at all to that.

[fol. 1027] The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Schroder: Because they—well, I will argue that to the jury.

The Court: The point I was making, he was not under the Federal Rule an adverse witness.

Mr. Schroder: That's right, sir. Could I see board No. 2, just a minute, please. Question to Mr. Bisher—

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Returning to the article in the Post of March 23, 1963, I am going to read to you, Mr. Bisher, from Page 81 of that article, and I will bring it over there where you can check my reading, and I will read a section from the second column of Page 81 which is headed, "Putting the Pieces Together", and it reads, "In the next few hours Burnett tried to piece together what he knew of Georgia football. Butts, a native of Milledgeville, Georgia, had joined the University coaching staff as an assistant in 1938. A year later he was named head coach. For 20 years he was one of the most popular and successful coaches in the South. Then prominent University of Georgia alumni abruptly soured on him, and on January 6, 1961, he was replaced by a young assistant coach named Johnny Griffith. Butts, filed away in the position of Georgia's athletic director (which he had held along with his coaching job for some years), was outspokenly bitter about his removal from the field." Did [fol. 1028] you inform that information to the author of the article?

A. No.

Q. Did you furnish to the author of the article, Mr. Bisher, any part of that section which I have just read?

A. No, I did not.

Mr. Schroder: On Page 55, reading from Mr. Bisher's deposition—

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Did you at any time in conversation with any representatives of the Saturday Evening Post, including Frank Graham, Jr., discuss the figure $70,000 that is referred to in that section of the article that Butts is supposed to have lost?

A. To my knowledge, no.

Q. Now, did you pass that on to Frank Graham?

A. I said I did not.

Mr. Schroder: The next one, Your Honor, is on page 57.

Mr. Smith: Is that another column?

Mr. Schroder: That is Page 82, column 2, board 5. It begins at 56.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Reading again from the second column on Page 82 of the Post issue: "Griffith had since spoken of his feelings when he had finished reading Burnett's notes and Burnett [fol. 1029] and Edwards had left. 'I don't think I moved for an hour—thinking what I should do. Then I realized I didn't have any choice.'" The quotes and internal quotes that I just read were given by you to Frank Graham?

A. The prior sentence I had nothing to do with. I did not furnish the prior sentence, reading this way: "Griffith has since spoken of his feelings when he had finished reading Burnett's notes, and Burnett and Edwards had left."

Q. You did not furnish that?
A. No, I did not.

Mr. Schroder: Your Honor understands I will connect these up with Mr. Graham's deposition when I address the jury.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. This is one on Page 83 of the article which has already been referred to, "one of the wildest ones—"

The Court: You still reading from Mr. Bisher's deposition?
Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. I refer specifically to Page 83. It says, "One of the wildest was that Butts was mysteriously and suddenly ill and had entered the State Hospital at Athens. This was quickly scotched when Georgia University officials maintained that Butts merely went for the physical checkup required for his pension records. Shortly afterward he was [fol. 1030] seen in Atlanta at a Georgia Tech basketball game." Did you furnish any of that information to Mr. Graham or the Saturday Evening Post?
A. No, I don't know where they got that.

The Court: All right, sir, anything further from Mr. Bisher's testimony?
Mr. Schroder: I am checking, Your Honor. One final question from Mr. Bisher.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Did you give information to the Saturday Evening Post that motion pictures of other games were being scrutinized?
A. No.

* * * * * * *

JOHN C. CARMICHAEL having resumed the stand, testified further as follows:

Recross examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Carmichael, you understand you are still under oath in this case as a witness?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And under cross-examination?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall that on three different occasions you [fol. 1031] have testified with reference to these particular notes?

A. I don't know about three occasions, but I have testified; I don't know how many occasions.

Mr. Cody: Let me have the notes, if you have got them, please.

The Clerk: All right, sir.

Mr. Cody: Just leave them right there for a minute. I will straighten them out.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Do you remember appearing in Mr. James Therrill's office on March the 21st, 1963, to give some testimony in relation to this matter?

A. I don't remember the exact date, but I appeared in his office; yes, sir.

Q. That was over at the State Office Building?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. I'd like to ask you, Mr. Carmichael, if there was a record made, if you recall, of what you said on that occasion?

A. There was—there was no one sitting there making a record. There was a tape recorder there taking down what I said.

Q. Have you since that occasion had an opportunity to read a transcript that was written up of what that recording showed?

A. Yes, sir. I called—they printed something in the paper that I didn't say—

Q. I am not asking you that.

[fol. 1032] Mr. Schroder: I think he has got a right to explain.

The Witness: I have got a right to answer a question.

The Court: Just a moment. Let him ask the question and I will permit Mr. Carmichael to explain it.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. I asked you if you have seen a transcript?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of your statement that morning?

A. Yes, sir; I have. Can I explain that, how I saw it?

The Court: Wait just a moment, then I will permit you to explain it.

Mr. Cody: I don't want him to go into some argument with me now about why he said it.

The Court: I am not going to permit him to do so.

Mr. Schroder: I certainly think he ought to be permitted to explain.

The Court: I think he could explain it, Mr. Schroder.

[fol. 1033] Mr. Schroder: Right, sir.

Mr. Cody: I haven't asked him yet what he said on that occasion. I want to get that in first. Then I will let him explain it.

The Court: All right, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Did you make this statement—

Mr. Lockerman: Whereabouts?

Mr. Cody: On Page 5.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. —referring to Mr. Burnett's occasion when he called your attention to this conversation: "He did have some papers that he said were notes. I did not read these notes." Did you make that statement?

A. I didn't pick them up and read them; no, sir; but I did see the notes.

Q. Did you make that statement?

A. If it is in that transcript, I made it.

Mr. Schroder: That is not contradictory to anything in this case.

The Court: I will let him explain.

[fol. 1034] The Witness: All right. You asked me if I had occasion to read a transcript of this. I picked up a paper a few days later, and the paper had a statement that was attributed to me that I didn't make.

Mr. Cody: Well, Your Honor—

The Witness: Accordingly, I called Mr. James Therrill and told him I wanted a transcript of everything I had said on that tape recording, and he sent it to me, and that is how I got to read it.

The Court: Let me see the notes just a moment. Are you through with him?

Mr. Cody: No, sir.

The Court: All right, sir, go ahead.

Mr. Cody: I am through with the notes. I wanted to lay them out there where he could see them.

The Court: All right; go ahead.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Do you remember—do you remember making this statement or Mr. Therrill putting this question to you and [fol. 1035] you making this particular answer which I will read; it is on Page 17. "Mr. Therrill: Now, you didn't actually read the notes or go over them with Burnett after he had taken them down?" And your answer: "No, I didn't." Is that correct?

A. If that is what is in that transcript, sir, I am not saying I didn't say it.

The Court: Well, is it correct?
The Witness: Sir?
The Court: Is it correct?
The Witness: It is not correct. I did see the notes, Your Honor.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. In other words—in other words, you misrepresented the facts to Mr. Therrill on that occasion?
A. No, sir; I am not trying to misrepresent anything to anybody.

The Court: I don't think that is a proper way, Mr. Cody. I think that tends to get into argument. You can read what he testified then and what he testified yesterday.
Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, there is no discrepancy between the two.
[fol. 1036] Mr. Cody: I think that is argument.
The Court: That is a matter for argument.
Mr. Cody: It is improper.
The Court: But I don't think his question was proper.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. "Question (By Mr. Therrill): Did Burnett ever relate to you what he had heard over the telephone?" And your answer: "Yes, he did, that day. He told me that very day, as soon as he laid down the phone exactly what he had heard. I guess he told me what he had heard." Did you make that statement?
A. If that is in there, sir, I made the statement.

Mr. Lockerman: And will you finish it where he goes on to say "I don't know".
The Court: Address the Court instead of interrupting like that; address the Court, and I will—

Mr. Lockerman: Well, Your Honor, I do take exception to that.

The Court: I say, you can address the Court for that, Mr. Lockerman.

[fol. 1037] Mr. Lockerman: Yes, sir.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Now, do you remember that I took your deposition later on June 26, 1963, and I am reading from Page 8, and I want to ask you if this is a correct transcript of the questions and answers propounded to you at that particular time, referring to the notes now. Question: "Did you examine them? Answer: I did not take them in my hands, no, sir. He sat back down at my desk and I sat down in a chair next to it and he was telling me. He laid these notes out and he was telling me the things that I just mentioned. He laid the notes down on the desk. They were laying there and I did not see them, but I—"

Mr. Lockerman: If Your Honor please—

The Court: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. "—did see them."

The Court: Just a moment; just a moment.

Mr. Lockerman: I have a copy of that transcript, and he is over on Page 9, and he says, "He laid the notes down [fol. 1038] on the desk. They were lying there." My copy reads, "And I did see them."

Mr. Cody: I am fixing to correct it.

The Court: Let him get to it, then.

Mr. Lockerman: I mean, Mr. Cody read, "I did not see them." My copy reads, "I did see them."

The Court: He read it incorrectly, is that what you are saying?

Mr. Lockerman: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir; I am fixing to correct it.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. "He laid the notes down on the desk. They were laying there, and I did see them, but I did not pick them up and look at them." Is that your answer?

A. That is absolutely true, sir.

The Court: Give me a copy of the deposition.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Now, Mr. Carmichael, do you remember that on June 26, 1963, you gave another deposition in which these notes were discussed?

[fol. 1039] A. I think it was all at the same time and at the same place.

Q. One I did not participate in, however. This was the deposition taken by Mr. McCall?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. A Birmingham attorney?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor please—

The Court: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. On Page 78—

Mr. Lockerman: —I don't happen to have that; may I have the Court's copy?

The Court: I don't think we have a copy of it. I presume he was sworn in another matter. I don't have a copy of it.

Mr. Cody: Mr. McCall was present. Maybe he has a copy he can lend him.

The Court: I don't need it; go ahead.

Mr. Cody: Can I read along with him?

[fol. 1040] The Court: I think you can probably lend one to Mr. Lockerman, if there is another one available.

Mr. Schroder: You don't mind if I sort of look on?

Mr. Cody: No.

The Court: Let Mr. Schroder look over your shoulder.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. I am starting to read—

The Marshal: Let's have order, please.
The Court: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. —from the bottom of Page 78 this is Mr. McCall's question, still speaking of the Burnett matter: "He did inform you on that occasion that Coach Butts told 'Bear' Bryant that Georgia at this time had one of the greatest football players that had ever played in the history of the University of Georgia?" And your answer: "I don't remember the name of the player, but I do remember that he said that one of the players was a great football player, one of the greatest, he said." Question: "And they had added two new coaches?" Answer: "And they had added two new coaches." Now, getting down to the notes, Question: "I [fol. 1041] believe you stated earlier that you saw some notes?" Answer: "Yes, sir." Question: "Were the notes on a single sheet of paper or many sheets of paper?" Answer: "No, on several sheets of paper. I don't know the exact number." Question: "There was more than one sheet?" Answer: "Yes, sir." Question: "Was it in pen or pencil?" Answer: "That I cannot remember, sir. I just don't know." Question: "Was it on a yellow piece of paper like this or a white piec of paper?" Answer: "There again it was on a pad that I had on the desk. I believe actually—I believe it had a gr y tint to it. It was not white, it was not yellow, I don' believe. I believe the paper had a gray—whitish-gray tint to it." Question: "Was it a ruled piece of paper or just blank?" Answer: "No, sir, a piece of paper—a plain piece of paper except for the man's name that we got it from that was on it, I believe." And then turning to Page 81. Question; "Did he say anything about the notes he took down as part of this conversation?" Answer: "Well, he had the thing there about the ballplayer being great and a note, and as I say, I didn't pick them up and read them, but I remember that particular thing, and also about the two coaches that were added and also about the fact of the Sunday—fact of the Sunday bit that I mentioned." And then turning to Page 90, still discussing the notes, Question: "Would you recognize the notes, Mr. Carmichael, if you saw them again?" Answer: "I am sure I would, sir." Question: "And were they in a stack or pile, or were they spread out on the desk?" Answer: "They were on several pieces of paper, and while he was talking to me he laid them out one at a time, you know, laid them out on the desk there in front of me." Question: "He never related to you what was on those several pieces of paper?" [fol. 1042] Answer: "He didn't pick them up and read them, no, sir, if that answers your question." Question: "No. I am not asking you that. But as he was putting them out in front of you or placing them in front of you, he never told you what was written on those several pieces of paper?" Answer: "He was telling me about this fellow being a great player and about the coaches and about him asking if he would be home on Sunday. This is the three things." Question: "Those are the only things he told you about—only three things he told you about?" Answer: "This is the only three things I can recall him stressing anything on." Question: "You never looked at those notes outside of seeing them on the desk?" Answer: "I never picked them up. I looked at them there on the desk." Question: "Did you read any of it—any of the writing on the paper itself?" Answer: "No, sir, I didn't pick them up to read them." Have I correctly read the transcript of your testimony given in that case?

A. If that is my transcript, sir, you correctly read it, with the exception that I did see the notes and I did see what was written on them, and I will say that now, sir.

Q. Then you have changed your testimony, haven't you, Mr. Carmichael?

A. If it says I didn't, I am correcting it to say I did; yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: Your Honor, that doesn't—

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Do I understand your testimony now to say you—

[fol. 1043] Mr. Schroder: Read it back to him—excuse me, Your Honor. I don't think he fully understood.

The Court: Let him read that portion back.

Mr. Cody: What portion do you mean?

The Court: About reading the notes or not reading the notes.

Mr. Cody: All right, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Question: "Did you read any of it—any of the writing on the paper itself?" Answer: "No, sir, I didn't pick them up to read them."

A. That's right. I didn't pick them up to read them, but I did read them, sir, and they were laid right under my nose to where I could see them, so, I am testifying now that I did read what was wrote down there.

Q. Now, getting back to the evidence which you gave to Mr. Therrill when you were there, on Page 5: "He did have some papers"—referring to Mr. Burnett—"that he said were notes. I did not read these notes."

Mr. Lockerman: If Your Honor please, he has already read that. I marked it as having been read a moment ago.

[fol. 1044] The Court: Is this some of the testimony, or is this—

Mr. Cody: This is the same, but I wanted to get back to it to see if he wants to correct this statement.

The Court: I don't think you can keep repeating, Mr. Cody.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Carmichael, you—

Mr. Cody: Let me get one other paper here.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Where had you been on the morning of September 13, Mr. Carmichael?

A. I believe I had been to my dentist; Dr. Davis in Buckhead.

Q. Who is that?

A. Dr. Davis.

Q. What Davis is that?

A. H. M. Davis.

Q. At Buckhead?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You know what time you left his office?

A. Well, it was early in the morning I went, and I believe that I—in fact, I am not a hundred per cent positive that is where I went, but I believe that is the only place I could have gone. I will put it that way to you, sir.

Q. Do you have any independent recollection other than that where you might have been?

[fol. 1045] A. I haven't even asked Dr. Davis if I was there that day, but I am pretty sure that is where I was at.

Q. I believe you testified on direct-examination that Coach Leahy at Notre Dame brought his football team down there and brought his players out there to eat with you.

A. I have fed a lot of football teams out there, sir.

Q. Did Coach Butts bring some of his team?

A. No, sir; I never fed the Coach's team.

Q. Did Coach Butts come out there and eat with you?

A. As I mentioned, he eat out there the day I met him; yes, sir.

Q. Well, did he come out there thereafter?

A. No, sir; he was not a regular customer of mine.

The Court: Didn't we go over that yesterday?

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Did I ask you yesterday, Mr. Carmichael, if at these various businesses that you operated, these night spots, if you had floor shows in all of them?

A. Yes, sir; you did.

Q. What was your answer?

A. In all of the supper clubs I operated I did have floor shows. I did not have a floor show, however, at this place we mentioned earlier. All I served there was food; it was strictly a restaurant. But in the supper clubs I had I did have floor shows in all of them.

[fol. 1046] Q. What—would you mind giving me the names, again, of these supper clubs?

A. Well, I had—

Mr. Lockerman: We went over all that yesterday.

The Court: We went over that, Mr. Cody. What is the use of repeating it?

Mr. Cody: I believe Your Honor is right. I think it is improper.

The Court: There was one at the Clermont Hotel, and so forth.

Mr. Cody: I withdraw the question.

The Court: Is there anything further?

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. I want to find out from you—I want to find out from you, Mr. Carmichael, what the nature of these floor shows were.

The Court: What is the relevancy of that?

Mr. Schroder: What is the relevancy of that?

[fol. 1047] The Court: I think we are getting off—

Mr. Cody: I withdraw that if I can't connect it up.

The Court: —far afield.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Let me ask you this question, Mr. Carmichael. Did you ever have a conversation with Mr. Scaggs—

Mr. Schroder: Who?

Mr. Cody: Mr. Scaggs.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. —who is an officer of the Foundation Life Insurance Company in which the notes, these Burnett notes were discussed?

A. No, sir; I sure have not.

Q. You have never talked to him about it?

A. I have never talked to Mr. Scaggs about these notes. I have set in on a conversation where it was discussed, but I didn't do any talking.

Q. Do you remember on March the 12th, 1957, filing an application with the City of Atlanta for permit to sell alcoholic beverages or mixed drinks?

A. No, sir; I don't recall that particular date.

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor, what is the relevancy of that?

[fol. 1048] The Court: I don't know. I was waiting—how do you plan to connect that up?

Mr. Cody: I want to show that he has misstated in this application—

Mr. Schroder: Let him see it.

The Witness: What date is that, sir?

Mr. Cody: March 12, 1957.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Is that your signature on that paper?

Mr. Schroder: Do you have another copy of it?

Mr. Cody: What?

Mr. Schroder: Do you have another copy of it?

Mr. Cody: No, no.

The Witness: That is my signature; yes, sir.

[fol. 1049] Mr. Schroder: May I, as Mr. Butts' attorney, have a chance to look at the paper?

The Court: Yes, sir; yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: I haven't seen it.

The Court: I haven't either; I don't know the nature of it.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Do you see the fifth question on that application?

Mr. Schroder: May I see what it is, Your Honor, that he is referring to?

By the witness:

A. (By the witness) They are not numbered. Would you like to read it, sir?

Q. "What was—"

The Court: Just a moment; just a moment. I don't know what is in that affidavit.

Mr. Schroder: I don't either. May I look at it before he goes into it, Your Honor?

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

[fol. 1050] The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: That is all right.

The Witness: I have no objection to that.

The Court: While this discussion is taking place—you may step down, Mr. Carmichael.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

(Whereupon the witness was excused from the stand.)

The Court: I will permit the jury to refresh themselves on the outside from now until twenty minutes of twelve, and, as previously, I must admonish you not to discuss the case among yourselves or permit anyone to discuss it in your presence during this fifteen-minute interval. You may now pass out; everyone else remain seated.

The Marshal: Everyone else remain seated, please.

(Whereupon the jury retired from the courtroom at 11:23 a.m.)

The Court: What is it?

Mr. Schroder: This is the document.

[fol. 1051] Mr. Cody: You want me—I can give you the substance of it.

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Lockerman: Let him read it.

The Marshal: Let's have order, please.

Mr. Schroder: His Honor will know what it is when he takes one look at it.

Mr. Cody: Might as well take a look at this one at the same time. It's another one.

The Marshal: Everyone remain seated, please.

The Court: Let me see the other one.

Mr. Cody: I'd like to state what the relevancy of it is.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: I want to show to the Court that on two different occasions he applied to the City of Atlanta for license—[fol. 1052] permit to sell drinks, which is the substance of that application.

Mr. Schroder: I think the application is to sell beer.

Mr. Cody: It's what they call a pouring license, but let's—

Mr. Schroder: Well, it reads "beer."

The Court: Is that the legal pouring license?

Mr. Cody: I think that is what some people call it, but I want to prove by this instrument that they asked him on both occasions whether or not he had ever been convicted of a crime. If Your Honor will let me see it just a minute, I don't want to misquote the application, and I want to show the first one—

Mr. Schroder: I thought you didn't have any extra copies.

Mr. Cody: The first one having been signed on the 2nd day of July, 1940, where it says: "Have you ever been convicted or plead guilty to a crime in any court?" The answer to which he says is "no". And I expect to show that he was convicted on two different occasions, one in the State of Ohio and one in Fulton County, Georgia. One of them, the conviction in Fulton County, Georgia, being in connection with the illegal sale of liquor, and was fined five hundred [fol. 1053] dollars. And I say it goes to the credibility of the witness when a misrepresentation of that sort is made; and, secondly, in regard to the—now, the conviction in Fulton County, however, was not until after that particular application was made, so the one—it was in 1949. Now, this March 12, 1957, they asked him: "Have you ever been convicted or plead guilty to a crime in any court"? And he made a checkmark by the answer which says: "Yes". "If so, state the offense and date." Then he puts "1932 but I was not guilty and was released." I want to show to the Court that that is a false statement. I have a duly authenticated copy of the proceedings in which he was tried and convicted and served a sentence in connection with that conviction. And I say that it goes to the credibility of this witness, and we are right down to a point in this case, Your Honor, where credibility of a witness—

The Court: All right. 1940; that's twenty—he made an explanation of it. 1940; that's twenty-three years ago.

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

The Court: All right, sir; now, what is—

Mr. Cody: I say that on the—on the credibility of a witness it is a very important issue in this case, because he has stated that these are different notes from the ones which he was first shown when this Burnett affair first came to his attention, and I say that the credibility of a witness in that [fol. 1034] respect is most important.

The Court: Oh, I agree with you; credibility of a witness in any case is most important, but on the second question, which was in '57, he says—he says, "1932—" I don't think that is correct; I think it was 1933, is my recollection.

Mr. Cody: Right, sir.

The Court: "But I was not guilty and was released." I don't know whether that is a false statement or not. Most anybody is never guilty, even though they—and released, they are eventually released.

Mr. Cody: But that is not a correct answer. This question says: "Have you ever been convicted and plead guilty?" My point is, he was tried and convicted.

The Court: That is in 1940, the application you have there.

Mr. Cody: No, sir; this is 57.

The Court: Oh, I must be—I have got the '57 one here. In '57 he says—"Have you ever plead—if so, state the offense and date." "1932." That was, as I say, incorrect; it was 1933. "But I was not guilty and I was released." I [fol. 1055] don't know whether that is a false statement or not.

Mr. Cody: I think it is for a jury to determine. I think the best that can be said in his favor, it is evasive; but I think it is false.

The Court: These are beer permits according to the petition.

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir. Look at the—look at the—we expect to show the '49, the 1949 conviction in Fulton County.

The Court: All right, sir; what about that?

Mr. Cody: That would—

The Court: Is that a crime involving moral turpitude?

Mr. Cody: It wouldn't matter. It is a misstatement in this application; it is a misrepresentation to the public authorities, and it goes to the credibility of this witness. That is the—that is the purpose in the City officials undertaking to issue these licenses to see that they are issued to people without a criminal record.

The Court: Well, what is your '47? Is that an application for a beer license?

[fol. 1056] Mr. Cody: '49. No; the '49 was the date of the conviction that I referred to in Fulton County.

The Court: What was that for?

Mr. Cody: In which he was tried and convicted and fined five hundred dollars.

The Court: Well, that would not be a crime involving moral turpitude.

Mr. Cody: No, sir, it would not. We are not talking about impeachment; we are talking about credibility.

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please—

The Court: Go ahead.

Mr. Schroder: —I am asking for a copy of the conviction. Mr. Cody is standing up here saying he was convicted, and I ask for a copy of the conviction; he says he doesn't have it. He is talking about this '47 thing?

The Court: In Fulton County.

[fol. 1057] Mr. Cody: That is a matter of proof.

Mr. Schroder: Well, do you have it?

The Court: The Fulton County—the Ohio conviction, I have seen that, but I am not familiar with Fulton County.

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir; I have that, and I propose to introduce it in evidence again, but the conviction was on March the 22nd—no, it involved a matter that occurred in 1949, but was tried on March 22nd, 1950, in the Criminal Court of Fulton County, case number 225,584. I will be prepared to present a copy of that to the Court if—

Mr. Schroder: As I understand it, that is the only way he could prove it is by a certified copy.

The Court: He is not attempting to do that. I believe, Mr. Schroder, he is trying to show that the witness made application for a beer license, I assume under ordinances of the City of Atlanta, and in that application he made a sworn statement to the effect that he had never been convicted of a crime.

Mr. Schroder: You mean—

The Court: And I assume—I haven't seen that particu- [fol. 1058] lar, your later application, the application he actually had been convicted of a crime. That is a proper way of impeaching him, but I am not going to let you go back into this '33 conviction. I don't think he—there is a question in my mind whether he improperly answered that question, but on your liquor violation, if you have—I assume he would admit it, and if he doesn't, that is a matter—

Mr. Cody: All right, sir.

The Court: But I am not going to let you go back into that '33 one.

Mr. Schroder: Just a minute.

Mr. Lockerman: May I point out something to the Court?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Lockerman: He is claiming he improperly answered this question that he is referring to, and I assume he is talking about the one of March 12, 1957, application for beer license. The question was: "Have you ever been convicted —" and then they have struck out, you know, "or plead guilty to a crime in any court." There is a—

Mr. Schroder: He checks "yes".

[fol. 1059] Mr. Lockerman: He checks "yes". The form itself has two answers, one "yes" and one "no". This copy which he has furnished to us shows he checked the answer "yes, I have been convicted", and then he shows that it was in 1932.

The Court: Well, I am not going to let him go into that. What I was questioning him about was the violation of some liquor law in '47, '49.

Mr. Schroder: Violation of some liquor law in '47 or '49?

The Court: That is what he said.

Mr. Schroder: Well, he answered "yes".

The Court: How many applications do you have there, Mr. Cody?

Mr. Cody: Two.

The Court: Let me see the second one. I have only seen one of them. I had two copies of one; I mean, they are the same one.

Mr. Lockerman: That is the one in 1957.

[fol. 1060] The Clerk: Let me have those two?

Mr. Cody: Here is one of 1957, March 12.

The Court: I have that one. Where is the other one?

Mr. Cody: Here it is. I thought it was given to you.

The Court: Well, the one on July 22, 1940, they asked the question: "Have you ever been convicted or plead guilty to a crime in court?" He says, "No."

Mr. Lockerman: That's right. That was twenty-three years ago.

Mr. Schroder: And the liquor law hadn't been violated.

The Court: I am going to exclude that evidence. I want to be fair to the witness. I am going to rule it out. I want to talk—I want to ask the witness some questions when he comes back.

Mr. Cody: Are you ruling out the 1957?

The Court: I am ruling both out. Let's take a recess for ten minutes.

[fol. 1061] (Whereupon Court recessed at 11:35 a.m., reconvening at 11:52 a.m.)

After Recess

The Court: You may continue. Did you want some more questions from Mr. Carmichael?

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir. I thought the Court said he wanted to ask him some questions.

The Court: No, sir; I am not going to ask him any questions.

Mr. Cody: I have one more.

The Court: You have one more?

Mr. Cody: I want to ask him about that—

The Court: All right, sir; all right, sir; let him come back in.

JOHN C. CARMICHAEL having resumed the stand, testified further as follows:

[fol. 1062] Recross examination (continued).

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Carmichael, in March of 1950 were you tried and convicted in the Criminal Court of Fulton County on the illegal charge of liquor?

A. No, sir; I don't believe so. If you have got a record, sir, to say I was, I was.

Q. I am asking you—

A. I don't ever remember being charged in my life with the illegal sale of liquor.

Q. Were you tried in the Civil Court of Fulton County and convicted of any such charge—

A. I was tried—

Mr. Schroder: They don't try those cases in the Civil Court of Fulton County.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. In March of 1950—

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor, that is not the proper way to do it. I think he has to have the record of conviction.

Mr. Cody: I will get the record.

The Court: No, sir; he can ask him, first, and if he denies it, then he brings forth the record. If he admits it—

The Witness: I am denying I was charged with the sale of—illicit sale of liquor.

[fol. 1063] By Mr. Cody:

Q. In March of 1950 in the Criminal Court of Fulton County, what were you charged and tried on?

A. I was charged with being in possession of out-of-state liquor without a Georgia stamp on it.

Q. Were you convicted?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you fined or did you serve a sentence?

A. I was fined a fine, sir.

Q. What is that?

A. I did not serve a sentence, no, sir.

Q. You were fined? How much?

A. To the best of my recollection it was five hundred dollars.

The Court: How is that admissible, Mr. Cody?

Mr. Cody: In connection with this—with the misstatement in the application for this license which was subsequently applied for.

The Witness: That was seven years later.

The Court: All right, sir, go ahead.

Mr. Cody: I have one other question that I want to clear up.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Did I understand you to say in your testimony yesterday, Mr. Carmichael, when Mr. Schroder was asking [fol. 1064] you about these particular notes which are on the Judge's desk, you made this answer: "No, sir; these are not the same notes that Mr. Burnett handed me."

A. Showed me; he didn't hand them to me; he showed them to me.

Q. Then, is it your testimony now that you did not say yesterday that they were handed to you?

A. If I did, I was in error.

* * * * * * *

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. This matter that you were just questioned about in relation to the out-of-state liquor, you testified about that to Mr. Cody when he took your deposition, didn't you?

A. I certainly did.

Q. You gave him all the details then?

A. I certainly did.

Q. And what were the details?

A. The details were that I bought some whiskey from a gentleman from Kentucky. It had Kentucky stamps on it. I did not buy this whiskey to sell; I had no intention of that. I used it—I was using it for a gift to give away for Christmas presents. That was my reason for buying it. And a fellow by the name of John Bradley, who had charge of all the liquor associations in Georgia, found out that I had this whiskey, and he was getting about twenty cents a case on all Georgia liquor that had Georgia stamps on it, and he reported it to the State Revenue Department that I had some whiskey with out-of-state stamps on it. The State [fol. 1065] Revenue agent came to where I was and had it and made a case against me.

Q. Just for possessing it?

A. Just for—well, it wasn't against the law to have the whiskey, Mr. Schroder; it was against the law not to have a Georgia stamp on it, which I didn't even know.

Q. It had a Kentucky stamp on it?

A. Right. I didn't even really know that. That was—anyway, I was charged with that, but I did not sell any of the liquor, and I have not been charged with the illegal sale of it, I am sure.

Q. All right, sir. That is what you told Mr. Cody some months ago?

A. That is exactly right, sir.

• • • • • • •

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. What is the name of the concern at the bottom of each page on those notes?

A. Well, it is—the name says, "Compliments of H. E. Knight, Banner Printing Service, Conley, Georgia" with his telephone number.

Q. How many pads with that name on them did you have in your office on Eleventh Street?

A. Oh, probably forty to fifty.

Q. When the office was closed on Eleventh Street, were the pads taken home by those who worked there?

A. By me and Mrs. Burnett; yes; we divided up all the little things in the office that were any good, and we figured we could use these scratch pads, and both of us took some of them.

Q. All right, sir. When is the first time that a photostat or other copy of those notes—when is the first time they have [fol. 1066] ever been or were they ever shown to you?

A. Well, the first time I ever saw a copy of these notes was when the Attorney General and Legislative Committee from the State of Alabama came over here to Atlanta and questioned me, and they showed me a photostatic copy of those notes.

Q. What did you at that time tell them with respect to whether or not they were copies?

The Court: We are getting into the investigation of the Attorney General of Alabama—

Mr. Schroder: Oh; all right, sir.

The Court: —and Alabama, and I don't think that would be—I think we are opening the door, Mr. Schroder.

Mr. Schroder: All right, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. The first time then—do you remember about when that—do you remember about when that was that you first saw a reproduction of these notes?

A. I don't remember the exact date, Mr. Schroder.

Q. Was it after you had given the answers to the questions propounded to you by Mr. Therrill that Mr. Cody was asking you about this morning?

A. It was after I talked to Mr. Therrill; yes, sir.

[fol. 1067] Q. When you were being questioned by Mr. Therrill, did he show you a reproduced copy of these notes?

A. He showed me nothing.

Mr. Schroder: That's all I have, Your Honor.

The Court: Any further questions of Mr. Carmichael? Let him go down.

Mr. Cody: You can be excused.

Mr. Schroder: Just a minute.

The Court: Just a moment, Mr. Carmichael; they are conferring.

Mr. Schroder: One more question.

The Court: Let him come back to the stand.

Mr. Schroder: I should have consulted my associate before I said that was all.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. How did these notes, being Defendant's Exhibit 12, differ from those which Mr. Burnett showed you on Sep[fol. 1068] tember 13 in the handwriting or any way that you can describe?

A. Well, let me answer that by saying this, Mr. Schroder. Mr. Burnett is quite a doodler, and on the original notes that Mr. Burnett showed to me immediately after he was supposed to have heard this conversation, I recall very vividly that on the first page he showed me there was only one thing wrote on it; there was quite a bit of doodling on the notes that he had, but the only thing that was on that front page outside of doodling was the name of Coach Wally Butts and Coach "Bear" Bryant. On this page the word "Coach" is not on here. This is the only thing that was on that page except the doodling, and it was not written across that page this way at all; it was written this way, sideways. The balance of these notes I did not see. I did not see page 2 at all or page 3 or page 4 or page 5 or page 6 or page 7; none of these pages are the pages that Mr. Burnett laid down in front of me that morning and showed me. He did have four or five pages in his hand, and on one page was the words "Coach Wally Butts" and "Coach 'Bear' Bryant". On another page was wrote a name of a football player with a lot of doodling on it, and it had on there "great football player" or words to that effect, "greatest in history" I believe were his exact words. On another page that he laid down it had "call Sunday" or "Will you be home Sunday, will call"; that is the way it was, "Will you be home Sunday, will call." There was no notes at all with some of the things you have on these notes, that are on these notes. There was no such thing as "10:40 a.m." or "641" or "September 13" or "Jackson 5-3536" or "Athletic office" or any of these things. There were none of these things on the notes Mr. Burnett showed to me.

[fol. 1069] Mr. Schroder: All right, sir; that's all, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, sir, any further questions?

Recross examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. How long did you say you had known Coach Butts?

A. Coach Butts?

Q. Yes.

A. I have been acquainted with him for about fifteen years.

* * * * * * *

HAROLD HECKMAN called as a witness on behalf of the defendant, after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Your name is Mr. Harold Heckman?

A. That's right, sir.

Q. How long have you lived in Athens, Mr. Heckman?

A. Forty-two years.

Q. Are you connected with the University of Georgia?

A. I am head of Accounting and professor of Accounting at the University.

Q. Are you a member of the Athletic Board?

[fol. 1070] A. Yes; I am.

Q. How long have you been a member of that Board?

A. Since 1946 or '47.

Q. Would you—

A. Right after the War.

Q. Would you give the Reporter the personnel of that Board, if you can remember the entire list?

A. Mr. Bolton, Mr. Driftmier, Mr. Biscoe, Mr. Mills, Dr. Scott, Mr. Sankin—Georie Sankin has been a member—Mr. Tommy Parris, Mr. Bradshaw.

Q. Is Dr. Aderhold a member of that Board?

A. He is chairman of the Board.

The Court: How many are professors are connected with the University and how many are alumni?

The Witness: The majority.

The Court: Can you break them down that way?

The Witness: The majority of the Board has to be connected with the University.

Mr. Cody: Faculty members?

The Witness: Faculty members of the University.

[fol. 1071] By Mr. Cody:

Q. What is the purpose of the Athletic Board, Mr. Heckman?

A. To administer the athletic program of the University, the intercollegiate program.

Q. How long have you known Wallace Butts?

A. Since 1946. He came one year while I was away.

Q. Have you known him intimately during that time?

A. I have known him; I wouldn't say intimately; I have known him; I have met with him very often. I have had very numerous meetings, consultations with him. I would say I know him very well.

Q. State whether or not you know the general character of Wallace Butts?

A. I think I do.

Q. Is it good or bad?

A. I would say now it is bad.

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, I think the proper question is reputation, is it not?

The Court: No; it's character, Mr. Cody—Mr. Schroder.

Mr. Schroder: Well, I just—

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Could you state to the jury—

The Court: The proper question is: Please state whether you know the general character of the witness in the com-[fol. 1072] munity in which he lives. That witness' answer is "yes" or "no." What is that character, good or bad? And then—

Mr. Schroder: That's right.

Mr. Cody: You reading Code Section 1804?

The Court: Yes, sir. I am familiar with that. I was reading from Professor Green's book on Evidence, taken from the Code section.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Heckman, would you tell the jury whether or not, from that character, you would believe Mr. Wallace Butts on oath?

A. I would not.

Q. How long did you say you had been a member of the Athletic Board?

A. Since immediately after the War, about 19—either 1946 or '47.

Q. Will you state to the jury whether or not this opinion that you have expressed with respect to Mr. Wallace Butts' character, if that applies prior to this Bryant affair?

Mr. Schroder: I don't think—

The Court: I don't think you can go any further. I think the law limits you to the questions you propounded. [fol. 1073] Mr. Cody: I think you are right, Your Honor.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Have you observed—as a member of the Athletic Board, have you formed any opinion with respect to whether or not the conduct of Wallace Butts has hurt the University of Georgia?

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor—Your Honor please—

The Court: I don't think that is a proper question.

Mr. Cody: I think it is.

The Court: Let the jury go to the jury room.

(Whereupon the jury retired from the courtroom at 1:59 p.m.)

Mr. Cody: Your Honor—if Your Honor has any doubt about it, I will withdraw it. I admit it's a debatable question.

The Court: Yes, sir; I do have doubts about it.

Mr. Schroder: Well, bring them back in.

[fol. 1074] The Court: Let them—if there is—while they are out, if there is any other question on this, I think now is the time.

Mr. Cody: He has—he has stated in his direct-examination, Mr. Schroder, that he has never done anything to hurt the University of Georgia.

The Court: Yes, sir; but under—under character, as I understand it, the way you—

Mr. Cody: We are beyond—

The Court: —are limiting it, under the Cox versus Strickland case in 101 Georgia, and I think that is the leading case not only in Georgia law, all the Federal courts have allowed it. But you are limited to these particular questions.

Mr. Cody: We are beyond the character evidence now. I was getting off into something else.

The Court: But you were bordering—you were bolstering your character evidence, as I understood your question.

Mr. Cody: I was not—that was not my purpose.

[fol. 1075] The Court: Well, you were—it is my recollection your question was: Have you noticed his conduct, on the Athletic Board, as a member of the Athletic Board, have you noticed his conduct? And I don't think that is admissible.

Mr. Cody: I will withdraw the question.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. How many members of the Board are there?

A. I believe it's nineteen.

Q. And the majority—

A. Are faculty.

Q. —are faculty?

A. Connected with the University.

Q. And the others are alumni? How are the others appointed, two by the Alumni Association?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the others appointed by whom?

A. By the President, I believe.

Q. The President?

A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * * *

WILLIAM THOMAS BRADSHAW called as a witness on behalf of the defendant, after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

[fol. 1076] Direct examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Bradshaw, will you give the Court Reporter your full name?

A. William Thomas Bradshaw.

Q. Where are you from, Mr. Bradshaw?

A. Canton, Georgia.

Q. Canton?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you an alumnus of the University of Georgia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you finish?

A. 1951.

Q. Did you play football?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you there while Mr. Wallace Butts was coach?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you a member of the Athletic Board of the University of Georgia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been a member of that Board?

A. January of '61.

Q. In January of 1963, did you have an opportunity to have a conference with Mr. Wallace Butts?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did that conference take place?

A. Mr. Cook Barwick's office.

Q. Here in Atlanta?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you pinpoint the date for us?

A. The 18th—I believe it was the day of the Touchdown [fol. 1077] Club banquet that night; I believe the 18th, Saturday.

Q. The 18th?

A. Yes, sir; I believe so.

Q. Was anyone present other than you and Wallace Butts?

A. Mr. Barwick; yes, sir.

Q. Did he subsequently leave the meeting, Mr. Barwick?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember the subject matter of that discussion?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you tell us what it was.

A. It had to do with our bringing it to Coach Butts' attention that it might be wise for him to resign as athletic director of the University of Georgia.

Q. What did he say?

A. He said he would contact Dr. Aderhold and would comply with his wishes.

Q. Did you acquaint him at that time with the reason for that request?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you speaking individually or for the Board of—

A. We were asked by the Executive Committee of the Board to speak to Coach Butts.

Mr. Lockerman: If Your Honor please, I don't think he ought to go into any conversation he had outside the presence of the plaintiff.

The Court: I will let him state his authority for talking [fol. 1078] to him. You were authorized by the Executive Committee of the Athletic Board?

The Witness: To speak to Coach Butts on this subject; yes, sir.

The Court: And you were complying with that request?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. What was the reason for making this request?

A. There were several.

Mr. Schroder: I don't think their reason would be relevant unless that was pointed out.

Mr. Cody: That is what I am trying to get to.

Mr. Schroder: Ask it that way.

The Court: Just a moment; just a moment.

Mr. Schroder: Your Honor, he is—

The Court: I will let him ask whether or not he stated [fol. 1079] to Coach Butts in Coach Butts' presence the reasons for the resignation.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. You did?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was that reason?

A. That Coach Butts' many business interests were taking so much of his time away from his duties as athletic director, the fact that he had become involved with loan companies, and this has been brought out in the newspapers in Atlanta which didn't do anything for his image as an athletic director of the University. I believe those were the main two.

Q. Can you recall any others?

A. Not that we said to Coach Butts. There were others mentioned at the Executive Committee meeting, but we didn't see any sense in bringing them up at this time.

Q. Do you—do you know whether or not Coach Butts thereafter went to see Dr. Aderhold? Don't go into any conversation with him if you were not present, but do you know whether or not—

A. He went to see Dr. Aderhold.

Q. Did Coach Butts thereafter resign?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what was the date on that resignation?

A. That would be effective either June 1st or June 30.

Q. What date did he resign, not the effective date?

[fol. 1080] A. Oh, this was the following Monday after our conversation.

Q. That would be the 20th?

A. Yes, sir.

The Court: You all speaking—are you referring to January or February?

The Witness: January 20.

Mr. Cody: January 20.

The Witness: Yes, sir; January 20. I would like to say this—

Mr. Schroder: Wait a minute, now, I think—

The Court: I think the orderly way to conduct it, Mr. Bradshaw, is to let Mr. Cody ask you the question and you answer.

The Witness: I was going to explain.

The Court: That is all right. You want to explain a previous answer?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

[fol. 1081] The Court: You can explain your previous answer.

The Witness: I know that he went to see Dr. Aderhold the following Monday. I know that he did resign, and I feel certain that it was at this time that he did turn in his resignation in the form of a letter.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Are you familiar—

Mr. Schroder: I think the letter would be the highest and best evidence, if we are going into the contents of the letter, unless this witness—

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Bradshaw—

The Court: Isn't that letter in evidence?

Mr. Cody: That is another letter.

Mr. Schroder: I don't think it is—I say that would be the highest and best evidence, the contents of the letter would be the letter itself.

The Court: Yes, sir; I was under the impression that letter was in evidence.

[fol. 1082] Mr. Cody: That is another letter you have reference to. That is the one of February—

The Court: I excluded that testimony, then, if—the letter would be the highest and best evidence. I sustain the objection.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Bradshaw, will you explain to the Court, state to the Court whether or not at the time you had this conversation with Coach Butts on January 18 you had any knowledge, directly or indirectly, of the Bryant affair which later came to light?

A. No, sir; I have no knowledge.

Q. This preceded?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, when the—when the so-called Bryant affair came to light, which is involved in this case, do you know whether or not Coach Butts submitted another resignation effective at an earlier date?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know what effective date that was?

A. Towards the latter part of February, effective immediately, as well as I recall.

Mr. Schroder: I again say—

The Court: Is that the resignation that is in evidence? [fol. 1083] Mr. Schroder: I don't know whether that letter is in evidence or not. If it is not, it would be the highest and best evidence.

The Court: If he has seen the letter—

Mr. Schroder: No, sir; he has got the letter itself, and it would be the highest and best evidence.

Mr. Cody: It is already in.

The Court: It is already in? I will let him state a letter of resignation was submitted.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Bradshaw, did you attend what is known as a Georgia Touchdown Club meeting in Jacksonville, Florida, when Coach Butts made a speech?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you attend an Atlanta Touchdown Club meeting on January the 15th, 1963?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not Coach Butts made a speech at that meeting?

A. Not a speech; no, sir. Darrell Royal, director of athletics at the University of Texas, made a speech, and Coach Butts may have said something in behalf of Mr. Royal.

Q. Will you state to the Court whether or not you have attended any Touchdown Club meetings of the University [fol. 1084] of Georgia alumni where Coach Butts made any comment about the Athletic Board or the coaching staff of the University of Georgia?

A. No, sir; not any gatherings of that nature.

Q. Did you attend the football scrimmage on September 15—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —before the Alabama-Georgia game of 1962?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was that scrimmage held?

A. On the regular practice field on Ag Hill.

Q. Was that a sort of closed bull session?

A. Yes, sir; except to people invited by the coaches.

Q. Do you know whether or not Coach Butts attended that practice?

A. Yes, sir; he, along with the rest of the Board, Athletic Board.

Q. Did you see the entire practice that afternoon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not Georgia used, in that practice, the plays they intended to use in the Alabama game?

A. No, sir—I am sure they must have, but I don't know play-for-play that they did.

Q. Mr. Bradshaw, would you state whether or not you are familiar with the general character of Wallace Butts?

A. Well, insofar as being associated with him as my coach and then as athletic director, I would to that extent, Mr. Cody.

Q. From that knowledge, can you state whether or not—

[fol. 1085] The Court: I don't believe that is a proper question. I think you have got to ask the question: Do you know the character and reputation of the plaintiff or the witness, whoever it might be, in the community in which he resides, and the community, of course, doesn't mean confined to the exact community, it is co-extensive with his reputation, but I think you have got to propound the question, Mr. Cody, exactly as the Code sets out.

Mr. Cody: I'd like to call Your Honor's attention to one decision that varies from that.

The Court: Well—

Mr. Cody: It is not necessarily in the community where he lives.

The Court: I didn't say that. I said it is co-extensive with his reputation.

Mr. Cody: I see.

The Court: It can be all over the State or all over the United States. I think you would have to confine yourself to the Code. I mean: Do you know the character and reputation in the community? And you can explain what the community would be.

[fol. 1086] By Mr. Cody:

Q. Do you think you are familiar with his general character in the community?

A. Character or reputation?

The Court: Character, character.

A. (By the witness) I believe so.

Q. From that knowledge, can you state whether or not it is good or bad?

A. I would say "bad."

Mr. Cody: I believe that's all.

The Court: All right, sir. Just a moment—just a moment, Mr. Bradshaw.

Mr. Schroder: No questions.

The Court: No more questions. You may step down, Mr. Bradshaw.

Mr. Cody: Let me ask you one more question.

The Court: You will have to come back to the stand, Mr. Bradshaw.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Have you—have you been present at any meetings [fol. 1087] where critical remarks have been made by Coach Butts about the University of—

Mr. Schroder: I thought this question had already been asked, and he answered that question. I believe he asked him about speeches. I believe I am correct on that.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. You have?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was that?

A. One was last year, the night before the Florida-Georgia game in Jacksonville. A Georgia party in the Roosevelt Hotel.

Q. I'd like to ask you one more question, Mr. Bradshaw. Will you tell the Court whether or not, from the general character of Wallace Butts about which you testified, that you would believe him on oath?

A. I don't believe so.

Mr. Cody: I believe that's all.

Mr. Schroder: I didn't understand the answer.

The Court: Sir?

Mr. Schroder: I didn't understand the answer.

[fol. 1088] The Court: He said he didn't believe so.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. You know Charlie Trippi?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You believe him under oath?

A. I believe so.

R. H. Driftmier called as a witness on behalf of the defendant, after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

A. R. H. Driftmier.

Q. Where are you from, Mr. Driftmier?

A. Athens, Georgia.

Q. Are you a member of the faculty at the University of Georgia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What are your responsibilities there?

A. I am head of the Department and head of the Division of Agricultural Engineering.

A. Since September, 1930.

Q. Continuously?

A. The head of the Department since 1930, the chairman of the Division since 1950 when the College of Agriculture was reorganized.

Q. Are you a member of the Athletic Board?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been a member?

A. Since about 1935.

Q. As a member of that Board, have you constantly come in contact with Wally Butts?

A. I have.

Q. In connection with matters pertaining to the University?

A. That's right.

Q. And to the athletic program?

A. That's right.

Q. Please state, Mr. Driftmier, whether or not you know the general character of Wallace Butts in the community.

A. I think I do; yes.

Q. From that knowledge will you state whether or not that character is good or bad?

A. Bad.

Q. From that knowledge of his character, would you state to the Court whether or not you would believe him upon his oath?

A. I would not.

Q. You would not?

A. I would not.

Q. In your services to the University as a member of [fol. 1090] the Athletic Board, have you ever heard Wallace Butts make any critical remarks about the University?

A. I have.

Q. Was that an isolated occasion, or would there be others?

A. About every time the Board of Directors met.

Mr. Cody: I believe that's all.

The Court: All right, any questions, Mr. Schroder?

Cross examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. What is your name, sir?

A. Driftmier.

Q. Driftmier?

A. Right.

Q. You live in Athens?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You know Charlie Trippi?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You believe him under oath?

A. I don't know enough about Charlie Trippi.

Q. Do you know Mickey Babb?

A. Beg pardon?

Q. You know one of your students, Mickey Babb?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you know your football captain, Ray Clark?
A. I do not.
Q. Do you know Wallace Williamson?
[fol. 1091] A. No; I do not.
Q. Brigham Woodward?
A. No.

Dr. O. C. Aderhold called as a witness on behalf of the defendant, after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Dr. Aderhold, will you give the Court Reporter your full name, or initials, if you like?
A. O. C. Aderhold.
Q. What is your position with the University of Georgia, Dr. Aderhold?
A. President.
Q. How long have you been President?
A. Well, 1950—thirteen years.
Q. What part of the State are you from, Dr. Aderhold?
A. I am from Lavonia; Franklin County.
Q. Did you attend the University of Georgia as a student?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When did you finish?
A. Well, I went there as a freshman in 1919; finished Bachelor's Degree in '23; and then did some work on a Master's Degree until '30 in the summers, and received a Master's degree at that time.
Q. I should be ashamed to ask you that question because—[fol. 1092] Mr. Schroder: I can't hear either one of them, Your Honor.

The Court: Speak out a little bit louder, please, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Are you a member of the Athletic Board?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you what they term the ex-officio chairman?

A. No; I am chairman by the document that sets up the Board, the charter.

Q. Is it a fair statement today, Dr. Aderhold, that you have, in recent years, kept in close touch with the athletic program of the University.

A. Yes, sir.

The Court: Doctor, you will have to speak out a little louder, if you don't mind.

A. (By the witness) Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall whether or not Wallace Butts came to you on or about January 20 of this year?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he?

A. He did.

Q. Did he at that time—did you have a discussion with him at that time concerning a conference he had had with Mr. Bill Bradshaw a day or two before?

A. I don't believe he referred to any conference, but he called me on Sunday night and asked to come out to see me Sunday night, and I told him that I couldn't see him Sunday night because we had a visitor there and a dinner party, [fol. 1093] but I'd see him early Monday morning; and so he came to the office at 9:30 Monday morning and I saw him at that time.

Q. Was this or not sometime before the Bryant affair came out?

A. Yes, sir; it was.

Q. Now, what happened at that meeting that you had with Coach Butts, or, I should say—he was the athletic director at that time?

A. Let me check the other question, please, sir.

Q. Go ahead.

A. Yes; the date is right; I do recall now. This was before the other matter came up.

Q. What happened at that meeting?

A. Well, he said he wanted to talk with me about a problem or problems that he had; that he should have come to see me earlier or should have talked with some of the Board members earlier, but that he had some problems that he wanted to discuss with me. And he had always felt free to talk with me about his problems when he had them. Essentially that was the beginning of the conference.

Q. Will you state whether or not any particular action was taken at that conference?

A. No; no action. We discussed some possibilities, and I believe that is as far as that went at that time.

Q. Will you give us— Will you give us the extent of that discussion?

A. Well, the discussion involved several problems, as enumerated by him or that came out of our common discussion. Now, do you want me to comment on those?

Q. Just state what—just state what problems he told you he had.

A. Well, I think the first one he told me about, and spent [fol. 1094] a good deal of time talking about, was his financial situation, and that it was serious, and that if anything happened to his job that this financial structure that he had would fall in, I believe were about the words that he used.

Q. Do you recall whether or not, at that meeting, that he resigned?

A. No, sir; he did not. He asked my advice about what he should do, as we talked about some of these problems. This conference lasted about two hours or two and a half.

Q. Dr. Aderhold, have you ever been present at any— well, I will withdraw that question. Will you state to the Court whether or not you know of the general character of Wallace Butts in the community?

A. Phrase your question again; I'm not sure I understood it.

Q. I asked you to state whether or not you knew the general character of Wallace Butts in the community?

A. Well, I would say it's not good.

The Court: That's not the proper way to answer it, Doctor.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Just say you do or you don't. I will get to that next.

A. I think it's not good.

The Court: That is still not—the question he asked you is, do you know; and then he can ask you any further question.

[fol. 1095] The Witness: Yes; from the contacts I have; I do.

The Court: All right, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Now, will you state, from that knowledge, whether or not it is good or bad?

A. I'd say it's bad. I would like to make an addition to that.

Q. Make whatever comment you want.

The Court: No, sir; he can't make any addition to it. That's all. The Code section—

Mr. Cody: All right, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Dr. Aderhold, could you state whether or not you recall hearing Coach Butts make any remarks about the University?

A. At this meeting?

Q. No; I mean at any time. I would say since 1960; I would limit it to some time.

A. Well, I have heard of remarks that he's made. I don't recall—

The Court: That wouldn't be admissible. Have you heard him make any remarks himself, Coach Butts? I presume you mean of the Athletic Association, don't you, or the University?

[fol. 1096] By Mr. Cody:

Q. Of the University, or the Athletic Board, or the coaching staff?

A. No, sir; I have not.

Q. Have you, as President of the University, and as a member of the Athletic Board, have you had constant contact with Wallace Butts?

A. What do you mean by "constant contact"?

Q. Well, what contact have you had with him? How often would you see him?

A. Well, it depends, I think, on what the situation was. I would say two or three or four times a year on the average, all the years, but it might be in some cases once or twice during the year; other times it might be half a dozen or more times. You mean as it relates to the business—

Q. Right.

A. —of the operation of the Athletic program?

Q. Yes, sir. Did you bring with you, Dr. Aderhold, in response to a subpoena, a letter that you received from Coach Butts while he was athletic director, his letter of resignation?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Do you mind if I see that? That's the same one, isn't it? Do you mind if I handle your file just a minute? I'll give it back to you.

Mr. Cody: Your Honor, this is the original of a letter which has already been admitted and which has been identified as a defendant's exhibit, but I want to ask him several questions about it.

The Court: All right, sir.

[fol. 1097] By Mr. Cody:

Q. Dr. Aderhold, it is stated in this letter that Wallace Butts had developed business interests. Do you know—did he tell you what those interests were?

A. Well, he talked about several, and I'm not sure that I could name them all, but a considerable part of the discussion about business related to an orange grove facility or operation in Florida; some about loan companies. I believe those were the two main ones. I know there was something about somebody, or some business at Lakeland, Florida, or Lake City, Florida, I don't remember which. Those were the main ones.

Q. As executive head of the University of Georgia, and as executive head of its athletic program, will you state, Dr. Aderhold, whether or not, in your opinion, these interests prevented him from fulfilling the responsibility that he had as athletic director?

A. Yes, sir; he said so.

Mr. Cody: May I take just a moment, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: There's a good deal that's been produced.

The Court: In the meantime—Doctor, you may step down just a moment, please, sir. In the meantime, we will take a recess for fifteen minutes.

Members of the jury, I must admonish you, as previously, not to discuss this case among yourselves, or permit anyone [fol. 1098] to discuss it in your presence. Simply dismiss it from your mind during the fifteen-minute recess, at which time you will return to the jury box at 3:00 o'clock. Let the jury pass out; everyone else remain seated.

(Whereupon the jury retired from the courtroom at 2:44 p.m.)

The Court: We will recess until three o'clock.

After Recess

The Court: All right; you may go back to the stand, Doctor.

Mr. Cody: Will you identify this for me?

The Clerk: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: That really ought to be given the same number as that.

The Clerk: Defendant's Exhibit No. 20 is identified as a copy, and this is the original?

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

[fol. 1099] The Clerk: Would you like to make this one—

Mr. Cody: 20.

The Clerk: All right, sir.

The Court: I am informed by the Clerk that one of the letters—I believe it was a copy—

The Clerk: It was this one.

The Court: —has been identified, but had not been introduced.

The Clerk: This is Defendant's Exhibit No. 20.

Mr. Cody: We are substituting the original, giving it the same exhibit number.

The Court: Any objection to the original in lieu of the copy?

Mr. Schroder: Of course not.

The Court: All right, sir.

[fol. 1100] The Clerk: Original letter dated February 23, 1963, to Dr. Aderhold from Wallace Butts.

(Whereupon the document above referred to was marked for identification only as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 20.)

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Dr. Aderhold, I show you the Defendant's Exhibit No. 20, and ask you if that is the letter that you received from Wallace Butts?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember a meeting which occurred on February the 22nd, 1963, in Mr. Cook Barwick's office?

A. There are so many dates, I had better check, I think. Yes; I remember the 22nd.

Q. Do you recall who was present at that meeting?

A. Yes, sir. Those present were Coach Butts, Mr. Bolton, Mr. Hartman, Mr. Dunlap, Mr. Bernie Moore.

Q. Is Mr. Dunlap from Gainesville?

A. Yes, sir; Mr. James Dunlap, Chairman of the Board of Regents, from Gainesville; Chancellor Harmon W. Caldwell, of Atlanta; and Mr. Bernie Moore, of the Southeastern Conference. I believe that is the group that was there.

Q. Will you state to the Court what the purpose of that meeting was?

A. Well, the purpose was to talk with Coach Butts about the information which had come to us, beginning with Mr. Burnett, and had been discussed by several members of this [fol. 1101] same group on two or three occasions prior to this particular date.

Q. Do you know whether or not Coach Butts was made acquainted with the nature of the Burnett story?

A. At this meeting?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Yes, sir; he was.

Q. How was that meeting handled?

A. Coach Butts came over to Atlanta with Mr. Bolton and me, and I opened the meeting by saying that some information had come to us regarding a proposed telephone conversation, and that Mr. Cook Barwick had directed—handled a study of the report on the situation, and that I would like to turn the meeting over to him for handling; and I did.

Q. Was he a member of the Athletic Board?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was he attorney for the Board?

A. Yes, sir. The Executive Committee of the Board asked him to serve as attorney for this study and investigation.

Q. At that meeting, do you know whether or not Coach Butts was shown these notes of Mr. Burnett's?

A. Yes; he was handed the notes.

Q. Can you state to the Court what statement he made, if anything?

A. Well, he looked over them and we talked, I guess, about an hour, and there were many things said. I think he started out by saying that "This is just general football talk," and I think that, as I recall it, that he said, "I guess I talked with him over the phone," or "I probably talked with him over the phone," referring to Coach Bryant, "and I can understand how somebody listening may have made [fol. 1102] these observations, but I want to assure you I had no intention of hurting the University of Georgia, or giving them any information about the University of Georgia athletic team or program."

Q. Did you go into a detailed discussion of some of the items in this note—in these notes?

A. What do you mean by "detailed"?

Q. Well, did you discuss any items that were mentioned in the notes?

A. Well, I couldn't name a specific item, but Coach Butts was talking about various phases of the situation, and actually demonstrating some of the techniques used, and that sort of thing, in coaching.

Q. Did you discuss with him whether or not Coach Bryant called him back on a Sunday night?

The Court: Was it Sunday night, or—

By Mr. Cody:

Q. On the following Sunday, September 16.

A. Yes, sir; I believe—may I look at the notes here?

Q. Yes; you may refresh your recollection from any memoranda that you have.

A. Well, I made these notes some several days after the meeting, and essentially the notes say that more than two hours was involved in the discussion. Coach Butts devoted a considerable part of that time in the discussion of football, and how coaches discuss games, and so on. He indicated that the call was made, and that these items were probably discussed, but they did not mean what Mr. Burnett had indicated that they did mean.

[fol. 1103] Q. Was there anything said about Coach Butts signing an affidavit?

A. The notes I made on that—may I do a little background on the question?

Q. Go ahead.

A. Mr. Barwick was handling the questioning, and prior to the meeting, or the afternoon before, he indicated that he was going to ask Coach Butts if he would do the two things which Mr. Burnett had done. Now, whether or not he asked for both of these things at that time, I am not clear, for this reason. My notes indicate that he did ask regarding the affidavit and the polygraph test, or lie detector test, at the same time. That is the way my notes indicate, and Coach Butts said, no, he would not. And then there was some discussion about the lie detector test which Coach Butts indicated he would not take. I have not talked with Mr. Barwick specifically about this, but I noted that there was an indication in the Cook report, the Eugene Cook—

The Court: No, sir; we can't go into that.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Don't go into that.

A. Okay. May I say, Your Honor—can I say—

Q. Make any explanation you want.

The Court: I don't want you to get into the Cook report.

The Witness: I just understood it was possible that Mr. Barwick asked only the one question. If so, if he asked only [fol. 1104] the one question, then it was not to the lie detector test because I know that was discussed, and I think the other was, and I so noted it at that time.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Dr. Aderhold, as Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Athletic Board, did you authorize Mr. Bill Bradshaw and Mr. Barwick to have a talk with Coach Butts prior to this time, back in early January?

A. This goes back to a meeting of the Executive Committee on January 5, I believe.

Q. 1963?

A. 1963. The Executive Committee met and discussed many of the problems of our athletic program, and reviewed some of the situations, some of the alumni reports and Board member reports, and several rather specific comments were made by Coach Butts, whether or not he was helping or hurting the athletic program, and what was being said, and so on. So, out of that discussion, which lasted from 10:00 o'clock to about 4:00 in the afternoon, with an interruption for lunch, it was decided that somebody should discuss all of these issues with Coach Butts, let him know what the Executive Committee had talked about, the specific terms that we had talked about, and discuss it with him before the meeting of the Board in January—January the 28th, which was up-coming.

And there was some discussion as to who should do that, and the decision was—they requested Mr. Bradshaw, who was there as a member of the Coaching Committee, if he and—I think he was asked if he and Mr. Cook Barwick would sit down and talk with Coach Butts about these is-[fol. 1105] sues and problems, and get his reaction. So, we did not direct him, but in the discussion he agreed to talk with Mr. Barwick, and I later understand that they did talk with him.

Q. Did you outline to that Committee the area of the discussion to have with Coach Butts?

A. No, sir; I did not outline it, but Mr. Bradshaw was in the meeting during the discussion, and knew what the problems were that we were discussing.

Q. He was the one speaking for the Executive Committee?

A. Well, he and Mr. Barwick.

Q. Barwick?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, did, shortly—did you have your full meeting on February the 28th, your Board meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Coach Butts there?

A. Yes, sir—you mean January the 28th?

Q. January 28th.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. This was prior to any of the—any knowledge of any Bryant affair; this was January the 28th, I believe you said?

A. Well, at that time I knew about the Bryant thing on the 28th; I knew about it in the sense that the notes had been given to me. I had had a meeting with Mr. Cook Barwick and had gone over the notes with him, in company with Mr. Bolton, but that is—and he said he would begin an investigation, looking into it.

Q. There was no notice of the Bryant affair on the January the 5th meeting?

A. No, sir; or the January 20th.

[fol. 1106] Q. Now, what happened at that meeting on the 28th, January the 28th?

A. Well, several things happened. The minutes of the Board—I have these listed, and I do not have the minutes with me, but if you are referring specifically to Coach Butts, I can—I think I can relate that—

Q. Give us—

A. —about as it is.

Q. Give us the substance of that.

A. I can check it in the minutes. Coach Butts indicated to the Board that he had become engaged in many business activities which were requiring a great deal of his time, and that he would like to be retired as of June 30th, and retired after that time. He, I believe, did not expand very much on those reasons, but they are in the minutes of the Board, if you want to check those.

Q. Is that the primary problem that you discussed at that meeting his retirement?

A. No; there were—well, I don't know how you class them as primary or secondary; we talked about several matters.

Q. What other problems did you discuss with him at that meeting?

A. With Coach Butts?

Q. With Coach Butts.

A. I think most of the rest could be classified as routine matters, business of the Athletic Board. Maybe I had better check that—I think that's right.

Q. All right; check that.

A. Yes; I think other than just sort of general routine matters that that was all that was discussed at that meeting. There was an Executive Committee meeting following this [fol. 1107] meeting, at which some other matters were discussed which grew out of this question.

Q. Did you attend the Executive Committee meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you discuss with Coach Butts at that meeting?

A. Coach Butts was not at the meeting.

Q. I see.

A. And I—

Q. I wouldn't want—

A. And I think to point—

Mr. Schroder: Just a minute. Mr. Butts was not at that meeting.

The Court: That would not be admissible unless it illustrates another issue, refutes testimony that's been previously given, but I can't see that. I mean, certainly if he wasn't present it would be hearsay.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Do you recall whether or not there was any discussion at that January 28th meeting as to some of Coach Butts' associations?

Mr. Schroder: What meeting are we talking about? Are we talking about the Executive meeting?

The Court: Are you referring to the Executive meeting?

[fol. 1108] Mr. Cody: No, sir; I'm talking about the Board meeting that Coach Butts was present at on January 28th.

The Court: He was present—

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir; he was present. He's already testified about that.

The Court: If he was present, I will let him testify to that.

A. (By the witness) No; there was no discussion that I recall at that meeting.

Q. Prior to the January 28th full Board meeting, did you have any personal discussion with Coach Butts about the up coming meeting?

A. You are referring back to the January 20th meeting when Coach Butts visited me in the office?

Q. Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: What game are we talking about?

The Court: January 20th.

Mr. Schroder: I thought he said up-coming game.

Mr. Cody: I didn't say that.

[fol. 1109] The Court: No, sir; he didn't say "game."

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Tell the Court about any personal discussion you had with Coach Butts with reference to the meeting of January 20th, prior, just prior to the January 20th meeting.

Mr. Schroder: May I inquire as to the relevancy of this, Your Honor?

The Court: I don't know, but is that the meeting you have been into, where Coach Butts came to his office on Monday morning?

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir; we have only touched on it. I want to get the substance of that meeting, the full substance of that meeting.

The Court: Between Coach Butts and Dr. Aderhold?

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir; no one else present.

The Court: Sir?

Mr. Cody: No one else present at that meeting.

[fol. 1110] The Court: Yes, sir; I thought you had been into that.

Mr. Cody: Not fully; no, sir.

The Court: I will let you go ahead.

Mr. Schroder: I still inquire as to what the relevancy of it is, Your Honor.

Mr. Cody: We can't tell.

Mr. Schroder: What's all this got to do with it?

The Court: I don't know whether it refutes testimony as to whether he's spoken against the University, or any of that, I can't tell, but I will let him proceed as long as it is relevant; if it is not relevant, I will rule it out.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Go ahead.

A. Well, there were four or five matters discussed, some of them I believe brought up by Coach Butts, or alluded to by him, and some that I brought up as coming to me from alumni, Board members and others.

Q. I want to know what the substance was.

[fol. 1111] Mr. Schroder: Is this supposed to be in contradiction to something that has already been testified to?

The Court: I assume it is on the question of when he resigned and why he resigned.

Mr. Schroder: I thought we had been through all that on another meeting.

The Court: I don't know whether it is the same meeting. That is what I was making inquiry about.

Mr. Schroder: Let's try to restrict the witness, then, to the area about which he can testify, because I have no idea what he is going into. It may not have any relevance to the case at all. I can't—

The Court: Neither can I and I can't tell until he testifies.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. Is this the meeting you have discussed that happened on Monday morning following the discussion with Coach Butts on Sunday night?

A. Yes, sir; this is the meeting.

Q. Is it anything different that you testified to concerning prior to the recess?

A. Well, as I recall it, Mr. Cody asked me what was [fol. 1112] the primary matter discussed, and I commented on that as the first item which Coach Butts opened up the discussion with, and that was the matter of his being involved in—

Q. You didn't complete that. You didn't complete what all transpired during the meeting.

A. I didn't know what exactly he meant by "primary" and he didn't ask me any further thing. I didn't know—

The Court: I believe it is relevant as to what the terms of the resignation were.

Mr. Schroder: May I approach the bench with Mr. Cody, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes, sir.

(Whereupon a conference was held at the bench between the Court, Mr. Schroder and Mr. Cody.)

The Court: You may proceed.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Go ahead, Dr. Aderhold. Just tell us the substance of these other areas of your discussion on that occasion; don't go into any detail.

A. Well, I am sure I will not get them in the order in which we talked about them. One was this financial situation, and I believe that an hour of the time was devoted to that. He told me in great detail or in considerable de- [fol. 1113] tail what the financial—what his financial situation was and how precarious it was, and that if the Board were to fire him or if he were to resign, then this whole structure would fall down or crumble down on him. Those are not the exact words, but that was the essence of it. And we talked about that a little and he gave me some figures which I put on a card, and it, to me, looked bad too, and then he went back to his original comment: "What advice would you give me? I came for advice, and what would you advise?" And on this particular thing I said, "Well, Coach, this is completely beyond me; I don't know, this is involved." And I believe we added up, I did, somewhere around seventy-five to a hundred thousand dollars, and he indicated where these notes were, some of them, and what the conditions were involving them, and my recommendation on that, when he came back to it, was that, "Coach, I don't know of anybody that is any better to advise you about these matters than Bill Hartman. He is a man that you have confidence in, and he's a businessman who knows something about these figures." And he said,

"Yes, I know that; I have consulted with Bill some." And my recommendation was that he go talk to Bill about that. Then on the other items, whether—

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, unless this is related to some resignation, I don't know what the relevancy would be.

Mr. Cody: That is what we are leading up to.

[fol. 1114] The Court: I will let him proceed for a while, Mr. Schroder.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Don't go into any great detail; just give us the substance of it.

A. Well, the matter of reported criticism of Coach Butts of the athletic situation, we discussed that back and forth, commenting upon the reports that had come to me and come to members of the Board that he was critical of Coach Griffith and the coaching staff and others, and on that particular point I think I emphasized the fact that we had a great deal of criticism about his being critical of Coach Griffith. Well, he then proceeded to say that this was not true, at least he did not mean to criticize the University, the athletic program, or Coach Griffith. Well, that is number two. There was a discussion of some relationships with persons in Atlanta, specifically about—

Q. Don't go into any specific—don't go into that part of it. Any other area?

A. Well, that's all that I can recall, without looking at my notes, and if you would like for me to do it, I will.

Q. Did you or not advise him to resign, Doctor?

A. Toward the end of this, then I had already said, "I think you ought to see Bill Hartman about your financial situation." And he kept referring back to his financial situation in relation to his quitting, and he said, "Now, what about this situation?" And I said, "Well, Coach, I that that the Board is going to take positive action about this thing, one way or the other. There is so much feeling that our athletic program isn't going, and it is because we [fol. 1115] do not have cooperation and leadership at the head. Whether this is true or not, I don't know, but this is what's being said, and that, as I see it, there are two things that you might do. One is that you might request that the Board give consideration to resigning and retiring at the end of this fiscal year, June 30, but I think the Board is going to take some kind of action, and I don't know what the Board will do with that request." But I assume that Coach Butts thought that maybe that was advisable. At least, then on the 28th, that is what he did, he retired, and—I mean, he asked for retirement, asked to be—resigned on June 30 and retired after that, and gave as the reasons, according to the minutes, his financial—because of the time he was having to devote to outside activities. I think that summarizes it.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Dr. Aderhold, I show you the Defendant's Exhibit No. 21, and ask you whether or not that is a letter directed to you, as President of the University of Georgia, from Dr. Frank Rose, President of the University of Alabama.

A. Yes, sir; it is.

Mr. Cody: That's all.

The Court: Any further questions, Mr. Cody, on behalf of Dr. Aderhold?

[fol. 1116] Mr. Cody: No, sir; I have no further questions.

The Court: All right, sir; go ahead.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Dr. Aderhold, you have testified at some length about meetings that were held in Athens by the Athletic Board.

The Court: By the Executive Committee and the Athletic Boards?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. At least two of those meetings had to do with certain matters involving Wallace Butts; is that correct, sir?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The first of which was January 20th?

A. No; January 5th.

Q. All right, sir. There was a meeting on January 20?

A. Well, that was a conference which Coach Butts requested and he and I met.

Q. When was the meeting held after the conference in Atlanta by Mr.—whatever the gentleman's name was?

[fol. 1117] The Court: Bradshaw.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. —Bradshaw; was that January the 28th?

A. Yes; that's correct.

Q. Sir?

A. Yes, sir; that's correct.

Q. You had an idea that you were going to discuss something with Coach Butts that had been reported to you by some of the alumni; is that right?

A. Which meeting, Mr.—

Q. The meeting on January the 28th.

A. That was a regular Board meeting on January 28.

Q. You planned to, at that time, to discuss with Coach Butts matter that had been raised by some of the alumni previous to the meeting?

A. Yes. He and I discussed them, and I understand that he and Mr. Barwick and Mr. Bradshaw had discussed them.

Q. I thought you said that Mr. Bradshaw was appointed on a committee to talk to Mr. Butts about it before he had the meeting.

The Court: I think, Mr. Schroder, he said January the 5th, that some committee, the Executive Committee met, and they appointed these two gentlemen to meet with Coach Butts on January 20 and report to a full meeting of the Board on January the 28th.

Mr. Schroder: That is the point I am trying to establish.

[fol. 1118] The Witness: Your Honor, that—

The Court: That is correct, isn't it?

The Witness: That was prior to the 20th, that is, their meeting was prior to the 20th. The 20th was the date on which Coach Butts and I talked about—

The Court: Oh, yes. You don't know what date they met with Mr. Bradshaw?

The Witness: I don't believe I do.

Mr. Schroder: Well, the point is quite simple, and I think I can get it over.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. When you had something to discuss with Coach Butts at a meeting, you usually discussed it with him before the meeting, didn't you?

A. Explain the nature. Sometimes I did and sometimes I didn't.

Q. I know one time you didn't. Now, I want to find out about the times you did. During the month of January when you had in mind discussing with Coach Butts some complaints which you said had come from some of the alumni, you let him know that the matter was going to be discussed at the meeting before the meeting, didn't you, January 28?

[fol. 1119] A. On January 28; yes, sir.

Q. You knew—

A. He and I talked.

Q. You knew what you were going to be talking about when you got to the meeting, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Certainly. On February the 22nd, you had a meeting attended by Coach Butts relating to the Butts-Bryant matter, didn't you, in Atlanta, February 22?

A. I think that's correct.

Q. Yes, sir; that's right.

The Witness: I'm sorry, Your Honor.

The Court: That's all right.

The Witness: I just have the copies here.

The Court: That's all right.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Are you confirming the date?

A. I am sure the date is right; if you say it is right, I am sure it is.

Q. There is no doubt in your mind about it being the date, is there?

A. Well, let's check it and see.

Q. All right, sir. I really don't—I am not trying to confuse you.

A. Yes, sir. It was Friday morning, February 22nd.

Q. Did you have any committee appointed to inform [fol. 1120] Coach Butts about what was going to be discussed at that meeting?

A. Well, the group meeting the day before consisting of these gentlemen that I named a few minutes ago suggested that—I mean, we all suggested that we should not talk with Coach Butts about this matter, that it had been pursued up to that point and that we needed to discuss it with him. They asked me if I would call Coach Butts when I got home that night and ask him to come to a meeting the next morning in Cook Barwick's office.

Q. Which you did?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you tell Coach Butts at the time you called him what the meeting was about in Atlanta?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why?

A. Well, he didn't ask, and I just told him that we wanted him in Mr. Cook Barwick's office. I didn't ask him to be there. He asked if he could ride over with me, and I said I was going to come in Mr. Bolton's car and I was sure Mr. Bolton would be glad to have both of us come with him.

Q. Which you did?

A. That's right.

Q. The three of you rode over here from Athens on the morning of February the 22nd?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Coach Butts, you and Mr. Bolton?

A. That's correct.

Q. You and Mr. Bolton knew what that meeting was to be about, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Butts was with you all the way from Athens to Atlanta?

[fol. 1121] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you all talking?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Sir?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why didn't you tell him then why you were bringing him to Atlanta?

A. Well, all the discussion about this case after the first meeting had been carried on with these people that I named a while ago present, and I didn't—well, my idea was that we talk about it all together at the meeting.

Q. Wouldn't let him know even what you were going to bring him over here and confront him with. That is a true statement, isn't it?

A. Well, it is a true statement that we had—this group had met with and discussed all of the matters as a group, and my feeling was that that ought to be done the same way, though he did not raise a question and I did not volunteer to open.

Q. Insofar as you know—

The Court: Was this February 22nd, the Athletic Board?

The Witness: No; it was not the Board.

Mr. Schroder: Not the Board; it was the committee that met.

The Court: Is that the one that had Mr. Bernie Moore?

[fol. 1122] Mr. Schroder: That's right.

The Court: Chairman of the Board of Regents?

The Witness: Bernie Moore, Mr. Harman, Mr. James Dunlap, Chancellor Caldwell, Mr. Bolton.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. You say the same group met every time you discussed it?

A. Well, after the first meeting with Burnett in which Mr. Barwick had a recording of the conference.

Q. Every member of that group met every time when you discussed it?

A. Well, I will have to—I think that's right, but I can check it and see.

Q. How many times did you meet, approximately?

A. Well, met one time with Mr. Burnett. The next time, the addition was Bernie Moore. I think I had better check and get the exact people who were there.

Q. That won't be necessary, sir. My point is, you rode over here with a man who had been connected with the University of Georgia for how many years?

Mr. Cody: Your Honor, he has covered that point, I think he is arguing now, and I move to exclude it.

The Court: I will let him ask him again, did he inform Coach Butts while they were en route or did they wait until they reached Mr. Barwick's office?

[fol. 1123] By Mr. Schroder:

Q. You rode over here in the car with a man that had been head of the athletic department for the University of Georgia for over twenty years, knowing that he was charged with what Burnett had charged him with, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir; to meet with this group.

Q. Yes, sir. So far as you know he didn't know anything about what you all were meeting about, did he?

A. At that time, he didn't; during that discussion he indicated he did know.

Q. And you didn't mention it to him at any time until you got in the meeting; is that right?

A. That's right, until I turned it over to Mr. Barwick for handling.

Q. Up until that time you all had been discussing with him a retirement, hadn't you?

A. Yes, sir. Going back to the 20th, the conference he had with me on the 20th and the subsequent meeting with the Board on the 28th.

Q. That was a month before February 22, at least a month, over a month; during that time you all, the group, had been discussing a retirement under which he would be paid approximately six thousand dollars a year, hadn't you?

A. Well, that figure was named as a possible one—

Q. All right, sir.

A. —but the committee that was asked to look into it was to examine his insurance—I mean, his retirement under the Athletic Board and the retirement under the teacher's retirement, because part of his salary was paid by the University and therefore that part was subject to teacher retirement, and maybe one other item, see what that came to and what would be involved in a retirement [fol. 1124] program that would pay some reasonable amount, and six thousand dollars had been named; yes, sir.

Q. After the Saturday Evening Post story, that was no longer discussed, was it?

A. It has not been discussed directly, though Coach Butts and I discussed it briefly on the date that this letter was written.

Q. The date that Dr. Rose's letter was written?

A. No; I'm sorry, the one that—

Q. The February 23rd letter?

A. Yes; the one that Coach Butts wrote. At that time—excuse me.

Q. All right. Let's pass on to February the 23rd for a minute. Coach Butts came to your office on February 23rd about noon, didn't he?

A. Well, around 12:00 or 12:30, somewhere along in there.

Q. And he told you that he had heard that there was going to be an article published in that day's paper stating that he was going to resign or that he had resigned?

A. Well, I think I can recall fairly accurately what was said. He indicated that, I believe, Mr. Bisher or some sports editor had—some sports writer had called him either the night before or early that morning saying that such an announcement would be made and that he wanted me to know that he did not authorize that.

Q. And he came to you and he told you, rather than have that come out, without you knowing anything about it, that he had not authorized it, in order not to embarrass you and not to embarrass the University of Georgia he would tender his resignation?

[fol. 1125] A. Well, he didn't give those reasons, but—but he did—

Q. Let's move on to Sunday.

The Court: Go ahead and let him finish. Did you finish your answer?

The Witness: Well, I think the statement of fact is what he said when he came in, and later he did say that he was going to resign. There was no relation, as I remember, in the discussion with the two things.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. You didn't ask him for his resignation, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. No one that you know of asked him for his resignation after the February 22 meeting, did they?

A. Not that I know of; no, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, you were in Birmingham on January the 24th, weren't you—excuse me, February the 24th?

A. Yes, sir; I went to Birmingham the evening of the 23rd, and I was there on the 24th.

Q. And you met with Dr. Rose, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you told Dr. Rose what had been reported to you by one George Burnett, didn't you?

A. Yes. I think we shared with Dr. Rose all of the information which the committee had, and we shared it not only with Dr. Rose but the group asked Bernie Moore if he would also meet with us, and the meeting was held in his office, so the four of us were there at that time.

[fol. 1126] Q. You speak of all of the information you had, all the information you had was from Burnett, was it not, insofar as it related to this telephone call? Did you have any information from anyone else that was listening?

A. No, sir.

Q. It was all Burnett, wasn't it?

A. It was the Burnett report that we had; that's correct.

Q. All right, sir. And you talked to Dr. Rose in Bernie Moore's office in Birmingham, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Bernie Moore, as a matter of fact, had suggested that that meeting be held in Birmingham in his office and that it be confidential, didn't he?

A. Who did?

Q. Bernie Moore.

A. Bernie Moore? No, sir. I called Dr. Rose while the committee—while this group was up there, and asked him if he would meet us in Bernie Moore's office. Bernie was in the meeting and agreed that we could meet in his office, and he would meet us.

Q. There was no mention of it being a confidential meeting?

A. Well, I don't recall that there was any mention of it, but—.

Q. It was your understanding—

A. I am certain that my concept was that it was to be a confidential meeting at that time.

Q. At which time, insofar as you knew, Dr. Rose would be acquainted for the first time with Burnett's story?

A. As far as I know that is true.

Q. That was the reason for going over there—for having the meeting, wasn't it?

[fol. 1127] A. Yes.

Q. And when the meeting got under way, it was disclosed it really hadn't been confidential as you and the others had expected it to be, wasn't it?

A. Well, I don't know what you mean. If you will elaborate a little I will react to it.

Q. When you walked in and sat down at the meeting, Mr. Moore seemed quite upset because he had been called by a sports writer wanting to know what you all were meeting about, didn't he?

A. Well, during the meeting—I don't recall toward the first; toward the end of the meeting, but I wouldn't be positive about that.

The Court: Who was the fourth man? It was you and Dr. Rose, and—

Mr. Schroder: Bernie Moore.

The Court: Who was the fourth man?

The Witness: Cook Barwick.

The Court: Oh, yes. Thank you.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. And the man who called Bernie Moore to find out what you were supposed to be meeting about was, again, Mr. Furman Bisher, was it not?

A. May I refer to the notes?

[fol. 1128] Q. Surely.

A. I know, in general, I think, what he reported. I'm sorry; I can't put my hand on it right now, but I think we can nail the dates—

Q. Sir?

A. As I recall it, there were two questions, and I wouldn't say one of these preceded the other at the moment. Dr. Rose, I think, asked if we had heard anything—

Q. I am speaking now about Furman Bisher, not what Dr. Rose said he heard.

Mr. Cody: Let him finish.

Mr. Schroder: I want an answer that is responsive.

The Court: I don't know whether he can respond to it or not.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Let me ask him simply, did Dr.—did Bernie Moore say anything about having received a call from Furman Bisher to inquire why the three or four of you all were meeting?

A. Yes, sir. He reported that Furman Bisher called him, I believe, the night before—

Q. All right, sir.

A. —either prior to that or after it, and I wouldn't say which. Dr. Rose asked—do you want to know—

Q. I just wanted to know if it had not been your understanding that it was to be a confidential meeting, and was it not so that a newspaper sports writer did call wanting [fol. 1129] to know why the meeting was being held?

A. No; it wasn't what he—what I remember that he reported. He said that Furman Bisher had called him, and I believe he said the night before—

Q. All right, sir.

A. —and asked some questions that, I think he said, led him to believe that he knew that we were meeting over there.

Q. All right, sir.

A. Now, that is the substance of it.

Q. You went on and had your meeting, and Coach Bryant was apprised of what you had received from George Price Burnett, Jr.?

A. No, sir.

Q. He wasn't?

A. I never did talk to Coach Bryant.

Q. I'm sorry. I made the mistake. The man that was there representing the University of Alabama?

A. Dr. Rose; yes.

Q. And Dr. Rose was told, or he said, well, he was going to look into it himself, didn't he?

A. Yes; he expressed concern, and said that he'd go back and get right on it, that he had to be in Washington, I believe, the first part of the week. He and I both were supposed to attend a meeting in Chicago the latter part of the week, but he said, "I will get somebody started right into it." And I think he mentioned—I know he mentioned two people, one is a fellow, I think he said, Mr. Coleman and Mr. Bennett, "I will get them started on it right away," or something to that effect, "and I will let you know what we find out."

Q. You didn't hear from him again—as you say, he was traveling—until you received the letter which Mr. [fol. 1130] Cody—which you just produced and handed to Mr. Cody?

A. On March 6th; that's correct.

Q. That was the date of the letter?

A. It was dated then. I think I received it about the 8th.

Q. He was, in that letter, reporting on what he had turned up, I mean, reporting on the result of the investigation, sir?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever answer the letter?

A. No, sir.

Q. Sir?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why?

A. Well, he said on nearer the end of it that if he found any more information that he would let us know, and our group had agreed to turn over what information we had to the Southeastern Conference, to the NCAA, and to the President of the University of Alabama. We had felt that we had pursued the matter as far as we could.

Q. Well, he told you, did he not, that he found nothing to substantiate what you had told him in Birmingham?

A. Who? President Rose?

Q. President Rose; yes, sir.

A. Well, that is not what is in the letter to me.

Q. You talked to him, though?

A. No; I have not talked with him except the day that this letter was subpoenaed and released.

Q. And he called you on that date?

A. He called me on the phone to ask me if the letter had been released or subpoenaed and released, and I told him, yes, that it had been subpoenaed. I didn't know that it [fol. 1131] had been released, and he said, "Well, it has been." I mean, I didn't know it until really just before I talked to him, because some person from AP or UPI had called from Atlanta and asked one question, "Did you get a letter from President Rose dated the 6th of March?" And he said, "I have seen a copy of the letter." I said, "If you have seen a copy of the letter and it is addressed to me, you can assume I received it."

Q. Yes, sir. But I want to get back—

A. And then—

Q. —to this telephone conversation.

A. Yes, sir. Immediately, then, as I hung up the telephone I had a call from Dr. Rose in Tuscaloosa, and he asked if the letter had been released, and I told him just about what I have said here, and he said, Well, the New York office of the AP had just—had called him and told him about the letter, and that he had made the following comments, none of which I took down, but he said he gave it to AP, and I read it in the story the next day, and it essentially was what he had told me over the telephone.

Q. All right, sir. Now, Dr. Rose told you when he called you on the telephone some two weeks after he had written you that the letter which he had written had been written hurriedly, that it was an attempt by one college president to pass along to another college president information relating to a game which he knew nothing about, and he assumed that you weren't aware or acquainted with the terminology, meaning football?

A. You mean, did he say all that to me?

Q. In essence, isn't that what he told you?

A. I think what he said to me is in the AP report and [fol. 1132] story. I read it the next day, and it was about just what he said.

Q. All right. You tell me what you remember him telling you on the telephone.

A. Well, it was to the effect that he had hurriedly written the letter, that he didn't know much about football, technical football, and that he had talked to Mr. Bryant, I believe he said, two or three times about it, and really that is about what he said on the phone.

Q. And didn't he also, in that conversation with you, tell you that Coach Bryant had told him, when he first approached the matter with Coach Bryant, that Coach Bryant had said that he talked with Wally Butts many times on many topics, including the new enforcement policy regarding defensive tactics in football?

A. He said that in the letter.

Q. Yes, sir; I know it. But didn't he also in the telephone conversation with you, tell you that the reason the University of Alabama, including the Coach and the President, were so concerned about the new enforcement policy was that they wanted to make certain no incident ever happened again to the University of Alabama such as that which happened in the previous football season commonly known as the Darwin Holt-"Chic" Granning incident?

A. I don't believe he said that to me.

Q. In effect, they were very much concerned about the boys playing—not doing anything that might create another incident like that?

A. He said that, I think, in the meeting in Birmingham when we were talking, but I don't recall that he said that at all on the telephone.

[fol. 1133] Q. He told you how that incident alone had harmed the University of Alabama through the press?

A. He didn't comment on it at all, just referred to it.

Q. He told you at that time he didn't want any such incident to occur, particularly between the University of Georgia and the University of Alabama?

A. No, sir.

Q. He didn't talk about the fact that Georgia Tech and Alabama had agreed to sever relations sometime in the future, and he did not want that to arise between the University of Georgia and Alabama?

A. No, sir; I don't recall him saying anything about that.

Q. You remember him talking about the new enforcement procedures that Coach Bryant and he were discussing the night he went back to confront Coach Bryant?

A. In the letter?

Q. Yes, sir. You remember also, do you not, when he talked to you on the telephone, that being a college professor and unfamiliar with football terminology, that he meant, when he was writing to you, to tell you or to acquaint you with the fact that it was those defense techniques that he was concerned with, and that is why Coach Bryant and Coach Butts had these conversations, and that if he used "plays" in his letter, it was just one college professor's way of saying "techniques"?

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Now, he told you that on the telephone, didn't he?

[fol. 1134] A. He told me that he mean't "techniques". The rest of it I don't recall much about, except what the AP reported the next day was essentially what he had told me on the phone.

Q. All right, sir. He pointed out to you where he had used the word "plays". He didn't understand it; it was a defensive technique he was trying to describe to you in his letter, and he told you what plays were used, I mean, techniques?

The Court: Haven't you been over that once?

Mr. Schroder: I don't know, sir. I don't want there to be any doubt.

The Witness: There are other—

The Court: I don't think we can keep repeating it.

The Witness: He referred to it in other parts of the letter.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. During that conversation he also asked, didn't he, why you hadn't answered his letter?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he mention anything about you answering his letter?

A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. All right, sir. You are positive?

A. Yes.

Q. Sir?

[fol. 1135] A. Yes. I don't think he has ever asked me why I didn't answer his letter.

Q. All right. You have already said, I believe, he asked you, did you release the letter?

A. He asked me, "Was the letter released?" And I said, "It was subpoenaed; I did not release it to anybody."

Q. He told you he considered that to be a confidential communication because it had been so marked, didn't he?

A. He did not say that.

Q. What did he say about it being confidential?

A. He said, "This letter which I wrote you, has it been released?" And I said, "It's been subpoenaed, and I just learned from a telephone conversation a minute ago that it apparently has been released."

Q. Did he say anything—it is marked "Confidential", isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he say anything to you—did he use that word in the telephone conversation?

A. Well, I don't remember that he did.

Q. Did he also tell you that he felt that you owed him the courtesy of letting him know that it had been subpoenaed?

A. No, sir.

Q. He didn't discuss that with you?

A. No, sir.

Q. You are sure?

A. I am.

Q. Sir?

A. Yes, sir; I am.

Q. Is there any question in your mind, or has there ever been any question in your mind when Dr. Rose told you that the unfortunate use of the word "plays" instead of [fol. 1136] "techniques", has there never been any question in your mind that he meant it?

The Court: How many more times are we going to go over "plays" and "techniques"? You don't have to answer that, Dr. Aderhold.

Mr. Schroder: I want to know if there is any doubt about him having meant it.

The Court: I think he has answered it three times, Mr. Schroder.

Mr. Schroder: I have not asked for his reaction, Your Honor.

The Court: I think you have asked him the question three times.

Mr. Schroder: May I—I will cut it out if I can ask him this one more question.

The Court: No, sir; you have asked him that three times—the same question.

Mr. Schroder: No. I asked him—I am asking him now, is there any doubt in his mind about President Rose meaning what he said.

[fol. 1137] The Court: I told you, you have asked the question three times.

Mr. Schroder: I have asked that?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: I don't see how any witness, Your Honor, could testify with any accuracy about somebody's mental reaction.

The Court: I have already ruled on it. Let him proceed.

The Marshal: Let's have order, please.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. I believe you testified on direct examination that you would see Coach Butts maybe two, three or four times a year?

A. Oh, I saw him, of course, many more times than that.

Q. I don't mean on the street; I mean in connection with his position there as athletic director.

A. Well, I haven't kept any record, but I would guess that is within the range of our meetings.

Q. In the meeting of February 22nd, when you finally acquainted Coach Butts with what he was over there for, did you say that the notes were handed to him and he riffled through them, or what did you say?

[fol. 1138] A. I didn't say "riffled through them."

Q. I didn't mean to put that in your mind—in your mouth. Just tell me what he did do. Did he have his glasses on?

A. They were handed to him. He said he didn't have his glasses, I believe, and somebody—I don't remember whether it was Mr. Barwick or Mr. Bolton—said, "Try mine," and handed them to him, and he said, "Yes; I can see."

Q. All right, sir. How long did he spend with the notes?

A. Well, I don't recall it consumed very many minutes; just briefly looked through them.

Q. Just what, sir?

A. I don't recall it—

Q. I didn't hear the last thing you said.

A. —consumed very many minutes.

Q. You said it didn't consume very many minutes; you'd say briefly?

A. I would say briefly, a few minutes; I don't know whether three or five.

Q. And I don't believe you said that any particular item in those notes was discussed by him when he was going through them?

A. What do you mean by "specific items" now?

Q. Well, to me that would mean there were several entries in the notes, and were they gone over one by one, entry by entry, or was any particular entry discussed?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. All right, sir.

A. I think he—I think he generalized about them rather than any specific one.

Q. And he then proceeded, I think you testified on direct [fol. 1139] examination he then proceeded to discuss football in general at the meeting, including you?

A. What do you mean "including me"?

Q. I mean, including you as a group, he was discussing football there for about an hour, I think you said?

A. Well, I wouldn't put an hour on it, but approximately that; yes.

Q. All right, sir. And he took the position, as you said, that the information that was contained in these Burnett notes were not in the category that they would have helped anyone getting ready for a game with the University of Georgia?

A. Well, I don't believe he was asked that question.

Q. Let me put it this way. You did testify he told you and the others he would never do anything that would hurt the University of Georgia, didn't he?

A. He said, "I didn't do anything that I thought would hurt the University of Georgia and I never would," or something to that effect.

Q. All right, sir. These notes that he had there in his hand, if they contained information that might have helped an opposing coach, that would have hurt the University of Georgia, wouldn't it?

A. Well, presumably so.

Q. You don't know what is in those notes insofar as football knowledge is concerned, do you?

A. No; I do not.

Q. You don't know whether there was anything in those notes that would be helpful or harmless, do you?

A. This is certainly not an expert's reaction, but there were names called, and whether or not that is helpful and how they react, or not, I have an idea that maybe if [fol. 1140] you knew a good deal about the reaction that it would be helpful.

Q. Did you ever discuss these notes yourself with anyone that was familiar with football jargon?

A. I saw a run of the film—

Q. Yes, sir.

A. —with the notes.

Q. Yes, sir. Did you discuss the notes with someone when the film was being run?

A. Yes. I mean, the notes were discussed.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I listened.

Q. The film was being run by Johnny Griffith, wasn't it?
A. Yes, sir.

• • • • • • •

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Did Coach Griffith tell you, in effect, that the only thing that he saw in those notes that would be of help would be knowing two formations?

Q. Did he at that time point out to you—
A. I think he indicated that he thought they would be of help.
Q. All right, sir.
A. But I don't think he mentioned specific formations.
Q. Did he, at the time that he was showing the film to you, point out that the first four times that the University of Georgia football team used one of these formations that it caught Alabama by surprise and the plays run from those formations were successful?
[fol. 1141] A. I don't think there is any—

The Court: I don't remember Coach Griffith testifying to that. Several others testified to that.
Mr. Schroder: Mr. Pearce did.
Mr. Cody: He didn't testify to that.
The Court: No.
Mr. Joiner: No.

Dr. Hugh Mills, called as a witness on behalf of the Defendant, after having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Your name is Dr. Hugo Mills?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where do you live, Dr. Mills?
A. In Athens, Georgia, 3280 Jefferson Road.
Q. How long have you lived there?

A. I have lived at this address about three years now.

Q. How long have you lived in Athens?

A. At this present time since 1954, I believe.

[fol. 1142] Q. Are you connected in any way with the University of Georgia?

A. Yes; I am an associate professor in the Education School.

Q. How long have you been a professor?

A. I first joined the staff in 1948, I believe, and then I had a three-year term back out in public school and back the next time I believe in 1954, so I have actually had two tenures with the University. I have been there since 1954 constantly.

Q. Are you a member of the University of Georgia Athletic Board?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you occupied that position?

A. I am in my second term. The term is for one year, so it would be about a year and a half, I guess, now.

Q. In your work at the University, have you—have you had occasion to know Wallace Butts?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Please state to the Court, Dr. Mills, whether or not you know the general character in the community of Wallace Butts?

A. Yes, sir; I think I know the general character of Wallace Butts.

Q. From that knowledge will you state to the Court whether or not that is good or bad?

A. Given those choices, from my knowledge I would now have to say "bad".

Q. From your knowledge of that character can you state to the Court whether or not you would believe Wallace Butts on oath?

A. I would not any longer.

[fol. 1143] Mr. Cody: I believe that's all.

The Court: Mr. Schroder—

Mr. Schroder: Yes, Your Honor.
The Court: —Do you have any questions?

Cross examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Dr. Mills, after the January 28th meeting of the Board—you attended that meeting, didn't you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And after the meeting you talked wtih Wallace Butts, didn't you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And in that conversation you told him what a wonderful job you thought he had done there at the University, didn't you?
A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: Speak so I can hear you, Schroder; I can't hear you.
The Witness: And will be happy to explain that statement.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Well, you made the statement to him?
[fol. 1144] A. Yes; I did.
Q. All right, sir. Do you know Bill Hartman?
A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: I think he ought to be permitted to explain his statement, Your Honor. I think you permitted Mr. Schroder's witnesses to do that, and if he wants to make an explanation I think he ought to be permitted to do it.
Mr. Schroder: I understand Mr. Cody is not through, yet, with the witness.
The Court: Sir?
Mr. Schroder: I didn't understand Mr. Cody was through with the witness.
The Court: Mr. Schroder, I think he can explain his answer.

Mr. Schroder: It is all right with me.

The Court: You can explain it, sir.

The Witness: As well as I remember in these circumstances we were viewing the maps of the proposed recreation experiment stations in North Georgia where we were [fol. 1145] in Mr. Masters' office at the Continuing Education Center, and I told Coach, because I felt that things had gone very badly for him, not in the meeting but of late, that all in all I felt he had had a very good influence over the years, which was my way of saying, in fact, that, "I am very sorry and I hope things do better for you now, and I certainly did mean that, of course."

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. In 1959 Wallace Butts was elected the number two football coach in the United States, wasn't he?

A. I'm sorry, but I don't recall.

Q. You say you do know Bill Hartman?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is a man of honor?

A. In my estimation, yes, sir.

Q. You would believe him, wouldn't you?

A. I would.

Q. Do you know Ray Clark, the captain of the Georgia 1962 football team?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: Your Honor, I think it is the character of the Plaintiff in this case, not that of—not that of other parties.

Mr. Schroder: These people have testified—

The Court: I think, Mr. Cody, if I remember the rule correctly, I don't know that Mr. Schroder is properly putting the questions, but I am sure he can, I think he can [fol. 1146] ask him to say he knows So-and-So. I think he can bolster the evidence of Mr. Hartman or Mr. Clark, or anyone else.

Mr. Cody: Very well; very well.

The Court: It is a proper rule. I don't know that you propounded your question like the Code Section, but you can ask him does he know the reputation of Mr. Hartman.

Mr. Schroder: All right, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. And Mr. Ray Clark?

Mr. Cody: I do want to make this point for the record, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Cody: Until the character of a witness is in issue, I think the Courts have held that evidence as to character is inadmissible.

The Court: All right, sir; have you got the law on that? Let the Jury go to the jury room. Let's see the law on that.

Mr. Cody: 16 Georgia Appeals, Your Honor.

The Court: Let me get 16 Georgia Appeals. Will you state what that case holds, and by that time I will have the volume.

Mr. Cody: It is my understanding that it was held in that case that the credibility of a witness—it is my understanding that the witness can not be impeached on evidence introduced as to his character unless there's been some attack on it.

The Court: Well, I don't know whether you would call an attack—one way to impeach a witness would be contradictory testimony.

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

The Court: And some of the witnesses would be questioned about, Mr. Clark and Mr. Hartman, there's been contradictory testimony in regard to whether or not plays set out in those notes would have or would not have been beneficial.

Mr. Cody: Yes.

[fol. 1148] The Court: That is one way of contradicting it, I mean, impeaching is by contradicting statements.

Mr. Cody: Let me take a look at one Code section we had in mind.

The Court: You are referring, I believe, to 38-108?

Mr. Cody: I think it is.

The Court: Yes, sir. This testimony went in yesterday, Mr. Cody, without objection on your part. I remember he asked Mr. Bradshaw in regard to Charlie Trippi; I believe I am right on that.

Mr. Schroder: That's correct.

The Court: What is your citation?

Mr. Cody: It is 1803.

The Court: Sir?

Mr. Cody: Code section 1803.

[fol. 1149] The Court: What is your citation in 16 Georgia Appeals? I have it here now.

Mr. Cody: Page 832, headnote one. I think Section 1804 touches on this subject too.

The Court: Have you got any Code section?

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

The Court: As I understand the Code section, Mr. Cody, —I am reading from the Code section, a witness may be impeached by evidence as to his general bad character. The impeaching witness should be first asked as to his knowledge of the general character of the witness, and next as to what that character is, and lastly he may ask from that character if he would believe him on his oath. The witness may be sustained by similar proof of character. And that is just what—

Mr. Cody: That is the witness on the stand. A witness—

The Court: No, sir; you wouldn't sustain a witness by his own testimony. You would sustain it by someone else, and he is sustaining Mr. Hartman's and Mr. Clark's, I believe, by this witness.

[fol. 1150] Mr. Cody: Only, I understand, when his character has been attacked. You can not offer evidence—

The Court: I don't know that you have attacked his character, but you have in a roundabout way, I assume it is your contention, that this evidence showed that these notes were of benefit, and these two witnesses testified—I don't remember about Mr. Clark, but I remember Mr. Hartman stated that in his opinion and Mr. Trippi, that they didn't affect the outcome.

Mr. Cody: I understand Your Honor's ruling.

The Court: Yes. I will let him answer. Is there anything else while the Jury is out?

Mr. Schroder: No, Your Honor.

Mr. Cody: No, sir.

The Court: All right, let them be brought back in.

(Whereupon the Jury returned to the courtroom at 10:18 A. M.)

The Court: All right, Mr. Schroder.

[fol. 1151] By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Dr. Mills, you stated that you do know Mr. Ray Clark?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are familiar with his reputation in the community?

A. I am not real familiar with his reputation in the community. I do know him and have a high regard for the boy; yes, sir.

Q. Do you know Mickey Babb?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know his reputation in the community?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?

A. I would.

Q. Do you know Wally Williamson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know his reputation in the community?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it good or bad?

A. Good.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?

A. I would.

Q. Do you know Mr. Charlie Trippi?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know his reputation in the community?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is it good or bad?
A. Good.
Q. You would believe him under oath, wouldn't you?
A. I would.
Q. Did I ask you about Mr. Brigham Woodward?
A. No, sir; I don't believe you did.
[fol. 1152] Q. Do you know his reputation?
A. I do not know it as well as the others. I have talked to the others personally on occasion. I don't believe I have ever talked to Mr. Woodward personally, but I do know who he is, and I know him as one of our students.
Q. You know his reputation?
A. To that extent, yes.
Q. Is it good or bad?
A. Good.
Q. You would believe him under oath, wouldn't you?
A. I would.

J. D. Bolton, having resumed the stand, testified further as follows:

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Bolton, you heretofore have been sworn as a witness?
A. Yes; I have.

Mr. Cody: This is Mr. J. D. Bolton.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Bolton, will you tell the Court once again how long you have been connected with the University.

A. Since July 1st, 1933.

[fol. 1153] Q. And you presently occupy what position?

A. Comptroller and Treasurer of the University of Georgia, and also Treasurer of University of Georgia Athletic Association.

Q. In that capacity have you had much contact with Wallace Butts during the period that he has been at the University?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has that been fairly constant?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does your duties as Treasurer of the Athletic Association cause you to have business dealings with him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you please state to the Court whether or not you know—you are acquainted with the general character of Wallace Butts in the community?

A. Yes, sir; I believe I am.

Q. From that knowledge will you state to the Court whether or not that is good or bad?

A. I would have to say it is bad.

Q. From that knowledge of his character, would you believe him on his oath?

A. No; sir; I would not.

Q. Mr. Bolton, have you ever talked with Wallace Butts or been at any meetings where Coach Bryant was discussed, or whether he mentioned Coach Bryant's name?

A. This meeting in Cook Barwick's office on February 22nd, I believe it was.

Q. By what name did he refer—did he refer to Coach Bryant at that time.

A. This is February 22nd, 1963. At that time, to the best of my recollection, he referred to him as "Old Bear" in that one instance.

[fol. 1154] Q. Do you remember at that meeting whether or not Wallace Butts had his glasses with him?

A. Yes, sir; I can remember very distinctly.

Q. Did he have them or did he not?

A. Evidently he did not have them, because I gave him my glasses to examine the notes with.

Q. Did he have anything to say as to whether or not he could see with your glasses?

A. Yes, sir; he said, "I can see out of these things."

Q. Did he examine the notes in your presence?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Bolton, were you—prior to the Bryant affair, were you on a committee appointed by Dr. Aderhold to look into any matters concerning Wallace Butts?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know when you were appointed on that committee?

Would your notes refresh your recollection?

A. I think it was January the 5th.

Q. Of 1963?

A. 1963.

Q. What is that you are looking at?

A. Looking at the minutes of the Athletic Association.

Q. Go ahead.

A. Minutes of the Board meetings and Executive Committee meetings.

The Court: You the secretary?

The Witness: No, sir. I have sometimes acted as secretary when others were not there.

[fol. 1155] By Mr. Cody:

Q. Will you state to the Court the assignment that was given that committee?

A. The committee was instructed, and, as well as I remember, the committee was composed of Mr. Heckman and Mr. Bishop Grant and I, to study expense accounts and personal telephone accounts of Coach Butts.

Q. Well, how did the University come into that—

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor, I don't see the relevancy of this at all, and I think the Jury should be instructed to disregard it.

The Court: Let's don't go into that. I will let you ask him in regard to the termination, what that committee—I presume you are going up to the question of the appointment of Mr. Barwick to investigate it?

Mr. Cody: That is another committee.

The Court: Sir?

Mr. Cody: That is another committee.

The Court: Well, I will rule this evidence out.

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

[fol. 1156] Mr. Lockerman: Will you instruct the Jury?

The Court: Members of the Jury, I will instruct you to disregard any statement in regard to the committee looking into any telephone calls that might have been charged to the University. That is not relevant in this matter, and you should disregard it.

Mr. Cody: I believe that's all.

Recross examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. You referred a moment ago to a notebook that you had there covering the meeting in Mr. Barwick's office. Could I see it please, sir?

A. My notebook?

Q. Yes, sir.

The Court: I don't believe he—his testimony wasn't that he had evidence of minutes of the meeting in Mr. Barwick's office.

Mr. Schroder: No; when he was testifying, refreshing his recollection.

The Witness: Do I have to give him my personal notebook?

[fol. 1157] Mr. Schroder: You mentioned something—I don't want to look at your personal notebook.

The Court: He thought maybe you had some notes. Do you have any notes that were made in regard to that meeting that are separate? He would be permitted to have them. But if it is your personal notes—

Mr. Schroder: Could I sort of stand behind him and let him show me what entries he had?

The Court: Let him read them out to you and then point them out.

The Witness: Which date, February 22?

Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir.

The Witness: 10:00 A.M., Cook Barwick, Caldwell, Dunlap, Moore, Hartman, Butts, and, of course, Dr. Aderhold and I were there too.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Is that all the notes you have relative to that meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, when you were asked a minute ago about what Coach Butts had to say when he was referring to Coach [fol. 1158] Bryant, you looked at your notebook and said, "Old Bear". You don't have that in there, do you?

A. No; I looked for the date in the notebook.

Q. Oh, looking at the date refreshed your recollection?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You been at Athens, you say, since 1933 at the University?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were there when I went through the Law School?

A. Yes, sir; I remember you well.

Q. You have been there long enough, have you not, to form an opinion as to the general character and reputation of William Hartman in that community?

A. I think so.

Q. In your opinion, is it good or is it bad?

A. I would say it is good.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?

A. I have never had occasion not to.

Q. Is your answer "yes"?

A. I believe I would.

Q. Your answer is "yes"?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Coach Charles Trippi?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He lives in Athens?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you familiar with his character and reputation in the community where he lives?

A. Not as well as I am with Coach Hartman. I have never been thrown closely with Coach Trippi.

Q. No; I didn't mean your personal association with him, [fol. 1159] but what is his general reputation in the community in which he lives?

A. As far as I know it would be good.

Q. And you would believe him under oath?

A. Yes, sir; I would.

Q. Do you know Ray Clark, Captain of the University of Georgia football team?

A. I would know him if I were to see him.

Q. Sir?

A. I would only know him if I were to see him.

Q. Are you familiar with his reputation in the community?

A. No, sir; I would not be.

Q. Sir?

A. I would not be.

Q. And he is the Captain of the team?

A. I think he was.

Q. In '62?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But the last time we put a team on the field he was the Captain of it, wasn't he?

A. I think that's right.

Q. Do you know Mickey Babb?

A. I think I'd know him if I were to see him.

Q. Do you know his reputation?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know Wally Williamson?

A. I'd know him if I were to see him.

Q. Do you know his reputation in the community?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know Brigham Woodward?

A. Same answer. I'd know him when I'd see him.

Q. But you don't know anything about his reputation?
[fol. 1160] A. No, sir.
Q. Do you know John Gregory?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You know his reputation in the community?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is it good or bad?
A. I think it is good.
Q. Would you believe him under oath?
A. I don't believe I could answer that question.
Q. Why not?
A. May I explain?
Q. Yes, sir.
A. I think the answer would have been yes immediately, but if the newspapers have reported him right, I could not answer the question you asked without studying it further, and I haven't seen the evidence myself.

Mr. Schroder: All right, sir. That's all—

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Going back to the topic I was questioning you about at the beginning of this examination, I have in my hand a transcript prepared by the Court Reporter here of your testimony when you were on the stand last week. This question—I ask you if you remember this question being asked you by Mr. Cody: "Could you recall for the Jury what comments he did make," referring to Wallace Butts? Answer by Mr. Bolton: It got down—"It's just conversation, ordinary football talk among coaches, and that you know I would not give Old Bryant anything to help him and hurt Georgia, and I wouldn't do anything to hurt Georgia." Do you remember giving that answer?
[fol. 1161] A. No, sir; I remember saying "Old Bear".
Q. Last week?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Since you were last on the stand, has Mr. Cody or anyone from this office discussed the testimony in this case with you since then?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: All right, sir, come down.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. Mr. Bolton, let me ask this question. I believe there are about, what, thirteen or nineteen members on the Athletic Board?

A. Eighteen, I believe.

Q. Eighteen, and two of those, I believe, are appointed by the Alumni Association, which is a separate—I believe the Alumni Association is a separate corporate entity, is it not?

A. That's correct.

Q. Is the Athletic Association a corporation, do you know?

A. Yes; it is a corporation.

Q. It is a corporation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What—the charter of the corporation, what is the provision as to the election of members to the Athletic Board?

A. If I remember correctly, Your Honor, I think the President appoints the faculty members or suggests to the committee who appoints the faculty members, and then [fol. 1162] the Board elects the non-faculty members every year; they are re-elected.

Q. You mean the non-faculty members of the Board—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —are elected by the faculty members of the Board; is that correct?

A. I think that's right.

Q. Except for the two alumni?

A. I think except for the alumni, and you see—let's see, fifteen, there are eight faculty members and seven non-faculty members, and I think under the—

Q. The Southeastern Conference requires that the majority members of the Board be faculty members?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. But under the charter the faculty members elect the non-faculty members; is that right?

A. I can tell you how it is handled. We have a nominating committee that is usually made up of a majority of the non-faculty members, and there will be a faculty member on there, but the majority is made up of non-faculty.

Q. Non-faculty?

A. To nominate non-faculty members each year at the Board meeting.

Q. Does this Board decide what the compensation the Director of Athletics and coaches and all assistant coaches should be?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the compensation—what is the compensation of the Director of Athletics?

A. At the time Coach Butts was made Director, I believe it was twelve thousand.

Q. What is the compensation of the head coach at Georgia?

[fol. 1163] A. I believe Coach Griffith's was set at fifteen thousand. At the time of Coach Butts, I believe, if my memory serves me correctly, it was eighteen-five. That included some—not only salary but subsistence allowance.

Q. And you are a separate corporation, the Athletic Association?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I presume that all your accounts and so forth are not only audited by the University but audited by the State of Georgia too?

A. No, sir; they used to be, but since 19—I can't remember the exact date, but 1948 or '49, although the Athletic Association was incorporated, there was a State Act of the Legislature declaring the University of Georgia Athletic Association and the Georgia Tech Athletic Association as separate corporations, and—which did not come under the State. Therefore, the State auditor has not audited since that date.

The Court: I believe that's all.

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Mr. Bolton, when the question arose as to what your testimony was last week as to what name Coach Butts used when he referred to Coach Bryant, did the Court Reporter call you?

A. No, sir.

Q. It is your testimony that in that meeting he referred to Coach Bryant as "Old Bear"?

A. That is my understanding; that is my memory of it.

[fol. 1164] Q. And that is what you testified to last week?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: I believe that's all.

The Court: Any further—any further questions?

Recross examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. During the time Wallace Butts has been connected with the football picture there at the University, during all of which you were at the University, tell the Court and Jury approximately how much revenue the University has picked up through his football teams?

The Court: I don't think that is relevant, Mr. Schroder. I was simply—probably my evidence was irrelevant. I was simply trying to bring out the full picture, what the Athletic Board was, but we can't go into

Mr. Schroder: I will go back to one of the questions Your Honor asked, and the answer he gave.

The Court: I didn't mean to get into a different field. I was simply making an inquiry for personal information. I did want to know the whole athletic situation. I thought it was pertinent on that.

[fol. 1165] Mr. Schroder: I was glad to find that out myself. I thought the amount of salary paid was pertinent.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. The amount of salary paid Coach Butts as athletic director was twelve thousand dollars by the Board, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir; that was his beginning salary.

Q. I mean, as athletic director.

A. Yes; as athletic director.

Q. But he did receive the same amount of money as he had when he was head coach, which would be eighteen-five, didn't he?

A. He did—you mean after he became athletic director? No, sir.

Q. G.S.E.F. didn't pay sixty-five hundred a year?

A. I don't know about that.

Q. You don't know what the Georgia Student Educational Fund is?

A. I know what it is, but I have no knowledge of their records.

Q. You don't know that he got from the University sources the same amount as athletic director that he did as head coach?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you seen Coach Butts frequently since the time you first met him?

Q. Have you seen him at least once each year since you met him in 1947?

A. Yes, I would say so.

Q. And would you give us your best recollection of what would be the most number of times that you have seen him during this period of any one year?

A. In any one year?

Q. Yes.

A. Seven or eight, possibly ten.

Q. Do you recall now what year that would be?

A. No, not in particular.

Q. Now, to the best of your recollection how many times have you seen Coach Butts over a period of the last three years?

[fol. 1169] A. Possibly fifteen times.

Q. And of those fifteen times, how many of them would have been within the immediate preceding year?

A. Six or seven, I'd say.

Q. Now, during these times that you have seen Coach Butts, where would you usually see him?

Q. What places, other than Chicago, have you been with Coach Butts?

A. I was with him once in Atlanta and once in Miami.

Q. Have you ever been to Athens?

A. Never.

Q. Now, I suppose you have been to South Bend?

A. Quite often.

Q. With Coach Butts?

A. Yes.

Q. What would be the occasion for your visit to South Bend with Coach Butts?

A. On two or three occasions when he had a day off he would come up here and go down to see a Notre Dame game. Another time he went to an Old Timers' game, or I think twice we went to an Old Timers' game.

Q. Do you recall attending any other athletic contest with Coach Butts, other than the athletic games you have mentioned?

A. Yes, I attended a Florida game with him about five or six years ago, I guess it was. I'm not sure of the date.

Q. Was that a Georgia-Florida game?

A. Yes, Georgia was playing. I shouldn't say I at-[fol. 1170] tended the game with him; I went down to see one of his games.

Q. Do you remember which Florida school?

A. Pardon?

Q. Was it the University of Florida?

A. In Jacksonville.

Q. Did you have occasion to visit with Coach Butts on your trip to Jacksonville during that time?

A. I met him before that game.

Q. Now do you recall any other athletic contests that you have attended or have been present when Coach Butts was present?

A. I saw his game in the Orange Bowl when he played Missouri, I believe.

Q. What year was that, do you recall?

A. I don't remember.

Q. That was the year when the University of Georgia played the University of Missouri in the Orange Bowl in Miami, Florida?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, have you ever attended a World Series game with Coach Butts?

A. World Series Baseball game?

Q. Yes.

A. No.

Q. Have you ever attended any professional football games with Coach Butts?

A. Several All-Star games.

Q. When you say "All-Star games," are you referring to—

A. All-Star football.

Q. Are you referring to the game where the All-Stars from the colleges play the leading team from the professionals for the previous year?

A. That's right.

[fol. 1171] Q. Where is that game played?

A. Soldier's Field, here.

Q. That is here in Chicago?

A. Right.

Q. Do you have any other mutual acquaintances with Coach Butts, other than Coach Frank Lahey?

A. I probably know a great many people that he knows. I don't know of anybody that's close to him that I also know.

Q. Would Coach Wilkenson at Oklahoma be in that group?

A. Coach Wilkenson is a good friend of mine.

Q. Is he also a friend of Coach Butts, or do you know?

A. I wouldn't know.

Q. What other coaches are you acquainted with or considered to be friends with?

A. I probably know thirty coaches.

Q. Could you give us those that you recall, please, sir?

A. I can recall a few of them. I know Coach Brennen at Notre Dame, I know Coach Koherick, I know Coach Jones at Oklahoma.

Q. What is Coach Jones' position?

A. The assistant coach. Brenny Crimmons real well at Indiana. Joe McGartle, he used to be an assistant coach for Notre Dame. Coach Grandalius.

That's all I can think of at the moment. I know a good many more than that.

Q. How about Coach Paul Bryant?

A. Brown?

Q. Bryant, at the University of Indiana.

A. To the best of my knowledge I never met him.

Q. You haven't mentioned any other coaches in the Southeastern conference other than Coach Butts?

[fol. 1172] A. Not that I can recall.

Q. Have you ever made any trips with Coach Butts, other than the one to Miami that you have mentioned?

A. I never made a trip to Miami with Coach Butts?

Q. You just happened to be in Miami at the same time, but you didn't travel together?

A. That's right.

Q. Have you ever made a trip anywhere with Coach Butts, outside of the Chicago area, other than the ones to the South Bend?

A. Not that I can recall. I met him in New York on two or three occasions when he happened to be there when I was there.

Q. Do you recall the occasion for his being in New York when you met him there?

A. No. He was just there when I was there. I go to New York quite often.

Q. You don't recall the occasion for your being there?

A. No particular reason for being there, either one of us.

Q. Now, what was the purpose of your trip to Atlanta?

A. There was a health food product that I thought Coach Butts might be interested in, called—I cannot think of the name of it. That movie guy on the West Coast was mixed up on it. They took it off the market.

I asked some friends of mine who might be interested in it, and they thought Coach Butts might be interested, to give his football players some employment, and I met him there. It's something like Metrecal, but that isn't it. I met [fol. 1173] him there, and after we both heard the spiel, we both thought it was a phony and walked away from it.

Q. Do you remember the name of this company that manufactured the food?

A. No, but I will get it later. A movie star on the West Coast was behind it, and the Pure Food and Drug people made him take it off the market.

Q. Do you remember the name of the movie star?

A. I'll get the name of it later; I just don't recall right now.

Q. Then what would have been the participation of yourself and Coach Butts in this program, if you had decided to go into it?

A. My only interest in it was the fact that Tom Lahey and a couple of other—Tom Lahey was Frank's brother, and a couple of other insurance people were very interested in getting into it on a sectional or territorial basis. Tom suggested to me that Coach Butts might want to put some of his boys to work with it.

Q. In other words, he would be something of a distributor of the product?

A. That's right. As far as Butts and I personally being involved in any one situation, there was no interest or no intent.

Q. Now was it your previous testimony that some friends of Coach Butts suggested to you that he might be interested in this?

A. No, no. Some friends of mine suggested to me that Coach Butts might be interested in it, and the friends were Tom Lahey and a couple of other fellows that worked for Bankers Life and Casualty.

Q. What were their names?

A. I don't know. I just remember Tom Lahey. He is with Bankers Life and Casualty, too. Nutri-bio.

[fol. 1174] Q. Do you know how to spell that, sir?

A. No, I don't.

Mr. Nussbaum: I think it's N-u-t-r-i-b-i-o.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. When was this trip to Atlanta?

A. As I recall, it's about three years ago. I'm not sure.

Q. And did you—

A. Possibly two years ago would be better.

Q. Is it your testimony that is the only time that you have been with Coach Butts in the State of Georgia, on this one trip?

A. To the best of my knowledge.

Q. On your trips to New York, do you generally stay at any one particular place?

A. Almost always at the Essex House.

Q. Do you know where Coach Butts usually stays on trips to New York?

A. Well, the one or two times I met him there he stayed at the Essex House also, because I told him I was going to be there.

Q. Now, during the time that you have known Coach Butts you testified that he had visited you frequently in Chicago. Were most of those just of a social type, coming up for a football game or something like that, or were they connected with business?

A. They practically were all of a social type. Not necessarily coming up for a game, but if he happened to be in town he would call me and say he was coming in for some reason.

Quite often he would come in and try to get students out of this area. He would say, "I'm going to be in town, let's [fol. 1175] have dinner and a couple of drinks," which we did.

It was always a social situation.

Q. Did you ever try to help him get students in this area to participate in the athletic program at the University of Georgia?

A. I wouldn't dare.

Q. Why?

A. I would get disowned from the alumni of Notre Dame.

Q. Have you ever been involved in any business ventures with Mr. Butts?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever been approached by Mr. Butts to make an investment in a business venture?

A. As far as me making an investment, no. As far as him asking me for advice as to how he could finance various things, yes.

Q. And do you recall these particular projects that he was interested in getting your advice on?

A. Well, one in particular had to do with some small loan companies that he was involved in in Georgia. He needed financing for them.

Another one was some type of a concentrated orange juice situation.

Q. Do you recall on how many different occasions you spoke to him about the small loan companies?

A. Not offhand. I might have had a phone conversation ten or fifteen times with him.

Q. What about the orange grove project, do you remember how many times you spoke to him about that?

A. Several. He sent me a complete rundown on it, and after looking at it I wouldn't advise anyone to invest in it, and I just didn't do anything about it.

[fol. 1176] Q. Do you recall any other projects that he has asked you to give him your advice on?

A. No, just an orange grove, a concentrated orange juice, and a small loan situation is all I recall.

Q. Now did Coach Butts ask you to invest in either the loan companies or the orange grove project?

A. Did he ask me personally to invest in them?

Q. Yes.

A. No.

Q. Did he ask you to try to obtain capital from a Chicago —from the Chicago area, or was he just asking for your advice?

A. No, he asked me to try to obtain capital for all three of them.

Q. And you say all three of them. I don't believe you mentioned but two.

A. Yes, an orange grove and the concentrated orange juice situation, and a small loan company.

Q. Were you able to obtain any capital for any one of these?

A. Frankly I didn't have enough confidence in any of them to approach anybody.

Q. How long did it take you to make up your mind that you didn't have confidence in these particular companies?

A. Well, after he sent the complete brochure and rundown in on particular these two things, the grove and the concentrated orange juice, I didn't think they were good investments for anybody and I wouldn't advise anybody that I knew to put any money in them.

• • • • • • •

[fol. 1177] Q. Did you receive information about these companies within a short while after Coach Butts first spoke to you about them?

A. It was over a period of time. I don't recall the time. Probably—we discussed them at various times over a period of seven, eight or nine months.

Q. Do you recall any one particular time when you were carrying on these discussions, more than any other previous time?

A. Yes. I met somebody named Surgent down in Miami with Coach Butts. He asked me to come down and see this gentleman, whoever he—I even forget the name of the company that he represented that had to do with the concentrated orange juice.

After I had had the brochure, the rundown or the statements or whatever you want to say on the entire set-up, I told Wally I didn't think the deal was a solid deal and he asked me to come down and meet Mr. Surgent with him, which I did.

He said that Mr. Surgent could probably explain it better and I would understand it better.

After I got there I was still of the same opinion.

Q. When did you go down to see Mr. Surgent?

A. About two years ago.

Q. After you went down to see Mr. Surgent did you have any further discussions with Coach Butts about this particular project?

A. Possibly. Probably I did.

Q. Would it have been any number, or—

A. You don't just tell a guy, "Well, I don't think your deal is any good," and walk away. You let him talk, I probably talked to him six or eight or ten times about it since.

Q. Now other than that particular period two years ago, [fol. 1178] has there been any period of time since you have been dealing with Coach Butts on these projects in which there was more activity than normal?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. Would you state whether or not you have invested in a company known as Continental Enterprises, Incorporated?

A. Well, I don't recall investing in it. I bought some stock in it.

Q. Do you recall the amount of your investment in that company?

A. Not offhand. I have got records of it, but I don't recall what it is.

Q. Could you give us an approximation of the amount?

A. Some sixteen or eighteen thousand dollars, I think. Somewhere in that neighborhood. Maybe twenty-three thousand dollars, I am not sure.

Q. How have you fared on that investment?

A. Not well.

Q. Do you have any idea approximately how much your loss has been on the investment?

Q. I got out of some of it before it went all the way down. I probably, today, have about an eight or ten thousand dollar loss.

Q. How did you come to invest in this particular company?

A. Coach Butts called me and told me he thought it was a good investment, that there was indication that they were about to get a deal with Coca-Cola or Pepsi-Cola, or some big outfit that had something.

I think Corn Products was one of the people that he mentioned.

Q. Did he send you information about this company, or did you have access to it from other sources?

[fol. 1179] A. No, I just took his word for it. That's a very normal thing on a stock. It's like going to the races.

Q. Do you know a gentleman by the name of Louis Wolfson?

A. I have met him.

Q. Do you recall when and where you met Mr. Wolfson?

A. I met him through Frank Lahey.

Q. Do you remember when?

A. Approximately ten years ago in New York, at the Plaza Hotel.

Q. How many times have you seen Mr. Wolfson since then?

A. Possibly twice. Not over twice, I don't think.

Q. Do you recall when these two times were?

A. No. Well, one time, yes.

I met him outside of the Stadium the night that Georgia played Missouri. Other than that I don't remember meeting him.

DR. H. M. DAVIS called as a witness on behalf of the Defendant, after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Dr. Davis, will you give your full name to the Court Reporter?

A. Dr. H. M. Davis, Dr. Hamilton Maxmillian Davis.

Q. Are you a dentist practicing in Atlanta, Dr. Davis?

[fol. 1180] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where is your office?

A. In Buckhead, 3110 Roswell Road.

Q. Speak so these Jurors can hear you, Dr. Davis.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In response to a subpoena have you brought your records into Court, certain records into Court with respect to one of your patients, Mr. John C. Carmichael?

A. I have brought some that I felt were pertinent to this.

Q. Yes. Will you state to the Court whether or not you have, since the service of this subpoena on yesterday, undertaken to determine whether or not Mr. John C. Carmichael was a patient of yours on September the 13th, 1962?

A. We have examined, meaning people in my office, have examined the record, and we find nothing to indicate that.

Q. What records did you examine?

A. We took last year's appointment books, both the hygienist's and mine, we took our back records insofar as perhaps a deposit could have been made. We took our daily sheet from which we transpose to a file card a more complete record of the patient.

Q. Did you check your X-ray records?

A. We checked X-rays, the date that X-rays were made. We went back to his original appointment as a patient, traced it right up to the present day. There were intervals when we did not see him.

Q. How long have you been practicing dentistry in Atlanta?

A. December 15th, 1934. I think that is about twenty—it will be twenty-nine years.

[fol. 1181] Mr. Cody: I believe that's all.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Was he a patient of yours during that period in 1962?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Cody didn't indicate to you that he testified positively that he had gone to your office on September 13, did he?

A. I am sorry; I'm afraid I don't follow you.

Q. Did Mr. Cody or someone from his staff, they didn't indicate to you that Mr. Carmichael had not testified positively that he had gone to your office that morning?

A. I was told that he might have been there.

Q. Might have been there?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: All right, sir, that's all.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. Doctor, did your records show any time in September, 1962, that Mr. Carmichael was a patient of yours?

A. There is nothing to indicate that. The first—there was an interval there we did not see him for a while, and then the first appointment of '62, 1962, our records show the 4th day of October, 1962.

[fol. 1182] Q. That was the only appointment that your records show he had in 1962?

A. No, sir.

Q. All right, sir.

A. Following that he had one, I think it was the 12th. I jotted it down.

Q. In other words, for the year 1962, October the 4th, 1962 is the first date that your records indicate he came to your office; is that correct?

A. October 4th, 12th, 26th, 31st.

* * * * * * *

FRANK SCOBY testified further by deposition as follows:

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. Do you recall when those two times were?

A. No. Well, one time, yes.

I met him outside of the Stadium the night that Georgia played Missouri. Other than that I don't remember meeting him.

Q. And that was in Miami?

A. Right.

Q. Do you know a Mr. Sam Wolfson?

A. I think I met him once.

Q. Do you recall when and where you met him?

A. At about the same time in Frank Lahey's home in Long Beach, Indiana.

Q. Do you know Mr. George Solitare?

Mr. Schroder: Who?

[fol. 1183] By Mr. Joiner:

Q. George Solitare?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Other than the business ventures that you have already discussed in which Coach Butts was interested, have you-all had other business dealings?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Have you discussed any possible future business dealings that maybe didn't go through?

A. No.

Oh, yes, yes, I have.

Q. Would you tell us about that, please?

A. Yes, I have.

I'm about to attempt to make a Scotch brand name, called Sir James Douglas, and I discussed that with Coach Butts after he severed his connection as coach of Georgia, that I might want him to take over the Southeastern section of the country for this as a representative. And that is still a possibility.

Q. Would this Scotch be made here in this country?

A. Bottled in Scotland.

Q. And is that a new brand name?

A. Yes.

Q. It would be your brand name, and you would import this Scotch?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, what would Coach Butts' duties and responsibility in connection with the distribution of this product be, if the deal goes through?

A. It would be his duties and responsibilities to hire salesmen in certain areas and get distributors for it and be an over-all representative for the product in certain states, and to see that it was properly handled when it got into accounts and probably supervise the sales personnel.

[fol. 1184] Q. Had your discussions reached the point where you could tell me the states that Coach Butts would handle it if the deal does go through?

A. Well, I had in mind Florida and the Southeastern tip of the country down there. There was nothing done, never anything definite.

Q. Would that include Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina?

A. Probably it would. There has never been anything definite about it. That's probably it, yes. That's the thoughts I had in mind on it.

Q. Now what compensation would Coach Butts receive for his part in distributing this product?

A. Well, there was never anything definite on it. It never got that far. Probably it would be some type of drawing account against a commission.

Q. What generally would be the commission for a person in this capacity in the distribution of a product? Is there any set commission in the industry?

A. No, there is nothing set on that. That would be something that would vary, that would have to be mutually worked out.

Q. Could you give us an indication of approximately what commission you had in mind?

A. No, I can't because I didn't have any commission in mind.

Q. Could you give us an indication of, in the industry as a whole, the approximate commission that would be paid?

A. There is no set deal on that. It depends on the man's ability to produce.

Q. Have you negotiated with people in the other areas of the country about the distribution of this product?

A. Yes.

[fol. 1185] Q. And what stage have your negotiations reached with these people?

A. Nothing definite, other than my own organization. I have had some brief conversations with Frank Lahey about being the representative in the Northwest on it, and no definite arrangements.

Q. If you do decide to go through with this project, could you give us an indication of when you will start distributing this product?

A. Yes. Probably about the 10th of August in New York, and about the 20th here.

Q. Do you feel now that you are going to have this product distributed by that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it a definite thing now?

A. It is on the water.

Q. In other words, the distribution of this product by you is definite, but there is no definite deal worked out with Coach Butts?

A. Not with anybody else, not with anybody else.

Q. Not with Coach Butts or anybody else in the country?

A. No.

Q. What about the Chicago area? Would you distribute it yourself in this area?

A. That's right.

Q. Have you filed your label with the Liquor Control Commission in the State of Illinois?

A. Not yet. I have Federal approval on it.

Q. And what Federal agency gives approval on that type of thing?

A. The Alcohol Tax Unit.

Q. Do you recall the number of your import license, or if you don't have one, the import license of Better Brands of Illinois, Incorporated?

[fol. 1186] A. No, I don't have it. I can get it for you, but I don't have it.

Q. Does Chi-1-96 sound like it might be this number?

A. I don't know the number.

I can make a phone call for you and get it for you if you want it.

Q. No, I don't think that will be necessary.

Do you recall the dates when you were in New York and Coach Butts was also there, or if you don't recall all of them do you recall any particular dates?

A. I don't recall any of them.

Q. Do you know whether or not any of them have been in the last two years?

A. I think so, on one or two occasions.

Q. Would you say whether or not you have ever loaned any money to Mr. Wallace Butts?

A. Not directly.

Q. Have you indirectly?

A. I arranged a loan for him at a bank.

Q. Would you tell us about that loan, please?

A. I think it was early in 1962. He said he needed ten thousand dollars for awhile, and I asked my bank if they would loan him ten thousand dollars if I would endorse the note.

They said they couldn't go over six thousand dollars because he wasn't a depositor and he wasn't a customer. He did get a six thousand loan at about that time, and I endorsed the note for him.

Q. Do you know whether or not that loan has been paid?

A. I think the present balance on the loan is about one thousand, five hundred.

Q. Have you ever made any gifts to Coach Butts or any members of his family?

[fol. 1187] A. Not that I recall.

Q. During the time that you visited in Atlanta what people, other than Coach Butts, were you with?

A. I don't remember anybody else.

Mr. Joiner: Skipping down to the third question on that page.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. Would you state whether or not you consider Coach Wallace Butts to be a close, personal friend of yours?

A. I do.

Q. When have you last seen Coach Wallace Butts?

A. Oh, approximately three or four months ago.

Q. Where did you see Coach Butts at that time?

A. Here in Chicago.

Q. Have you ever been in Los Angeles area when Coach Butts was there, or in the Los Angeles area?

A. Not that I recall. I have been in Los Angeles a lot of times, but I don't remember ever meeting Coach Butts out there.

Q. I believe some of your family live in the Los Angeles area, is that correct?

A. My mother did live there.

Q. And is your mother now deceased?

A. That's right.

Q. Do you know a John Smith from Atlanta?

A. Is he in the produce business?

Q. Yes.

A. I think he was up here on one or two occasions with Wally.

Q. Do you know his partner, Mr. Sonny East?

A. No.

Q. Do you know Mr. Frank Childs?

[fol. 1188] A. I met him once at an All-Star game bout eight years ago.

Q. Was that here in Chicago?
A. Here in Chicago.
Q. Have you seen him at any time since then?
A. No.
Q. Do you know Mr. C. D. Young? He is from Atlanta.
A. No.

Mr. Joiner: Skipping now to Page 33, second question.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. Do you know a gentleman by the name of John Marcus from Augusta, Georgia?
A. No.

Mr. Joiner: Now, to Page 34, the last question on that page.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. During the college football season of 1957—

Mr. Schroder: Wait a minute until I catch up with you.
Mr. Joiner: Page 34, the last question.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. During the college football season of 1957, did you place any telephone calls to Terre Haute, Indiana?
[fol. 1189] A. I may have.
Q. Do you recall whether or not you did?
A. No, I don't.
Q. Do you recall placing telephone calls to Mr. Leo Shaffer?
A. I do.
Q. What was the purpose of these telephone calls?
A. Wager on football.
Q. During the football season of 1957, do you recall approximately how much money you bet on football games?
A. I think approximately fifty thousand dollars over the season.

Q. Will you state whether or not the entire amount was placed with Mr. Shaffer?

A. Yes, I think it was.

Q. Would you state whether or not all of your wagers were placed on the telephone?

A. Yes, I think the majority of them were, if not all.

Q. Would you state whether or not you bet on both college and professional football games?

A. I probably did.

Q. Would you state to the best of your recollection the smallest wager that you placed with Mr. Shaffer during the college football season of 1957?

A. Individual wager?

Q. And what was the amount?

A. An individual wager on one game?

Q. Yes.

A. It probably was five hundred dollars.

Q. Would you explain what you mean by "individual wager"?

A. A wager on any particular game.

Q. On any one particular game?

[fol. 1190] A. Yes.

Q. And do you recall the largest wager that you placed on any particular game during the 1957 football season?

A. Probably two thousand dollars.

Q. What would be the odds on your bet on these games?

A. Eleven to ten.

Q. Would you explain to the Court and Jury the meaning of an 11-to-10 odd?

A. You have to bet one thousand, one hundred to win one thousand, or if you lose, you lose one thousand, one hundred. If you win you win one thousand dollars.

Q. And would you state whether or not it would be correct to say that when the odds are 10 to 11, you would have to bet three thousand, three hundred to win three thousand dollars?

A. That is correct.

Q. Would you state whether or not on this particular football season—

Mr. Schroder: I think you ought to read what comes after that.

Mr. Joiner: All right. "Mr. Schroder: What do you mean by this particular football season? Mr. Joiner: The one which we have had reference to in the last several question, that of the 1957 season."

[fol. 1191] By Mr. Joiner:

Q. (continuing) —your bets would be on a particular game to be won by a particular team by a certain margin?

A. That's right.

Q. And could—

A. Not necessarily on a particular game, I might bet ten games one Saturday.

Q. And could you give an indication of how you would determine which teams to bet on?

A. Everybody has their own system on that. It's guessing and doping.

Q. Well could you give us your system?

A. Well, I didn't have any. The proof of that is that I lost pretty good.

Q. Would you have any advance indication of what the point margin for the teams would be?

A. Pick up any newspaper in the United States and find it.

Q. Where do newspapers get that from, do you know?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Is it uniform throughout the country?

A. Pretty uniform, as far as I know.

Q. If you bet on a particular team and were given 19 points, what would have to be the score of the game in order for you to win?

A. You were giving 19 points or getting?

Q. Giving.

A. They would have to win by 20 points.

Q. And then what if they were taking by 19 points?

A. They would have to lose by 18, or they would have to win by less than 19, excuse me.

Q. What would happen if they won by 19 points?

A. It's no bet, it's a tie.

[fol. 1192] Q. What do you mean when you say "no bet"?

A. It's no bet, it's a tie.

Q. Then what would happen with reference to your money that you put up?

A. Nothing. No action.

Q. You wouldn't get that money back?

A. I never put up money. You don't put up money over a telephone.

Q. Well, how was the accounting procedure for the betting handled, if you didn't actually put money up?

A. You settle over 30 days one way or the other.

Q. Do you recall how many times you settled during the 1957 season?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you recall approximately how much you won or lost during the season?

A. As I recall, I lost somewhere between twelve thousand dollars and fifteen thousand dollars during the season.

Q. How would the amount that you won or lost be transported to or from you?

A. Someone would come in and pick it up or deliver it. You would check a figure with them.

Q. Do you recall the name of the person who came by to pick it up from you?

A. Somebody named Lefty.

Q. Do you know his last name?

A. No. I've only seen him on maybe one occasion, or two occasions.

Q. Would you state whether or not you knew this person that you refer to as Lefty prior to the time that the 1957 football season began?

A. No.

[fol. 1193] Q. What if any disagreement did you ever have with Leo Shaffer as to the balance that you owed him or he owed you?

A. I don't ever recall having any.

Q. Was Mr. Shaffer carrying on this operation by himself, or with others?

A. I don't believe so. As I recall, there were several of them on trial in there.

Q. Did you personally know any of the others, other than Mr. Shaffer?

A. No.

Q. Would you state whether or not you placed wagers on football games during seasons prior to 1957?

A. May have placed a few small bets previous to that. I just don't recall. That was the year I got my—got the ring in my nose.

I don't think I did.

Q. Would you give us some indication of the amount you may have bet during the years previous to 1957?

A. I don't recall.

Q. If you did that any at all?

A. I don't recall any bets previous to that.

Q. And when you say that you may have bet, are you referring maybe to bets with a friend who would attend any game with you, five dollars, or something like that?

A. Certainly, you always do that.

Q. Do you still do that?

A. Occasionally.

Q. Do you remember what this fellow, Lefty, looked like?

A. No, sir.

Q. And will you tell us how many occasions you remember seeing Lefty?

[fol. 1194] A. Possibly once. I think in the two or three times he was in there I wasn't even there. I would just leave an envelope for him, and he would pick it up.

Q. Do you recall Wallace Butts visiting you during the football season of 1957?

A. I don't recall any particular instance, no.

Q. Well, did he visit you at any time during the season?

A. He may have. I don't know. In fact, I think possibly that year he might have been up to the All-Star game. I am just not sure about it.

Q. Did Coach Butts usually stay in one particular place when he visited Chicago?

A. No, not that I know of.

Mr. Joiner: Page 44, first question.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. Mr. Scoby, did you testify at the trial of Mr. Leon Shaffer in 1959?

A. I did.

Q. Do you recall the charge that was made against Mr. Shaffer?

A. I know it had to do with—all I know is that it had to do with the Federal Gambling Stamp situation.

Q. And do you recall the time of year when that trial was held?

A. No, I don't, offhand.

Mr. Joiner: Page 45, second question.

[fol. 1195] By Mr. Joiner:

Q. Would you state whether or not your testifying in this particular trial received some publicity in the Chicago papers?

A. It received a great deal.

Q. Do you recall whether or not it was in all the papers?

A. No, I didn't read all the papers. All I can tell you is it received a great deal of publicity.

Q. Mr. Scoby, I show you Defendant's Exhibit 3 of this date, and ask you to state to the best of the recollection whether or not this is in fact an article about your testimony in Leo Shaffer's trial, which appeared in the Chicago Daily News on July 18, 1959?

A. It appears to be.

Q. And do you recall a number of articles of similar import being in the Chicago papers during that period of time?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Joiner: Skipping now to Page 48, the third question.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. Mr. Scoby, have you been engaged in any gambling activities whatsoever over the period of the last year?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you had occasion to visit the State of Nevada during the period of the last year?

A. Now wait a minute. Let me clarify that question. Illegal gambling activities, no. Legal, yes.

Q. Would you give us a summarization of your legal gambling activities in the past year?

A. I've done some in Las Vegas in the past year.

[fol. 1196] Q. Would you give us an approximation of how much you won or lost during the past year?

A. No.

Q. Could you tell us whether or not you won or lost?

A. I probably have lost. It hasn't been any great amount either way.

Q. Will you state whether or not you consider one hundred thousand dollars to be a great amount?

A. I consider it a great amount, yes, sir.

Q. And would you state whether or not your losses for this past year have approached that amount?

A. No, they have not.

Q. Would you give us your best estimate of your losses for the past year?

A. Crap table, mostly.

Q. Any other, in addition to that, during the times that you visited Nevada?

A. Possibly a little roulette.

Mr. Joiner: Page 52, question 5.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. Do you recall the number of times that you visited Nevada during the last year?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Could you give us an approximation?

A. Maybe four.

Q. Would you state whether or not your gambling activities are confined to the State of Nevada, or do you also at times carry on these activities outside the State of Nevada?

A. Not recently, in the last several years.

Q. Would you elaborate on that answer with reference to the previous question, please?

[fol. 1197] A. Well, this deal in Terre Haute had the effect of curing me of this type of activities. No activities since then of any appreciable amount.

Mr. Joiner: Page 55, last question on the page.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. Have you had occasion to speak with Wallace Butts on the telephone over the period of the last year?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have an approximation of how many times you have spoken with him?

A. I would estimate somewhere between 25 and 40.

Q. And what was the subject of these telephone calls?

A. Some of them were just things that personal friends would talk about over the telephone for no reason. Some of them were Butts trying to get established in various fields since he was no longer coaching. That's about the extent of it. In fact, that is the extent of it.

Q. Mr. Scoby, would you state whether or not you consider yourself to be a compulsive gambler?

A. I certainly will: I am not.

Q. What is your answer to that?

A. I am not.

Q. Have you recently made a statement to the effect that you are a compulsive gambler?

A. No, sir.

Q. Would you state whether or not your gambling activities—

[fol. 1198] Mr. Schroder: Go ahead.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. —have been something you have attempted to hide from your friends?

A. No.

Q. Most of your friends are aware of your gambling activities?

A. Well, I didn't put it in the newspaper.

Q. But your intimate friends would be aware of your gambling activities, is that right?

A. I don't know what my friends are aware of. I will make the statement that I haven't attempted to hide it.

Mr. Joiner: Page 64, the fourth question.

Mr. Schroder: Just a moment; let me catch up. Go ahead.

By Mr. Joiner:

Q. Mr. Scoby, do you recall receiving a subpoena to appear and testify at this deposition?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And do you recall the date and times set in the subpoena for your appearance?

A. The date and time set for this appearance?

Q. Set by the subpoena for your deposition?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you state what that date and time was?

A. 2:00 P.M., on the 22nd of July.

Q. Would you explain to the Court and Jury why you did not appear at that time?

A. I didn't appear on advice of counsel.

[fol. 1199] Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, the last subject matter, I think, that was being discussed in the reading of the deposition, I think the record ought to show when he says he was advised by counsel that he said his own counsel.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: I don't want there to be any question about it.

The Court: All right, sir.

Mr. Schroder: And the second one, I believe Mr. Joiner pointed out, the deposition was taken on Tuesday, July the 23rd, and I think the date they were talking about was July the 22nd.

The Court: 22nd; yes, sir.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Mr. Scoby, counsel for the Saturday Evening Post has spent considerable time cross-examining you or examining you this morning, but he has studiously avoided asking you anything in connection with the article which [fol. 1200] his client has published in its March 23, 1963, issue.

Now, for the record I think it ought to be made known to you that his client denies under oath that it ever implied that there was any gambling motive in connection with the article it wrote in the Saturday Evening Post.

Let me ask you some questions now, which I think might be relevant to the article published by the Saturday Evening Post forming the subject matter of this libel suit.

I think counsel also failed to ask you anything in connection with any telephone conversation which you might have ever had with Wallace Butts, although yesterday he subpoenaed all the records of your home telephone and your office telephor from the Illinois Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company.

In any telephone conversation that you have ever had with Wallace Butts at any time, was the subject matter of betting the outcome of any athletic event ever discussed?

A. No, sir.

Q. To your knowledge did Wallace Butts ever have any information which might indicate to him that you had bet or would bet or might have bet on the outcome of any athletic event without regard to when it might have taken place?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you ever discuss betting on any games of any kind with Wallace Butts?

A. No, sir.

Q. In September, 1962, the records indicate that there were approximately three telephone calls placed by Wallace Butts to you. Would you please refresh your recollection [fol. 1201] and tell the Court and Jury what the substance of those telephone conversations were?

A. I don't actually recall any of them, with the exception of one about that time.

Q. Do you recall a telephone conversation having been placed to you by Wallace Butts from Birmingham, Alabama, on September 22, 1962?

A. I don't recall that specific call, no.

Q. Do you recall a man by the name of Sargent talking to you about that time from Birmingham with Wallace Butts?

A. At approximately that time I recall talking with Mr. Sargent.

Q. That was in connection with what subject?

A. It was in connection with financing on this concentrated fruit juice.

Q. During September 1962, or at any time prior to September, have you ever had any telephone conversation with Wallace Butts which related in any manner to a forthcoming game to be participated in by the University of Georgia football team?

A. Well, I may have said, "Well, how do you think you'll do," when he was coaching. I certainly wouldn't say that I haven't asked that question. But that has never been anything further than that.

Q. That was while he was coaching?

A. That's right.

Q. In September 1962, did you have any conversation with Wallace Butts in which he indicated to you that he felt you should place a bet on the outcome of any game played by the University of Georgia?

A. No.

Q. Have you at any time discussed with Wallace Butts on long distance telephone or in person what his thoughts might be with regard to a forthcoming football game so [fol. 1202] that you might be in position to place a bet on the outcome of that game?

A. Well, I would assume that just in the normal conversation when he is up here to an All-Star game, I would say, "Well, how do you think this game will come out tonight, Wally?" Other than some casual remark like that, the answer is no.

Q. Would you use that information to bet on the outcome of the game?

A. No, sir, I certainly would not.

Q. What church do you belong to, Mr. Scoby?

A. Queen of All Saints.

Q. Here in Chicago?

A. Yes.

Q. What religion is that?

A. Catholic.

Q. Are you active in your church activities?

A. Pretty active.

Q. You have a son practicing law here in Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is a graduate of the University of Notre Dame?

A. And Northwestern.

Q. Where did he take his law?

A. Northwestern.

Q. And took his undergraduate at the University of Notre Dame?

A. Right.

Q. How many other children do you have?

A. Three.

Q. Do they live at home?

A. Yes.

Q. What clubs do you belong to here in Chicago?

A. Illinois Athletic and the Chicago Athletic and the Edgewater Golf Club.

[fol. 1203] Q. What have you and your company done towards sponsoring underprivileged athletic teams here in Chicago?

A. We sponsor several Puerto Rican teams.

Q. Did you bring a team from New York to Chicago this past summer?

A. I brought the Puerto Rican All-Stars or champions in here to play the Chicago champions.

Q. Will you now take the Chicago champions to play the New York champions to play the New York champions?

A. On the second of August.

Q. Is it fairly difficult to get into these clubs that you have referred to here in Chicago, the IAC or the Illinois Athletic Club, or Chicago Athletic Club?

A. I don't know that it is. I didn't have any trouble with them.

Q. I believe you testified when you were being questioned by the lawyer for the Saturday Evening Post that you learned your lesson, so to speak, when you testified for the United States Government in the case brought by the United States Government by the party that was referred to here earlier by the name of Shaffer?

A. I think I did.

Q. And it is your testimony today that insofar as your knowledge is concerned Wallace Butts knew nothing about that activity or that team or that case?

A. I couldn't say that he didn't. It was in the newspapers.

Q. But that was in the Chicago newspapers?

A. As far as my personal knowledge is concerned, I don't know that he knew anything about it.

Q. You never discussed it with him?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 1204] Q. You never discussed gambling with Wallace Butts?

A. Not to the best of my recollection. Certainly not on football.

* * * * * * *

Q. During the year of 1957, were you a mem-

Q. Were you also a member of these clubs that you testified that you belong to?

A. I certainly was.

Q. Will you state—

Mr. Schroder: These questions are being asked him by the Post lawyers, this being the re-direct.

The Court: What page are you on?

Mr. Schroder: 81, Your Honor, right at the top.

Mr. Lockerman: About the middle of the page.

The Court: I see.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Will you state who paid for the hotel room and consequential expenses thereto in New York City at the time you were together with Coach Butts at the Essex House in New York City?

[fol. 1205] A. I probably did, I am not sure. The chances are that I paid for it, which is not an unusual thing. I paid for lots of people's rooms.

Q. One of the necessary essentials to your business is entertainment of people in general, is it not?

A. That is correct.

Q. What do you approximately contribute to your church per year in the way of donations?

A. Approximately six thousand dollars.

Q. You have referred, on your direct examination, to various all-star colleges against the leading pro team here in Chicago, which is the game put on for the Milk Fund every summer?

A. I don't know what the fund is, but it is a charity fund, a Chicago charity.

Q. Those games have been played over how long a period of time?

A. I think they have been on ever since I have been in Chicago.

Q. Didn't Arch Ward begin those games back in 1933 or 1934?

A. I don't know when they began.

Q. Since you have been living here in Chicago what is your custom with reference to entertaining visiting dignitaries such as football coaches from all over the country and outstanding players?

A. Well, for about the first—from, say, about 1950 through '56 or '57 or '58 we always—we started having an All-Star party previous to the game, and then taking people out in buses. It becomes such a big thing around 1958, that we discontinued it. We used to have as high as—well, at the last one was about five hundred people, and we probably, at that time, would have fifty coaches as our guests [fol. 1206] out of the five hundred people. The rest of them would be our customers.

Then it got so big we couldn't handle it any more, and we discontinued it. The last few years we have just had smaller parties of ten, fifteen or twenty people.

Q. You would take those fifteen or twenty people to dinner before the game?

A. And then bring them back after the game.

Q. And take them to the game as your guests?

A. That's right.

Q. Reference has been made to frequent trips that you have made to New York City. Are you also engaged in business in New York City?

A. I am distributor for Miller High Life Beer in New York City.

Q. Now, Miller High Life Beer is owned by the Miller family, of Milwaukee?

A. That's right.

Q. And the former president of that company, who is now deceased, was Fred Miller who was captain of the University of Notre Dame Football team in the late twenties, 1929, I believe?

A. Yes.

Q. Frank Lahey played on the same team with Fred Miller whose family owned Miller High Life, and he was president until his death a couple of years ago?

A. That is correct, about six years ago.

* * * * * * *

DR. O. C. ADERHOLD having resumed the stand, testified further as follows:

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Dr. Aderhold, you testified yesterday, I believe that Coach Butts looked upon you as an adviser of his?

A. Well, he said that he appreciated my counsel and came to see me to talk about some of his problems.

Q. After Coach Butts resigned as head football coach, you and the other officials there at the University of Georgia began to look around for someone to succeed him as head football coach?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Coach Butts, at that time, recommended as his successor Johnny Griffith, didn't he?

A. Well, I believe I will have to make an explanation as a part of that answer.

Q. Will you give me the answer first, and then you can explain it, sir.

A. Mr.—Coach Griffith was on his list, and he estimated that he was probably the best prospect on a list that he submitted. That was not a complete list that the coaching committee interviewed, however.

Q. Well, then, the answer to my question would be "Yes", would it not? He had him at the top of his list as coach to succeed him as head football coach at the University of Georgia?

A. Well, he listed those that he thought had possibilities of succeeding him as head coach, and in a note—well, he evaluated each one of the, made some evaluation of each one of them, and regarding Johnny Griffith he said, "He is a good organizer; he will have the respect of other coaches, and he is probably the best prospect of the staff."

[fol. 1208] The Court: Did you take that to be that that was his number one choice?

The Witness: I would interpret that to be correct.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. In 1961—

A. May I—the explanation that I would like to make is that when Coach Butts visited me on the Sunday afternoon that he indicated that he wanted to be relieved as head coach, we talked about not only a successor, without calling any names, but a successor, and spent a considerable length of time as to the major responsibilities that he would assume or could assume if the Board elected him as a full-time athletic director. Among other things he said that, "I think the Board ought to make this decision, but I will supply to you and any committee, anyone else you want to, my private evaluation." And it was in respect that he submitted a list of all the coaches that he thought had possibilities, and made an evaluation of them, all the coaches that are now—that were at that time on the staff.

Q. And as you just said, you interpreted that to mean that Coach Griffith was his Number One choice?

A. Yes. He did not, I must say, rate them or say "This is my choice," but he did say that, "I think these qualities would indicate that he would be a good coach." He talked about some of the others and indicated what he thought were their strengths and weaknesses.

Q. In 1959, Coach Butts was elected to the presidency of the American Football Coaches Association, wasn't he?

[fol. 1209] A. Yes, sir; I believe that's right.

Q. And there have only been, throughout the history of that Association, two other coaches given that honor in the whole time, Coach William Alexander of Georgia Tech and Coach Dan McGuggan of Vanderbilt?

A. I really don't know.

Q. You don't know? Before you became President of the University of Georgia, Dr. Aderhold, Coach Butts had been head coach at the University approximately ten or eleven years, hadn't he?

A. Yes; ten or eleven; I don't remember whether it was '39 or '40 he was elected head coach.

Q. And during that time he produced six bowl teams, didn't he?

A. I don't know; I am sure that must be right.

Q. In 1950 when you became President until Coach Butts retired as head football coach there was but one Bowl team produced, was there?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, in 1959, Coach Butts was elected the Number Two football coach in the whole United States, wasn't he?

A. I believe so; I am not sure of the year.

Q. You referred in your testimony yesterday to what was said at the meeting on February the 22nd of this year, and you testified that although you weren't sure, I believe, whether Coach Butts was asked to sign an affidavit, you were sure that he was asked to submit to a lie detector test, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir; I thought both, but that was my testimony, and that is the way I remember it.

Q. You know that he has taken one since then, don't you?

[fol. 1210] Mr. Joiner: May it please the Court, I don't believe that this evidence would be admissible unless we are going to show the circumstances under which the tests were taken, the type of tests that were taken, where it was taken, and the operator who administered the test.

The Court: I will let him show he took a test. I will not let him show any results of any test. Do you understand that? All parties understand that?

Mr. Schroder: Yes, sir.

The Court: All right, sir.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. But you do know I made him take tests since then, don't you?

A. I saw that in the press; yes, sir.

Q. During your ten year period or your tenure of office at the University as President, Wallace Butts was more or less known as "Mr. Georgia"; wasn't he?

A. Well, he had several names. That was one of them, by some people; yes.

Q. Before the Saturday Evening Post published its article on March 23, 1963, did anyone from the Saturday Evening Post talk to you?

A. No, sir; I don't believe so.

Q. Do you know Charlie Trippi—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —of the University—formerly of the University of Georgia football staff?

[fol. 1211] A. Yes, sir.

Q. He resigned, I believe, during this past summer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. His family still lives in Athens, and he does when he is not away from the City?

A. Well, I don't know; I assume so.

Q. He has lived there for a number of years?

A. Yes; that's correct.

Q. Are you familiar with his reputation in the community?

A. Yes, sir—well, I think I am.

Q. Is it good or bad?

A. As far as I know it is good.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?

A. Yes; I think I would. I don't know of any reason that I wouldn't.

Q. Do you know John Gregory?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is still on the staff there as the defensive coach?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He also has lived in Athens a number of years, has he not?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you familiar with John Gregory's reputation in the community?

A. Well, I don't know that I am.

Q. You don't know that you are? Is that your answer?

A. Yes; I think that is a fair answer.

Q. You know Bill Hartman?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Former President of the University of Georgia Alumni Association?

[fol. 1212] A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is presently a trustee for the Georgia Student Educational Fund?

A. It is good.

Q. Would you believe him on oath?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You know the Captain of the 1962 Georgia football team named Ray Clark?

A. I just know him as a football player; I don't know him personally.

A. Yes, sir; I do.
Q. Do you know his reputation in the community?
A. No; I don't believe I do.

[fol. 1213] Dr. Frank Anthony Rose called as a witness on behalf of the Plaintiff, after having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Will you state your full name, please, sir?
A. Yes, sir. Frank Anthony Rose.
Q. At the present time where are you located professionally and in what capacity.
A. As President of the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, Alabama.
Q. Now, Dr. Rose, will you please, for the benefit of the Court and Jury, state your qualifications, your educational background, and similar information?
A. Well, I am a graduate of Transylvania College in Lexington, Kentucky, Transylvania Seminary, Lexington, Kentucky, and I did graduate work in philosophy in the University of London.

Q. After you graduated from there, what did you do?

A. I served as head of the Department of Religion and Philosophy at Transylvania College. I was minister of a large church at Danville, Kentucky for five years, and at the age of twenty-nine became President of the Transylvania College, Lexington, Kentucky, from which I had graduated, and served there for seven years as President. On September 5th, I will have finished six years as President of University of Alabama.

Q. What literary or other associations do you play a particular part in or a significant part in at the present?

[fol. 1214] A. Well, I am serving as chairman of the Board of Visitors of Eyre University.

Q. Of what?

A. Of Eyre University. I am a member of the Board of Curators of Transylvania College. I am chairman of the Commission on Graduate Study Experiences for the Armed Services, for the American Council on Education. I served on the Board of Trustees of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. I am serving as chairman of the March of Dimes in my sixth year in Alabama. In 1954, I was selected one of the ten outstanding young men in the United States. I was selected in 1955 as the outstanding citizen in Lexington, Kentucky. And last year I was selected as the outstanding citizen of Tuscaloosa, Alabama.

Q. As President of the University of Alabama, Dr. Rose, did you attend a meeting in Birmingham, Alabama, on Sunday, February the 24th, 1963?

A. Yes; I did, sir.

Q. Would you relate, please, who attended that meeting and where it was held?

A. I received a telephone call from Dr. Aderhold three or four days before, Sunday, February the 24th, asking if I could meet him in a confidential meeting with Commissioner Bernie Moore, the Commissioner of the Southeastern Conference, and I asked him what was the purpose of the meeting? And he said, well, for the time being that he would like to say, to discuss an ethical matter. And so on that morning at 9:00 a.m., I met with Dr. Aderhold. He brought with him Mr. Cook Barwick, and we met with Commissioner Moore.

Q. Will you just briefly summarize so that we can lay the foundation for later work by you what was reported at that meeting, briefly. I don't want to go into everything that [fol. 1215] was said and string it out. Just briefly summarize what was said.

A. Well, Dr. Aderhold and Mr. Barwick told me that—that there had been a telephone conversation or telephone conversations between Coach Bryant and Coach Butts regarding the coming football game to be played in September—around the middle of September.

Q. In 1962?

A. In 1962. They further informed me that there was a man by the name of Burnett that had heard the telephone conversation and that he had stated that Coach Butts had given Coach Bryant some information that would affect the outcome of the football game between the two institutions.

Q. Were you—was that the first knowledge you had of any such incident?

A. Yes, sir; that was the first knowledge.

Q. What did you do after you left that meeting?

A. Well, before I left the meeting I asked him questions, and there were many additional questions raised in my own mind, and then I drove home alone, which is some fifty-four miles away, greatly disturbed and thinking over every facet of the problem. And then when I got home I spent the rest of the afternoon thinking about it and trying to reach some conclusion as to what was the best approach to make to the problem. I came to the conclusion that the best thing to do was to, first, face the person that had been accused, or one of the persons accused, and so I called Coach Bryant and told him to meet me in my office at 7:00 P.M., where we did meet, and I interrogated him and talked with him for a period of about three hours.

[fol. 12[illegible]] Q. Was it or not indicated by Coach Bryant that that was the first time he had had any notice of this incident?

A. Yes, sir; it was the first time that he had heard about it. I might say that I think that he was confused by it. He did not recall specific telephone calls at first, and then I kept sharing with him the notes that I had taken while I was talking with Dr. Aderhold and Mr. Barwick and Commissioner Moore, and then he recalled that he had had many telephone conversations with all of the coaches and athletic directors with whom we play. He informed me that this was nothing unusual, that coaches talk about many things before a ball game, and that he had had a great deal of concern about playing the University of Georgia, particularly after we had had the unfortunate experience that we had had with Georgia Tech over the Holt-Granning incident in which Holt, one of our football players, had left the ground on a block, a tackle, and his forearm had caught the Granning boy of Georgia Tech in the jaw and broke his jaw, and we had received such unfavorable publicity about all of this that I had informed him on several occasions that he must use every precaution to see that this type of incident never happened again. Coach Bryant was just as concerned about the bad publicity of the University as I was.

And that he had been informed in a meeting with Coach Butts that there were new interpretations of rules and that he should make himself aware of them, and that he had tried to understand them in previous conversations and could not understand these new interpretations, that he, at a coaches' meeting, a meeting of the coaches of the Southeastern Conference, raised many questions about the new [fol. 1217] interpretations, and this was later confirmed by Commissioner Moore that Coach Bryant asked more questions about the change of rules of the new interpretations than any other—than all the other coaches in the meeting.

Coach Bryant said that he had talked several times with Coach Butts about this personally and on the telephone. He had talked to him about ticket sales, as there were approximately six to eight hundred tickets that the University of Georgia had not sold, and that he was concerned because there were many people in Alabama that wanted the tickets, but he didn't specifically remember discussing any one thing.

He said he could have talked about investments, Continental Enterprises, in which they had investments, but that he would try to think about it and try to answer as many of the questions as he possibly could.

Q. Did you, after that particular meeting in your office on Sunday evening, February the 24th, talk to Coach Bryant again on several occasions?

A. Yes, sir. I talked to him twice after that before I wrote to Dr. Aderhold.

Q. Between February the 25th and March the 6th, were you in Tuscaloosa all of the time?

A. No, sir. I told Dr. Aderhold that I would be unable to give him an immediate report of my conversation with Coach Bryant, as I had to go to New York City to attend a meeting of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, would be gone most of the week, which I was. I returned on Thursday evening, was tied up in conferences all day Friday, and then had to leave again Monday morning to go to Washington for a meeting of the American Council on [fol. 1218] Education, and I wrote to Dr. Aderhold that morning before I left.

Q. There has been identified here a letter—

Mr. Schroder: May I please—this is not a copy of the exhibit; this is not the one with the exhibit number.

The Court: Don't you have the original?

Mr. Schroder: I will borrow it from Mr. Cody. May I borrow it, Mr. Cody?

Mr. Cody: What's that?

The Court: The original letter.

Mr. Schroder: That is one of the ones we can't find right now; it was in that file.

The Clerk: Is this the one you are talking about?

Mr. Schroder: Yes.

The Clerk: That is Defendant's Exhibit No. 21.
[fol. 1219] Mr. Schroder: Just mark that here.
The Clerk: Just say "D-21."

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. There was identified here yesterday a document, Exhibit No. D-21, being a letter to Dr. O. C. Aderhold, dated March 6, 1963, signed Frank A. Rose, from the office of the President, University of Alabama. The original at the moment is not available. I want to ask you some questions about that, if you recognize it as a letter from you to Dr. Aderhold—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —or a copy of a letter?

A. This is a copy of the letter I dictated to my secretary on the morning of March the 6th, before I left to go to Washington. I had to catch a plane at 8:40 and hurriedly dictated this letter. I did not have time to read it after dictating it. She signed it, was to confer with Coach Bryant and ask him if this was a good interpretation of the conversations that we had. Coach Bryant was out of the City, and she signed it and sent it on to Dr. Aderhold.

Q. All right, sir.

A. It was in this—it was in this letter, as best as I as a layman or a University President, could try to answer some of the questions that Dr. Aderhold and Mr. Cook Barwick had raised at our meeting.

Q. To what extent, if any, are you familiar, Dr. Rose, with the game of football as it is presently being played and the so-called jargon, language of the trade used by coaches?
[fol. 1220] A. Well, I thought I understood it pretty well until I really began to get into this investigation, but I have never played organized football; I played "sandlot" football as a boy, but I am not very familiar with all of these terms of scientific modern-day football.

Q. To what extent, if any, Dr. Rose, would you say you were familiar with interpretations of football rules that have been issued or promulgated by some national body?

A. I don't know anything about them.

Q. In that letter—well—

Mr. Schroder: May I ask the witness to read the letter, Your Honor?

The Court: No, sir; you can ask him about any portion of the letter. The letter will be in evidence.

Mr. Schroder: All right, sir. It is sort of difficult—

Mr. Cody: Your Honor, I was mistaken. The original of that letter is in another file.

Mr. Schroder: That's better. If I can use one and he use the other.

The Court: All right.

[fol. 1221] By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Dr. Rose, in the letter, being the exhibit you are holding in your hand, you advised Dr. Aderhold you had made an investigation?

A. That is true, yes, sir.

Q. And that you were attempting by this letter to pass on to him the information which you had received in your investigation, including what Coach Paul Bryant had to say to you about conversations that he had had with Coach Butts?

A. Yes. These were the questions that he raised.

Q. In that letter you point out to Coach Aderhold—President Aderhold about Coach Butts' position in the football rules committee—

A. That's right.

Q. —as representative-at-large? In the third paragraph of that letter you state that Coach Butts had discussed these rules changes with Coach Bryant and the two were together at some meeting where Coach Butts told Coach Bryant that—and you say this—"That the University of Georgia had plays that would severely penalize the Alabama team and not only would cause LeRoy Jordan, an Alabama player, to be expelled from the game, but could severely injure one of the offensive players on the Georgia team." Do you have any explanation or interpretation or whatever you might term it?

A. Mr. Schroder, I was writing this to Dr. Aderhold, the President of the University of Georgia. He had asked specificially about the University of Georgia. This was not limited to the University of Georgia; it could have been to any University we were playing. Paul Bryant was greatly concerned about criticisms that had been made against the University, what had been termed "hardnose" football, [fol. 1222] "dirty" football. Our University had been severely penalized by people who had not acted responsibly. I was trying to reveal to him the purpose of the conversation.

He believed that Coach Butts was a good football statistician, he knew the rules; he served on the National Rules Committee; he knew the new interpretations. And he wanted to find out from him what these changes were, what could affect the result of an incident that would cause one of our football players to be dismissed from a game that would cause another bad ugly incident as it happened with Georgia Tech. But his was not Coach Butts' explanation of what—

Q. Coach who?

A. Coach Butts' explanation to Coach Bryant that Georgia Tech had any set plays or that he was going to reveal any set plays or patterns, but the techniques that were used offensively.

Q. Blocking, you mean?

A. Butt blocking. I remember he named that. I didn't know then and don't know now what that means. Head blocking. I don't know what that means, but these were some of the things that he said that he was concerned about.

Q. That Coach—

A. And I think rightly so, because we had discussed it many times. We did not want to go through a game what we had gone through with Georgia Tech.

Q. In your—in the next paragraph, Paragraph 4 of the letter, you indicate that Coach Bryant asked Coach Butts to let him know what the plays were, and on September 14, he called Coach Bryant and told him—

A. Well, these were techniques. I think any layman would use the term "plays" and if I hadn't been told better [fol. 1223] I would use the "plays" and I still forget and use the "plays," but these were "techniques," offensive techniques.

Q. There was a question, you say, about another one of the offensive plays of the Georgia team that could seriously penalize the Alabama team and bring additional injury to a player. Coach Bryant asked Coach Butts to check on that play, which he did, and called back on September 16?

A. Well, now, this was my interpretation of what Coach Bryant told me that could have been discussed or he could have talked about in answer to a question that Dr. Aderhold had raised about one of the Georgia players, Mr. Burnett hearing Coach Butts say that one of the Georgia players committed himself too quickly, and I asked him about that, that from my notes, and he said, "I don't know what that means," he said, "I've never heard about it." But he said, "It could have been some technique that was being used and some approach of defensive tactics that I could have used." And this was my interpretation of Coach Bryant's guess of what they could have been talking about there.

Q. When you—

A. And it was my best answer I could get to the question that Dr. Aderhold raised in my mind when he wanted an answer to it.

Q. What, if anything, does it mean to you with respect to football when someone has said "committed himself too fast"?

A. I don't know, sir. I can't tell you. I can make a guess that maybe he started off too fast or he showed what he was going to do rather quickly. I just don't know. I would have to guess at it.

Q. You then write, "It was then that Coach Bryant [fol. 1224] changed his defense and invited Mr. George Gardner, Head of the Officials of the Southeastern Conference, to come to Tuscaloosa and interpret for him the legality of his defenses. This Mr. Gardner did the following week. The defenses were changed and Coach Bryant was grateful to Coach Butts for calling this to his attention."

A. I made an error there. It was before the telephone conversations that Coach Bryant had had Mr. George Gardner there with the permission of Commissioner—with the permission of Commissioner Moore to meet with his coaching staff and go over his defenses and to ascertain whether they were legal or illegal.

Q. Under this new interpretation?

A. Under the new interpretations that Coach Butts had told him about. And it was on the basis of his conversations earlier with Coach Butts and in the coaches' meeting the coaches of the Southeastern Conference meeting that he became so concerned about these new interpretations and felt it would serve a good purpose.

Q. Your next paragraph, you quote Coach Bryant as informing you that "Calling this to his attention may have favored the University of Alabama football team, but that he doubts it seriously. He did say that it prevented him from using illegal plays after the new change of rules."

A. Yes, sir; he said that he didn't know. Well, I asked him if he felt that any of these rule interpretations, calling his attention to the changes or anything else that was said, could have affected the outcome of the ball game, and he said that he doubted it very seriously, that he received no specific information or any specific knowledge that would [fol. 1225] affect the score or the outcome of the ball game between the University of Alabama and the University of Georgia.

Q. The same information that he says was told him by Coach Butts was told to, I think you said, a whole meeting of the coaches on another occasion in Birmingham?

A. Yes, sir; a meeting of the coaches of the Southeastern Conference, I believe.

Q. And Coach Butts was the chief speaker at that meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever receive a reply to your letter from Dr. Aderhold?

A. No, sir; I did not. And when we parted Commissioner Moore's office—

Q. I will take that back from you.

A. —each one of us agree, we would conduct our own private confidential investigation, and that we would share with one another within the next few days as much information as we could get, and I never heard from Dr. Aderhold again until I called him several weeks later. He never acknowledged my letter. He did not inform me that the letter had been subpoenaed. This letter was written hurriedly. It was not written as a legal document to be used in any court case. It was not verified. It was not read after it was dictated, and I think substantially if you read that total letter and take it in its total context, you will find I conveyed to Dr. Aderhold that on the preliminary investigation that I had made, in talking with Coach Bryant, talking to his banker, talking to two of his friends—

The Court: To his banker?

[fol. 1226] The Witness: To his banker.

A. (By the witness) —talking to two of his friends, talking to two of my vice-presidents and business manager of athletics, that in my estimation the whole thing, based on the notes and the information that they had heard, that they had received from Mr. Burnett was overplayed, and I still think that that letter, taken in its full context, conveyed just that.

Mr. Schroder: You may examine.

Cross examination.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Dr. Rose, would you mind giving me your signature on this piece of paper?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You want to step down here to the desk?

A. You want me to sit down?

Q. Doesn't matter, just whatever you want to do. Thank you.

Mr. Cody: Will you identify this as Defendant's Exhibit —I believe it will be 25 or 26, somewhere along there.

The Clerk: Defendant's Exhibit No. 27 for identification is a signature of Dr. Rose.

[fol. 1227] (Whereupon the above paper was marked for identification only as Defendant's Exhibit No. 27.)

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Now, Dr. Rose, when Mr. Schroder read you the first paragraph of this letter, he read the language as follows, as just making an investigation. You mind if I read you the entire paragraph?

A. Be fine.

Mr. Schroder: May the witness have a copy in his hand?

The Court: Do you have an extra copy? Does someone have an extra copy?

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. "I have spent a great deal of time investigating thoroughly the questions—," now, when Mr. Schroder read you that paragraph, he left out the word "thoroughly," didn't he?

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, I didn't indicate I was reading that letter verbatim. I think Your Honor told me it couldn't be read.

The Court: That's right. Well, read the letter to him. Read the whole paragraph and ask him did he write that.

[fol. 1228] By Mr. Cody:

Q. "I have spent a great deal of time investigating thoroughly the questions that were raised during our meeting in Birmingham and have talked with Coach Bryant at least on two occasions. As best as I can ascertain, this is the information that I have received." Now, let's talk about the first paragraph just a minute.

A. All right, sir.

Q. Was that paragraph written as you dictated it?

A. Yes, sir; that is; as best I recall that is the paragraph that I dictated.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. You mean you didn't dictate all the letter?

A. Sir?

Q. You didn't dictate all the letter?

A. I dictated all the letter, yes, sir.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Am I to understand your testimony, Dr. Rose, that you did not read the letter after you dictated it?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Nor did you sign it?

A. No, sir. I had to catch a plane for Washington.

Q. Who did sign it?

A. My secretary.

Q. Who is your secretary?

A. Mrs. Stanley Park.

Q. Let's pass to the second paragraph.

"Coach Butts has been serving on the football rules com-[fol. 1229] mittee, and at a meeting held last summer of the Rules Committee the defenses used by Coach Bryant, L. S. U. and Tennessee were discussed at length and new rules were drawn up that would severely penalize these three teams unless the defenses were changed—" you've got "changes"—"particularly on certain plays." Now, is that written as you dictated it?

A. I would say that it is, because my secretary usually does a pretty good job. I couldn't swear to it, sir, but I think I did dictate that.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. Is that what you intended to convey?

A. No, sir. Now, I know it is not what I intended to convey because I have gotten a great deal more information about it, and it wasn't the defenses used by L. S. U. and Tennessee and Alabama were discussed. All defenses used by universities were discussed, but it was reported that the officials were specifically going to watch these three institutions, the University of Alabama, L. S. U., and Tennessee, to see that these new interpretations were carried out and there was no violation of the rules.

Q. From whom did you acquire that information?

A. Well, Coach Bryant gave it to me after he received a copy of this letter.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Now, let's pass on to the third paragraph.

"Coach Butts had discussed this with Coach Bryant and [fol. 1230] the two were together at some meeting where

Coach Butts told Coach Bryant that the University of Georgia had plays that would severely penalize the Alabama team and not only would cause LeRoy Jordan, an Alabama player, to be expelled from the game, but could severely injure one of the offensive players on the Georgia team."

Now, I believe you stated that is incorrectly transcribed or what explanation is it you make of that?

A. Mr. Cody, what I said, I was trying to answer for Dr. Aderhold this—this commitment or quick commitment that he had raised as a question that Mr. Burnett had purportedly—was reported to have given him, and I was speaking to the President of the University of Georgia, singling out his institution, but I could have been talking about any institution in the Southeastern Conference or anywhere else. I wasn't talking about any specific play of the University of Georgia football team as given to them by their coach.

Q. Well, were you undertaking here to quote Coach Bryant?

A. No, sir. Let me go further and say that in my discussions with him he talked about a lot of things that they could have been talking about, and tried—tried to explain to me these new interpretations which he didn't quite understand, himself. He was puzzled by them, and ten days later I wrote the letter after talking with Coach Bryant, and I tried, in my layman's language, to reveal what Coach Bryant had not said specifically to me, but what, in a general discussion of what their discussion could have been about; wasn't even sure of that. I was trying to reveal to Dr. Aderhold my intepretation of it.

Q. Dr. Rose, do you know enough about football to know [fol. 1231] that if one team can execute a play, or formation in such a fashion as to cause the opponent to be penalized, that that would be beneficial to the team that had the ball?

A. Yes, sir; I think I can recall one where it would be. If the team played like they were going to snap the ball and didn't, and caused the team to get off-sides and got them a five yard penalty, I can understand that.

Q. Sometimes a five-yard penalty can mean the difference between a win and a loss, can't it?

A. Yes, sir; I'm not arguing that with you.

Q. In looking at these notes that you observed that Mr. Burnett had made—I assume they showed you these notes?

A. No, sir; I have never seen them.

Q. They didn't bring them to Birmingham?

A. I can't answer that, but they weren't shown to me.

Q. You have seen them since?

A. I saw them in the Saturday Evening Post article.

Q. What did you see, a photostatic copy in the Post article?

A. I don't recall. I remember seeing it there; I guess it was a photostatic copy.

Q. Do you know enough about the game of football to know that on a particular play the ball is snapped on a count of 3, 4, 5, or 6, in order to try to draw the opposing team off-sides?

A. No, sir; I don't; I don't know that much about it.

Q. Let's pass on to this fourth paragraph, Dr. Rose. First, let me ask you one other question about Paragraph 3. Did Coach Bryant say anything to you about a descrip[fol. 1232] tion of the play that would injure a Georgia player?

A. He tried to explain some descriptions of plays, not of Georgia, but just plays in general. Mr. Cody, after he finished I still didn't understand what he was talking about.

Q. Well, let's pass on to the fourth paragraph.

"Coach Bryant asked Coach Butts to let him know what the plays were, and on September 14, he called Coach Bryant and told him."

Did you get that information from Coach Bryant?

A. He said that he—this is not specifically what Coach Bryant said. He said that he had talked with Coach Butts about some of these rule interpretations, some of these techniques, offensive techniques, defensive techniques, and that he would like to know more about them because he did not understand the new interpretations as they were.

Q. But you say here, Dr. Rose, "Coach Bryant asked Coach Butts to let him know what the plays were."

A. Yes, but this had to do with these new techniques, or the violations that could be committed with these new techniques.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. Are you referring to defensive techniques? You are talking about Jordan?

A. I was talking about—Coach Bryant says that he thinks that he is one of the best defensive coaches in America. He says he thinks that Coach Butts was one of the best offensive coaches; and over the years he had [fol. 1233] talked with Coach Butts about offensive techniques, of patterns, that they had even shared—that he had given Coach Butts, over the years, some defensive techniques, and little points about defenses, and that he had gotten from Coach Butts, just as he had gotten from Coach Wilkinson, he said at Oklahoma, and Coach Royal at Texas, points, offensive points that were helpful to him and his boys.

Q. What was your understanding of why Mr. Jordan could be penalized and relieved from the game on a defensive play? Is that what you are talking about?

A. If an offensive player was injured, just like—

Q. Yes, sir.

A. —the Granning boy, you see, and Darwin Holt, and he said if he ever lost LeRoy Jordan in a ball game, he would probably lose the ball game, and I think we would agree with that.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. In other words, if Jordan had been put out of the game, it would help Georgia?

A. Not necessarily Georgia; any school.

Q. Well, Georgia included?

A. Well, yes; it could be.

Q. If they were talking—if they were talking on September the 14th—

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, the Post article says it was September the 14th, but I think Mr. Burnett says it was September 13th.

[fol. 1234] Mr. Cody: I think we can agree on that.

The Court: Well, whatever it was.

Mr. Cody: There is some confusion.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Dr. Rose, if they were having this conversation on September the 13th, and the Alabama game was the upcoming game for the 22nd, the opening game of the season, does it seem reasonable to you that this discussion involved some subsequent game of Alabama?

A. No, sir; it doesn't, to me, not taking all of the facts and all of the information that I now have, I don't think so.

Q. Now, let's—let's pass to the second sentence in that fourth paragraph.

"There was a question about another one of the offensive plays of the Georgia team that could seriously penalize the Alabama team and bring on additional injury to a player."

Do you recall what Coach Bryant was talking about when he gave you that information?

A. No, sir; and I didn't understand it then.

Q. Do you understand it now?

A. No, sir; I don't. And I'd be afraid to try to explain it, but it had—it had something to do with—with some kind of tackling technique. Now, I don't know whether it was butting with the head, or just—or leaving the ground, or whatever it was, he tried to explain it. He went over and [fol. 1235] over it again, and I still couldn't explain it, and I still don't know it now. I did see somebody try to explain it on television, a television program later, and it made sense to me then, and I can't recall it.

Q. Wouldn't it have been a lot clearer for you to have let Coach Bryant dictate this letter?

A. It would have been much better, yes, sir.

The Marshal: Let's have order, please.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. The last sentence in Paragraph 4.

"Coach Bryant asked Coach Butts to check on that play, which he did, and called back on September 16." Did you get that information from Coach Bryant?

A. Coach Bryant said to me that there was a particular point of play, not just the University of Georgia's play, but a play that they had talked about and discussed. He said he didn't know where he saw the play first, that it could have been in a clinic, but he knew that Coach Butts, over a period of years, had used it, and he wanted to know about that particular point on that play. Coach Butts didn't recall it, but was going to try to think about it and would try to get him additional information on what a man did here or did there, but it wasn't—this wasn't a University of Georgia play.

Q. Give me the date again you were talking with Coach Bryant again on this subject?

A. February the 24th, the night that I—

Q. In your office on the campus at Tuscaloosa?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does it seem inconsistent to you, Dr. Rose, that Coach [fol. 1236] Bryant would, at that time, have told you that he did call Coach Butts on September 16, and yet when we undertook to take his deposition, or he later has stated that he remembers nothing about that call; does that seem inconsistent to you?

A. Coach Bryant told me that night that he didn't remember calling Coach Butts back.

Q. Well, where did you get—where did you get the date September 16th, and who from?

A. He told me that he could have called him back, and then I checked our records and there was a call to Athens, and I asked him if he could have made that call, and he still couldn't remember whether he made that call or not.

Q. Well, then, the last sentence in Paragraph 4 is a misstatement of fact?

A. On the basis of what I knew then, I didn't think it was, but if he—if he did not call back, somebody called Athens from the University—from Tuscaloosa on September 16.

Q. Are you aware of the fact, Dr. Rose, that when I took your deposition in Birmingham some few months ago, that you testified that you didn't find out through the telephone records that there was a September 16 call until long after this letter was written?

Mr. Schroder: Let's see where that is in the deposition.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Do you remember making a statement to that effect?
A. No, sir; I don't remember it.

[fol. 1237] The Court: Just a moment; just a moment.
Mr. Schroder: I want a point of order here.
The Court: Where is the deposition?
The Witness: I have one here.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Well, may I ask you when you did find out for the first time that there was a call?

A. I found out before I wrote the letter because I didn't even know about the dates; in fact, I am not sure it is the 16th or 15th. You keep saying 14th, and then they were supposed to have called back two days later, that would have been the 16th, and then Mr. Schroder said 13th; if it had been two days later it would have been the 15th.

The Court: I think, Doctor, there's been confusion about whether the first call occurred either on the 13th or 14th. I am right on this, am I not?

Mr. Cody: It's really the 13th and 16th. We are not in any disagreement on that.

The Witness: You have been trying to confuse me on those two days.

[fol. 1238] By Mr. Cody:

Q. I'm not going to try to confuse you. Let me ask you this question, Dr. Rose. When it says in this letter that "Coach Bryant asked Coach Butts to check on that play, which he did, and call back on September 16," were you—were you undertaking to convey the statement that Coach Butts called back on September the 16th, or Coach Bryant—that is the last sentence in Paragraph 4.

A. That at that time, Mr. Cody, on checking the telephone calls, there was a call from Tuscaloosa to Athens. I surmised that Coach Bryant had called back Coach Butts, but Coach Butts and Coach Bryant had never told me that he had called back; that he didn't remember it but I surmised that he had, because there was a call from Tuscaloosa to Athens.

Q. Now, let's pass on to the fifth paragraph.

A. All right, sir.

Q. "It was then that Coach Bryant changed his defenses . . ." I am not finishing that sentence. I want to first ask you if Coach Bryant told you that he changed his defenses?

A. Coach Bryant told me that he brought his players in—not his players, his coaching staff, and that they went over and over these new interpretations to try to see how much understanding they all could get of them, and that they would try to carry them out as best they could understand them, but he said they could not get agreement of understanding on it, and it was then that he had Mr. Gardner but he had had Mr. Gardner before the call.

Q. I am going to get to Mr. Gardner in just a minute. But he did tell you he changed his defenses?

[fol. 1239] A. That he changed his techniques; yes, sir; not his defenses. It would be his techniques.

Q. The word "defenses" is error?

A. Yes, sir.

The Court: What's in the letter, "defenses" or "techniques"?

Mr. Cody: "Defenses."

The Court: Oh, yes.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Now, reading on in the same sentence, ". . . and invited Mr. George Gardner, Head of the Officials of the Southeastern Conference, to come to Tuscaloosa and interpret for him the legality of his defenses." And now you say that Mr. Gardner did not come there thereafter?

A. He came before.

Q. He had already been there?

A. Yes, sir; and this—Coach Bryant didn't know—didn't know whether he had been before or after the telephone call.

Q. But his particular statement, too, is an error?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Also the following sentence, which is along the same line: "This Mr. Gardner did the following week." And then, the next sentence in that fifth paragraph: "The defenses were changed and Coach Bryant was grateful to Coach Butts for calling this to his attention."

[fol. 1240] A. The techniques. It says "defenses," but it was techniques.

Q. Well, that, too, is an error; right?

A. Yes, sir; but I am not a modern-day football coach.

Q. From whom did that information come that is contained in that sentence?

A. I asked him if he—if, after meeting with Mr. George Gardner and his discussions with Coach Butts on rule interpretation and rule changes, if he had learned anything that changed any of his coaching or any of the techniques of his team, and he said that he had learned nothing that made a difference.

Q. Let's turn over to the next page. This is the sixth paragraph and the first sentence.

"Coach Bryant informs me that calling this to his attention may have favored the University of Alabama football team, but that he doubts it seriously." Is that a quotation from Coach Bryant, a statement that he made to you?

A. I asked Coach Bryant if he felt in his discussions with Coach Butts that he received any knowledge or information that would affect the outcome of the game, and he said, no, but that any time that you learn something from another coach, or in talking to another coach that would keep you from getting penalized, of course, it favored them, but he doubted seriously that if anything that he learned from Coach Butts really made a great deal of difference to the outcome of that particular game.

Q. Dr. Rose, when you use the term "outcome," are you talking about the result of the game?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is, win or a loss?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1241] Q. Did you ever doubt in your mind, before that game, that Alabama would lose? May I put it another way, if that confuses you.

A. No, sir; it doesn't confuse me.

Q. Did you know that Alabama—

Mr. Schroder: Wait a minute, whoa; whoa.

The Court: Let him answer.

A. (By the witness) I didn't know how the game was going to come out. It was the first game of the season, and I just didn't know, but after the game was over I was surprised that the score wasn't bigger than it was.

The Marshal: Let's have order, please.

A. But I didn't know before the game how it would be.

Q. You used the expression "first game of the season"; why did you use that expression as you did?

A. Sir?

Q. Why do you use the expression you did about it being the first game of the season? Is that because you know so lettle about the opponent?

A. Yes, sir; and our own team.

Q. But you did know that Alabama had a much better team than Georgia?

A. I was much more impressed with it after the game.

Q. What about it before?

A. No, sir; I thought we had a pretty good team, but I didn't know what Georgia had.

[fol. 1242] Q. Didn't the Birmingham papers and the Tuscaloosa paper state what the advantage was, or what the odds were? Don't you always read that?

A. No, sir; and I have a coach that always thinks he's going to lose every ball game, and he tries to keep me thinking that. I had no idea.

Q. Well, let, then, get back to this question. This sentence I read you, the first sentence there in the sixth paragraph, that "Coach Bryant informed me that calling this to his attention may have favored the University of Alabama . . ." is that your undertaking to quote something in this letter that Coach Bryant told you?

A. In answer to my question that if finding out these new rules, the interpretations, and in his conversation with Coach Butts, did he specifically get anything, and he said he didn't think so. He said any time you talk to anybody, or you read what's been written in the paper, or just in many ways, you pick up information. He said some of it is good, some of it is bad, but he said it may have favored. But I don't know.

Q. But doesn't it seem inconsistent to you now, Dr. Rose, that since you have found out that George Gardner had been in Tuscaloosa the week before and had pointed out these so-called rule changes, doesn't that statement seem inconsistent to you?

A. No, sir; it doesn't, not in its full context.

Q. When you were having this conference with Coach Bryant, this three-hour conference, did he tell you that time George Gardner had been to Tuscaloosa?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You know who George Gardner is, don't you?

A. Yes, sir; I know who he is.

[fol. 1243] Q. For the record, state—

The Court: Who is George Gardner?

By Mr. Cody:

Q. State who he is?

A. He is the Commissioner of the Southeastern Conference Officials. I believe that is his title.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. Would he be head of all the referees and umpires?

A. I don't know whether he would be head of them, but he would be responsible for assigning them and getting them to this place to call this football game, and that one, and then evaluating their work at the end of the year.

Q. In other words, he would be the final authority on interpreting the rules, insofar as the officials enforcing them; is that correct?

Mr. Schroder: I think we can stipulate that Mr. Gardner is really in charge of all of these, Your Honor indicated, umpires, referees, headliners.

Mr. Cody: That's right.

The Court: So Mr. Gardner would be in charge of the [fol. 1244] referees and instruct them as to what penalty—when to enforce a particular penalty.

Mr. Schroder: That's correct, sir; he teaches them what to watch for.

The Court: Insofar as the Southeastern Conference is concerned?

Mr. Schroder: That is correct.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. I have one more sentence I'd like to read to you, Dr. Rose, in that same paragraph. "He did say . . ."—who is "he" that we are talking about?

A. Coach Bryant.

Q. "He did say that it prevented him from using illegal plays after the new change of rules." Is that what Coach Bryant told you?

A. He said that after the visit of Mr. Gardner and after his conversation with Coach Butts that he understood some of these rule changes and interpretations, and that it did prevent him from using illegal plays.

Q. Does it seem inconsistent to you, Dr. Rose, that Coach Bryant, in response to your inquiry on this particular date, could have given you all this information and yet subsequently does not remember any conversation about it at all with Coach Butts?

A. It doesn't in light of my conversations with him for [fol. 1245] that three-hour period, Mr. Cody, because: one, I think he was kind of shocked at the specifics of the thing, or the two telephone conversations, because there had been numerous personal conversations, telephone conversations with other coaches, discussing some of the same problems. He had called and talked with Coach Darrell Royal in Texas, whom we do not play during the regular season, but played in the Orange Bowl game. And there were others that he named, and there was a great deal of information about the whole thing that he just didn't specifically remember, but said that this is what we could have—could have been talking about, but I don't remember. When I checked the files a call had been made back.

Q. Had you checked the files before you talked to Coach Bryant?

A. No, sir.

Q. To confirm the telephone call?

A. Sir?

Q. To confirm the telephone call of September 16?

A. No, sir; no, sir; I had not.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Dr. Rose, on Page 20 of your deposition, which was taken in Birmingham several months ago, do you recall making this statement that is at the bottom of the page: "He—" meaning Coach Bryant—

Mr. Schroder: Could I have this copy?

[fol. 1246] The Court: Don't stand behind him. Give him the original.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. "He—" meaning Coach Bryant "—said that it wasn't unusual for coaches to talk about many things previous to a football game." Did you know when he told you that that Wallace Butts was not the coach at Georgia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew he had not been coach since 1960?

A. I knew he was athletic director, and Coach Bryant is athletic director, and they talk about football too.

Q. But he is also the coach?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is the head coach?

A. If he were going to talk to anyone about football tickets, he'd talk to Coach Butts.

Q. Is that what he told you they were talking about, tickets?

A. He said they could have been talking about tickets.

Q. When you prepared this letter of March the 6th, had you consulted with any of your executive staff of the University?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. One of your vice-presidents?

A. One of my vice-presidents, my present Director of Alumni Affairs who used to be Business Manager of Athletics and Ticket Manager. Those were the ones with whom I talked.

Q. Do you know if either one of those gentlemen had ever played football?

[fol. 1247] A. No, sir; I don't believe they had. They may have; I don't know.

Q. On Page 30 of this same deposition, I'd like to read you one question and answer that is recorded here in the middle of the page; these lines are not numbered: "Dr. Rose, was the information obtained by you and counsel communicated in this letter of March 6 obtained from Coach Bryant? Answer: "Yes." Is that a correct transcript of your testimony at that time?

A. Yes, sir. But—but limited, because, as I said, he recalled many things that they could have been talking about, and that my letter was my best layman's interpretation, Mr. Cody, of the many things that Coach Bryant said they could have been talking about.

Q. But such technical information as is contained in your letter of March 6—

A. That technical information in my letter is not worth five cents as I see it now, because I did a very poor job being a technician on modern football. But I did the best I could do to convey to Dr. Aderhold—

Q. I am not arguing about that. But the information contained in that letter, you did undertake to explain, whether it is techniques or rules or what-not, you did obtain it from Coach Bryant?

A. It is my—it is my interpretation of what I thought Coach Bryant was trying to tell me.

Q. I see. You referred a moment ago in your direct examination by Mr. Schroder to the Granning incident. What was that you were talking about, Dr. Rose?

A. Mr. Cody, I explained it that in our football game with Georgia Tech in 1961, that on a play in which there was a kick, and Granning was receiving the kick, that [fol. 1248] Darwin Holt came in fast and left the ground and hit Granning, and Granning ducked his head down just as he hit, and it broke his jaw. And this was a terrible thing to happen, but these things do happen in football. But the University of Alabama, the total University, was severely criticized by a few members of the press, and particularly one here in Georgia, in which, in later months, they called our University a football factory, a University that the coach ran, a University that was interested only in football, and I will tell you it was terrible, because for a University to spend thirty million dollars a year on academics and less than two hundred thousand dollars a year on athletics to be termed as that, we did not want anything else to happen with any other institution that would create another incident like it.

Q. Now, turn to Page 45 just a minute, Dr. Rose, which—

Mr. Schroder: Excuse me, Mr. Cody, I didn't get the page.

Mr. Cody: 45. Just below the middle of the page.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. —which is referring again to the conference you had with Dr. Aderhold in Birmingham when Bernie Moore was present. I want to read you one question and answer and see if that is a correct transcript of your evidence at that time. "What specifically were these questions that he had raised?" meaning Dr. Aderhold; Answer: "As to whether Coach Butts had given Coach Griffith—" I don't know why it was "Griffith", it should have been "Bryant", I assume—[fol. 1249] "detailed plays and information about the players of the University of Georgia to Coach Bryant and whether they had helped him in the ball game." Is that a correct transcript?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With the exception of the clerical error the Reporter made about Griffith?

A. There is no clerical error, Mr. Cody. Read it again.

Q. "As to whether Coach Butts had given Coach Griffith detailed plays—" should have been "Bryant". It mentions Bryant in the following line.

A. No; Had given plays of Griffith to Coach Bryant.

Q. Then there should be an apostrophe after Coach Griffith?

A. That's right.

Q. Dr. Rose, on Page 51—I just have one more excerpt from this record to read to you—up at the top of the page, after discussing this so-called exchanging telephone conversations, Question: "What did he say then?" meaning Coach Bryant. Answer: "He said that he had made a telephone call to Athens and that he was pretty sure that he had called and talked to him about—" and then there is an interruption—"What did he say?" Answer: "That he had called him to talk to him further about the enforcement of the rules." I won't read the balance; if you want me to read the balance I will, but the question I want to read you now, Dr. Rose, when you were giving that testimony, were you sure that Coach Bryant had told you that he had called Coach Butts on that September 16?

A. No, sir. When we checked and found in the files that there had been a call from Tuscaloosa to Athens, Coach [fol. 1250] Bryant checked with other members of his staff to see if they had made the call, and he hadn't ascertained that they had, and so it was that he said that he probably called to Athens himself to talk to him further about the discussion of rules and interpretations as they discussed them before.

Q. Dr. Rose, would I offend you in any way if I asked you to give me one more of your signature? Here is my pen, if you want it.

A. Let me tell you this. She signs all our government contracts. She was on vacation and I signed some, and the government sent it back and said, "This is not the President's signature."

The Court: Let's just go ahead and sign it.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Thank you. Do you remember, following that deposition that was taken in Birmingham, that you sent me—

Mr. Cody: Will you identify that, please?

The Clerk: Defendant's Exhibit No. 28 for identification is a signature of Frank A. Rose.

(Whereupon above document was marked for identification only as Defendant's Exhibit No. 28.)

[fol. 1251] By Mr. Cody:

Q. —that you sent me a telephone record which we agreed at that time would be sent?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is this the letter with which you transmitted that record?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you sign that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who signed it?

A. My secretary.

Mr. Cody: Will you identify this, please?

The Clerk: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: 29?

The Clerk: Yes, sir. Defendant's Exhibit No. 29 for identification is a letter dated June 19, 1963 to W. B. Cody from Frank A. Rose.

(Whereupon above document was marked for identification only as Defendant's Exhibit No. 29.)

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Dr. Rose, I have subpoenaed several letters from the Georgia School of Technology which you have written to one of the officials there that have been produced this morning in response to that subpoena. The first one that I'd [fol. 1252] like to call your attention to is a letter of November the 29th, 1961.

Mr. Schroder: Your Honor, I haven't seen any of these documents.

The Court: All right, sir, let Mr. Schroder see them.

Mr. Cody: I believe I will wait and get them all identified. Will you identify these three exhibits?

The Clerk: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: It doesn't matter in which order.

The Clerk: All right. Defendant's Exhibit No. 30 for identification is a letter dated November the 29th, 1961, to William B. Hartsfield from Frank A. Rose.

(Whereupon above document was marked for identification only as Defendant's Exhibit No. 30.)

The Clerk: Defendant's Exhibit No. 31 for identification is a letter dated February 20, 1963, to Dr. Edwin D. Harrison from Frank A. Rose.

[fol. 1253] (Whereupon above document was marked for identification only as Defendant's Exhibit No. 31.)

The Clerk: Defendant's Exhibit No. 32 for identification is a letter dated December 18, 1962, to Dr. Edwin D. Harrison from Frank A. Rose.

By Mr. Cody:

Q. Dr. Rose, I show you the Defendant's Exhibit No. 30, this particular exhibit being a photostatic copy, but I'd like to ask you if that is your signature? Did you sign the original of that letter?

A. No, sir; that is not my signature.

Q. Is that one your secretary signed?

A. That is my secretary, Mrs. Park.

Q. Now, Exhibit No. 32, will you state whether or not this is a letter to Dr. Edwin D. Harrison, President of Georgia Tech? Did you sign that letter?

A. That is my secretary.

Q. Same lady?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I will ask you the same question about Exhibit No. 31?

A. That is my secretary.

Q. Now, on this last exhibit which I have shown you, you note that this seems to be a personal letter; you called him "Ed"?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1254] Q. Are you in the habit of letting your secretary sign personal letter of that type?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Dr. Rose, the pen which I used a moment ago is not the type pen I intended to use. Would I offend you if I asked you to give me one more signature?

The Marshal: Let's have order, please.

Mr. Cody: Thank you. Will you identify that?

The Clerk: It will be Defendant's Exhibit No. 33.

(Whereupon above document was marked for identification only as Defendant's Exhibit No. 33.)

Mr. Cody: I believe that's all we have.

Examination.

By the Court:

Q. Doctor, did you—did you consider this matter of great importance, the letter you were writing to Dr. Aderhold?

A. The accusation, Judge, I think was one of the most disturbing things I have had to happen to me in thirteen years of college administration. I don't think I have ever had anything to upset me more.

Q. Is it your testimony—is it your testimony or is it not that you dictated the letter and your secretary signed it [fol. 1255] before you saw the letter written? Is that right?

A. Yes, sir. And she was to check it with Coach Bryant to see if this was a good representation of our discussion.

Q. Did she check it?

A. No, sir. He was out of town, and I had told her to get it off that day, and she went ahead and sent it.

* * * * * * *

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. As soon as you—did you subsequently call Dr. Aderhold on the telephone and point out to him the fact that this letter was inaccurate?

A. That's right; yes, sir.

* * * * * * *

James Wallace Butts, having resumed the stand, testified further as follows:

Redirect examination.

By Mr. Schroder:

Q. Coach Butts, you heard the testimony introduced here by the Saturday Evening Post yesterday and today given by members of the Athletic Board, certain members of the Athletic Board?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Butts, I want to ask you, in spite of whatever they may think or say, in your testimony before this [fol. 1256] Court and Jury that you have given in this case, is that or not the truth?

A. That is the truth, sir.

Q. As an expert in the field of coaching, is there any play that any offensive team could have that would severely penalize a defensive team and cause a defensive player to be expelled from the game?

A. No, sir; and may I explain briefly?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. If a play was run around the right end or a play was run around the left end, if the fullback ran over right guard, if the left halfback ran over the tackle, it would not make any difference on any one of those plays. A defensive man might violate the techniques of defensive football by piling on, hitting with his rear, butting him with his head, but there is no particular play in football that would cause any such violation. I would like to add, sir, that it is possible that by changing the count a defensive player or players might be drawn off sides, and in that event it would cause a penalty to the defense.

Q. Would the defensive man who went off side be put out of the game?

A. No, sir; it would cost him five yards.

Mr. Schroder: All right, sir; he's with you.

Mr. Cody: We have nothing further.

Mr. Schroder: You may come down.

[fol. 1257] Examination.

By the Court:

Q. Is there such—Coach Butts, may I ask this question. This is on football and I am certainly no authority.

A. Yes, sir; Your Honor.

Q. Is there such a play as the offensive team drawing the defensive team off sides and getting a penalty?

A. Your Honor, I explained that by changing the count or by some guard or tackle moving, it could draw the defense off tackle.

Mr. Schroder: Off side.

By the Court:

Q. And the opposite team would be the one penalized? There is no such thing as an illegal formation on defense, as long as you have eleven men on the field and not off side, it is not illegal, is it?

A. Your Honor, you could put one on the line of scrimmage and eleven back in the seats if you wanted to.

SUMMATION TO JURY ON BEHALF OF DEFENDANT

Mr. Cody: Gentlemen of the Jury, representing the defendant in this case, I want to sincerely speak to you this morning with some mixed emotion. I say "emotion" because in the first place this case involves several parties, the first one, the plaintiff in this case who, for many years, enjoyed the most that could be obtained out of his profes- [fol. 1258] sion. He arrived at or near the top of that profession, and he did that with the help and the assistance and the cooperation of the Athletic Board and the faculty of the University of Georgia over a period of many years, and he was well compensated for his services. He was a man who was held in the esteem and confidence of those University officials.

The other party involved, one other party involved is the defendant in this case, the Saturday Evening Post, which is a publication that is the oldest in this Country, two hundred thirty-six years, I believe, continuous publication. It started as far back, I believe, as the days of Benjamin Franklin, and I assume that it has been received with public acceptance.

But the third party involved in this case, as I view it, is the University of Georgia, the oldest State educational institution in the United States, started even prior to the adoption of the Federal Constitution. The University of Georgia has trained many people in this State to some extent, Mr. Schroder as well as myself, trained us to do the job which we are trying to do in this case, and, if I may say so, it trained the Judge who is in charge of the trial of this case.

What disturbs me most is that a man should reach the top of the profession about which I am talking, and then at some point in his life come to a change which embarrasses himself and his University and the people who he was employed to train.

I would like to read one small portion of an instrument [fol. 1259] which has been introduced in evidence which I believe, in just a few words, expresses the responsibility that falls upon a football coach or, on the other hand, an athletic director who is in charge of the training of the youth of our State.

My days at the University go back to those of Chancellor Barrow, David C. Barrow, a gentleman who never ceased to talk about the fact that the greatest asset of our State is its youth, and when you fail to train them properly, you have slipped a cog.

And, basically, that is one unfortunate and unpleasant experience that we, as lawyers and you as jurors, have to face in this case, because something has failed.

The University of Georgia is a member of the Southeastern Conference, and its athletic program is about the same as any other large university, and a great deal of money is spent on it because an athletic program is just as important in the education of our youth as the academic portion of that education. In that connection the Southeastern Conference has adopted the rules and the enforcement program, the Constitution and Bylaws of the National Collegiate Association, which is an organization designed to keep collegiate athletics on a high plain and commensurate with the standards which you are trying to establish in the training of these youthful people.

Here is what this says: "Individuals employed by the Association"—meaning the Athletic Association—"employed by or associated with member institutions for the administration, the conduct of coaching of intercollegiate [fol. 1260] athletics are in the final analysis teachers of young people. Their responsibility is an affirmative one, and they must do more than avoid improper conduct or questionable acts. Their own moral values must be so certain and positive that those younger and more pliable will be influenced by fine example. Much more is expected of them than of the less critically placed citizen."

From that point I would like to pick up just a minute one or two things and then I will briefly discuss the one or two law points involved in this case. I want to tell you what happened to the plaintiff in this case, because it is important in leading up to what subsequently developed into what I think to be a critical event.

This trouble started back in 1960, and I will briefly run down a few points in this evidence in order to illustrate to you what it meant to this plaintiff and to our University. Back in 1960, and this evidence comes from the best friend that Wallace Butts ever had, Bill Hartman, the best and the closest friend he ever had, because he was the intermediary who stood between Coach Butts and these graduates of the University of Georgia and in an effort to then straighten out this unpleasant situation, and if you remember the evidence you will recall that he stated that in 1960 he met with the group in Atlanta who had called attention to this night life on the part of Coach Butts and the resulting unpleasantness that it was causing our University, and it resulted in Bill Hartman returning to Athens and confronting Coach Butts with the situation. And it developed out of that he was notified that unless he resigned, the entire matter would be thrown before the [fol. 1261] Athletic Board of the University.

He did resign and in fairness to him and as another indication of the generosity on the part of the University officials, all of whom were sympathetic with him, all of whom had been friends of his for years, including Dr. Aderhold, permitted him to resign upon two conditions, one, that he would have nothing whatsoever to do with football, and the other condition was that they would let him be athletic director, a very generous opportunity on their part and an opportunity for the man that had done wrong to straighten himself out.

Frankly, it seems to me from the evidence which has been introduced in this case that the University officials may have made a mistake and now regret it, but, nevertheless, out of their own generosity they undertook to straighten out a man who was their friend and who needed another chance.

He had that opportunity. They did reduce his salary from eighteen thousand five hundred dollars down to twelve thousand five hundred dollars, but certainly with the lesser responsibilities, if any, that he took on, I would say that that was a reasonable salary upon which he could have maintained himself.

But he became bitter and that bitterness grew from bad to worse, and you have heard the University officials state under oath that it became so bad that it became a statewide topic, and again he had to be confronted with these facts. He not only had failed the University in the training of our youth, which principal responsibility was to [fol. 1262] build character in these young people who were at the University to be trained, and a part of their training was building character, he not only failed in that, but in the process he lost his own, and one of the most tragic things that I have experienced in my forty-one years of the practice of law is to find a man in the responsibility which he at one time held to have dropped to the point where his best friend and his employer and the people with whom he is closest associated will come before a disinterested jury, face-to-face with the man himself, and say that he has lost his character. He has my sympathy more than yours, and I speak to you in the deepest sincerity when I say that.

I have only one explanation of it, and that is the associations that he kept. I don't know what influence this man Scoby had on him. Scoby said he doesn't gamble any more. I will say this to you, that in all of my experiences I never heard of a man that bet fifty thousand dollars on collegiate football in one football season. If I had a friend that had been my friend over a period of sixteen or seventeen years, if he followed that kind of a practice I believe I would know about it, and I would shun his companionship.

And I will tell you something else. Maybe one standard of conduct may apply to me as a lawyer, but there is a higher standard of conduct to be applied to a man who is a football coach at a university or head of the Athletic Department.

Again, let me mention Chancellor's Barrow's name. I can't help but do it, because that man did more for me than [fol. 1263] any man with whom I have ever come in contact with.

When I attended the University of Georgia for four years, Chancellor Barrow used to make a talk in chapel every day for about twenty minutes, and he never ceased to say how important it was to maintain a good companionship. When I got there I was a scrawny-looking fellow with a twelve and a half collar and a pretty inexperienced man, and that was the first experience I learned at the University of Georgia, before I opened a book, and that is the experience Schroder has had and that is the experience that Judge Morgan has had, and it is the finest lesson that any young man at the age of eighteen can experience, because he is in the formative years of his life where he is trying to train himself for business, and at the same time in most cases it is the first time that that young man has ever been away from home for any long period of time. He is on his own when he gets there, and he needs the help and guidance, and there are men at the University today that now take the place of such people as Professor Sanford and McPherson and Doctors Vocoff, Payne, and Parks, and those people, Hooper, who were there when I was there, trying to do the same job.

Now, let me pass on from that for just a moment. This business that I am talking about of Coach Butts toward the University and toward the Athletic Board, and including the coaching staff, in spite of a letter which Mr. Schroder may read to you which said he was a great friend of the coach, and so forth, he condemned them all, and he not only did it in private, he did it in public.

[fol. 1264] You heard a man testify here, Bill Bradshaw, a big strapping, fine-looking young man who lives in Canton, Georgia, and who is now on the Athletic Board of the University of Georgia, who heard these comments. It wasn't hearsay; he heard them himself. And how on earth a man could condemn the University of Georgia in the presence of his employers is beyond my comprehension, and it shows this, and this is why I am sympathetic to Coach Butts.

Something snapped in him; something changed. From 1960 right on up until the day that he was relieved as Athletic Director he was a different man. He had hurt himself, his University, and the people who he was employed to train, and neither I nor anybody in this courtroom will ever know who was stained by that conduct, nor will you ever know where it stopped. It may be influencing some young fellow today who himself is unconscious of the example which has been set before him, and he today may not know how that influence has affected him.

There are some ten thousand students at the University of Georgia, or thirty thousand, as I recall, over the State, but those are branches, about six or seven at Georgia Tech—that is a part of the University System—but there is about ten thousand at Athens. It would be hard to tell who has been affected by such an influence. But I will say this to you, if the public at large over the State was aware of this misconduct, if the faculty was aware of it, if the Athletic Board was aware of it, and if the alumni of our good University was aware of it, I will guarantee you that a big portion of those students were, and if one man has [fol. 1265] been influenced badly by it, that is all the condemnation that is needed.

I want to mention one other thing. You recall the evidence of Mr. Bolton, Dr. Aderhold, and some of these other men whom I hope you will accept as worthy of belief. They are still your employees; they are charged with the responsibility of educating your children, your relatives and mine, and if they are not worthy of belief, they, too, should be discharged.

In early January, 1963, after this continuance and after this bitterness and after this open criticism, and after a continuance of this same conduct, instead of getting better, it got worse.

They call him in—and bear in mind, this is before any of the Butts-Bryant affair—and he was notified that as Athletic Director he would have to resign, otherwise the full Board was meeting on January the 28th. This discussion with Coach Butts was on the 20th which followed a meeting of a special committee that met on January the 18th, and on the 20th, he was notified that at the full Board meeting to be held on the 28th, if he hadn't resigned by that time that they would discharge him. So he resigned.

They did arrange for him to stay on, let it be effective June 30, so as to make some arrangement about a pension, and then—

Mr. Schroder: If it please the Court, I don't think it is good for any lawyer to interrupt another lawyer during [fol. 1266] his summation, and I am not going to interrupt Mr. Cody at any time during his summation, but his recollection as to what the evidence is and mine may differ, and the jury, I think, ought to know that what we are talking about in our summations, is our own recollection of what the evidence is and not what the evidence itself might be. I do not agree with the last statement that Mr. Cody made.

The Court: I think the jury heard the evidence, and their recollection is probably as good as yours, Mr. Schroder's, Mr. Cody's and mine. I will let him go ahead.

Mr. Cody: All right, sir.

There is one other thing that happened at that meeting that his attention was called to, and that is that during this period of reprieve which he had been given, during which time he had been made Athletic Director, he developed a great many outside business interests, including this loan business and a lot of others, which your employees and mine, the faculty at the University of Georgia, decided conflicted with his interests and gave him no time to fulfill the responsibilities that had been placed upon him, and that was another reason why he was asked to resign.

In that connection, let me point out one thing that shows you how Coach Butts more or less cracked up. I don't say this in criticism of him. I am really ashamed to mention it, but in fairness to my client I am charged with the responsibility of pointing out to you matters which, if serious, give you reason not to believe what he says. I don't think he [fol. 1267] knew himself what he was doing. I don't think he fully understood or comprehended the effectiveness of it, because when he went over the State in an effort to obtain these licenses to operate these small loan companies, he had to get the permission of the Comptroller of the State of Georgia for the issuance of a license, because the small loan business in Georgia is controlled by the Comptroller General, a public official of our State.

Exhibit No. 11 of the defendant is a financial statement which this man gave to your public official, and it says—it recites his assets and his liabilities in detail, and then says at the bottom that his net worth on July the 17th, 1961, is two hundred five thousand nine hundred eighty-eight dollars, and, yet, in order to obtain your sympathy in this case—I assume that was the reason—he stated on this stand under oath that he was now insolvent, and Mr. Schroder undertook to ask him how could he become insolvent between July 17, 1961 and the date of this trial, and he said he sold a couple of his stocks. One of them he did—he did receive a loss on it, but the other one turned out to be a big gain, and those two transactions didn't change his financial status one bit; it improved it, if anything, because he said he bought the Georgia International Life Insurance Company stock at six, I think, and sold it at eleven. If he had held onto it, it is a lot more than that now, but that is beside the point.

The point I want to make is that a man that will go to one of your public officials, bet enough to start into this business and a lot of other businesses while he is charged with the duty of Athletic Director, but it is worse, in order [fol. 1268] to obtain the license to do that, to misrepresent your financial condition.

I want to talk to you a minute, Gentlemen, at this point about the law of this case. It is not very complicated. It is fairly simple. Judge Morgan might disagree with me. He is charged with the responsibility of giving you the law of this case, but I want to mention this.

No. 1, we take no issue with the plaintiff in this case with the fact that up until a certain time he enjoyed the greatest of a reputation as a football coach, had many friends throughout the United States, was asked to make public speeches. I will go so far as to say, in all fairness to him, that he knows as much about or did know as much about football as any man in this country, and I, a few years ago, would have put him up against anybody. But the point in this case is, what happened after that, after he terminated his responsibility as a football coach following 60, and how did it affect this case?

I will get to this Bryant affair in just a minute. I don't have much time, but I do have another opportunity to speak to you on Monday, as you probably understood from the Judge's comment. I will have a little time between now and then to think about what I want to say, and I will try to do a better job than I am doing this morning, but I want to touch now on the question of law involved in this case that I assume the Court will instruct you about.

In a libel action, if some unfavorable comment or critical comment, no matter what that comment is, is made, if the [fol. 1269] defendant can prove the truth of it, there can be no liability, and if you believe that the truth has been shown by a preponderance of the evidence, you must find a verdict for the defendant in this case.

Now, let me define to you or mention briefly what I assume the Court will instruct you about in its charge to you as what it means by "truth". It means substantial truth, not every word in the article. You can make mistakes in the article. It means that the defendant is charged with the responsibility of proving the truth of that part of the article which constitutes the sting of the so-called libel, that is, they could cover a wide area in the article itself and make some mistakes in it, as we have made in this case. There are some errors in this article; no one denies that. We spent hours and days talking about a few mistakes in the article, and I confess that there are some mistakes in it, some misquotations, not particularly chargeable against the Post, although they are responsible for it because it came through their agent—Furman Bisher was one of them, who is a responsible journalist in Atlanta—and if he makes a mistake, we have to be responsible for it. Nobody has dodged that issue, but if somebody is misquoted or some misstatement is made which is a reflection on somebody else, it doesn't have anything to do with his particular case.

The first day of this trial I went home that afternoon, a little bit tired, and picked up the paper to read it, and some newspaper man made a comment about me. He said I was age fifty and slightly bald. He missed my age by fourteen [fol. 1270] years, and whether or not I am slightly bald, I will let you be the judge of that. Frankly, I think he's drastically wrong in both of them.

He has got a right to make whatever comment he wants, but in journalism the law assumes that mistakes can be made. You can't check out every—you can't check out every incident before you publish an article. A man didn't come to me and ask me what my age was. I don't guess he would have had time to write his article in the paper if he checked every detail in the article, because he covered a wide area of subjects.

But, be that as it may, there is very little I can say about that. I want to talk to you a minute about these notes. May I have them just a second?

The Clerk: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: We are getting down to the Bryant affair now. These notes are made by an amateur, not a football coach. A lot of them don't make any sense. It is written down in pencil on notepaper, taken during the course of the telephone conversation; several are almost illegible, but there is a lot in these notes, and before I touch on what is in these notes that apply to this case, I want to mention this to you.

There are two other things that Mr. Schroder would like to forget about, because in his questioning of these witnesses that he had, they said that these notes weren't any good and one said you might as well tear them up. He [fol. 1271] didn't give those witnesses the benefit before they testified of the detailed deposition that was given by this man Burnett long prior to this trial in which he explained a great many things about that telephone conversation that are not mentioned in these notes. He amplified these notes and explained some things about it.

Mr. Schroder: If the Court please, I don't remember Mr. Burnett testifying in any deposition in this case. There wasn't read any deposition of Mr. Burnett. I think that is highly improper.

Mr. Cody: He examined—

The Court: Just a moment. What is your—

Mr. Cody: He examined him about some depositions.

Mr. Schroder: Mr. Cody—

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Schroder: —is attempting to state to this jury—

The Court: You quote—I don't think—

[fol. 1272] Mr. Cody: I won't quote the deposition.

The Court: I don't think anything that was said in the deposition which was not read would be admissible.

Mr. Cody: Very well, Your Honor; very well.

And then we come, as I consider it, to the most important feature of this case, and that is that on the last page of these notes is the extension number of "Bear" Bryant at the University of Alabama switchboard. Extension 641. Anybody could obtain that, I guess. You could have called up down there and found out that extension number. I don't deny that, if a man wanted to falsify these notes.

He put down the time as 10:40 a.m. on September 13, 1963. That, too, could have been falsified, because anybody can write that time and the date down, but here is something that no man could put down and be accurate unless he had some sort of a psychic power.

It says here "Give Wally a ring Sunday." Now, this was on September 13, a Thursday. Sunday was the 16th, and not until recently has any confirmation been made of that Sunday telephone call, and bear in mind, Gentlemen, this call from "Bear" Bryant to Wally Butts on the quiet of a Sunday afternoon, and the telephone records show that the call went to Wally Butts' home, lasted an hour and seven minutes, and nobody, to this day, knows what the subject matter of that conversation was. Neither Wally Butts nor [fol. 1273] "Bear" Bryant remember making the call, nor do they remember the subject matter about which they talked. That is one of the most incredible things about this case.

There is only one class, only one type of person on earth that could talk an hour and seven minutes and not remember making the call or not remember what they talked about, and that exception is, in my judgment, a teen-ager. A teen-ager can turn the radio on and listen to Ricky Nelson, and at the same time turn the T.V. on to listen to "Bonanza" or "Dr. Kildare" and spread out on the floor like syrup, and grab that telephone and talk for an hour and seven minutes without knowing what they are talking about or who they called. But, I dare say, that even a few of those would remember something about the call.

But in this particular case, two men who were talking football, let's say it is just general football talk, talking that length of time before this upcoming Georgia-Alabama game, I say to you in all sincerity that to be unable to remember the call or the subject matter is one of the most unbelievable things that I can imagine. I don't intend to comment on that any more. I simply say that there is not the slightest bit of evidence, not the slightest bit of doubt that that call ever took place and the length of it, and if, at the conclusion of this case, you as a matter of fact find that call didn't take place, you want to find a verdict for this plaintiff.

But you will have with you in the jury room a toll ticket of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company or Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company. Here they are. You can look at them. And that company has a [fol. 1274] machine—this is not a human error on anybody's part; this company has a machine that, the minute a call is through, that machine stamps the time of that call, because all along, since the connection was made and since the party started talking, that machine was recording the time, and it is on the back of this toll ticket, and there could be no possible human error about it.

The same applies to the call of September 13, which Butts made to Bryant.

I only have a few more minutes this morning. I want to mention something before I close, and I may have something to say Monday on the same subject.

The subject of any legal investigation is to ascertain the truth, and if you can ever find out what is the truth in this case, your decision, of course, will be easy. This has been a long case. You have been patient, and in your effort to strive to obtain the truth you necessarily will have to judge the credibility of witnesses. The Court will give you some instruction about that, because there are some Code Sections in Georgia, and this case is governed by Georgia law, even though we are trying it in the Federal court. You are the judges of the credibility of the witnesses.

Now, I want to mention, first, this fellow Carmichael. He started out in this case by undertaking to convince you he was a real estate man and an insurance man. The truth about it, he is neither one. He changed his testimony—and this is under oath to you—he changed his testimony three [fol. 1275] or four times before he ever got to you. He testified one time in a public hearing that was had involving this matter, he testified another time on deposition which I questioned him about, and then he testified a third time in connection with another case, not this one, and something was asked him about this same transaction, and if I recall the testimony correctly, every one of them was different, and then when he got before you he changed his testimony three times. You remember he was here one day and his testimony was along certain lines, and he came back the next morning and said that his testimony the previous day was in error, and he made two or three changes in it, such changes as might suit his convenience.

Now, you can judge the credibility of that type of a witness, not me to judge but you. I simply point it out for what it might be worth, because I may be just a little bit more experienced in the handling of a witness than you might be, because I submit to you that a man that will do that is not worthy of belief in any respect.

And let me touch on "Bear" Bryant just a minute. "Bear" Bryant was charged with the same responsibility as Wally Butts with the training of young people, and he brought two of the finest looking boys into this courtroom that I ever saw in my life. You may not remember them by name, but I do. Sharp is one and Pell is another, Jimmy Sharp and Charles Pell. Jimmy Sharp was a tackle on the 1962 football team and was captain of that team. Charles Pell was the guard. Never in my life have I seen two finer looking young men, both by appearance and physically, and they made such good witnesses that even Judge Morgan was [fol. 1276] prompted to ask Sharp something along this line —I don't remember the exact transcript of the record; it will be in the record; you may remember it better than I do; I had my mind on other things. The Judge asked him if he intended to study to be a coach, something along that line. I don't remember his exact answer; all I know was that it left me with the conclusion that he might, or something of that sort, and it comes out, and this evidence is in the case, that those two men are on the coaching staff at the University of Alabama and recognized as such. They are assistant coaches, and I say to you that that type of exception, don't blame these young men; they are under the influence of "Bear" Bryant, and if "Bear" Bryant asked them to come up here and condone the fact that they were assistant coaches, I guess they'd do it, because somehow or another a coach has got an influence over a young man that no other person has, not even his parents, and that is the tragedy of this whole situation.

I believe in deception on the football field, but deception in the courtroom is another thing, and I dare say that if those two boys had stated in open Court they were assistant coaches at the University of Alabama, I would have asked them some more questions. I don't recall that I cross-examined either one.

I forgot to mention one thing about this fellow Carmichael. There is another fellow that has been a friend of Butts for fifteen years. He denied it was any close friendship, tried to pretend it was an acquaintance; I guess that's right. But somewhere in the examinations of that witness [fol. 1277] he said he went to his dentist that morning, and after he left there he came on to this office where he ran into Burnett. And I asked this dentist to come to Court, bring his records. He said he hadn't seen him in a long time up until October 4th. That is, in essence, what the records show. I could be wrong. If I am, you can criticize me for it. I can't remember every detail in this case, but, as I recall, he said October the 4th was the first date that his records showed the man had been there in a long time, but we were talking about September the 13th. That is the important date in this case.

When you are talking about the credibility of witnesses, you have under consideration probably the most important phase of the trial of any legal case. Some witnesses hide facts, and when you find one doing that, you ought to accept his testimony with suspicion.

Let me give you an illustration. We took the deposition of this man Scoby in Chicago, and we undertook to find out something about his acquaintances, and we wanted to find out who this man was that was handling all these bets. If I knew his name and address, I might have been able to give you some more information about this case. All I learned was his name was "Lefty." Well, there are a lot of people named Lefty and a lot of people left-handed, including Dr. Rose. Lefty doesn't mean anything to me nor to you. He didn't know his last name, where he lived. All he knows, Lefty was the one that picked up this money when he lost and brought the money there when he won.

[fol. 1278] Let me tell you this. You have got some very credible witnesses in this case, and they didn't tell you all they know. They have saved all of us a lot of embarrassment in this case, including Coach Butts, and rightly so, and I am delighted that they did, and I have been a party to it, but if Dr. O. C. Aderhold, president of the University, if Mr. J. D. Bolton, who has been there nearly forty years, if Harold Heckman, who has been there thirty-something years and is now head of the Accounting Department and teaches business accounting and business administration at the University, if Dr. Hugh Mills, who is head of the Department of Education, I don't know what that encompasses, I think that is general academic subjects, if Mr. Driftmier, who is head of the Agricultural Department—and, incidentally, outside of two other schools in the United States, I believe the University of Georgia has one of the largest agricultural departments in the world; they have got a terrific agriculture department down there; if those type men and the men such as Bill Bradshaw, who studied football under Coach Butts and who now represents the alumni of the University, if those sort of men are lying to you, if you think that, then I think you ought to find a verdict for the plaintiff in this case, because our case depends upon people of that character and that responsibility.

It is not up to me to tell you to believe them. If you have the slightest doubt about their honesty or their integrity or the correctness of their evidence, then we have not carried the preponderance of the burden of this proof which is placed upon us, and you ought to find a verdict for the Plaintiff. But I don't believe, and I say this as my time ends—

[fol. 1279] I have a minute, don't I, Judge?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: I don't believe that those men, charged with the education and the training of your children and mine and the training of children who are hereafter to come, would come into this Federal Court in the presence of a jury and Judge Morgan and the assembled audience, and say what they did, and if what they have said is false and is of no effect, there is no person in this courtroom that is more disappointed than I, and there is no person in this courtroom, in that event, that would worry more about the future of our State.

What little I have to say left I will say Monday. I will try to formulate what few remarks I am to say with a little more definiteness and probably in briefer form, because I will have a little more time to think about it. But, in the meantime, I thank you for your patience which you have shown in this case, and I hope that over the weekend that you will give serious consideration to such comments as I have made, and if I have made any exaggeration or any misstatement in my recollection of what the evidence is in this case, I hope you will forgive me.

STATEMENT BY MR. LOCKERMAN

Mr. Lockerman: Please the Court, before addressing my remarks to the jury, I want to point out to Your Honor [fol. 1280] what the legal contention is of the plaintiff in this case, that is, in part. As Your Honor knows, this being a libel action, libel is defined under the laws of this State as being a false and malicious defamation of another expressed in print or writing, tending to injure the reputation of an individual and to expose him to public hatred, contempt or ridicule.

Now, we contend that although that definition of libel includes and refers to the element of malice, that in this case there was no necessity for the plaintiff to offer evidence of actual malice on the part of the defendant for the law itself infers the existence of malice whereas in this case a libel is published, and, that therefore it is not necessary that the jury find that there was any actual malice on the part of the Curtis Publishing Company.

The Court: That is in so far as general damages is concerned but no as to punitive?

Mr. Lockerman: That's correct.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Lockerman: We point out that the article complained of contains the words "corrupt", "fixed", "rigged", and to "sell out" in referring to the plaintiff, Wallace Butts.

[fol. 1281] Now, we contend that proper definition of the word "corrupt" is that it means depraved, debased, or perverted, and we contend that the proper definition of the word "fixed" means to tamper with in advance, and that the word "rigged" means to arrange, carry out or manipulate by deceptive or fraudulent means, to fool and hoax. We contend that the words "to sell out" means to betray for compensation the cause or associates with whom one is identified, and we think that Your Honor should charge the jury along that line.

We further contend that this article, when it is read in its entirety, that the article complained of in this Saturday Evening Post charges the plaintiff with being corrupt and with rigging and fixing the 1962 Alabama-Georgia football game. We contend that that greatly injured the plaintiff in his profession as a football coach, and that the article therefore, we contend, is libelous per se, that is, that it is libelous on its face as a matter of law.

We feel that the Court should so charge the jury and to further charge the jury that the defendant in this case, Curtis Publishing Company, had the burden of proving the truth of the things it said about the plaintiff, and that if the defendant has not carried that burden and proved the truth of those things by a legal preponderance of the evidence, then the jury must return a verdict for the plaintiff in the amount of damages to which, under all the circumstances, they find that he is entitled.

We further contend that the defendant in this case has filed what is known as a plea of justification, and that un- [fol. 1282] der the law that by filing that plea the defendant has the legal burden of proving the words contained in the article which charged the plaintiff with being a rigger and a fixer of the 1962 Georgia-Alabama football game, and accusing him of being a participant in the greatest sports scandal since that of the Chicago White Sox in the 1919 World Series, and that it charges that he was a corrupt person who betrays or sells out his people, and he rigged and fixed the Alabama-Georgia football game as a gambling device in order to restore his financial resources. And further it charges that he was so corrupt and foul that his betrayed players were forced in the game like "rats in a maze and took a frightful physical beating", all of which is alleged in our Paragraph 11 of the petition, the plaintiff's complaint, and we contend that the jury should be charged that nothing short of the defendant proving the truth of those charges by preponderance of the evidence will suffice as a defense.

We further say that under the pleadings in this case and as the pleadings will show that Wallace Butts is asking for general damages in the sum of five million dollars. Of course, we also—the petition, as I will later on point out, shows we ask for an additional five million dollars as punitive damages, but he is asking the general damages for five million dollars to compensate him for the injury to his peace, his happiness, and his feeling as a result of the article published concerning him in the Saturday Evening Post of March the 23rd.

Now, we feel that the jury should be instructed that unless they find that the defendant has proved that this ar- [fol. 1283] ticle was true, then the plaintiff would be entitled to recover general damages without proof of any amount, that it is not necessary for the plaintiff to prove that he incurred any special damages; nor is it necessary that the plaintiff prove that he has suffered any pecuniary or physical harm for the reason that the law presumes that the general damages flow from a libelous publication which injures one in his trade, occupation or business.

We contend that in a case such as this the law doesn't prescribe any measure of damages except to leave the question of damages entirely to the enlightened consciences of impartial jurors, such as the gentlemen that we have in the box, and that the jury should strive to give such damages as, in their opinion, will fairly compensate the plaintiff for the injury done. We feel that the jury should be so instructed.

In addition to asking for general damages, as I mentioned just previously, in the amount of five million dollars, the plaintiff in his petition is also seeking to recover an additional five million dollars as punitive damages under the law to deter the Curtis Publishing Company from repeating the injury to his honor, his reputation, and his integrity in the future.

We contend that under the law of Georgia, there may be aggravating circumstances in a case of this type, either in the act or in the intention of the defendant, and we contend that such aggravating circumstances are present in this case. We say that the defendant has failed to prove the truth of the charges, and in addition to the amount the plaintiff is seeking as general damages that the jury should award to the plaintiff five million dollars as puni[fol. 1284] tive damages to deter the defendant from repeating the injury to his honor, reputation, and integrity, and we think the jury should be so instructed.

Now, on the question of punitive damages, as on the question of general damages, we contend that the law prescribes no set way in which such damages shall be computed, that being left entirely to the enlightened consciences of these jurors.

We contend the jury should be authorized to consider in this connection the wealth of the defendant, and we further contend that the defendant has not sustained the burden of proving the statements by it about the plaintiff as being true, and that the jury is authorized to consider that fact in—authorized to consider that fact that this is an aggravating circumstance as referred to and provided for in the law in determining the amount to be awarded the plaintiff. We think that the jury should be instructed on that subject.

We point out, Your Honor, that evidence has been offered during the trial to the effect that the plaintiff, Wally Butts, through his attorney, prior to the time that the article was published, requested the defendant not to publish the article, stating to the defendant, Curtis Publishing Company, that it was not true, and that after the article was published that the plaintiff demanded a retraction by the Curtis Publishing Company of what it had said about him. Now, that is admitted in the pleadings too, the fact that the request not to publish and the request for retraction were made, and there is no question about that.

[fol. 1285] Now, under Section 105-720 of the Code of Georgia, it is relevant in an action for libel such as this for the plaintiff to prove that he had requested a retraction.

The Court: Is that 105-620 or 105-702?

Mr. Lockerman: Your Honor, it is—

The Court: That's all right; I will find it. I was just in doubt.

Mr. Lockerman: Yes, sir. Proof that he requested the retraction.

Now, we contend that the proof by the plaintiff, and, of course, the admission in the pleadings, that he demanded a retraction but the defendant failed to retract the article may be considered by the jury on the question of malice and bad faith.

We contend that the defendant has failed to prove that the article was true, and that the defendant has admitted that it refused to retract the article after being requested to do so, and we think the jury should be instructed that it is authorized to consider this fact as an aggravating circumstance in arriving at the amount of punitive damages to be awarded the plaintiff.

I want to read to the Court from the case of Cox versus Strickland, which is a libel suit action in 101 Georgia 482, decided by our Supreme Court here in the State of Georgia, [fol. 1286] where, at Page 493, beginning at Page 493, our Supreme Court has this to say:

"The right to publish through the newspaper press such matters of interest as may be properly laid before the public does not go to the extent of allowing the publication concerning a person of a false and defamatory matter, there being no other reason or justification for so doing than the mere publication of news. But false assertions, when they impute the commission of crime, are actionable; and when not based upon any facts legally tending to prove the crime imputed, the publication cannot be said to be privileged. It will not do to say that such a publication was made with reasonable care, however good the motive may have been.

"In popular belief, one man can publish of another what he sees fit, if, by bluff or otherwise, he can avoid any personal consequences on account of such act; the party aggrieved must either submit or go gunning for the publisher, or to retain his place in public estimation as a man of honor. Generally the libeler is not in evidence; his work is done behind the scene; you cannot always know his motive. Upon the surface he is the embodiment of fairness, of patriotism, yea, sometimes his religious views almost deter him from work he is about, but, patriot as he is, he will do the public a service, and often he strikes a better man than he is, a cowardly blow though it be. Character is defined by Webster to be particular qualities impressed by nature or habit on a person, which distinguish him from others. The libeller would strip him of these. He wishes him to appear, not in his true character, but in a fictitious one, a character that he would give him. We [fol. 1287] can understand why a thief would steal, he is after gain; so forgery is committed, and other crimes; but from a moral standpoint a man who would destroy character must be ranked along with the felon who commits arson, he cannot hope to profit by it; he cannot appropriate that of which he deprived another. Character ought to be protected; the law ought to be enforced to protect it. I could not do better than quote just here from the preface to the letters of Junius: "If the characters of private men are assailed or injured, a double remedy is open to them by action and indictment; if through indolence, false shame, or indifference, they will not appeal to the laws of their country, they failed in their duty to society, and are unjust to themselves; if, from an unwarrantable distrust of the integrity of juries, they would wish to obtain justice by any mode of procedure more summary than a trial by their peers, I do not scruple to affirm, that they are in effect greater enemies to themselves than the libeller they prosecute.'"

Summation to Jury on Behalf of Plaintiff

Gentlemen of the Jury, I have been actually stunned and amazed by the address that Mr. Cody just made to you. Mr. Cody is a fine man. Mr. Cody is a fine lawyer. I respect him very much. I know that in the this case that he is being persuaded by the Curtis Publishing Company, his client in the matter, in which he necessarily must avoid discussing the real issues. The only reason that he spoke to you first in this case, being the defendant, is because the Curtis Publishing Company came in and filed a plea of what the law refers to as justification in which he claimed, in which the Curtis Publishing Company claimed [fol. 1288] that what it had said about Wally Butts was true. They, therefore, had the burden of proving that those things were true.

I don't believe that in any place in what he has said to you that he has touched in one iota on the burden that he had of proving the truth of these charges that were made as so prominently shown in that editorial in the Saturday Evening Post. He has seen fit to talk to you about anything except the truth of those charges.

Mr. Cody, apparently, Gentlemen, is taking the position that if you will just believe that Wally Butts has bad character, that the Saturday Evening Post can say anything that it wants to about Wally Butts, that it can say anything that it wants about anyone, if in some way they can come before a jury that tries the case and try to create some feeling on the part of the jury that the person that they have charged with being, say, corrupt, and with being a fixer, is of some bad character. I don't believe that you are going to let the Curtis Publishing Company, so far as the Northern District of Georgia is concerned, continue with that type of policy.

Mr. Cody told you about having been at the University of Georgia, and about how Mr. Schroder was at the University of Georgia, and Judge Morgan was at the University of Georgia. He has, of course, referred to the gentlemen that they brought here from the University of Georgia. It seems to me that the Curtis Publishing Company is trying to hide behind the skirts of the University of Georgia, that this great institution that it is. We are [fol. 1289] all proud of the University of Georgia. Mr.

Cody has no single claim to that at all. I am proud of the University of Georgia. I have a son that graduated from there in June. We all are.

Since he talked to you about the University of Georgia and when he was there, I think I likewise have a right to mention to you briefly that I probably have known Wally Butts longer than any man in this case. I was at Mercer University with Wally Butts when he played end on the football team there. He was in some respects a small man in stature, but he had more determination and more power to win than any man that I have ever seen in my life. I would not stand before you in this case today arguing in his behalf if I thought that Wally Butts would not tell you the truth when he raises his hand on this stand and swears to Almighty God that what he is going to tell you is the truth.

After the Curtis Publishing Company brought in the parties from Athens, Wally Butts went back on the stand and he still, with raised hand of telling the truth, swore to you that what he had told you in this case was the truth.

Mr. Cody has not referred to the fine young men that came over here from Athens who know Wally Butts so well. He doesn't want to mention to you, obviously, the fact that those fine young men and the coaches that came over here and testified in behalf of the truth of what Wally Butts has told you as all of us who have been in this case know that they supported the truth of what he said.

[fol..1290] Mr. Cody did not attack the character of any of those witnesses. He knew that he could not, and they have verified right to the letter everything about the heart of this case that Wally Butts has said.

Mr. Cody tried to cast doubt in your mind as to the integrity and as to the character and as to the honor of Coach Paul Bryant by suggesting that he compelled those two fine young boys who came over here to testify, that he conspired with them and rigged with them to come over here and testify.

I think Mr. Cody knows very well that the brochure that he referred to, a type of brochure of that type is put out at the end of the season and that when young boys who have graduated or rather who have completed their eligibility, outstanding young men of the team have completed their eligibility, that they are carried on the staff as helping in coaching. That brochure is prepared for next year, and I think Mr. Cody knows that, but he wants you to believe that there was a conspiracy on the part of those fine young men and Paul Bryant who come over here and tell you untruths about this case which they did not, and they verified everything to the real heart of this case that Wally Butts has told you.

Gentlemen, Mr. Cody referred, of course, to John Carmichael, and he tried to imply to you that John Carmichael had lied, had told untruths to you on the stand by claiming that John Carmichael had said that he was at the dentist's office on the morning before he went to the office where he found Burnett at his desk. Now, I don't ask you to accept my memory, but I believe if you search your own carefully [fol. 1291] you will remember that John Carmichael said that he thought he went to the dentist; he repeated it several times, "I think to the best of my recollection I was there, but I cannot be sure. It's been a long time ago." And that was what he said. And then the Curtis Publishing Company in its desperate effort in this case to try to case some question on his testimony, go out and get a doctor to come in and say, "No, we don't have any record." The man never did say that he was positively there.

And, speaking of John Carmichael, I wonder if it has occurred to you why, if his testimony wasn't true, why the Saturday Evening Post did not bring and present to you, as we did John Carmichael, this man who is referred to throughout this argument by the name of Milton Flack. Have you seen him? Now, bear in mind that he came to that office on Eleventh Street about 2:00 or 2:30 on the afternoon of the same day that Burnett allegedly made these notes, and that they sat down and discussed the notes and discussed what was supposed to have been said. Now, if those notes weren't fraudulent, if they weren't fictitious except for the first page and the last page as testified to by John Carmichael, why didn't the Curtis Publishing Company bring that man in here? They know where he is. And I say it is not right to try to cast doubts in your minds about any such thing as that.

Pierre Howard seemed to have been furnishing a great deal of information to the Saturday Evening Post in connection with this matter. He is a local lawyer, and he is a man that the Post paid, oh, I don't know how much it was, five hundred or a thousand dollars; I think it's a thousand [fol. 1292] dollars to Pierre Howard, and they have not brought him in to testify as to the truth as to what they have assumed the burden of proof.

I think you ought to consider those things. I think you ought to give it careful consideration, and I know that you will.

Mr. Cody drew comparisons about his bald head and about whether or not—being types of inaccuracies in papers. He talks about Ricky Nelson. He talks about Dr. Kildare. He won't talk to you about the real heart of this matter, because he knows that it cannot be proven, and he has known it from the beginning, and I feel sorry for him. He had a terrific burden and he can't carry it, and he doesn't want to talk about it. He wants to talk about anything except that, and that is all he has done for two weeks, including specifically today.

Gentlemen, March the 18th, was the blackest day that could ever befall—I mean, to Wally Butts, that could ever come upon any man. That was the day that the Saturday Evening Post that bears the date of March 23 hit the press, or hit the newsstands, I mean, not the press. It had been printed up long before. On that day of March the 18th, Wally Butts became an ashamed, heartbroken form of just a shell of himself. As he told you before, he broke down on the witness stand, that he had been, after it came out, he had been ashamed to run into people or to look them in the eye for so long, but that he had gotten to the point to where he had the strength to look any man in the eye, and that from here on out he will look them in the eye, and he swore to you that was because of the fact [fol. 1293] that what they had said about him was not true.

Wally Butts had spent thirty-five years as Head Coach, either in high schools at Monroe, starting in Monroe, going up to Male High at Louisville, and over to some other at Lexington, Kentucky, and finally coming to the University of Georgia where he had been for twenty-five years. He had reached the height of his profession. He had gotten every honor, practically, that could be gotten by a coach in the Southeastern Conference or in the United States, for that matter.

The Saturday Evening Post would have you believe that this man's character is bad. I want to read to you the fourth paragraph of the complaint, that is the petition, of course, that was filed in this case, and it alleges this in Wally Butts' petition:

"Plaintiff, during his career, has enjoyed a national reputation as a successful and respected member of the coaching profession, and has been accorded many honors, among which was his election in 1959 as resident of the Football Coaches Association, a national organization of football coaches throughout America. Upon invitation he has coached the College All-Stars, the Blue-Gray All Star game, and the North-South All-Star game. Plaintiff has, during his career, been widely sought as a speaker and lecturer on various aspects of football, and has spoken and lectured at clinics, banquets and other public gatherings throughout the United States. In addition, plaintiff has been approached and offered employment as head football coach by several colleges and professional foot- [fol. 1294] ball teams in the country due entirely to his reputation as successful member and leader in his profession."

And when that suit was filed the Curtis Publishing Company came into this Court and filed its answer to it, and admitted every word of it. Now, since having done that, the Curtis Publishing Company is trying to contradict what it said in its own pleadings in judicio, here in the courtroom.

If Wally Butts' character is bad, Gentlemen, it is because of the things said against him by this Saturday Evening Post. If people say that he is of bad character, it is because of that, and why do you think we are suing the Saturday Evening Post? We say that they have ruined him, and they did ruin Wally Butts, unless you gentlemen correct this and say what should be said to the world in this case and find, of course, that the Curtis Publishing Company has not proven the burden, has not proven the truth of its charges against Wally Butts.

I want to talk a little bit about the Curtis Publishing Company. Mr. Cody referred to Benjamin Franklin and about the two hundred thirty-six years that the Curtis Publishing Company has been publishing a magazine. Of course, it was a great magazine; it had a very conservative reputation until the new management of editors took over, Mr. Clay Blair, Jr., Mr. Davis Thomas, and the others whose depositions we read to you.

They did not bring one man here from the Curtis Publishing Company or the Saturday Evening Post to put him [fol. 1295] on the stand to testify to anything in support of what they claimed they were going to prove to you. As you know from the evidence, Clay Blair, Jr., when he took over the editorship of this, he wanted to create a different image. He wanted to get away from the image of Benjamin Franklin. He wanted to create his own image. As a matter of fact—

Where are those things, those exhibits?

—when you have those exhibits out you will find that he wanted to get so far away from the image of Benjamin Franklin, that he has taken his facsimile, this image of Benjamin Franklin, which for years and years and years was carried on the Post; he has taken it off; he doesn't want it. He tells you in his sworn testimony in this case that he has created, he has changed the image of the Saturday Evening Post. He wants to create furor. He wants to make people mad. He wants to be sensational. He has a yardstick, a new yardstick of the image he wants to create in that magazine. He wants to make it a fireside confidential weekly publication and get into the homes of twenty-three million readers in America. He tells you that his final yardstick of the kind of image that he is creating is represented by the number of libel suits that they had at the time that he took his deposition—I forget the date—maybe sometime in May or June of this year or something like that. That is the final yardstick as he measures it, of the type of magazine that they want to publish.

Gentlemen, the Saturday Evening Post apparently has gone into the business of buying libel suits. They bought [fol. 1296] this one. They paid George Burnett five thousand dollars for this libel suit, and they told him, "We will give you two thousand dollars for an affidavit. We want to try to make it appear, in effect, that we got an affidavit from you, and we will give you two thousand dollars just for an affidavit." But, in effect, they said, "If you make it good enough, Mr. Burnett, we will give you three thousand dollars more." And that is exactly what they did. They gave him three thousand dollars more. They bought themselves a libel suit. That is right in line with their policy, the image that they want to create. They want to be sensational.

In this very law suit alone that has been in every paper, every radio station, every television station for months and months and months, and recently hour on the hour, all over the world, they have gotten untold millions of dollars in publicity where the name "Saturday Evening Post" is on the ears and the lips and tongue of all the people in the world.

These reporters here, all over this courtroom are sending this out. That is what they want. You could return a verdict for Wally Butts in this case of ten million dollars, and it would be the greatest merchandising bargain the Saturday Evening Post ever got. There is no way of telling. They could not have bought the publicity they have gotten in this case probably for fifty or seventy-five or a hundred million dollars, because it is world-wide, and you try to buy space in magazines, daily papers, radio stations, television stations all over the world where your name is mentioned every hour on the hour, such as this has been, [fol. 1297] you can't do it for any amount of money, and they have used Wally Butts for that purpose.

If you should return a verdict in this case, say, for five million dollars, they would think that they had won the greatest victory that could possibly be returned in the case.

Who do they rely on in this case? They rely on George Burnett, an eavesdropper, a man who is always one step ahead of the Sheriff, and he was caught, and he was on probation at that time. It is in the article. It shows it. Not only is he an eavesdropper, but he is a telephone conversation sneak, and that is the kind of man that they ask you to believe in preference to all of these witnesses that we have brought here in proving our case to you.

Gentlemen, there are so many things I would like to discuss with you. I have a limited time, because my fine partner Bill Schroder, is going to make the concluding argument in our behalf on Monday morning, and I want to leave him all the possible time that I can. I know he will cover it, the things that I have not mentioned to you.

I am sorry that I may have appeared to have gotten right emotional about this matter. I am emotional about it. I am mad about it. There are just thousands and thousands of people who are mad about it too, and I believe that in your deliberations and in your final verdict that you are going to return the kind of verdict that will help [fol. 1298] restore Wally Butts as he should be restored in the eyes of the world.

Thank you.

Mr. Schroder: If it please the Court, Gentlemen of the Jury, it's a good feeling to be back where I can discuss this case directly with you again as we did when we first got into it Monday, two weeks ago.

I am going to, because the time is somewhat limited, be forced to skip over and not discuss some matters which I feel confident ought to be discussed, and perhaps you Gentlemen feel that I should discuss, but being limited as I am by the time allotted in which I am to complete the summation, I will necessarily have to skip some topics, but I do not want anyone on the jury to get the idea that because I have not touched upon them that I did not think they were important.

I want to begin by taking up where the Saturday Evening Post Lawyer ended Friday. I sat here for an hour and listened to that argument. I made voluminous notes, and there were several things which were stated in that argument which I think must be dealt with here and now.

Throughout that argument not two minutes were devoted to the merits of the case; not two minutes were devoted to the plea of justification, that is to say, that what is in that article published by the Saturday Evening Post is true. On the other hand, practically fifty-five minutes was devoted [fol. 1299] to a subject that has never arisen in this case in this courtroom until the 'eleventh hour'.

I remember the Saturday Evening Post lawyer stating to you that, in effect, Wallace Butts, because of some testimony given by O. C. Aderhold, President of the University of Georgia, Mr. Bolton, Comptroller, ought not have a recovery. Now, Gentlemen, that is not true. Gentlemen, that is not a fair statement. Part of the evidence in no way can be considered in support of their plea of justification.

Speaking of character evidence, you were told Friday by the Saturday Evening Post lawyer that if you believed Dr. Aderhold lied on the stand, then bring in a verdict for Wallace Butts. I say, again, to you, that is an unfair statement, and it is an unwarranted statement, and it does not apply in this case.

It was told you that the University of Georgia is a third party to this case. That's not so, and I personally resent it.

Mr. Lockerman argued to you immediately after the Post lawyer sat down. Here the Post was attempting to hide behind the skirts of the University. On further thought, it is not the skirts of the University that the Post would hide behind, but rather it is the coat tails of Dr. Aderhold. Mr. Aderhold was not here testifying as a representative of the University of Georgia; he was here testifying as a plain citizen Aderhold. If it ever occurred to me for a single second that he was testifying to what he did testify to as a representative of the University of Georgia, then my reaction would be, I would go home im-
[fol. 1300] mediately, I would get my diploma and I would send it back to the University of Georgia. I would take this gold watch, which is inscribed "Presented by the faculty to William H. Schroder, First Honor Graduate, School of Law, University of Georgia, 1938", and I would send that back to them. Likewise, with this Phi Beta Kappa key won at the University of Georgia; I would send that back to them.

I would apologize to those four fine youths who came over here and testified as witnesses for the cause of Coach Butts, those fine youths who the Post lawyer would have you believe were being corrupted.

I would apologize to my daughter who is a co-ed at that institution.

No, sir, Mr. Aderhold was over here expressing his own personal views, and I will point out to you in just a moment that character evidence, good or bad, why it has no place here.

It was obvious from Dr. Aderhold's testimony that over the years he has been—he has built up an almost blinding jealousy for Coach Butts. When he became President in 1950, Coach Butts had already produced seven bowl games, and he was "Mr. Georgia"; he was getting the plaudits that Mr. Aderhold thought that he should be getting when he became President. For the next ten years they had but one bowl game, and obviously there must have been many an argument between the two as to the budget which was being set aside for recruiting purposes.

[fol. 1301] Despite that, in 1959 Coach Butts did produce a championship team. In 1959 Coach Butts was elected the second best coach in the United States. In 1959 Coach Butts was elected President of the American Football Coaches Association, only the third time that single honor has ever been conferred upon a coach of the South, the other two, of course, being William A. Alexander, that great man from Georgia Tech, and Dan McGuggan from Vanderbilt, both of whom have long gone.

I say, why do they bring that in here at the last moment? It is because the Saturday Evening Post does not want to face up to the issues which they made by their pleadings, and what did their pleadings do insofar as this question is concerned? They have filed a paper in this court, an official paper, in which they have admitted that Coach Butts has enjoyed a national reputation as a successful and respected member of the coaching profession, that during his career he has been offered several college and professional football jobs, because of what? Due entirely to his reputation as a successful member and leader in his profession. They have admitted that.

In that article which they published, and I will show it to you in a moment when I get to that portion, they write "careers will be ruined, that's for sure." My question to the Saturday Evening Post lawyer is: How can a career be ruined if there is no career to ruin?

As the man who wrote the article, Mr. Frank Graham, Jr., we had to go to New York to find out what his story was. They wouldn't bring him down here and let him look [fol. 1302] you in the eye. And here is what Frank Graham, Jr., said in New York when his deposition was taken under oath, and this part has been read to you; therefore, it is in evidence. "In my opinion", and I am quoting, "when this article was published it was the death of Wallace Butts in his chosen profession."

Mr. Graham says again, on page 139, "both Curtis Publishing Company and I both knew that when that article was published it would ruin Coach Butts' career."

And Mr. Charles D. Thomas, the senior Editor, we had to go up there and get his testimony too, and they haven't brought him here to look you eye-to-eye and give you his story. Here is what he said up there, and it was read under oath. "I knew"—this is page 33—"that the article being published by the Saturday Evening Post was placing the professional reputation of Butts on the line." He knew it when he published it. Now, if he didn't have one, why was he so swearing?

Mr. Thomas, again, in that same deposition, page 34, "I knew before the article was published the careers of two men, including Coach Butts, would be ruined as a result of the publication." Not as a result of the testimony of Dr. Aderhold but as the result of the Saturday Evening Post article.

And they come in here Friday and they don't want to answer what their own witnesses have already testified to, and they don't want to face up to it. They want to put it in the lap of Dr. O. C. Aderhold, and, incidentally, I asked [fol. 1303] him on the stand had anyone from the Saturday Evening Post ever contacted him before writing the article, and his answer was in the negative.

Gentlemen, obviously they don't want to face up to the issue in this case, but they want to confuse and confound and befuddle the Gentlemen of the jury seated there in that box to such a degree that whatever amount you ordinarily or otherwise would give Wallace Butts would be reduced by that type of evidence.

Evasive, sidestepping the issues all the time, all the while trying to influence your thinking insofar as the amount of money that you would award Wallace Butts because of a malicious, defamatory article they published in the March 23 issue of the Saturday Evening Post.

A backfield composed of those Post officials who will not get on the stand where you can see them, Mr. Clay Blair,

Mr. Thomas, Mr. Roger Kahn, and the author, Mr. Frank Graham, would be unbeatable. They can sidestep and dodge issues better than the four horsemen of Notre Dame could ever sidestep would-be tacklers. Why don't they come in here and tell you they believe the story that they wrote?

The Saturday Evening Post lawyer was talking to you about your rights to determine the credibility of the witnesses, which is your exclusive right, and when you go to determining that you have a right to look at the witnesses on the stand to determine their personal credibility insofar [fol. 1304] as that is apparent from the stand. The Post doesn't even read the deposition of their officials. The Post doesn't even put a single one of them there where you can see them; we have had to do it.

Who is the Saturday Evening Post to start raising some questions about somebody's reputation or somebody's character? This Saturday Evening Post, who less than two years ago made a 180-degree turn from the widely respected, highly regarded Post magazine of the old, with the great Benjamin Franklin on the masthead, and they went into what they have announced as a sophisticated muckraking policy. Do they care anything about the Good Book? Are they familiar with a great verse from Chapter 8 of St. John when he was teaching the scribes and the Pharisees, and they brought a woman caught in adultery before Him, and they said, "Unto the law of Moses we are commanded to stone her." And Christ said, "Let him who is without sin among you be the first to cast the stone at her." And hearing this they went away, one by one, led by the eldest.

Does the good law "Thou shalt not bear false witnesses against thy neighbor" mean anything to the Saturday Evening Post? Does "Judge not lest ye be judged" mean anything to them?

I didn't mean to take up so much of your time on that subject, but I am telling you, Gentlemen, it's been brought in here to befuddle your thinking and to confuse you and to confound you. I think the best evidence of the type of man that Wallace Butts is, he hasn't hidden away from this courtroom; he's been here every day, and he's been on [fol. 1305] the stand. You have had a chance to look at him, to observe him.

Seated here with him throughout for two weeks has been his lovely wife, Winnie and his three daughters. That is a glowing tribute, as glowing a tribute as were those four boys coming over here, and the trainer, Sam Richwine, and Charlie Trippi and John Gregory coming over here and showing you what they thought of Wallace Butts.

I am now going to discuss the real issue in the case, and I hereby challenge the Saturday Evening Post lawyer to also discuss the real issue in the case.

Now, he made a statement Friday in connection with this topic I am prepared to leave now. He is being directed in this case by the Post, because he wouldn't have made this statement otherwise. He made the insinuation or the innuendo that there was other evidence that he could have introduced but he didn't. That's not fair; that's not professional; that's not ethical.

The only thing, and he knows the only thing that any jury in any case can consider is the evidence that has been produced here in a legal way for their consideration. I don't know what he was talking about; I doubt if he does. But he wanted you, again, Gentlemen of the jury, to forget the real issue in the case and to reduce, as the law calls it, mitigate the dollars that you would otherwise award Wallace Butts.

[fol. 1306] They have plead what they call a plea of justification. They have done that for one purpose and one purpose only, because they know they can never sustain it. They did it so they could get the concluding argument, and that is a valuable asset to any lawyer, to be able to make the final argument to the jury, because the opposition cannot answer him then. They are through. The plea of justification of law says that what they have said of Wallace Butts in that article is true. Well, let's take a look at it.

I will just take the first couple of boards here, being the first two columns. All right, sir, this is the first line in the story.

"On Friday morning, September 14, 1962" this took place. Well, we know that is not so, and they admit it.

"'Coach Bryant is out on the field'" they say here. Coach Bryant says they had no morning practice, there would be no need to be on the field, and it was in the newspapers and Graham could have found it if he wanted to look for it.

Down here we have got, "'Hello, Bear.'" The testimony is uncontradicted that they do not refer to each other that way in the presence of each other.

These may be minor, but they are enough, in my mind, if I marked every one of those, to show that this was a very careless, irresponsible job done by the Post in its investigation and in its reporting of the article.

[fol. 1307] Now, Mr. Graham, he is the man who wrote the article, here is what he says right here. "As Burnett listened, Butts began to give Bryant detailed information about the plays and formations Georgia would use in its opening game eight days later." Mr. Graham, the man, one of the four men they would not bring down here, testified by deposition on page 51, nothing in Graham's notes which he got from Burnett indicated what was to be used or what was to be done in the football game.

Mr. Graham, again, in his deposition at page 51, "Burnett gave me no record, no information as to the details of the plays and formations." He says Burnett didn't give them to him because he didn't have his notes; he needed his notes to refresh his recollection.

That came from Mr. Graham, not from Mr. Burnett. I say that is not fair journalism; I say that is not true, careful reporting.

Going on down here again on this first column in the whole article, "occasionally Bryant asked Butts about specific offensive or defensive maneuvers." In Graham's deposition he says Burnett didn't say that. He said he needed his notes to check it on, and he was going to get his notes and he was going to check it, but he never did get his notes, and he went on and published the article anyway.

Here, by George P. Burnett. He said, "Butts also said that Rakestraw (Georgia quarterback Larry Rakestraw) tipped off what he was going to do by the way he held his feet." Graham said he told Burnett that, and he put it in [fol. 1308] quotations. Of all people, Burnett says, "I never told him that." The Saturday Evening Post thought that was a mighty important item to put in that story, to induce the reader to the conclusion that this was a fixed and rigged ball game.

Mr. Kahn, the Sports Editor, and Mr. Thomas, the general Editor, both testified by deposition that that was vital information for the defensive team, Alabama, to know, that it was of the utmost importance. Now, they didn't even tell him that. He put it in there on his own.

I can go through this whole set of boards here, column by column. That is simply in illustration. You have seen the witnesses come in here who have been quoted in this article with saying things which would indicate that the article was true, come in and deny they ever made any such quotation, including a Georgia football player who still has another year to play, and without regard to what he might feel might face him when he went back to Athens, he came over here and got on this stand for his old Coach who was coaching him when he was there, and the boy is still there, Mickey Babb. They had him quoted as saying something like this: Taunting him or taunting the Georgia players by saying "You cannot run that old play on us, 'eighty-eight pop'. In effect, we know every play you have got." That was a deliberate misquotation put in that article for one purpose only, like this one about Rakestraw's feet, to lead the reader of the article to the conclusion that what these great Editors said here in the article was true.

[fol. 1309] Sam Richwine, old Sam, I had never seen him before; he is a trainer over there; he is still working there and in the face of Dr. Aderhold and Bolton. He came over here and stood up and was counted for Wallace Butts. He says, "The quotation attributed to me in there was never made; I don't even know the plays of Georgia's team." And he is quoted as saying, in effect, that the Alabama players knew the Georgia plays during that game. He says it is one hundred percent incorrect, and, in answer to a question put to him by the Court, he says, "The only thing I knew about either team was the physical condition, and I did say, if I said anything to Mr. Bisher, I did say that the physical condition of the team in 1962 was better than it was in 1961."

And last, but not least, Coach Johnny Griffith stated that in three major instances he was misquoted by the Saturday Evening Post article. He was misquoted in one matter which was so important to the Post they made a headline word out of it, "I never had a chance." Johnny Griffith said, "I never made such a statement." They put it in there, again, for the purpose and the only purpose of inducing the reader to go along with this scurulous attack they have made on Coach Butts in this editorial in which they call him corrupt, in which they say he had fixed a game, rigged a game, threw his boys down the river, sold out his school.

These are facts upon which they claim makes that true.

Johnny Griffith again, down at the bottom, denied it. You can go over those Gentlemen. You remember—here is an- [fol. 1310] other one from Griffith here, denied; Johnny Griffith, denial there; Mickey Babb, denial here; Sam Richwine, he denied that. Yet, they file a plea of truth, a plea of justification saying that what they have said in that article and in this editorial is true, and what evidence have they brought here to support that?

They want to run around on the periphery, keeping your mind off the issue.

And who are they to judge a man's character? Mr. Aderhold? Some people don't go to night clubs, I know. Some people may think that's bad. But does that justify anyone writing an article like this? If they were relying on that, why didn't they put it in the article? If they were relying on that, why didn't they come in here and file a paper admitting that his reputation was good?

Skipping along from the article to what was the information that they never had in their possession when they wrote the article, and that are the so-called Burnett notes. They recognized the importance of having those notes; they wanted those notes; they never got them; they wouldn't wait on them; they never really made any real effort to get them. Furman Bisher said he was never asked to get the notes for them, and he was the man on the ground here. They didn't want the notes; they didn't want to know anything that might deter from that editorial.

They came down here, Gentlemen, knowing that a man by the name of John C. Carmichael was present when the telephone call was intercepted, and Mr. Kahn testified that [fol. 1311] they knew that before Graham came here, and Mr. Graham testified that he knew that before he came here, but they did not purposely, deliberately interview Carmichael, and the reason they didn't was because they evidently came to the conclusion that he would not agree with what Burnett had to say.

That, journalism? That, fair reporting? When you are getting ready, as they say, to kill a man in his chosen profession, when you are getting ready, as they say, to ruin a man's career, they call that reporting, fair reporting, seeking the truth?

What else did they not do? They did not review the film of the game. Now, mind you, Roger Kahn, the Sports Editor, who ought to know more about sports than Mr. Thomas, who was his boss, said, "I thought it would be a good idea to review the film." Mr. Thomas testified, "Mr. Kahn thought it would be a good idea to review the film, but I overruled it; I was his boss." And you know why? Had they reviewed those films with anyone who knew anything about football, they would have known, Number one—well, we won't go all through the Burnett notes again—Number one, how the touchdowns were scored, four of which were scored because of a man being out of position. They would have known Brigham Woodward commits fast, that not a single pass was ever thrown in his area, which an opposing coach would do if he thought that was so, or someone had told him that was so.

Had they reviewed those films, they, again, would have known that what they were getting ready to write about or [fol. 1312] what they were getting ready to write in that article was highly doubtful. Again, is that good reporting? Is that what the field or the profession of journalism owes you and owes me and owes the people of America when it is getting ready to write an article which it knows and which it states therein that it is going to ruin us, that it is going to kill us in our profession?

Taking the reputation of a man, taking a man's character and assassinating it like they have done is worse than death itself to me, because they still leave the man living with his reputation torn from him. Don't they understand that? Doesn't it mean anything to them? Can you imagine a worse day for any man to be still alive and attend the funeral of his own reputation? It is impossible to conceive of, and they were going through all of this careless reporting, irresponsible reporting, not going for the truth but something merely to lift their sagging circulation. They were libelling for profit to lift their sagging circulation so their advertising revenues would increase, would improve.

They have brought in another thing here, Gentlemen, which I assume the Saturday Post lawyer is going to discuss at some length with you, and that is the—Dr. Rose's letter. I am only going to touch on it briefly, because I really think that is all of the attention it deserves, but you will remember there was a letter written on March 6, which was after this article was put to bed and went to press, it had no influence on the Post when it wrote its article, in which he attempted to explain certain technical matters in football concerning which he had testified he knows nothing, [fol. 1313] to Dr. Aderhold, and, in good faith, because the question came up when Paul Bryant was on the stand, that man came all the way back here from Mexico City to explain it. He says he didn't sign the letter but his secretary did. Then the Saturday Evening Post steps in with its usual defense and makes the fine educator, that Doctor of Divinity, that man who had his own church for some five or six years, sign his signature, not once, but three times on a separate piece of paper, to do what? What are you going to do with that? They don't believe him under oath? What can they get out of it? They are hurting him in the public eye. It is like asking him to take a lie detector test when he gets off the stand. But there will be some talk about that. That is the typical defense.

There will be some talk about gambling. Now, isn't that a strange thing for them to draw in this man from Chicago and make a lot of hoop-la about him, and the fact that back in 1957 he bet—him owning the Miller High Life franchise in New York and Chicago, I couldn't imagine a greater gold mine, to him betting fifty thousand dollars in '57, and the only year he ever bet that, the fact he bet that, they are trying to say there is gambling in this game because Coach Butts knew him. But he wasn't gambling in the year they are talking about now, and they know that, and there is no evidence to the contrary to that.

I assume Mr. Frank Scoby has been ruined all over again by his being kicked around by the Post in this article by a man who says, "I learned my lesson when I went down there [fol. 1314] and testified against my old bookmaker for the United States Government.

Why bring that in now? You know what they testified to when I went to New York and took their depositions, these same witnesses, Thomas, Kahn, and Graham.

Mr. Thomas, at page 83, "I had no intention of implying there was any betting by either Butts or Bryant." And Mr. Kahn, who wrote the article had this to say, under oath; "I did not imply that the game was fixed or rigged because of any betting angle."

Why bring it in unless it is to muddy the water and to keep your minds away from the issue in the case?

Frank Graham, again, who wrote the article, "I am not suggesting, when I wrote that article, or intimating that either Butts or Bryant bet on the game, either directly or indirectly." I hope they will discuss that with you and explain why they brought it in here in spite of what their own officials had to say their intention was when they published the article. Has that intention changed now? I can't change after the article is published. It is what they are thinking about and what they put in that article when they maligned and killed Wallace Butts that counts.

Coach Bryant and Dr. Rose mentioned these new rule changes, and I am not going to read them to you. I want to identify the two documents for you, why there has been so much concern to Alabama and Dr. Rose. The granning-[fol. 1315] Holt incident had a profound effect upon Dr. Rose, and he was not going to stand for it again, and his coach knew he was not going to stand for it again, and he was very much concerned about not letting it happen again, so much so that was even more important that any other phase of the athletic program to Dr. Rose. These are the new enforcement policies.

It amused me somewhat to hear my opponent stand here before you Friday and again and again and again criticize Wallace Butts, the man that they have killed, by saying that he was critical of Johnny Griffith. Johnny Griffith didn't testify to that. Johnny Griffith testified that Wallace Butts was the man that gave him his first job at the University, put him on the staff where he could finish his education, and also get paid to help do that. He testified that Coach Butts, when he got him back there as an assistant coach, after he had been over to Furman, loaned him two thousand dollars, and that Coach Butts signed his note with him at the bank, co-endorsed it, and on many occasions when the payments would become due, Coach Butts would make them. Critical of Johnny Griffith? Johnny Griffith didn't say so. Maybe it was Dr. Aderhold that said so, but he is not Johnny Griffith.

February the 26th, 1963, five days after the Saturday Evening Post has come in here and bought this libel suit, Wallace Butts wrote Johnny Griffith, "Dear Johnny, I hope you have a great year in football. You and your staff deserve the good breaks, and I hope the ball will bounce the right way for you." Again, they want to cloud the issue. [fol. 1316] They bring in something by Dr. Aderhold to the effect that there was criticism. Johnny Griffith didn't say so, and certainly that letter doesn't sound so. And Johnny still owes him money.

Before this article was published, and this is admitted to be true by the Post, when the word got around about it, I sent them a telegram not to do it because it wasn't true. I sent them a registered mail letter asking them not to do it because it wasn't true. I got an answer to neither one. They went on anyway, and Mr. Clay Blair, the head man of the Post, testified, and you heard him testify, not in person, wouldn't get up there in person, but by deposition that I took, about the call he had from Coach Butts' daughter, Jean, how she wept and she cried and implored him not to print that story because of what it would do to her Dad. No, not the Post. They went ahead. They knew what they were getting into when they did it.

As Mr. Lockerman pointed out to you Friday, that is what they wanted. They wanted a libel suit. The more libel suits they got, the better they like it. And as Exhibit No. 2 will show, this is Clay Blair, this is the man who is building the image or rebuilding or changing the image of the Post. January 15, '63, just a little less than a month before he bought this libel suit, he writes to his staff, he says here, congratulating them on the change of the image, according to like he wants the Post to be, not like Benjamin Franklin wanted it to be, "Your work has not gone unnoticed. We have many press clips commenting on the new vitality in the Post. Joe Culligan has been extremely flattering in his com- [fol. 1317] ments, as have the other directors of the Curtis Publishing Company." Those were the new ones they brought in and the new President they appointed when they decided to change the image of the Benjamin Franklin Post.

Now, listen to this, Gentlemen. "The final yardstick, we have about six law suits pending," and he later identified those law suits as libel suits, "meaning that we are hitting them where it hurts." Proud of his libel suits, proud of the publicity, the free advertising he gets from his libel suits.

Mr. Clay Blair, who wouldn't get on the stand and testify so you could see him, had this to say when his deposition was taken, at page 44, which we read. "I was not being facetious when I used the phrase 'sophisticated muckraking'. I meant it then and I mean it now." Their type of sophisticated muckraking is this article here where they can get a mere germ of an idea that they know will sell and will cause people to get hit where it hurts them, and result in a libel suit with a hundred million dollars worth of free advertising to them, and that is what they want. I will show you why that is what they want.

Mr. Clay Blair, again, "I changed the image of the Post." He says that the March 23 issue—that is the one with Butts' story in it—is a step in the right direction. "This issue takes us twenty-five percent toward the goal of the magazine that I envision."

Gentlemen, if that is just twenty-five percent, that type of story, toward the goal he envisions, what can we look [fol. 1318] for or hope to look for when that is multiplied four times.

He says, Mr. Clay Blair, again, "the Post advertising revenues fell from one hundred six million dollars in 1960 to eighty-six million in 1961 and to about sixty-six million in 1962. I did not like that trend dropping twenty million dollars from a one hundred six in 1960 to eighty-six in 1961 and again to sixty-two million in 1962."

That is when they changed the image. They have got to get those advertising revenues up, and I say that is the worst kind of libel that you can have. A newspaper can print a libel because someone has given it some information that turned out to be inaccurate, but when you go out and buy a libel—and they paid over nine thousand dollars for this story, which will show here in the vouchers, paid nine thousand dollars for it—and did the reporting job that they did, they knew what they were getting; and they have it. One hundred million dollars of free advertising.

They have got twenty-three million readers. They are proud of it, that they are circulating this new image among twenty-three million readers that they sent that article to from which they have now gotten this free advertising all over the world, as Lickerman said, every hour on the hour. They don't care about Butts. They wouldn't care about you or about me. They are just one step in the direction that they are aiming.

[fol. 1319] Somebody has got to stop them. There is no law against it, and the only way that type of, as I call it, yellow journalism can be stopped is to let the Saturday Evening Post know that it is not going to get away with it today, tomorrow, or any more hereafter, and the only way that lesson can be brought home to them Gentlemen, is to hit them where it hurts them, and the only thing they know is money. They write about human beings; they kill him, his wife, his three lovely daughters. What do they care? They have got money; getting money for it.

Every man living, and woman living in the United States, I believe, who knows anything about this law suit is counting on you to keep this sort of crowd from going on under the old Saturday Evening Post name which was respectable, going on under that name with this so-called sophisticated muckraking that they are now so proudly publishing all over the country, that that is what they are engaged in.

I am looking to you for my protection. Heavens knows, if you let them out of this case for five million dollars or less, and boy, it's been worth it to them, I may be next, because they are not going to stop with that. You may be next; my wife; my children; yourself. We have got to stop them now, and you are the only twelve in the world that can stop them.

The Court: You have got ten minutes, Mr. Schroder.

[fol. 1320] Mr. Schroder: Thank you, Your Honor. Ten minutes—twenty-five percent along the way of the magazine they envision.

Gentlemen, this is the Saturday Evening Post that we all knew, loved and respected so much before they came in with the new directors and their new president and their new muckraking. There we have got old Benjamin Franklin up there. He was on all those mastheads up until this one. He is not on this masthead. This article has been introduced in evidence without objection: "Father is a football coach". This same old Saturday Evening Post that we loved so much was proud to write a story about Wallace Butts in its true picture in 1954 with the lovely daughters there seated by him and his other daughter there, here still seated with him. He is still the same Wally Butts to them, although the Post wouldn't have anyone else believe it.

He may walk along the sidewalks scared to look people in the face, because he knows what most of them think about him now, having read what they have read about him.

He was never given a chance, never given a chance until he came into this courtroom to face his accuser, and until this day he has never been given a chance to face the Saturday Evening Post face-to-face. They wouldn't come down here and face him or face you. They have nothing but contempt for us, arrogant though they be.

[fol. 1321] I say, Gentlemen, this is the time we have got to get them. A hundred million dollars in advertising, would ten percent of that be fair to Wallace Butts for what they have done to him? Would a fifty cent assessment on each of the twenty-three million issues which they wrote about him there, would that be a strain or a burden on them? I think it would teach them that we don't have that kind of journalism down here, and we don't want it down here, and we don't want it to spread from 666 Fifth Avenue any further than that building right now.

Here's another magazine, another article, the great old Saturday Evening Post that we loved and respected,

"Georgia plays for keeps," fine article about Wallace Butts and what they thought about him then. Poor old Wally.

Those will be out with you, Gentlemen, and it will give you an idea as to the degree that the new Post has changed from the policies of the old Post, one hundred and eighty degrees.

My time is up. I have done the best I can. I have lived in agony with this man since I got the first notice that this was what was going to happen, this Post article was coming out. I have seen him deteriorating even since it came out, and I have lived in agony along with him, and it may be that the personal first-hand knowledge that I have had since almost living with him and his family every day, I may have said some things or done some things or conducted myself in some manner that was displeasing to you. All I can say, I have done my best, and if I have done any [fol. 1322] of those things, don't hold it against Wallace Butts.

You know, one of these days, like everyone else must come to, Wallace Butts is going to pass on. No one can bother him then. The Saturday Evening Post can't get at him then. And unless I miss my guess, they will put Wallace Butts in a red coffin with a black lid, and he will have a football in his hands, and his epitaph will read something like this: "Glory, Glory to old Georgia."

Thank you.

The Court: You may proceed, Mr. Cody.

CONCLUSION OF SUMMATION ON BEHALF OF DEFENDANT

Mr. Cody: Please the Court, Gentlemen of the Jury, my time too is short in which to conclude this case, and I expect to get right down to business. First, I want to reply to one comment made by Mr. Lockerman in his argument to you on Friday. I will try not to touch this subject again after I answer his statement. He said that if Wallace

Butts' character was bad, it was because of the article which the Saturday Evening Post published. If you believe that statement to be true, you ought to find a verdict against the Defendant. If he had any qualms or doubts about the truthfulness of that statement, all he had to do when these close associates and friends of Wallace Butts were on the stand was to ask them when his character became bad.

[fol. 1323] You and I both know that men such as have testified in this case would not come into this court and say that his character was bad purely because of something that was said about him in the Saturday Evening Post. They would be here defending him and I would myself, and I think those men would have been his staunchest defenders had there been any truth in that statement.

The second thing I want to mention, in order to clear the issues in this case, is a statement made by Mr. Schroder where he intimated that the Defendant in this case injected into the case the question of gambling. Nothing could be further from the actual facts. If you will read this article, and you will have it out with you, you will find that no such statement and no such intimation is made in that article charging Coach Butts or Bear Bryant with any gambling.

Here is how it got into the case, and this, too, you will have in your jury room. If you will turn to paragraph 11, subsection (c), of this law suit, this is the one that they filed and which involuntarily we came into this court to answer. They say the Plaintiff is charged in this article with rigging and fixing the Alabama-Georgia football game with Coach Bryant as a gambling device in order to restore his financial resources. If you find any such statement in this article as that which I have just read about any gambling device, well, then, too, you ought to find a verdict against the Saturday Evening Post.

When they injected the issue in this case, we had to come in and defend that charge, and that is where our [fol. 1324] friend Scoby got into the picture and a few others. I will talk about him in a few minutes.

Now, Lockerman said I didn't talk about the Burnett notes in the argument which I made to you on Friday, and Mr. Schroder has mentioned that again today, although he has studiously avoided it himself. Not one word has been mentioned about those notes, and I want to get down to it right now, and here is what is in those notes. They mention players and they mention plays. You will have those notes out with you.

True, they are made by an amateur, and true, some of those notes are hard intelligible, but some are, and Coach Griffith and Coach Pierce and Coach Frank Inman have told you what they thought of those notes and what they meant, and those are the three ranking coaches at the University of Georgia today. They said that those notes mentioned formations, and strange enough they said of the eight or nine formations which Georgia used in the entire 1962 season, they didn't have time to train their team to use them all, but they trained that team to use two particular formations for the Alabama game inasmuch as it was the opening game of the season.

And strange to say, those two formations are mentioned in these notes. They picked that up.

I don't know too much about football, and I am going to say very little about it after I finish with these notes. [fol. 1325] In those notes there is a pass pattern that is mentioned and Griffith recognized it as one which was called by that particular name by Coach Butts. That is that optional left pass business. There is a mention made about Alabama not over-shifting on a certain play and there is mention of quick kicks, and Woodward commits himself fast. I don't know whether you will notice it or not when you get out, but these notes, when that boy Woodward's name is mentioned, it is spelled in the notes W-o-o-d-a-r-d. His name is Woodward. I don't know whether you noticed it or not, but Coach Butts pronounced his name "Woodard".

And he refers to a weak pass defense, anybody except Blackburn, and in the long count with the left half in motion, and Coach Pierce said this was one of Georgia's plays, and Porterfield referred to as a good running back, and then Babb catches everything they throw, and then he talked about something in there about avoiding a penalty on the part of Alabama.

Then we come down to this part of it. Burnett put down the time that call was completed, ten forty, and the telephone records show that the connection was made at 10:25, and the calculagraph, which is the automatic machine used by the Telephone Company, shows the call lasted fifteen minutes and some seconds.

There are some strange coincidences which confirm what is in those notes, but here are two other things I call to your attention and I am going to pass on from those notes. Bur- [fol. 1326] nett made an explanation of several parts of it. He didn't write down everything he hears, but he did remember this part of it. He picked up some evidence of bitterness against Griffith. I don't know what that is, and you don't either. We never will know, but he says with respect to a certain condition of the Georgia team, he says that is no credit to Griffith. They got two other coaches, two new coaches and then there is another part of the explanation he makes and it is this. Bryant wasn't satisfied with the information that he got, he was trying to get more, and Butts told him he didn't know, but he'd find out, and Bryant said he would call him on Sunday.

Now, you and I don't know what happened in that telephone conversation on Sunday, except that in the conversation that lasted an hour and seven minutes, and it had something to do with this particular game, and nobody will ever know what was discussed in that conversation.

We lawyers have learned to recognize and to evaluate what we call circumstantial evidence. Forget about the notes for just a moment, and let's think about the circumstantial evidence in this case.

I would like to point out to you the conduct of Burnett when this whole controversy arose, and pit it against the conduct of Wallace Butts. We might as well call a spade a spade, because after all that is the crux of this case, and I have been accused of not wanting to talk to you about it.

I saved this part of my time to discuss it with you.

[fol. 1327] In the first place, when called into a conference with a bunch of strangers, that is, the University Officials, Burnett promptly agreed that that conference could be taped and what was said be recorded. Secondly, he signed an affidavit after he was requested to do so. He promptly agreed to take a lie detector test and promptly took that test. He gave the University of Georgia Officials permission to look into his background in every respect, and a part of that was his war record, which I might say was a right enviable record, and if there was anything wrong about that record as disclosed by Burnett when he was on this stand, you can bet your life that Mr. Lockerman or Mr. Schroder would have confronted you with any error.

Now, what did Wallace Butts do? When he appeared before the same crowd on the next day, there may have been some slight difference in the personnel of those that were present, but as I recall, they were the same. I could be in error. When he appeared before those University officials, he declined to take a lie detector test. Secondly, though there is some conflict in the evidence, he declined to sign an affidavit.

Dr. Aderhold and Mr. Bolton have both testified that he declined to give them an affidavit. In addition to that, and this was after he employed counsel, he did admit—he did admit that Burnett probably heard what he said he heard, that is the language, and that is as far as they got. He resigned the next day. That, too, has some significance as far as circumstantial evidence is concerned. Later—first I should say at this particular meeting those University offi-

[fol. 1328] cials saw in those notes a reference to the fact that Bryant would call him back on Sunday. It is maybe at that time of much significance, it is now, and they tried to find out from him if Bryant did call him on Sunday afternoon following this September 13th call, and you know what his answer was. He didn't remember the call, and he didn't remember anything that might have been said. Again, that is that call that lasted an hour and seven minutes.

And then the University officials went a little bit further. They made a check of a lot of other telephone calls, and that is where this man Scoby came into the picture, and there were two remarks made by Wallace Butts at that time that evidently riled the University officials some, after getting down to the rock bottom of this thing. He first said that he had never done anything to hurt the University. I am not going to touch on that any more, but he said this, he says, "I have never associated with anyone who was a gambler."

In the meantime, they had done a little checking themselves on this fellow Scoby, and I am going to get to that in just a moment.

And then let me point out to you something else. Schroder has questioned me or the Post as to why they didn't consult with Bear Bryant or Wallace Butts before they published this article. I will tell you way. They would have gotten the same response I got when I cross-examined Coach Butts. He didn't remember going to the office of Communications International on September 13 here in Atlanta, the point [fol. 1329] from which the call was made, the first call. He didn't remember being in Atlanta on September 13th. He didn't know where he was on September 13th. That date was important.

The record in this case shows that he had fourteen telephone conversations with Frank Scoby in Chicago in the month of September, 1962. That is the month of this particular football game, and he does not remember any one of those calls, with one exception, and that in spite of the fact, Gentlemen, that two of those calls were the day before this football game, one on the day of the game and one on the Sunday morning following the game. He did remember something about the one on the day of the game, and I should think that would impress him just a little bit more.

And he said that he called Scoby for this man Sargeant who was from Florida in Birmingham—that is where the game was being played that night—and he put Sargeant on the phone and let him talk to Scoby and that is all he had to do with it.

But the strange thing to me, and it is somewhat irreconcilable, is that all of those calls, including that one on the day of the game, were charged to the University of Georgia, which in itself was not fair and it strikes me as not being entirely honest. I don't know who this fellow Sargeant is, but if a call was made for his benefit, he should have paid for it.

My time is a little bit short, and I want to discuss with you a few miscellaneous comments that I think are important in the consideration of this case.

[fol. 1330] Up until the time that Dr. Rose came into this picture there was no positive evidence that Bryant remembered anything about either of these crucial telephone calls.

Let me read you one or two excerpts from this letter that Dr. Rose wrote Dr. Aderhold. It is a right long letter; I wouldn't read it all. In the first place, he says, "I have spent a great deal of time investigating thoroughly the questions that were raised during our meeting in Birmingham and have talked with Coach Bryant at least on two occasions." You remember that he testified that one of those occasions lasted three hours.

"As best I can ascertain, this is the information I have received. Coach Bryant asked Coach Butts to let him know what the plays were, and on September 14"—he meant 13th—"he called Coach Bryant and told him. There was a question about another one of the offensive plays of the Georgia team that would seriously penalize the Alabama team and bring on additional injury to a player. Coach Bryant asked Coach Butts to check on that play, which he did, and called back on September 16th. It was then that Coach Bryant changed his defenses and invited Mr. George Gardner, head of the officials of the Southeastern Conference, to come to Tuscaloosa and interpret for him the legality of his defenses. This Mr. Gardner did on the following week."

He has corrected that Gardner had been there and gone. He didn't come the following week.

[fol. 1331] "The defenses were changed and Coach Bryant was grateful to Coach Butts for calling this to his attention." Now, listen to this: "Coach Bryant informed me that calling this to his attention may have favored the University of Alabama football team, but that he doubts it seriously." He is hedging on that.

It is a strange thing to me that in trying to analyze all of this conglomeration of evidence, Gentlemen, that Coach Bryant would testify in this case that he didn't remember anything about those telephone calls or the subject matter discussed, and certainly never told Dr. Rose some of the things that are in this letter. He says if he ever had a telephone conversation with Butts on September the 16th—that is that Sunday call again—they probably talked about some tickets. He wouldn't have talked to Butts about any tickets. Butts didn't have anything to do with any tickets. He hadn't been Coach down there since 1960, and all of us know that the ticket situation is handled by managers, business managers for a football team, because it is a big business.

In order to further back up Bear Bryant, one of the tragedies of this case is that Dr. Rose then backs up himself and says that he didn't sign the letter, didn't read it after it was written. I did get him to admit he dictated this letter, and that it was after his conferences with Coach Bryant. Maybe he didn't sign it, but it is his handiwork.

I will tell you this, you will have that letter out with you, together with a bunch of other letters that have been identified and put in the record in this case, including the signa-[fol. 1332] ture on these three documents, which he signed in your presence, and I ask you to judge for yourselves whether or not those signatures are the same. It appears to me to be that way.

Now, let me talk to you a few minutes about this fellow Scoby. He didn't appear here personally. We had to go to Chicago to take his deposition, and the depositions are not entirely satisfactory. They are not as impressive as when you see a man from the witness stand. You can't listen quite as intensely. Sometimes there is an expression on a man's face or tone in his voice that says something that his words don't say, but I have jotted down a few parts of that man's deposition which was read to you. I think it was on Thursday.

That man said that he was the, as Mr. Schroder has said, the beer distributor in Chicago and New York, and up until 1958 was the distributor for a stated brand of scotch whiskey. He said he first met Wallace Butts in 1947, and had seen him quite often since then, eight or ten times a year, and had attended various athletic contests with him, that he had met Butts in Atlanta to discuss some food product, the purpose of that conference being—now, listen to this, and this is what disturbs me, it is almost beside the point and yet it is important—he said the only reason he got interested in that food product was that he wanted to find a job, find employment for some of Butts' football players. That ought to be disturbing to a University official, too, and when we asked him about that food product, he said that he admitted it was a phony—that is the expression he used—and [fol. 1333] the Food and Drug people, Food and Drug Department, that is the Federal Government, kept it off the market.

He says he met Butts several times in New York, paid his expenses after he got there. He said that Butts asked his advice as to how to finance various things, including this small loans business, and Butts asked him to invest in the small loans business and asked him to obtain capital for all three of his businesses, small loan business, the orange grove business, and this concentrated orange juice business, and he said he didn't have enough confidence in any one of them to put any money in it and he didn't hesitate long in telling Butts about it. And all of that occurred two years ago. This is while Butts was Athletic Director at the University of Georgia.

He says he invested in the neighborhood of forty-three thousand dollars in Continental Enterprises. That is the same company that Butts and Bryant had some money tied up in and lost it. This man said he lost heavily on it himself.

I am not mentioning this subject to embarrass anybody. I am mentioning it to show you that this is more than a casual acquaintance that we are talking about. That is what they would have you believe and that is what Mr. Schroder undertook to reveal to you, but it is more than a casual acquaintance.

And he says—now, listen to this, it is on page 25 of that deposition—after Butts severed his connection as coach at Georgia, he told Butts he wanted him to take over the [for 1334] Southeastern section of the country for a new brand of Scotch whiskey and his duties would be to hire salesmen, get distributors, see that it was properly handled, supervise the personnel and be the overall representative, and that his compensation would be a drawing account and a commission, and what that would come to would depend upon his ability to produce, and he said it is still a possibility.

He said that he endorsed Butts' note at the Chicago bank and that there are still fifteen hundred dollars outstanding on that endorsement. He goes into detail as to how many times he has been with Butts, and then he gets down to this crucial part of it, and this is where he said he never bet less than five hundred dollars on a college football game, and that the maximum he would usually bet on one game would be two thousand dollars, and we asked him how many games he would bet on on one Saturday, and his answer was "About ten." You know what that means. Take it in its most favorable light, it means he could bet or did bet as much as twenty thousand dollars on one day, a total of twenty thousand dollars on ten different football games. And you wonder why we mention anything about it, after charged in this complaint in the language which I quoted to you a few minutes ago?

He said he bet as much as fifty thousand dollars in the season of 1957. Now, the reason he admitted that, he knew we had the record on him, because he had testified in that government case, and like all other gamblers, when that record was closed, there is no other way for us to find out [fol. 1335] about any other bets, so he says he didn't make any more bets, but he has admitted to you in that deposition that he makes three or four trips a year to Las Vegas and gambles out there, and he never has undertaken to hide it from his friends and it was pretty well publicized.

And listen to this. This is on page 75 of that deposition. This is something Mr. Schroder asked him, "During September, 1962, or at any time prior to September, 1962, or at any time prior to September, have you ever had any telephone conversations with Wallace Butts which related in any manner to a forthcoming game to be participated in by the University of Georgia team?" Answer: Well, I may have said, "Well, how do you think you will do?" when he was coaching. I certainly wouldn't say that I haven't asked that question." Now, that indicates one thing to me and only one thing, and it should by inference indicate something to you, and that is that while Wallace Butts didn't have anything to do with betting on any football game himself, and which I say we never charged him with, nevertheless here was another one of his friends taking advantage of the information that he had, trying to get all the information that he had so he could win money as the result of it. That is the only reasonable inference I can draw from it.

Butts said that all he ever asked Scoby was some advice about a business deal or two, but this man didn't confirm that. He said he was asked to put money into it and actually made investigations and then turned them down. No, so [fol. 1336] much for that fellow Scoby. I wish we had him down here and could tell a little more about him.

Now, in what few minutes I have left, I want to say to you that there was one shocking thing stated by Bear Bryant in this case I can't reconcile. He said that when the time came to play this football game on September the 22nd, Georgia surprised him, says that is the surprising statement in this case.

You have as an exhibit in this case the statistics of that game, and you will find, if you will look on the third page, the fact that the total yardage gained by Georgia in the first half—and you don't have to know much about football to understand this—was fourteen yards. That is the total yardage gained in the first half by running with the ball.

And then if you will turn to the last page, you will see the statistics of the game after it was over, that is, the complete game, and that the total yardage gained by Georgia during that entire game by running with the ball was thirty-seven yards. I expect it did surprise Bear Bryant to some extent. He hadn't played a game of football in years where anybody had that sort of an experience with his team. He may have been surprised, but it was for a different reason from what he said.

Even Mr. Schroder doesn't agree with Bryant on that statement. Schroder says that everybody has that play called a pro-set, and that couldn't have surprised anybody, because it is a normal formation in football, and it is one of the eight or nine formations that teams generally use that is true.

[fol. 1337] The real help that this information gave to Bryant was to know that of the eight or nine formations that were generally used by football teams, Georgia wouldn't use but two, and that gave him an opportunity to train his team by eliminating about seven other formations for which he would have to train if he hadn't had any information at all.

Now, let me talk to you just a moment about the use of this word "fix".

Judge, I have about—

The Court: You have got twenty minutes.

Mr. Cody: When you take this article out with you, you will see that the heading on it is—they have charged that this was a fix of one particular football game. You are not supposed to know of your own knowledge what the word "fix" means. The Court has the responsibility and duty to tell you what it means and I assume that it will fulfill that obligation.

I have looked it up, and the Court has, and the word "fix" means to tamper with in advance, and that is what this man has been charged with, and if he tampered with that game in advance, I say that it is corrupt and the use of the word in this article is correct. If he tampered with that game, it is corrupt.

And I want to explain to you or mention something which I think possibly the Court will cover in its charge to you. [fol. 1338] If you believe that this game was tampered with in advance, even with respect to plays, players, formations, or anything of that sort, which might be calculated to affect the result of the game, then the Defendant in this case has proved the truth of this alleged libel, and you would be directed I presume by the Court to find a verdict for the Defendant, if you believe that to be true.

Now, the burden is upon us to prove to your satisfaction that there was information divulged about that coming game which could be calculated to affect the result of that game, and we believe that the furnishing of that information did something that violated the standards of ethics and conduct set by the Southeastern Conference, and contrary to the moral conventions of the people with whom the Plaintiff was working.

Most of the evidence in this case about football is really immaterial. What is material is that certain information was given which tampered with that upcoming game. We do not have to show under the law what the motive was in divulging such information. We do not have to actually show it actually affected the game. The Court will instruct you about that. All we have to show is that if this information was calculated to affect that game, and if it was in fact given, then the plea of justification has been sustained, and I think you will understand that issue when the Court completes its instruction to you.

And the case boils down to that one fact and that alone, and it is as simple as that, and if you believe that that is what was done, then you ought to find a verdict for the [fol. 1339] Defendant in this case, and I believe the Court, as I said, will so instruct you.

If the information wasn't furnished, you ought to find a verdict for the Plaintiff.

I notice something has been said in this case, Gentlemen, about the absence of witnesses. We could have strung this case out another two weeks. It has been trying to Schroder and Lockerman and me and my associates, just as it has been trying to you and this court. There has got to be an end somewhere to the trial of any case. There is always somebody you could bring into court as a witness that you don't bring, but you just go on and on. I can think of some witnesses that they might have had on this question of character. I know what I would do if somebody attacked my character. I would get my preacher and my friends and my business associates and I would bring them into court and I would ask them to testify in my behalf.

This question of the absence of witnesses is an old lawyers' trick. I remember one statement that the dean of the Atlanta Bar made one time. I am referring to Mr. Reuben Arnold, who died a few years ago. He practiced law in this town sixty-seven years, and he really was the dean of lawyers. I think everybody concedes that. He was trying to give some advice to a young lawyer one time about how to argue a case to a jury, and this young lawyer asked him a few questions about it. He said, "Well, when you go to argue a case, if the law is against you, you talk about the facts. If the facts are against you, you talk about the law." Ed, he said, "if the law and facts are against [fol. 1340] you, you talk about the lawyer on the other side."

That is an old trick of we lawyers. We criticize the other fellow sometimes unconsciously, and sometimes we go too far.

Two weeks is long enough to try any case, and if a lawyer undertakes to cut short a trial after covering the territory that he is required to cover, then he ought to be praised for it and not condemned. I brought enough witnesses into this court to try to give you a clear picture of what this case was all about. You had Dr. Aderhold, Mr. Bolton and Mr. Harold Heckman. You had Bill Bradshaw and you had Mills and you had Mr. Driftmier, Head of the Agriculture Department at Georgia. You had Griffith and Pearce and Inman, those three coaches. Their story covered a wide range and not always the same subject.

Here is what they thought, and I am going to wind up my discussion with you on this point. They thought that something was done which was wrong. They thought something was done which hurt the University, and they had the courage to come into court and to state to you just what they did think and just what they did know. It was not all a matter of opinion.

I hope that in your consideration of this case you will not put your stamp of approval on something which those men say happened, not me—I am just arguing the case—not put your stamp of approval on something which they thought was wrong and which they thought affected the [fol. 1341] University of Georgia and which they thought affected that particular game.

I want to take this opportunity to say what I did in my discussion with you Friday. I thank you for the patience which you have shown in this case. I thank you for the service which you have rendered. The trial of a case before the jury is the greatest asset that we lawyers have. It is the most important function of our system of jurisprudence, and I am sure that everyone connected with this court appreciates the service that you have rendered. And with that statement I want to leave this case in your good hands. I want you to do what you think conforms to the law as the court gives it to you in its charge, without favor or affection or sympathy toward either party.

Thank you.

* * * * * * *

After Recess

The Court: Members of the Jury, I don't know how long the charge will be. It might be taken in two parts. If during the charge—I have attempted to correlate the charges, but during the charge, if you should desire to refresh yourselves, just hold up your hand, and we will have an intermission.

CHARGE OF THE COURT TO THE JURY

Members of the jury, this is a civil case, and the plaintiff, as you already know, is Wallace Butts, and the defendant [fol. 1342] is Curtis Publishing Company.

The plaintiff has filed a complaint setting out what he contends the facts in the case to be, and then asks for a judgment.

The defendant came into Court at the proper time and filed what is called an answer to that complaint in which it denies the material allegations in the plaintiff's petition, and contends that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover anything.

Now, the pleadings in the case are not evidence, except insofar as admissions are made in them. They are simply the contentions of the respective parties and make up the issues of fact which you are to pass upon. You may read the pleadings and refer to them as often as you wish in order that you may understand more clearly the contentions of the parties and the issues in the case. The pleadings will be out with you during your deliberations.

The Court is responsible to the jury for the law applicable to the case, and it is the jury's duty to accept the law given in charge by the Court and to apply that law to the facts in the case. You are the sole judges of the facts, the weight of the evidence, and the credibility of the witnesses.

The Court will not express any opinion about the facts. Any such expression or intimation would not be binding on you, because you should form your own opinion and reach your own conclusion about the facts.

[fol. 1343] I want to leave absolutely to the judgment of this jury the issue that is before you as to what this evidence shows or fails to show. Your authority, however, is not to be exercised arbitrarily. It must be exercised with sincere judgment, sound discretion, and in accordance with the rules of law which I give you.

Now, members of the jury, the plaintiff, Wallace Butts, brings this suit against the defendant, Curtis Publishing Company, for ten million dollars because of an alleged libelous publication by the defendant. In his petition the plaintiff alleges that he has been engaged in the football coaching profession for approximately 35 years, in high school and secondary schools, and from 1939 until 1961 as head coach at the University of Georgia, at which time he became Athletic Director at the University.

The plaintiff further alleges that he has enjoyed a national reputation as a successful and respected member of the coaching profession, and has been accorded many honors such as president of the Football Coaches Association, and has, by invitation, coached the College All-Stars, the Blue-Gray All-Star game, and the North-South All-Star game.

The plaintiff alleges that during his career he has been widely sought as a speaker and lecturer on various aspects of football, and has lectured at clinics, banquets, and other such public gatherings throughout the United States; that, in addition, the plaintiff has been approached and offered employment as head football coach by several professional and college football teams in the country, due entirely to [fol. 1344] his reputation as a successful member and leader in his profession.

The plaintiff further alleges that the defendant, Curtis Publishing Company, is engaged in the publication of magazines and periodicals, the best known and the most valuable asset of such periodicals and magazines being the Saturday Evening Post, which has a vast and impressive circulation.

The plaintiff contends that during the last several years the advertising revenues of the Saturday Evening Post have substantially declined, and that it now shows staggering deficits; that because of these deficits, and in an effort to bolster the sagging circulation and increase advertising revenues, the defendant did publish, through the Saturday Evening Post, willfully, maliciously and falsely, a libelous article concerning the plaintiff, in the issue of the Post of March 23, 1963, said article being entitled "The Story of a College Football Fix", with the sub-title, "How Wally Butts and Bear Bryant Rigged a Game Last Fall."

The plaintiff alleges that prior to the actual circulation of this article on or about March 18, 1963, the plaintiff, through his attorney, notified the defendant by telegram and a letter that the contents of the article were false and advised that the article not be published. A copy of the telegram and letter are attached to the pleadings and will be out with you during your deliberations.

The plaintiff further alleges that on March 18, 1963, pursuant to Georgia law, he requested the defendant to retract [fol. 1345] and correct the defamatory statements concerning the plaintiff in this article, which the defendant refused to do, and refused to reply to this request of the plaintiff. A copy of this telegram is attached to the pleadings and marked Exhibit C, and will be out with you during your deliberations.

The plaintiff contends that the publication of this article is libelous and has caused him extreme mortification and embarrassment in that the article is a direct insult and attack on his honor, character and integrity as a football coach, and contends that his career as a member of the football coaching profession has been ruined and destroyed by this article.

The plaintiff further contends that the statements and insinuations contained in the said article have damaged plaintiff as aforesaid in the following particulars:

(a) Plaintiff is charged in large block letters in the very title and sub-title of the article with being a "rigger and fixer";

(b) In an italicized editorial, plaintiff is charged with being a participant in the greatest and most shocking sports scandal since that of the Chicago White Sox in the 1919 World Series. In the same editorial the plaintiff is relegated to a status of worse than that of "disreputable gamblers," and corrupt person who, employed to "educate and guide young men", betrays or sells out his pupils;

[fol. 1346] (c) Plaintiff is charged with rigging and fixing the Alabama-Georgia football game with Coach Bryant as a gambling device in order to restore his financial resources;

(d) Plaintiff is charged with such a degree of corruptness and foulness that his betrayed players, as a result of plaintiff's alleged deceptions, fixing and rigging, were forced in the fame like "rats in a maze" and "took a frightful physical beating"; and,

(e) Defendant, in a final act of malice, contempt and editorial irresponsibility, closes its article with its definition of plaintiff as a fixer as being one who never leaves open a "chance" by stating "when a fixer works against you, that is the way he likes it."

Now, I have been reading the contentions as set out by the plaintiff in its petition.

The plaintiff brings this action and seeks to recover five million dollars in general damages, and sues for five million dollars in the nature of punitive damages to deter the defendant from repeating this trespass on his honor, reputation and integrity.

The defendant came into Court at the proper time and filed its pleadings in answer to the plaintiff's complaint. The defendant denies, in its first defense; certain insinuations and innuendoes which plaintiff alleges in his complaint resulted from publication of the article, but pleads that the statements in the article complained of, which are of and concern the plaintiff, are true. By this plea the defendant pleads justification.

[fol. 1347] Under the Georgia law, when a defendant files a plea of justification, such as was filed in this case, the defendant admits the publication of the statements contained in the article, and the whole case then proceeds upon the theory that it is admitted by the defendant that the publication is true, and the defendant takes the position that it was justified in publishing these statements.

Members of the jury, the defendant, Curtis Publishing Company, has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the statements contained in this article are true, that is to say, that the defendant, Curtis Publishing Company, assumes the burden of proving that the statements contained in the article published in the Saturday Evening Post in its March 23, 1963 issue, which article was entitled "The Story of a College Football Fix" are true.

Now, by a preponderance of the evidence is meant that greater weight of the evidence upon the issues involved, which, while not enough wholly to free the mind from a reasonable doubt, is yet sufficient to incline a fair and impartial mind to one side of the issue rather than to the other.

Now, members of the jury, there are, generally speaking, two types of evidence from which a jury may properly find the truth as to the facts in the case. One is direct evidence, such as the testimony of an eyewitness. The other is indirect or circumstantial evidence, the proof of a chain of circumstances pointing to the existence or non-existence of certain facts.

[fol. 1348] As a general rule, the law makes no distinction between direct and circumstantial evidence, but simply requires that the jury find the facts in accordance with the preponderance of all the evidence in the case, both direct and circumstantial.

The article in its entirety will be out with you in the jury room for your consideration.

I charge you that under Georgia law, a written publication which affects one injuriously in his trade or calling, such as the plaintiff Butts' coaching profession in this case under consideration, and contains imputations against his honesty and integrity, and which would, as its natural and probable consequence, occasion pecuniary loss, constitutes a cause of action and is libelous per se, and the right follows to such damages as must be presumed to proximately and necessarily result from such a publication. I charge you that Paul "Bear" Bryant, the Alabama coach and any aspersions upon him are not any issue in this case, and you would eliminate from your consideration any alleged acts on his part. Our concern is only with the plaintiff, Wallace Butts, and references to Bryant in the article may be considered only insofar as they are related to Wallace Butts. Any libel committed against Bryant, if Bryant was libeled, is not a matter for consideration here.

As stated above, this is an action brought by the plaintiff against the defendant for a libel alleged to have been committed by the defendant against the plaintiff.

[fol. 1349] A libel is a false and malicious defamation of another, expressed in print or writing, or pictures or signs tending to injure the reputation of an individual, and exposing him to public hatred, contempt or ridicule.

However, as I have told you previously, the defendant in its plea of justification, contends that the statements in the article are true. I charge you that truth is a complete defense in a civil action for libel. A libel, members of the jury, is a false defamation of another, and therefore, if what is printed is true, then there is no libel.

The truth of the charge may always be proved in justification of the libel. Truth in the law of libel means substantial truth. It is not necessary that every detail of the article be proven to be accurate, but it is necessary that the truth be substantially portrayed in those parts of the article which libel the plaintiff.

To establish the defense of truth the defendant must prove what is known in the law as the "sting of the libel". The sting of the libel in this case is the charge that the plaintiff rigged and fixed the 1962 Georgia-Alabama game by giving Coach Bryant information which was calculated to or could have affected the outcome of the game. By this I mean, could have caused one team to win or lose, or could have increased the number of points by which the game was won.

If you find that the plaintiff did give Coach Bryant information which was calculated to or could have affected [fol. 1350] the outcome of the game by causing one team to win or lose, or by increasing the number of points by which the game was won, then you must find that the defense of truth has been established. In that event, you must, of course, return a verdict for the defendant.

The article complained of contains the words "corrupt", "fixed", "rigged", and "sell out". The word "corrupt" is defined in part to mean depraved, debased, or perverted. The word "fixed" is defined in part as meaning to arrange, carry out or manipulate by deceptive or fraudulent means, to fool or to hoax one. The word "sell out" means in part to betray for compensation the cause or associates with whom one is identified. You should keep these definitions in mind during your deliberations.

So the issue, members of the jury, for you to determine first in this case is whether or not the defendant has proved to you that the article complained of in the Saturday Evening Post is true. If the defendant, Curtis Publishing Company, has proved to you by a preponderance of the evidence that the statements contained in the article of March 23, 1963, entitled "The Story of a College Football Fix" are true, then there is no libel, and the defendant would be entitled to a verdict.

[fol. 1351] If, on the other hand, the defendant has failed to make out his plea, that is, has failed to prove to you by a preponderance of the evidence that the defamatory statements contained in the article are true, then the plaintiff would be entitled to such damages as you feel proximately and necessarily resulted from the publication. The extent of those damages depends upon the circumstances of the case, such as the malice of the defendant, the offensive character of the libel, the pain caused to the injured party, the number of publications, and the general circumstances of the libel.

Regarding the defendant's plea of justification, which is a plea that the statements are true, unless this plea of the defendant is proved to the satisfaction of you jurors, such a plea cannot and will not defeat the action; but there may be evidence under which, though insufficient to establish it, may disclose facts and circumstances in mitigation, and this may be considered by you, as jurors, to reduce in any degree that you may deem proper the amount of damages which you otherwise would have found.

Thus, a plea of justification may, according to the evidence introduced under it, have one of three effects in this action.

(1) The plea being established, the action is simply defeated;

(2) Failure to establish it, connected with failure to show any reasonable or proper cause for filing the plea of justification, may aggravate the damages; or,

[fol. 1352] (3) The partial or imperfect establishment of it or the production of evidence strongly tending to establish it may mitigate the damages.

Stated in another way, if the defendant proved the truth of the defamatory allegations, that is a complete defense, and this would be sufficient to defeat the plaintiff's claim, and you should return a verdict for the defendant. This is so because the truth is always a defense in a civil action for libel.

If at this point in your deliberations you determine that the defendant has established that the statements contained in the article are true, then you would end your deliberations here and return a verdict for the defendant, Curtis Publishing Company. If, on the other hand, you determine that the defendant has failed to prove or has only partially or imperfectly established the truth, then the plaintiff is entitled to damages, and this brings us to the question of damages and how they are to be evaluated and considered.

The plaintiff in this case sues for general and also for punitive damages. The law of Georgia recognizes both of these types of damages in a libel suit. I shall treat these separately since they are governed by different principles, and, likewise, you are to consider and pass upon them separately.

General damages are such as the law presumes to flow from any tortuous act, and may be recovered without proof of any amount. A tort or tortuous act is the unlawful violation of a private legal right, other than a mere breach [fol. 1353] of contract, express or implied.

In some torts the entire jury is to the peace, happiness and feelings of the plaintiff. In such cases no measure of damages can be prescribed except the enlightened consciences of impartial jurors. The worldly circumstances of the parties, the amount of bad faith in the transaction, and all the attendant facts should be weighed.

Under the law of Georgia, if the publication was libelous per se, and I charge you that this article was libelous per se, and the law will presume that anyone so libeled must have suffered damage. In such case, no measure of damages can be prescribed, except through the enlightened consciences of impartial jurors.

I charge you that the words "libelous per se" in this case mean words of such character that a presumption of the law arises therefrom that a party has been degraded in his business or professional reputation.

As the publication was libelous per se, I charge you that malice is to be inferred. However, the existence of malice may be rebutted by proof of the defendant which, in all cases, shall go in mitigation of damages.

At this point, I think it is well that I should explain to you the meaning of malice under the law of defamation. Malice, in the law of defamation, may be used in two senses. First, in a special or technical sense to denote absence [fol. 1354] of lawful excuse or to indicate absence of privileged occasion. Such malice is known as implied malice or malice in law. There is no imputation of ill will to injure with implied malice. Secondly, malice involving intent of mind and heart or ill will against a person is classified as express malice or malice in fact.

I charge you that general damages are intended to compensate a party who has been libeled for the actual damages he has suffered, to make him whole, as the cases often say.

I charge you that the law presumes that the plaintiff has a good reputation, and when a defamatory statement is made against him, the law presumes he has sustained injury to that reputation and to his feelings. The law, recognizing the difficulty of proving damages, does not require a defamed person affirmatively to prove the exact amount of damages sustained by him. These are to be determined by you members of the jury in the light of all the facts and circumstances of the case,

The damages awarded must be based upon the injury to his reputation and in his occupation in the minds of those who know him or know about him. A defamed person is also entitled to be compensated for the mental anguish, pain, mortification, and humiliation he has experienced as a result of the publication.

Obviously, there is no yardstick by which you can determine these items with exactitude. In deciding this question of damages, as in all others, you must use your common [fol. 1355] sense and good judgment in determining what sum will fully compensate the plaintiff for the damages suffered. The amount awarded must bear relationship to the injury which you find he has sustained as a result of the article. You take into account a man's general reputation, his social and business or professional standing in the community, how well-known he is, the nature of the defamatory charge and its tendency to injure such a man in the public estimation of his character, and the extent of its distribution.

When I use the phrase "a man's reputation and standing in the community", it is not limited to his reputation in the immediate area of his residence. Rather, it is his reputation in the community within which he is known. The community may be said to be co-existive with the spread and extent of his reputation.

Wallace Butts is a widely-known football personality. It is conceded that this article was distributed widely in this country and with a substantial circulation. The plaintiff is entitled to rely upon his presumption of good reputation.

I charge you that a person of bad reputation is not entitled to the same damages as a person of good or excellent reputation.

I charge you that a substantial verdict for general damages must be founded upon a finding of substantial injury. If you find that there has been no substantial injury, then the damages may be normal.

[fol. 1356] We now come to the question of punitive damages. Punitive or exemplary damages are of an entirely different nature from general or actual damages. Before you would be authorized to find punitive damages under the Georgia law, you must first determine that the plaintiff, Wallace Butts, is entitled to recover general damages. However, if you decide to award punitive damages, the sum you award need have no relationship to any amount that you may award for general damages. It may be greater or it may be less. That is a matter which rests in your sole discretion. The law of Georgia provides that in every tort there may be aggravating circumstances, either in the act or the intention, and in the event the jury may give additional damages to deter the wrong-doer from repeating the trespass.

Where it is established that the defendant was inspired by actual malice in the publication of the defamatory matter, the jury, in its discretion, may, but is not required, to award punitive damages. As previously stated to you, actual malice encompasses the notion of ill will, spite, hatred and an intent to injure one. Malice also denotes a wanton or reckless indifference or culpable negligence with regard to the rights of others. The purpose of punitive damages is to deter the defendant from a repetition of the offense and is a warning to others not to commit a like offense. It is intended to protect the community and has an expression of ethical indignation, although the plaintiff receives the award. The plaintiff charges that the column was written and published both with actual malice and in utter and wanton disregard of his rights.

[fol. 1357] The burden of proof to establish the facts of actual malice is upon the plaintiff, Wallace Butts, and this burden he must bear by a fair preponderance of the evidence. I have previously defined to you what constitutes a preponderance of evidence.

Actual malice involves the state of one's mind, and your determination must be made from all the surrounding facts and circumstances.

Further actual malice or wanton and reckless indifference has been established must be determined from all of the evidence in the case.

Here you may consider the libel itself, the very nature of the defamatory matter in conjunction with all the other evidence and the circumstances under which the article was written and published.

A publication may be so extravagant in its denunciation and so vituperative in its character as to justify an inference of malice.

Evidence has been offered during the trial to the effect that the plaintiff, prior to the time that the article was published, requested the defendant not to publish the article, stating that it was not true, and after the article was published plaintiff demanded a retraction.

I charge you that under Section 105-720 of the Code of Georgia of 1933, it is relevant in an action for libel such as this for the plaintiff to prove that the plaintiff requested a retraction, proof that the plaintiff did demand a retraction but that the defendant failed to retract the article [fol. 1358] may be considered by you on the question of punitive damages, if you find that the defendant has not established its plea of justification.

You may consider the reliability, the nature of the sources of the defendant's information, its acceptance or rejection of the sources, and its care in checking upon assertions.

In considering the question of malice you may also take into account the plea of justification filed by the defendant, and whether this plea of justification was filed in good faith, and under an honest expectation of being able to establish the alleged justification. You should only consider this plea of justification on the matter of damage if you find the defendant has not established it, and further find it was not filed in good faith by the defendant with any honest expectation of establishing it.

This brings the Court to another matter on the subject of malice when during the trial certain hearsay matter was admitted into evidence. Usually, of course, such hearsay matter is not admissible, but was received in this instance as evidence which might show mitigating circumstances or lack of malice.

I charge you that a defendant may resist or minimize a claim for punitive damages by showing mitigating circumstances, including the sources of its information and the grounds for its belief. A defendant may show that it acted without malice and that there was neither actual malice nor any circumstances from which malice may be inferred. In a word, a defendant is permitted to show that, in publishing [fol. 1359] this article, it in good faith relied upon certain matters which had come to its attention. And if the jury accepts this as credible, this would go in mitigation of punitive damages.

As you may recall, evidence was introduced on the trial as to the certain tests taken by a polygraph, sometimes referred to as a lie detector. Ordinarily, of course, this evidence would not be admissible in a court of law, but you may consider it only in the light of what credence or credibility the defendant used such test in determining malice, if any, on the part of the defendant.

I charge you that there were various other conversations with third persons and testimony or documents of third persons which merely reported what other persons had said or written. Of course, all of this evidence was hearsay, and there was no opportunity by the opposite party to examine such persons, some of whom were beyond the jurisdiction of the Court.

I charge you that you should dismiss from your minds completely any reference to any investigation by the Attorneys General of Georgia or Alabama, or anyone other than the parties of the charges contained in the article complained of. Neither the fact of any investigations nor the results thereof have any bearing whatsoever on the trial of this case. In arriving at your verdict you must restrict yourselves solely to a consideration of the evidence legally admitted during this trial, and the law given you in charge now by the Court.

[fol. 1360] The hearsay evidence was admitted solely for the single purpose for which it was offered by the parties, to show the absence or presence of malice as that word has been defined to you. It is not received to establish the truth of any of the statements contained in the publication, and it is in no respect to be considered for such purposes. It is for you to say whether or not such information obtained was of such nature as to justify a reasonable mind in believing and relying on them.

In deciding whether or not Curtis Publishing Company was justified in relying upon information by which it seeks to repel a charge of actual malice, you may take into account the journalistic experience of Curtis Publishing Company and its general experience.

I charge you further that a corporation acts through its agents or employees, and is liable for their acts within the scope of their employment.

It is necessary, members of the jury, that I charge you on the law of damages, but the fact that I charge you on the law of damages carries no intimation, one way or the other, that you are required to award damages for the plaintiff against the defendant.

The Court has not reviewed the evidence in detail. I have restricted myself in this charge to but a few references to the evidence. Counsel in their summations have exhaustively reviewed the evidence with respect to the various issues in the case. There has been a sharp conflict in the testimony in this case, and it is your duty to determine the truth.

[fol. 1361] Members of the jury, I charge you that the term "impeachment" is defined legally to mean efforts which tend primarily to show that the witness is narrating a falsehood or that he is not worthy of belief. The terms "impeachment" and "attack on the credibility of a witness by way of impeachment" are synonymous and means that efforts are being exerted to prove that a witness who has been examined is unworthy of credit. In other words, it calls in question the veracity of a witness.

I charge you that a witness may be discredited or impeached by contradictory evidence or by evidence that at other times the witness has made statements which are inconsistent with the witness' present testimony.

I charge you further that a witness may be impeached by evidence as to his general bad character.

If you believe that any witness has been impeached and thus discredited, it is your exclusive province to give the testimony of that witness such credibility, if any, as you may think it deserves. If a witness is shown knowingly to have testified falsely concerning any material matter, you have a right to distrust such witness' testimony in other particulars. And you may reject all of the testimony of that witness or give it such credibility as you may think it deserves.

You are made by law the sole and exclusive judges to the credibility of witnesses. In passing upon their credibility the jury may consider all the facts and circumstances of the case, the witnesses' manner of testifying; their intel- [fol. 1362] gence; their interest or want of interest in the case; their bias or prejudice, if any exists; their means and opportunity of knowing the facts to which they testify; and the probability or improbability of the testimony to which they testify; and also their personal credibility insofar as the same may legitimately appear upon the trial of the case. The manner, conduct and appearance of witnesses on the stand are legitimate matters for consideration by the jury.

During the course of the trial I have passed upon the admissibility of evidence and various motions made by counsel. I wish to emphasize that you are to draw no inference from the Court's ruling with respect to the admission or reject of evidence or the sustaining or overruling of any motion. Where the Court sustains an objection excluding evidence, you are not to assume that the excluded evidence would have been unfavorable to the party who objected, and so, too, you are to draw no inferences that had it been admitted it would have been favorable to the party who offered it. These rulings related solely to matters of law.

If perchance during the trial I have made reference to testimony or in this charge have made reference to any of the testimony that does not accord with your recollection, you must reject that completely. I have no right to invade any function that you have in this case, and as you well know, your function is to decide the facts. Of course, I have made every endeavor to state the facts as I understood them, but disregard my statements completely if they do not accord with your own view.

[fol. 1363] From time to time I have occasion to ask questions of some witnesses. The judge has a right and indeed a duty to see that the facts are clearly presented, and the purpose of the Court's questions was to clarify certain matters in the case. You are not to draw any conclusions that by reasons of my questioning the witnesses I have any point of view as to the witnesses' credibility or hold any view as to how you should decide the facts in this case. And, as I have told you before, the determination of the facts in the case are to be made by you members of the jury. You are the supreme judges of the facts and none may invade that province.

Under your oaths you are sworn to try this case in accordance with the law in evidence. You should not be actuated by motives of sympathy or prejudice. Your duty is to try the issues fairly and impartially and without fear or favor. You came into the jury box without any preconceived view, idea, or opinion, concerning the right or wrong of either of the parties, and what you know about the issues should have been learned only from the witnesses on the stand and the exhibits in this case, and your final determination of the facts must be based upon that evidence. Remember, you are not responsible for the consequences of your verdict, but you are responsible for its truth.

Now, for your convenience the Clerk has prepared a form of verdict, and I would suggest this, that when you retire to consider your verdict, you elect one of your members as Foreman. Of course, the manner in which you conduct your deliberations is entirely up to you, and I make this suggestion, that you elect one of your members [fol. 1364] as Foreman so that the Foreman may preside over the meeting so that you may conduct an orderly discussion and arrive at a unanimous verdict.

The form of verdict which has been prepared has four questions or issues which you are to determine. The first question concerns the issue of liability, and this, members of the jury, is the first question or issue which you have to decide. As I have previously stated to you, if you find that the defendant has proved to you its plea of justification in accordance with the rules of law heretofore stated to you by the Court, then it would be your duty to return a verdict for the defendant as to liability. If, on the other hand, the defendant has not carried its burden by proving its plea of justification, then it will be your duty to return a verdict for the plaintiff.

So, on this first question or issue which you are to determine, the form of verdict which has been prepared for you provides as follows: "We, the jury, find in favor of blank". And you will fill in this blank either "Wallace Butts" or "Curtis Publishing Company".

If your answer to the first question on the issue of liability is in favor of Curtis Publishing Company, then you need not consider Questions 2, 3, or 4.

Second, if your answer to Question No. 1 is "Wallace Butts", then you would go further and say "We assess general damages for Wallace Butts in the sum of blank dollars."

[fol. 1365] Third, if your answer to Question No. 1 is "Wallace Butts", and you have found in Question No. 2 an amount, then you would be entitled to go further and say "We find that Wallace Butts is, or is not, entitled to recover punitive damages from Curtis Publishing Company."

And fourth, if your answer to Question No. 1 is in favor of Wallace Butts, and your answer to Question No. 2 is a certain amount, and your answer to Question No. 3 is that he, Coach Butts, is entitled to recover punitive damages, then your verdict would go further and say, "We assess punitive damages in the sum of blank dollars."

I charge you that you cannot award punitive damages without assessing general damages in some amount.

After you have arrived at a verdict, the Foreman should sign that verdict form and date it.

After you have retired to consider your verdict, if there are any matters upon which you desire further instruction or any clarification of instructions, do not hesitate to let the Marshal know of your request in that respect, and you will be brought back into the courtroom for that purpose. You will retire to the jury room to await further instructions.

The Court: All right, sir. Any exceptions on behalf of the Defendant to the charge?

[fol. 1366]

DEFENDANT'S EXCEPTIONS TO THE COURT'S CHARGE TO THE JURY

Mr. Cody: May it please the Court, the first one is with reference to the Court's charge about the article being libelous per se. We want to protest the record. We have discussed it at pre-trial, and we have called the Court's attention to the Weatherford case, it being our position that the Plaintiff in this case, at the time of this publication, was not in that profession, and, secondly—

The Court: I charged that—I charged that it was libelous per se on the basis of the Winestrof—Dun & Company versus Winestrof.

Mr. Cody: I think I understand the Court's view about it.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Cody: At one point in the charge you stated to the jury that they take their evidence from the witness stand. Technically, I think that is—

The Court: I said "witness stand and exhibits", I believe.

Mr. Cody: And exhibits, and you eliminated the word "deposition".

The Court: I believe during the trial of the case I in[fol. 1367] structed them in regard to the depositions, they would be considered as if the witness had been here.

Mr. Cody: If so, that would cover it.

The Court: I believe that is true. I believe I did it on two different occasions.

Mr. Cody: I wouldn't want any instruction to encompass a disregard of depositions, because the defendant's case, in part, is by evidence produced by depositions.

The Court: I believe I charged the jury on depositions twice. I instructed them twice when depositions were read.

Mr. Cody: I see.

The Court: All right, sir, any further exceptions?

Mr. Cody: And then with reference to requests which have heretofore been made to the Court in writing, we take exception to the absence of the charge to include request No. 3, which deals with what credit should be given to an impeached witness, and we take the position that his testimony shall be disregarded entirely if he has been successfully impeached.

[fol. 1368] The Court: If the jury so sees fit.

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir; unless corroborated by circumstances or other unimpeached evidence.

The Court: I believe I gave them that, Mr. Cody.

Mr. Cody: I see. And then there are one or two Code sections concerning which written request was made. I call attention to the defendant's request No. 5 which has to do with a person testifying in his own behalf is not entitled to a finding in his favor, if that version of the testimony most unfavorable to him shows that the verdict should be against him.

And request No. 6, whenever a party presents himself as a witness and the evidence is contradictory or equivocal, his testimony must be construed most strongly against him.

The Court: Well, No. 5, I didn't think it was applicable to this case, and No. 6, I believe I gave in different wording. I don't always follow the words that the attorneys set up in the pleading—set up in the request to charge.

Mr. Cody: I have some question, Your Honor, about that reference in the charge to the worldly circumstances [fol. 1369] of the parties. We think that that should be considered only under Code section 105-2003.

The Court: What do you mean? You don't think that relevant to the worldly circumstances of the party?

Mr. Cody: Well, not—does Your Honor have Section 105-2003?

The Court: No, sir; but I am familiar with that. The reason I gave that, there were some cases in Georgia to the effect, or I read some cases to the effect that the worldly circumstances and the wealth of the parties should be taken into consideration, and that was the reason, that a party—a hundred dollars punitive damages against one party would be more severe than maybe ten thousand dollars against another party—

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

The Court: —because it is according to the wealth and worldly circumstances. We are talking about punitive damages—

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

The Court: —and that was the reason I gave it.

[fol. 1370] Mr. Cody: I got the impression it was not limited to punitive damages, it had only—but I was afraid that the language that the Court used might be broad enough to encompass other types of damages.

The Court: I meant it to apply only to punitive damages, and I think it was under the punitive damages section which I charged. Do you remember what I made it in connection with, Mr. Cody?

Mr. Cody: No, sir; I don't.

The Court: Do the attorneys for the plaintiff—it was my recollection I was discussing punitive damages. Do you know where it is?

Mr. Cody: Your Honor, I withdraw our exception to that last.

The Court: That disturbs me. I think I meant it as punitive. If I didn't—

Mr. Cody: I will withdraw our exception.

The Court: You withdraw your exception? I meant to refer to it, and I can't find it. All right, sir, any other exceptions?

[fol. 1371] Mr. Cody: No, sir.

Let the jury be brought in.

(Whereupon the jury returned to the courtroom at 10:31 a. m.)

The Court: Mr. Foreman, have you arrived at a verdict, sir?

The Foreman: We have, Your Honor.

The Court: Present the verdict to the Marshal.

Let the Clerk publish the verdict.

VERDICT

The Clerk: Will you stand, please.

"Wallace Butts versus Curtis Publishing Company; verdict: (1) We, the jury, find in favor of Wallace Butts.

"(2) We assess general damages for Wallace Butts in the sum of sixty thousand dollars.

"(3) We find that Wallace Butts is entitled to recover punitive damages from Curtis Publishing Company.

"(4) We assess punitive damages in the sum of three million dollars.

EXCERPTS FROM TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS ON DECEMBER 10, 1963, IN REGARD TO DEFENDANT'S MOTIONS FOR NEW TRIAL AND JUDGMENT NOTWITHSTANDING THE VERDICT

The Court: And if that be true, and I am looking at it from a practical standpoint, I think you have to, without committing the court in any way—I am just throwing this out, why wouldn't the proper thing—you have alleged to twenty-five or thirty different errors. If the court granted a motion for a new trial because it was excessive, the question of whether the court committed error in those thirty-five or thirty-seven different ways as to the charge, as to the admission of argument, if it was improper, why wouldn't it be proper to let it all go to the Court of Appeals at one time, and then at that time if they say it has got to be retried, the verdict is excessive, perhaps they might pass on these thirty-five or thirty-seven different alleged errors, and if it was error, then on a new trial the court could correct those errors.

Mr. Cody: Well, if Your Honor thinks that errors have not been committed such as those—

The Court: I am not saying they have or have not. You are alleging them.

Mr. Cody: That's right.

The Court: If they have been committed they should be corrected.

A two-weeks-and-three-day trial is cumbersome and expensive for all the parties, for the court as well and for the Government.

[fol. 1373] Mr. Cody: Well, I think Your Honor is losing sight of the fact of many a case has been tried without any error whatsoever and yet an excessive verdict resulted, nobody knows why, and yet it is the duty and responsibility of that court to correct it.

The Court: All right, sir. Suppose it is excessive; let's assume that it is excessive—

Mr. Cody: Yes, sir.

The Court: —and the court grants a new trial, and then we try it again, and the court charges the jury as it did before, and the argument of counsel comes in as it was before, or substantially so, then we still haven't decided whether his argument is improper or the court's charge is improper. That is what I am looking at, looking at it from a practical standpoint, with the idea of expediting it.

• • • • • • •

The Court: All right, sir. Suppose the court should determine that probably a certain portion of the argument was improper, and therefore the verdict was excessive, and grant you a new trial on that ground, and then it was tried again, and the same charge was given to the jury, and then the verdict was, maybe, not quite as excessive, but you came back and made a motion for new trial after a substantial verdict was rendered, the court, on the [fol. 1374] question of the court improperly charging the jury, we would have to go back again.

• • • • • • •

Mr. Lockerman: The testimony that they are now complaining about as having not been admitted was, as they stated, ruled out on the ground it was hearsay. They, at no time, made any statement to the court as to the purpose for which the testimony was being offered or what it was expected to prove. Your Honor's ruling was eminently correct as the matter stood when that testimony was sought to be put in.

Now, if they had taken the position then that they are taking now, and if they had explained to Your Honor the purpose for which it was being offered, then undoubtedly Your Honor's ruling would have been possibly different, or could have been, anyway.

I don't think we need to deal with that very long, because in the case of Maryland Casualty Company v. Simmons, 2 F. 2d, 29, which is the Fifth Circuit Court decision from this court, from Georgia—I think it is this court—anyway, it is from the State of Georgia, in which certiorari was denied by the Supreme Court of the United States in 45 S. Ct. 226, 255 U. S. 634. The Fifth Circuit held as follows:

"Exclusion of evidence not ground for reversal in absence of showing as to its nature or statement of what it intended to prove."

[fol. 1375] Now, certainly in this case there was introduced into evidence the record of the telephone company which showed that a telephone call was made at the date and hour claimed and the telephone number to which it had been, you know, made, so there was proof to substantiate Burnett that a telephone call was made.

Now, they made no point, as I said, about the reason for trying to claim that they should be permitted to show what the telephone operator said over in Alabama. Mr. Cody did recognize that it was hearsay, and, as a matter of fact, before Your Honor ruled on the matter, on the objection, Mr. Cody himself—and the record shows he stated to the witness, "No, don't go into that." He recognized as the matter stood then it was hearsay, and there was no—

The Court: Yes, sir; I am frank to say, had I known what was developing, I think the evidence could have been admitted or should have been admitted.

January 15, 1963

If I—or you—had time, I'd like to congratulate each of you personally. In lieu of this, let me say in this broadcast that you are putting out one hell of a fine magazine. The articles are timely, full of significance and exclusivity. The cover, the layout, type and other visual aspects have improved tremendously. The cartoons are the best being published. The new fiction program bids fair to become one of the great breakthroughs in magazine publishing.

Your work has not gone unnoticed. We have many press clips commenting on the new vitality in the Post. Joe Culligan has been extremely flattering in his comments, as have the other directors of the Curtis Publishing Company. The final yardstick: we have about six lawsuits pending, meaning that we are hitting them where it hurts, with solid, meaningful journalism.

I think you should be very proud of the publication you're turning out.

MEMORANDUM

TO: SEC Institutions

SUBJECT: Unnecessary Roughness in College Football

I wish to direct your attention to a memorandum that was sent to all Head Football Coaches by William D. Murray, President of the American Football Coaches Association, and H. O. (Fritz) Crisler, Chairman, NCAA Football Rules Committee (copy enclosed).

At a joint meeting of the Conference Football Coaches and game officials on August 4, 1962, Mr. George Gardner read and discussed this memorandum. Also, stressed the com- [fol. 1384] pliance with NCAA Football Rule 9, Sections 1 and 2, Article 1:

Section 1. Disqualifying Fouls

"No player shall strike an opponent with his fist, or deliver a blow with extended forearm, elbow, or locked hands, or kick or knee an opponent during the game or between the periods."

PENALTY—15 yards. Offenders shall be disqualified.

Section 2. Personal Fouls

"e. There shall be no piling on, falling on, or throwing the body on an opponent; after the ball becomes dead."

PENALTY—15 yards. Flagrant offenders shall be disqualified.

It is the policy of the Southeastern Conference to follow a strict enforcement program in all of the above areas, as stated in paragraph 7, page 39, of the SEC Constitution and By-laws, and the officials were so instructed.

At a separate meeting with the Head Football Coaches, or their representatives, on August 4, we asked for their co-operation in an all-out effort to eliminate unnecessary roughness in the game of football.

[fol. 1385] I sincerely hope that the entire coaching staff at each member institution will conscientiously cooperate in such a program.

TO: INTERCOLLEGIATE FOOTBALL COACHES, COMMISSIONERS AND OFFICIALS

FROM: THE PRESIDENT OF THE FOOTBALL COACHES ASSOCIATION AND THE CHAIRMAN OF THE FOOTBALL RULES COMMITTEE

Re: Unwarranted viciousness and brutality in our college game

In recent years there has been a growing concern about the malicious brutality which appears to be on the increase in our great game of intercollegiate football. At its January meeting the Rules Committee received with alarm reports from many districts of uncalled for viciousness, particularly in the area of striking or delivering a blow with the hand or forearm and "piling on" after the ball has been declared dead.

[fol. 1386] The officers and trustees of the Football Coaches Association shared the concern of the Rules Committee as indicated in the draft of the following statement last June:

> "It is reported that in some isolated instances brutal play is being tolerated. It is the unanimous expression of our officers and trustees that the coach is responsible for eliminating brutality in football. Training methods that are aimed at injuring the opponent should be done away with."

After long deliberations and a searching review of the rules it was concluded that the language in Rule 9 quite clearly defined the line between legal action and illegal practices with willful viciousness to inflict bodily harm to an opponent.

The difficulty did not seem to be in rule construction but rather, first, in a laxness of officials to vigorously enforce the existing rules, and, second, the unwillingness of a few coaches to be worthy of their noble profession by properly instructing and disciplining their boys with regard to brutal play.

The various Conference Commissioners who have jurisdiction over officials will in no uncertain terms direct them to vigorously enforce all rules to stamp out malicious brutality and viciousness. Officials will be instructed not to exercise judgment about intent, but to rule on any overt act. By way of example, they will be ordered to penalize any contact with an opponent on the ground or in a "pile", after the ball is declared dead.

Not long ago a request was made of our fine coaches to help eliminate a developing muckerism, practiced by a [fol. 1387] very limited few, in feigned injuries and false starts. The coaches are to be congratulated on their magnificent response in the destruction of those evils. This is another appeal to our courageous head coaches to enlist their full force of influence to rid our game of inexcusable brutal and malicious play.

All of us, whose good fortune it is to be associated with our grand game, hold a sacred trust to crush any evil practices. We have under our trust the most precious possession of any father and mother, their son. Let us join together in being worthy of our stewardship in the protection, on both sides of the line of scrimmage, of those sons from brutality which will only lead to tragic incidents and rule changes that none of us will like.

Less long-term debt due within one year	2,593,000

Under the terms of the first mortgage bonds, New York & Pennsylvania Co., Inc. mortgaged its property, plant and equipment and assigned the shares of stock representing investments in its domestic subsidiaries. Under the terms of the notes to banks there are certain restrictions relative to the payment of dividends by New York & Pennsylvania Co., Inc., so that at December 31, 1962 consolidated retained earnings are not available for payment of dividends.

Subscription contract deferrals

Subscription contract deferrals represent the unearned portion of gross subscription revenues less related commission expenses stated at estimated amounts allocable to future periods. The balance of such deferrals has been increased by $1,600,000 at December 31, 1961 with an increase in accounts receivable to reflect the unpaid portion of pay-during-service contracts from independent agencies.

Contingent liabilities

The Company is contingently liable in respect to sundry tax claims, lawsuits, and other matters incident to the ordinary course of business. The eventual liability, if any, is not readily determinable but in the opinion of counsel is not material. At December 31, 1962 the Company was guarantor for $1,035,000 on obligations of nonconsolidated affiliates.

Stock options

On December 6, 1962 the Board of Directors of the Company adopted a Restricted Stock Option Incentive Plan, subject to approval by the stockholders. Under the terms of the proposed Plan, a maximum of 300,000 shares of common stock will be reserved for issuance under the Plan from time to time. Options under the Plan will be granted by the Board of Directors to officers and other key employees at an option price per share which will be the lesser of (1) 85% of the fair market value on the date of grant, and (2) 85% of the fair market value on the date upon which the option is exercised.

Mr. Culligan, President of the Company, has been granted options for 50,000 shares of common stock at an option price of $6.8875 per share (95% of the fair market value on the date of grant) exercisable cumulatively as to 20% of such shares in each year commencing January 1, 1963 to July 8, 1967.

Mr. Clifford, Executive Vice President of the Company, has been granted options for 20,000 shares of common stock at an option price of $6.32 per share (85% of the fair market value on the date of grant) exercisable as to 25% of such shares from May 1, 1963 to January 1, 1964, 50% in 1964, 75% in 1965, and all such shares from January 1, 1966 to October 15, 1972.

Of the foregoing 70,000 shares, 15,500 of the shares under option to Mr. Culligan are available from common stock held in the Company's treasury and the options for the remaining 54,500 shares were granted contingent upon approval of a proposed increase in authorized common stock by the stockholders.

Dividends in arrears

Including the dividends accruing January 1, 1963, the Company is in arrears in payment of cumulative dividends on prior preferred stocks as follows:

	Per Share
$3.00 cumulative	$5.25	$1,756,000
.60 cumulative	1.05	251,000
		$2,007,000

Federal income taxes

At December 31, 1962 the consolidated group had unused operating loss carryovers aggregating approximately $22,380,000 and unused investment tax credits of $363,000.

Father Is a Football Coach

By JEAN BUTTS JONES,
as told to Furman Bisher

The author, daughter of Georgia's Wally Butts, reveals what it's like to be raised in a football family. "If I had to start over," she says, "I'd still be the daughter of a coach. But it can be an awful million on a girl's romantic life!"

GUS PANOUARELLA PHOTOS

Wally Butts at his Athens, Ga., home with his daughter, Jean, now a coach's wife. "To marry an underprivileged high-school coach!" he exploded, when Jean got engaged. "That's going too far!"

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Twenty-two-year-old Mrs. Jean Butts Jones is the daughter of one football coach and the wife of another. Her young husband, Frank Jones, coaches the high-school team in Decatur, Georgia, while her father is the famous Wally Butts, dean of the rugged Southeastern Conference, now in his sixteenth season as head coach at the University of Georgia.

Jean is the "middle" daughter in the Butts family of three girls, and with the possible exception of Wally, she has been the most sports-minded person in the household. As a Georgia coed she was the only girl in her gym class who could do ten push-ups. In football season she helped the Georgia cause along as a cheerleader.

Jean majored in journalism at college, and after graduation got a job with the Atlanta Journal. In addition to her work as a newspaper reporter, she sometimes speaks at high-school football banquets. In her speeches she takes much the same light, whimsical line as her father, whose Southern humor is famous at after-dinner speeches all over the country.

—The Editors.

Butts girls—Jean, Faye and Nancy—visit their dad at the practice field. Jean claims that those "only hearts" who play college football are afraid to show any interest in a coach's daughter.

WHEN I announced to my family last year that I planned to marry a high-school football coach I had been dating a few months, everyone was pleased except my father, who went up in a puff of smoke. "Marrying any football coach is bad enough," he said in a volcanic mood, "but to marry an underprivileged high-school coach, that's going too far."

My father, Wallace Butts, has been a football coach since 1928, the last sixteen years at the University of Georgia, in Athens. I consider him an authority on matters of football, and on the field he has an extensive reputation as a taskmaster. But he found out you can't coach love, and, to prove it, a few weeks later he marched down the aisle of the First Methodist Church in Athens to give me away to that "underprivileged" high-school coach.

First, let me set the record straight. My husband, Frank Jones, is not an underprivileged coach. His teams at Decatur High School, in a suburb of Atlanta, have won three region championships in a row and twice got to the Georgia state semifinals play-off, each time losing by one point. In two seasons his team lost only one regularly scheduled game. Actually, I think my father was flattered that, after observing a coach's life from the inside for the greater part of my twenty-one years, I should still be brave enough to marry one.

I've heard him say many times, "I know the futile feeling of a high-school coach. I was one myself for ten years, and when I found I was on a dead-end street, I happened to get a college break. But there are still only a hundred good coaching jobs in the country. The field is too limited. You meet a lot of nice people, but you never make any money."

My father is a renowned pessimist, but really, I don't think that coach Wallace Butts or any member of his family has any grounds for complaint. If I had a chance to start over again, I'd still choose to be the daughter of a football coach and the wife of one. I didn't marry

Frank Jones because he was a football coach, but it didn't hurt his chances any. When I thought about marrying Frank, I remembered something important. Daddy was installing the split-T formation at Georgia, and Frank had coached the split-T several years, so I knew they'd have something in common.

It worked out just beautifully. It's awfully pleasant to sit around and listen to the menfolk talk about overshifting and the option play and brush-blocking and such. A lot of wives wouldn't appreciate it, but when you're raised in a football family it comes just as naturally as matters of the church come to a preacher's family.

A football family doesn't live or die with each victory or defeat, but winning does improve the atmosphere around the house considerably. It isn't, however, quite so serious as Frank made it out to be just before we were married. His team had lost heavily by graduation, and the material looked rather poor for the 1953 season.

In a very serious mood one day, he said to me, "I'm awful sorry our first year will have to be a losing year." As it turned out, it wasn't, but I still chuckle inside when I think of this coach-husband being so greatly concerned about how many games he would win for his bride.

I got my indoctrination early in the vagaries of the coaching family's life. Here's something they say happened when I was only three years old—I remember little about it myself.

Daddy was coaching at Male High, in Louisville, Kentucky, at the time. The big game with Manual High was coming up, and already in those days the name of Wallace Butts was becoming synonymous with pessimism. He had been moaning low around the house all week, telling anybody who would listen to him, "Well, if we lose this one, I guess we'll have to pack up and get out of town."

Male High did lose. I was too little to go to the game, and when they came home and I heard the bad news and saw the sorrowful expressions on their faces, I went up to my room in tears. When my mother came up she found me packing my dolls and clothes. I had taken my pessimistic papa at his word. I was getting ready to get out of town.

We have been a rather fortunate family as football fortune goes. There has been none of the gypsy life for us, here one year and there the next, none of the continual moving and living from one job to the next that is the lot of some coaches. But there have been rough times, like 1951. That was one of daddy's hardest seasons. The Georgia squad was inexperienced and slow. Some businesses he had an interest in, including a restaurant in Athens, took a bad turn. Everything went wrong at the same time, except a sophomore quarterback named Zeke Bratkowski. Fortunately, Zeke came through in a spectacular way, and eased the pain of a season that ended with five victories and five defeats.

In 1953, daddy experienced another season of depression, though by this time I was gone from the family circle and had the problems of my own coach on my mind too. Georgia won only three games and lost seven, the worst record in daddy's whole coaching history. But this distressing season had a positive rather than negative effect. It was plainly evident that Georgia just didn't have the material. Instead of starting a fire-the-coach campaign, Georgia supporters rallied together in the biggest wave of college spirit the state has ever known.

We Buttses have been lucky like that from the start. The game that sent me to my room packing at three was the only one daddy lost to Manual High in three seasons in Louisville, where his record was so impressive that he was hired as an assistant coach at Georgia in 1938. He was appointed head coach in 1939, and since that time his teams have won 104 games, lost fifty-two and tied seven. They have played in seven bowl games and won the Southeastern Conference championship three times.

Daddy was born and grew up in Milledgeville, Georgia, and in February, 1929, he eloped with his home-town sweetheart, Winifred Taylor. He was just out of Mercer University, where he had been a 165-pound end, and was on his first job at Madison A. & M., in Madison, Georgia. He returned to Milledgeville in 1932 to coach at Georgia Military College, a prep school. With the family now increased by two—my older sister, Faye, and myself—we moved to Louisville in 1935. There the third daughter, Nancy, arrived. Then came the final move, back to Georgia and the state university, and here the four Butts women seriously began the process of bringing up father.

There's a tradition, it seems, that football coaches never have sons—they lean predominantly toward the production of daughters. You might think these daughters would have easy access to the manly beasts their fathers coach, but it doesn't work out that way. Being a coach's daughter can be an awful millstone on a girl's romantic life.

A coach's daughter is the last girl in the world a football player is likely to show any interest in, for fear that the other boys will accuse him of playing politics. But if one does happen to be so bold, he is (1) afraid to come around to the house, (2) watching himself like a hawk to keep from violating training rules, and (3) about as much at ease as an escaped convict calling on the sheriff.

On the practice field, you see, my father is as intense as a drill sergeant. He expects his players to work as hard as he is willing to work. The players expect him to be just as tough around home, which is a laugh. We Butts girls always have had him under control, and the tough-taskmaster characterization seems unreal to us.

I have always been a worshiper of the handsome, heroic athlete, but as I grew up, my romantic opportunities with members of the football team were seriously limited by fear of the coach. On bowl trips or away from home, dates came easily with them. But in Athens the players kept their distance, because it meant coming to the house for me or bringing me home.

If they could come around in a group, players were much more at ease, although this didn't always work either. One night I had a little party for some girl friends and their dates, most of them football players. As daddy came in simply to say hello in his most polite manner, one of the boys was so frightened he jumped over a sofa and ran out into the yard to escape.

It hasn't been so hard on Nancy, the youngest, for she has had the benefit of observing her two older sisters. Besides, she's a brash teen-ager who says what she thinks and flinches before no one. Daddy has often said that she is his best critic.

"What do you think about your sister marrying up with a football coach, Nancy?" he asked her, driving to town one day.

"Well, we've had to put up with you," she said, "and it hasn't been too bad."

"How do women go around picking a husband, anyway?" daddy said. "Don't you think she could do better? That fellow wouldn't win any beauty contest, you know."

"Well, look who's talking! You're a good daddy, I'll give you credit for that, but you're no raving handsome beast yourself. Besides, you wouldn't know anything about love and romance, so why don't you leave those things to the women in the family?"

Nancy has had her trying moments, though. A couple of years ago she was beauty queen of the sophomore class at Athens High School, but on the day of her selection she came home in tears. One of the judges had been Bob West, the captain of the football team, and some of the catty numbers around school had been whispering that Nancy won it in a "fix." She was grief-stricken.

Daughters can be a coach's asset in the process of player recruiting. A constant battle goes on the year round for the high-school football stars who have college ability. All of us have pitched in to give daddy a hand, though I can't honestly say that we have ever been the lone determining factor.

> The only man in history who never looked at another woman was named Adam.
> —CARL ELLSTAM.

Once I thought I was going to be, and I threw myself into the case with enthusiasm. The player was a handsome young tackle from Ohio. He played the piano beautifully and he had wonderful manners. Mother thought he was something sensational, and daddy thought so, too, though their perspectives were miles apart.

Finally, the boy smiled across the piano at me, like Liberace, and said he'd come to Georgia if I'd promise to date him. I did my part. I promised, and the tackle came to Georgia, but something happened that was entirely out of my hands. They found out he was ineligible for some reason or other, and the tackle eventually transferred to a school out West.

Many times I've wished I had been born a boy, so I could have played football and helped daddy. I've always done the next best thing. I had an awful scrap with a boy when I was in the fourth grade. He said some things about daddy that weren't nice and I popped him. They sent him to the principal's office and let me go free.

When I was a student at Georgia—Faye and I both attended the university, and Nancy will too—I was a cheerleader. I majored in journalism to help him with his propaganda. Now, on the Atlanta Journal, I'm on the city staff rather than in the sports department, but I do write a series of features each fall weekend about bitter rival Georgia Tech. These pieces take the form of "scouting letters" to daddy.

Right after my wedding, Bobby Dodd, the head coach at Georgia Tech, quipped at a banquet, "Coach Butts is using unfair tactics. He's training his daughters to be newspaper reporters to get all the people on his side, and marrying them off to football coaches to get all the players." I hope it works, I might add.

Football coaching is a twelve-month grind that hits a peak of pressure in September, October and November. We have always tried to make life around the house as easy and as pleasant for our coach Butts as possible, but it's difficult with daddy. Relaxation never has been a natural thing with him. He works as hard at relaxing as some people do at work.

We did get him off to St. Simon's Island on the Georgia coast last summer, and each morning at the miserable hour of four o'clock we arose to go deep-sea fishing with him. He got sick every time he went out, and we wound up doing most of the fishing. After a few days of these predawn sleep wreckers, we began to investigate. We found out that he really didn't give a hang for deep-sea fishing. He had been showing enthusiasm for it just to please us. That ended the deep-sea excursions and we all resumed our delightful sleep, with which the vacation became a vacation again.

He isn't much for swimming either. Once we gave him two dazzling new swim suits for Father's Day. A bright high-school prospect hit town that same weekend. I asked the prospect if he'd like to go for a swim, and when he said he didn't have a suit with him, daddy gave him both of his new ones.

Once, about five years ago, mother decided that he needed a new hobby that would completely captivate him. She selected golf for him, and gave him a set of the finest new clubs she could find. This was not a good idea, for he doesn't like to do anything he can't do well, and so he played with feverish intent at becoming a good golfer. He was knocking himself out, working on his woods, practicing his irons, haunting driving ranges by day and night. Finally, after six or seven months, mother convinced him he should give it up. It had ceased to be a hobby any more. It had become his master, and he was a slave to his passion for the game.

There is no escape for any football coach from the natural hazards of his profession, such as antagonistic alumni, ticket moochers, anonymous telephone callers, doting parents of players—especially mothers—and sidewalk quarterbacks. In that terrible 1951 season we tried to get him to have an on-and-off switch installed on the telephone or to have an unpublished number, but he wouldn't have any part of it.

"Part of my job is talking to the people who are interested in football at Georgia," he said. "They wouldn't be calling if they weren't interested. I can spot the phonies and I can hang up on them, but I'll still give them the chance to call."

Another big problem is last-minute calls for game tickets. Often close friends are just as guilty as anybody. A couple of years ago an old acquaintance who should have known better phoned the day before the Georgia-Georgia Tech game, the state's football World Series, and asked for twenty-two tickets. There not only wasn't an extra ticket at our house, there wasn't one in town. Daddy told the man, an influential Georgia alumnus, that asking for twenty-two tickets was one of the best jokes he'd heard in a long time, but if the man would settle for twenty less, he could take care of him.

Then he came begging to the woman in his life. Only Faye had extra tickets

"Gee, boss, I think you're swell..."

and she'd been planning for weeks to take two friends with her.

"But this is important," daddy pleaded. "This is for ——, and it might be bread and butter in our mouths. You don't want to see your poor old daddy cold, hungry and penniless just because you wouldn't let him have two little old football tickets back in 1952, do you?"

"I'll let you have them for twenty-five dollars," Faye said.

"But that's scalping," daddy hollered, "and you know I don't approve of scalping!"

"I don't approve of fathers' taking advantage of defenseless daughters either. I think I'm being quite reasonable. I know of some tickets that are selling for fifty dollars a pair. Twenty-five dollars is my price. Take it or leave it."

Reluctantly daddy dug into his pocket and shelled out the twenty-five dollars; then turned around and let the "influential alumnus" have them for game price. We have never let him forget the time he was ticket-scalped by his own daughter.

Game days are always hectic days at our house, a twelve-room red-brick place on a large, shady block of Highland Avenue in Athens. Every bed is always filled, and relatives and friends drop by in a steady stream from Friday night until late into Sunday morning.

The football Saturday usually begins with daddy arising at 6:30 A.M. He never sleeps very well the night before a game. Mother gets up and has breakfast with him, but there isn't much conversation. Some days he is uncommonly cheerful—this mood usually coincides with games which Georgia has been picked to lose decisively. He'll read the morning paper—he follows the newspapers avidly—then drift away without saying good-by to anybody. We won't see him again until we arrive at the stadium, and then our view of him is no better than any other spectator's.

After the game we never know what to expect. If Georgia has won, usually droves of miscellaneous people show up to offer congratulations. If Georgia has lost, only the people who were invited to dinner show up, and they are customarily full of patronizing condolences.

I can't rightfully say that the family suffers as hard through the actual game as daddy, for he is one of the worst sufferers in the coaching business. For the longest while he had a habit of chewing sprigs of grass during the game, like Nebuchadnezzar, the king of Babylon. His stomach began to bother him, and while daddy thought it was being caused by defeat, his doctor told him it was grass. Then he switched to chewing gum. He breaks up the sticks into little pieces and eats—not chews—them during a game.

While he is having his troubles on the field, his family every so often is having trouble of its own in the stands. The worst of these occasions took place while Georgia was losing a heartbreaker to Alabama, 14–7, at Athens in 1949. Everything seemed to go wrong for Georgia that day, and a very fat man sitting directly in front of me decided it was daddy's fault.

"Let's get rid of Wally!" he hollered. No matter what happened, that was his cry. "Let's get rid of Wally!"

Now I realize, of course, that neither my father nor any other football coach ever will achieve universal popularity, even if he should win them all, but it does grate somewhat on the tender nerves of a loving daughter to hear her old man attacked like a baseball umpire. All the while this fellow was bellowing at my father I'd been eating peanuts and placing the hulls on his hatbrim. When he took his hat off, the hulls fell down his back and inside his coat and in his eyes, and he turned furiously on me.

"Yes, I did it," I told him, "and I'm glad. That's my father you've been shouting at, and we love him. Besides, we like to eat, and we can't if he hasn't got a steady job."

He really was a very nice man. He spent the rest of the afternoon apologizing to us. "It isn't that I don't like coach Butts," he said, "but it's just because I love Georgia so much I hate to see them lose." And I guess that's the way it is with most football fans.

It's still pretty hard on a coach's family in a losing season, though.

As you can imagine, daddy is very sensitive to defeat. After the Orange Bowl game in 1949 daddy just wouldn't budge from his room. Georgia had won the Southeastern Conference championship and had been favored to beat Texas, a three-time loser, on New Year's Day. With no pressure on, the loose Texas team won, 41–28—the only major bowl game daddy ever lost. Daddy was simply crushed. They always throw a big postgame party for the players and coaches at a night club in Miami, but daddy refused to go. While mother dressed in her prettiest evening gown, daddy crawled into bed, and nobody could reason with him.

After a while there was a knock on the door, and when mother opened it, there stood Frank Leahy, of Notre Dame, one of daddy's closest friends, and two Catholic priests. They were so appropriately solemn that it looked as if they had come to administer last rites. Mother started laughing, and then daddy, and then all of us. That broke the spell. Daddy got up and dressed and went off to the party to face the music.

Many of his players think of him only as a football coach. If they could see him around the house, those Georgia Bulldogs would never believe it. While he has never washed a dish in his life and couldn't fry an egg without an instructor, he is otherwise a well-domesticated animal.

He loves to show up at mother's teas and stand in the receiving line. When I had parties, he always joined in to help with the serving. It gave him a chance to act cute. He has always lavished gifts on us, and I must say that he's much better about sizes than mother.

There seems to be something magnetic about his personality that attracts characters of all types and all descriptions. This is perhaps native in all football coaches, but in coach Butts and family the characteristic appears to be overdeveloped. Even our cooks have been characters, such as the one who had to resign to have her ninth child without benefit of a husband.

For years and years the leading symbol of undying loyalty at Georgia has been a flap-mouthed Negro waterboy-trainer named Clegg Stark, who doesn't know his own age or how long he has been there. They say that Clegg once was able to throw a football the length of a field. The late Grantland Rice prevailed upon him to demonstrate his mighty arm when Georgia played New York University in New York some years ago. He so amazed the sports writers that several of them wrote at length about the fabulous Negro waterboy from Georgia.

Clegg is held in such esteem by past Georgia football players that they raised a fund to buy him a new house. Then came time for the touching presentation, and old Clegg, wearing his red-and-black Georgia sweater, stood there with his head bowed in humility, occasionally wiping away a dripping tear. Then he stepped forward to make his acceptance speech.

"I sho' do appreciate this from you boys," he said. "But who's gonna pay the tax on it?"

Daddy has had his player characters, too, not the least of whom was a flat-footed, slope-shouldered halfback from Ohio. This player had great talent, but he almost drove daddy wild with his flightiness.

Now, a player's problems are the coach's problems, too, no matter how personal they may be. Romance-stricken Georgia players have come by home many a time to tell daddy they wanted to get married. I've seen the terrified bride-elect sit in the parlor while daddy grew furious with the player in the den. He has always maintained that marriage and college don't mix, mainly for financial reasons. Sometimes daddy has been able to restrain romance, but more times than not he has been the loser.

One day in the spring of 1941, this flat-footed, slope-shouldered boy came by daddy's office and told him he was quitting football. "I want to live a normal student's life," he said. "I want to have some time for a girl friend, like the other fellows on the campus."

This set off another explosion by coach Butts. Spring practice opened without the boy among those reporting, and daddy was resigned to losing him. About a week later, though, the boy came sidling into his office and wanted to know if he could rejoin the team.

"I don't know," daddy said. "I'll have to take a vote of the squad to see."

I'm not sure of this, but I've got a hunch that when the boy went out one door, daddy rushed out the other to hold his ballot. And when the players elected to take the boy back, I'm sure it saved daddy from having a heart attack, for the boy was Frank Sinkwich, in daddy's own estimation the greatest player he ever coached.

Another great one was Charley Trippi, the big star of the only perfect season—1946—that Georgia has had in modern times. Trippi, now with the Chicago Cardinals, was a cold-blooded businessman both on and off the field. But he was a tremendous athlete who could do everything well, and that season he was an overwhelming All-American selection.

Looking back on it all, I can't contend that I've been especially blessed by being a football coach's daughter. Coaches don't make the best fathers in the world, because you don't get to see enough of them.

The months from September to December you may as well scratch off. If you are with him, he's got his mind on 600 other things and seldom knows you're alive. But I don't care to trade my pessimistic papa in on a new model.

Life in a coach's family, with all its hazards, has given me something extra. We've had our trips to the Rose Bowl, to the Sugar Bowl, to the Orange Bowl; and we've had our parties and rubbed shoulders with celebrities. I got one of the greatest thrills of my life when Joe E. Brown introduced me to some friends in New York as "Miss Butts, whom I met in Atlanta." If I hadn't been the coach's daughter, he'd never have remembered me. Other children envied us and our "connections" and "influence" with the coach, and I always felt the envy was justified. I'd have envied them if they'd been in my place.

As a coach's wife now, I find myself living through many of the same joys and agonies I saw my mother experience. She suffered silently with Georgia, but I die violently with Decatur High School. I'm a nervous bundle of screams and hollers and other assorted noises during a game. In football matters my father's nature dominates me. We're both pessimistic. We both feel that anybody who isn't for you is agin you. We both hate to lose, passionately. They call him "The Little Round Man" and me "The Little Round Girl."

Eventually, though, I feel that the lady in me will take over and I shall become the exemplary wife of a football coach. I have been exceedingly well trained for the position. THE END

Georgia Plays for Keeps

By FRED RUSSELL and GUY TILLER

Despite a so-so season this year, few coaches can match the success of Wally Butts, whose teams have smashed their way to six bowl games in eight years. He is a hard-driving perfectionist who is either loathed or loved.

ONE Saturday in 1947, Wally Butts, the exacting drillmaster of University of Georgia football, was attempting to build a fire under a subpar team which had lost the week before to Kentucky by 26–0. After concluding one of the most emotional appeals of his hard-driving career, Wally asked Jules Verne Sikes, then Georgia end coach and now University of Kansas head coach, to check the squad's reaction.

Sikes casually fell in alongside Bob Walston, a freshman halfback upon whom much of Georgia's success depended that day against the Oklahoma Aggies. They strolled toward the players' entrance, through which Georgia players must never walk, but sprint.

"You're all set to give 'em hell, aren't you, Bob?" Sikes asked.

Walston, a cool performer from Columbus, Ohio, looked Sikes straight in the eye, as is demanded of all Georgia players when addressing a coach, and gave the obvious reply, "Yes, sir, Coach Sikes."

Then, before he streaked onto the stadium turf, Walston whirled and said to Sikes, "But if we get near that Aggie goal line, you better send in Coach Butts. He's really ready."

Walston, now an ace Georgia end, wasn't wisecracking about his coach, whom he both fears and respects. None of Wally Butts' strictly disciplined players would dare take such a liberty. Walston was simply stating a fact. On the day of a game, Coach James Wallace Butts, Jr., is always "up"—so highly keyed, in fact, that he avoids his players as much as possible, for fear that he will cause them to become too taut.

Nor would Walston's idea of inserting Coach Butts in the line-up sound too farfetched to those who have seen Wally, at forty-four years of age, bulldoze one of his huge athletes in demonstrating the proper blocking form.

Butts is a stocky, powerful man, built along the lines of a fire hydrant. He stands only five feet, six inches, but weighs 195 muscled pounds. This coach, whose 1948 Georgia team won the Southeastern Conference championship, is such a fanatic on physical conditioning that until 1942 he held daily wrestling matches with giant freshman coach Quinton Lumpkin, six feet two, 225 pounds. Only Lumpkin's entrance into the Navy stopped the bruising sessions. Then Wally took to doing five miles of road work daily. He's always ready. When Georgia lost to Kentucky again in the fourth game of the current season—this time 25-0—Butts was in shape to carry the ball himself, and probably considered doing so.

PHOTOGRAPHY BY FRANK ROSS

Wally Butts has been going hard from his small boyhood in Milledgeville, Georgia, where he was born on February 7, 1905. "Wally's father was, and still is, in the business of felling trees, moving safes, transporting homes to new locations and almost any other type of handy-man job," declares Jere Moore, editor of the local newspaper. "When Wally was knee-high to a cat, he helped his father. He was so busy helping his father that he never had time to get into any mischief or hang around any of the town's joints. When he was a tiny shaver he would spend what few free moments he could squeeze out of his father playing football by himself. He drove himself at a killing pace even then, for his one desire was to be a football star. He finally interested other kids in playing with him, and, although he was one of the smaller boys, he controlled the games. If a big boy picked on a smaller lad, he had to whip Wally. Very few ever achieved that."

When Butts first reported as a kid candidate at Georgia Military College, then a prep school, he was so small that other boys reached over his head into the grab bag of equipment. Butts didn't get a stitch.

But he turned up the next day in tennis-shoes and a pair of faded pants, stuffed and stitched with cotton by his mother. Another little obstacle, having to milk nine of his father's cows every afternoon after practice, didn't stop him from making the team.

Later, as an end at Mercer University, a Baptist school in Macon, Georgia, he became captain in 1927 and was chosen for the All Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association team. Bernie Moore, present commissioner of the Southeastern Conference, coached Wally at Mercer. Moore later had such All-American flankmen as Gaynell Tinsley and Ken Kavanaugh at L.S.U., but he still ranks Butts as the best he ever saw at the vital assignment of blocking the opposing tackle.

However, Wally's greatest eminence has come as a coach. He has produced six bowl teams at Georgia in the last eight years. Listen to Notre Dame's Frank Leahy, addressing the Athens Touchdown Club in 1947: "I do not say this for home consumption; I have said it in Chicago, in New York and everywhere I have been asked about my fellow coaches. There is no finer coach in college football than Wallace Butts. There are no better drilled or better disciplined football teams in America than Georgia's."

Leahy and Butts are fast friends. They met at a high-school clinic in Texas in 1942. Each was deeply impressed with the other's offense and defense, and they soon became intimates. Butts annually spends a few weeks in South Bend during Notre Dame's spring practice; when Georgia plays a bowl game, Leahy usually is in Butts' room after each daily practice session.

Rival coaches point out that Notre Dame and Georgia pass patterns bear a striking resemblance. It is also significant that Notre Dame and Georgia both are using a new huddle formation this season, in which the players group themselves like this:

QB

LE LH FB RH RE

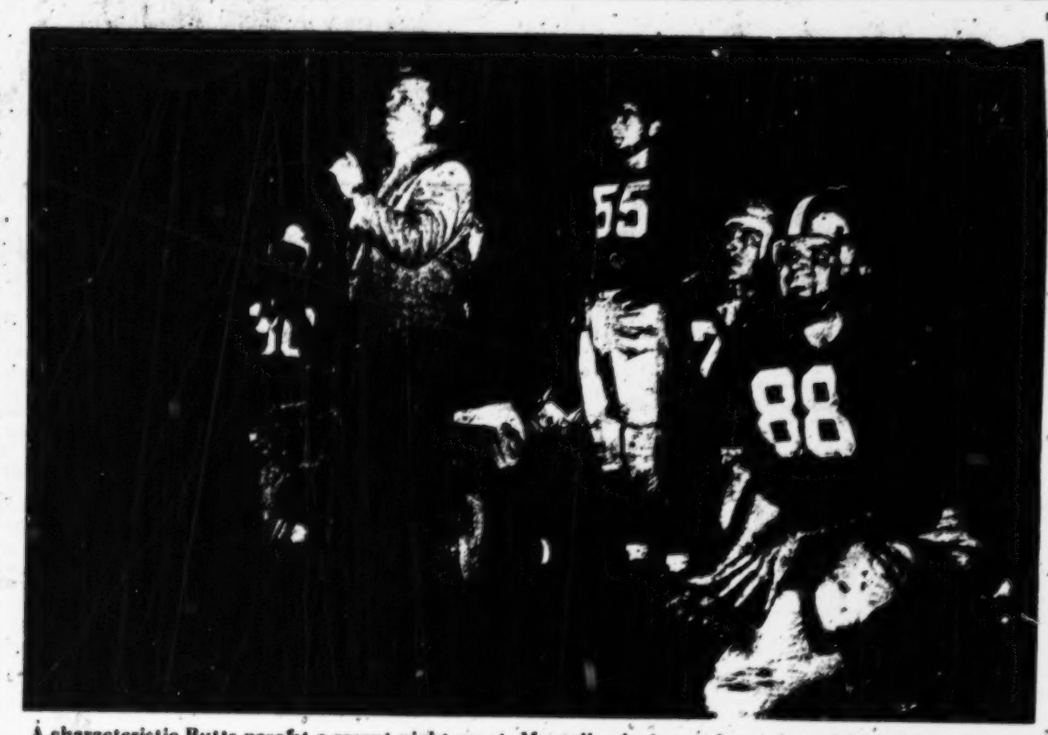
After studying the defense, the quarterback turns, faces his teammates—who are looking toward the line of scrimmage—and calls the play. Advantages: It is more orderly than the normal huddle; it is easier to spot a fatigued or injured player; the players do not lean on each other; all can see the lips of the quarterback; and an assistant coach moving up and down the side lines can easily detect confusion among the team or spot any player who might be arguing with the quarterback.

There is at least one coach who says the Butts-Leahy co-operation goes further than huddles, pass patterns, new defensive strategy and cannily designed trap plays. Paul (Bear) Bryant, of the University of Kentucky, declares, "Every time I line up a truly great high-school player to come here, my hottest competition for him comes from Notre Dame. When we sign a boy to a Southeastern Conference grant-in-aid, we send his name to the commissioner, Bernie Moore, and all schools in the S.E.C. get a list of the boys who have signed with other schools. I believe Butts tips off Leahy on the top boys."

Wally Butts started coaching in 1928 at a small Georgia prep school, Madison A. & M. He tested his players' abilities by scrimmaging with the squad regularly until darkness called a halt. After developing a Southern prep championship team at Madison, he went in 1931 to his home town of Milledgeville to coach his own alma mater, Georgia Military College. After running up a record of thirty-seven victories and only three defeats, Wally moved in 1935 to Male High, in Louisville, Kentucky, where, in addition to coaching, he taught history. Here, too, Butts was successful.

His chance to join a college coaching staff came in 1938, when Harry Mehre left the University of Georgia for the University of Mississippi. Despite Mehre's record of defeating Yale five times when Old Eli was famous for more than saddle shoes and crew cuts, plus his feat of losing only twice in ten years to Georgia's traditional state rival, Georgia Tech, the university alumni kept grumbling for a conference championship and a bowl team.

Butts applied for the Georgia head-coaching job. A member of the university's athletic board asked Wally, "What system do you use?" Butts replied tartly, "I use the color system. I tell the boys simply to go out and knock down everybody not wearing our colors."



A characteristic Butts pose at a recent night game. Mentally playing each man's position, the coach chews grass, moans when a player drops a pass, and despairs when the quarterback calls the wrong play.

Butts did not get the No. 1 job, but he was hired as an assistant coach. Joel Hunt, who had been L.S.U.'s backfield coach, took the top spot, but after a mediocre season and several months of exposing his direct personality to ruffled alumni, Joel was paid off. Butts appealed to the athletic board to grant Hunt a hearing. When this plea was turned down, Wally accepted the head-coaching job himself for 1939.

He inherited a squad short of talent and short of breath. The latter was corrected immediately by a spring-practice grind that started in January and lasted until June, with only Sundays and a few other days off.

"Nobody was in shape when we started," recalls Wyatt Posey, now head coach at South Georgia Junior College, in Douglas.

"But everybody was in shape when it ended. The boys were weeded out from the men quickly. I bet half the original squad quit. They just wouldn't pay the price. That session darn near killed me, but, as trite or silly as it may sound now, it made a man out of me."

The summer following this back-breaking practice stretch was no vacation for Coach Butts and his chief assistant, J. B. Whitworth. Georgia was mired in red ink, but George C. Woodruff, wealthy Columbus, Georgia, alumnus and a former Bulldog head coach, backed up his confidence in Butts with a loan that allowed the athletic association to keep the sheriff away. Butts and Whitworth could entice few of the Southern prep sensations to join a losing Georgia team, so they headed into Pennsylvania and Ohio on a campaign that was Sherman's march to the sea in reverse.

Paul Jenkins, then coaching at Wally's old stand, Male High, tipped Butts about a halfback in Youngstown, Ohio. Paul could not remember the boy's name. The entire sports world found it out two years later, when Fireball Frankie Sinkwich started leading Georgia out of the gridiron swamps. To make certain that Sinkwich did not get homesick, Butts brought along Frankie's buddy, George Poschner, who developed from a fourth-string halfback on the freshman team into an All-Southeastern end.

Wally's first Bulldog team in 1939 was not a success from a victory standpoint, losing to Furman, Holy Cross, Kentucky, New York University, Auburn and Georgia Tech. But the freshman team, liberally sprinkled with Pennsylvania and Ohio boys, went undefeated and was hailed as a point-a-minute whirlwind.

Butts' coaching record since 1939 is among the nation's best. His fabulous freshmen of 1939 won the Orange Bowl bid as juniors and trounced Texas Christian University, 40–26. Georgia wrecked unbeaten Georgia Tech, 34–0, in 1942 to win the Southeastern Conference championship for the first time in history. This brought an invitation to the Rose Bowl, where U.C.L.A. was toppled, 9–0.

In 1943 Butts opened practice with a squad of seventeen-year-olds and 4-F's. With no reserve military unit at Georgia, Butts' 1943–44 record of thirteen victories and seven defeats is an often overlooked high light of his career.

Charley Trippi returned from the service in time to spark the 1945 team to an Oil Bowl triumph over Tulsa, 20–6. Then Georgia went undefeated and untied in 1946, for the first time since the 1896 team won four games without a loss. Trippi and a sophomore quarterback, John Rauch, set the pace as the Bulldogs squeezed past North Carolina, 20–10, in the Sugar Bowl.

Without Trippi, Georgia dropped four games in 1947, but played Maryland to a 20–20 deadlock in the Gator Bowl at Jacksonville. Last year Butts had his third S.E.C. title-winning team. He suffered his first bowl loss, though, when Texas won out in the fourth quarter at the Orange Bowl, 41–28.

Georgia isn't playing four of the highest-ranked teams in the Southeastern this year—Tulane, Vanderbilt, Tennessee and Mississippi—and, although protests by Butts that he has the worst material in the conference are exaggerated, the Bulldogs are not probable contenders for the championship. However, Butts went into this season with a record—including bowl games—of seventy-nine victories, twenty-seven losses and three ties in ten years at Athens.

Except for the morning of the Georgia-Georgia Tech game, when he adopts an aggressive, coldly calculating attitude, Butts continuously moans that he cannot possibly win the next game. He has to this day never admitted having better material than even one opponent. Carter (Scoop) Latimer, who should have known better, once allowed himself to be a silent audience while Butts' tears splashed all over a Greenville, South Carolina, hotel room. Georgia's 1946 team was undefeated and favored to scatter little Furman all over Greenville. But, after listening to Wally, Latimer returned to his sports desk on the News and pounded out a column predicting that Furman would score an upset victory. The score: Georgia 70, Furman 7.

After one late-September scrimmage this year, Butts made, among others, the following characteristic remarks to newspapermen: "There is not an end on the field who can block a tackle. . . . Our quarterbacks are a joke. . . . We can't possibly develop a running game without better blockers at guard. . . . I'll probably get fired after this season. . . . I could run better than most of our backs, and I'm an old man. And I'll be much older before poor ole Georgia finishes this season."

Despite his excitement and temper displays at practice, Butts is at his quietest—though churning inside—on the morning of a game. Then his greatest concern is about the weather. "Some mornings he has made me call the weather bureau ten times, though they told me the same thing every time," reports Louis Trousdale, a former aide. "Coach always wants a dry track."

Butts' concern over the weather is understandable. The Bulldogs always fill the air with forward passes. Georgia gained 2101 yards on aerials in 1942, when Sinkwich's heaves alone accounted for 1392 yards, and Lamar (Race Hoss) Davis set a national record by averaging 28.5 yards per catch. The Georgia kid team in 1943 produced Johnny Cook, a seventeen-year-old whose tosses netted 1007 yards. In 1945, Reid Moseley, a Bulldog end, led the nation in most yards for a receiver, 662. Georgia set another conference mark in 1946 when twenty-three passes were fired for touchdowns and Trippi and Rauch completed 54.4 per cent of their tosses. Rauch gained more than 1300 yards in both 1947 and 1948 on passes.

Bo McMillin, former Indiana coach who now directs the professional Detroit Lions, explains it this way: "When Wally was on the All-Star coaching staff with me in Chicago, he drew up a few of his intricate pass patterns. Another member of the staff said he doubted the plays would work because he did not believe four receivers could get out in the open on almost every pass play. Wally said that if his poor little boys down in Georgia did it, he couldn't understand why a bunch of All-Stars couldn't. We did, and we beat the pros."

Butts points out quite truthfully and without the slightest hint of modesty that Georgia's three great All-American backs, Sinkwich, Trippi and Rauch, all were fine passers when they left Athens, but none was a good passer when he first enrolled.

Ed Danforth, sports editor of the Atlanta Journal, discussing this fact, says, "Sinkwich couldn't even throw

What kind of man is STALIN?

IS Joseph Stalin a ruthless dictator—or merely "good old Joe," a prisoner of his Politburo comrades? Does he mean what he says about Russia's plans—or is he bent on Sovietizing the world? Can we come to a working understanding with him—or must millions continue to fear the oft-threatened "frightful collision" between Soviet Russia and the capitalist world?

There is probably no living American who, by face-to-face contact with Stalin, is better qualified to answer these questions than Lt. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, former United States Ambassador to Russia. General Smith has written the inside story of his experiences during his three years in Moscow. This extraordinary personal document—which will appear exclusively, in this country, in The Saturday Evening Post and The New York Times—will be presented to Post readers in a series of eight articles. a spiral. Bill Hartman, the backfield coach, and Butts labored long to develop his ability to pass. What I think finally spurred him on to becoming the finest passer in the South was the fact that the opposition was playing practically an eight-man line against him in every game.

"About Trippi, he had more natural ability than the other two. He could throw mechanically, but he was not naturally talented at picking out pass receivers. When Trippi first came to Athens, he threw with his weight improperly distributed, and he threw a ball that was difficult to catch.

"But, to my mind, Rauch is the crowning achievement of the intensive coaching by Butts. John came to Georgia as a runner and had never played the T formation. Wally was suffering a wartime shortage of material and decided that Rauch was the best quarterback prospect. Then he worked daily all summer in 1945 to develop Rauch into a passer. John became the finest passer in the Southeastern Conference last year."

The boys, none of whom had been sizzling high-school stars, agree with Danforth.

"I owe everything I accomplished in football, and a lot more, to Coach Butts," Sinkwich declares. "I had to learn the hard way"—Sinkwich once went on strike against practicing daily—"but he taught me to become part of a team. He and Bill Hartman taught me to pass. I never would have been effective as a runner if I had not learned to throw."

Sinkwich was paid $20,000 for his first season with the Detroit Lions and became the most valuable player in the National Professional League in 1944.

Trippi is even more emphatic. "Coach Butts is such a perfectionist that he would improve any boy," Charley says. "He alone made me an All-American. People ask why I returned to Georgia instead of entering pro football when I was discharged from the Army. I know what many of them think"—that Trippi was rewarded handsomely by Georgia alumni—"but I shook hands with Coach Butts in his office the day I left to enter the service and I told him then that I would come back and play for him if he needed me, even if I was in the Army ten years. If it hadn't been for Georgia and Coach Butts, I never would have had a chance at an education . . . and the opportunity to play college or pro football."

Trippi signed a four-year contract with the Chicago Cardinals, calling for $100,000. In the spring, he coaches the Georgia baseball team.

Rauch, who is now in his first pro season with the New York Bulldogs, says, "Coach Butts spent more time with me individually than most coaches spend with entire squads. He taught me the T offense and he taught me how to pass. I'm grateful that I was picked on some All-American teams, but they should have picked Coach Butts."

Butts draws criticism from some sources—mostly supporters of rival teams—for bringing in so many boys from the North. His stock answer to such talk is, "I don't care where the boy comes from, how he spells his name or whether he is Croatian or an Australian. All I ask is that he be loyal to Georgia, be proud of that red jersey, and try like hell to get the ball over the goal line."

The mass migration of Northern athletes to Georgia dates from 1939. Since Sinkwich and Poschner, there have been few Georgia freshman teams without a boy from the Youngstown, Ohio, neighborhood. Contacts through these boys and their coaches naturally have led enterprising Georgia talent scouts to other Ohio towns.

Pennsylvania boys started heading to Athens at the behest of the late Harold Ketron, a Georgia alumnus who owned a soft-drink bottling plant at Wilkes-Barre. A former Bulldog football player, Ketron met and admired Coach Butts. So he began to scout high-school prospects in the Wyoming Valley, one of the nation's richest beds of football talent. Trippi, George Young, Andy Dudish, Joe Tereshinski and several others were the trail blazers Ketron sent down as the Bulldogs established a coal-country beachhead.

This year, however, Georgia's freshman team includes twenty native sons. "Northern high-school boys usually are older and therefore stronger and more mature," Butts says, "but the improved high-school coaching in Georgia and the establishment of a full four-year course in all Georgia high schools have strengthened football in the state. There are more fine prospects coming up this year than ever before. It will not be long before our squad can be composed almost entirely of Georgia boys."

Butts, whose four principles of winning football are, in the order of their importance, discipline, conditioning, fundamentals, and pass patterns, is definitely a two-sided personality. Away from football, he is a quiet person whose rare speech is heard in a soft drawl. Despite his strength, his handshake is firm only when compared to a wet shaving brush. He uses no profanity, refuses to touch a cigarette, and imbibes only to the extent of an occasional social drink. His eyesight is poor, but he complains that he does not have time to have glasses properly fitted. Today he's still using a pair that he borrowed last summer from a friend in Chicago to read a menu. He forgets where he last deposited his raincoat, perhaps it was San Francisco, and he buys from four to six hats each year because he cannot remember where the last one is parked.

Such absent-mindedness vanishes at the drop of a halfback. Wally cannot sleep during the football season. He drives himself, as he does his players, to the verge of, but never over, the breaking point. He has student managers keep a record of every play used in scrimmage. Then he memorizes this information to determine which halfback runs which play best, after what sequence a particular play is most effective, and which defensive man makes the tackles on each play. He also insists on regular time trials for the players to see if any have gained or lost speed.

Grades of every member of the varsity and freshman squads are checked periodically, and he orders tutors for those who lag behind in the classrooms. His players must weigh daily before and after practice. He frequently prescribes lighter practice-field work and more milk for a player he thinks needs more pounds. All the single players live in one dormitory, and their specially prepared menus are checked by Wally.

Butts is aggressively independent in seeing that his athletes get the best keep. When overcrowded dormitories threatened to bring a university regulation of four boys to a room, Wally objected strenuously, announcing that if necessary he would install the football players in Athens hotels. This prompted a student to quip, "Why doesn't the university get up a football team of its own and play the athletic association some Saturday? They would beat us, but it would be interesting."

Some players who have served under Butts declare that their love of football was killed by the driving pace at Athens. One ex-Bulldog says, "He is not patient enough with young boys. Too much skull busting goes on. He has made stars out of mediocre high-school players, I'll admit, but I think he has ruined many others by driving them too hard and making them quit. I quit because I didn't get any pleasure out of football."

Probably the most consternation Butts ever caused among his players was when he broke into tears following the Georgia team's great second-half comeback to beat Alabama, 21–10, in 1942. One of the Northern boys on the squad later described it as "the most unbelievable thing I ever saw. It was like watching one of these Confederate monuments weep."

Such a forceful, demanding, dedicated person as Butts is either loathed or loved. On his 1941 team, Frank Sinkwich played, wearing a mask to protect a fractured jaw, and George Poschner with a broken arm in a cast covered with soft rubber. In a later season, Johnny Rauch was to wear a mask to shield a shattered cheekbone. All three begged to play.

Georgia football players are allowed no drinking water during practice or games. When there are substitutions, the men must sprint on and off the field. Nor do Georgia teams sit or sprawl on the ground during time-outs. They stand erect.

In Wally's first season as head coach in 1939, Georgia lost to N.Y.U., 14–13. That set Butts to thinking about extra-point specialists. Since then, the Bulldogs have never lost a game through inability to convert. They have won three by such a margin and tied two. "Too much is at stake on that extra point," Butts says. "We try to develop a boy who does nothing else. We don't want to risk him to injury by playing him during the regular game."

Leo Costa did play twenty-eight seconds in his opening game as a sophomore in 1940, but after that he did nothing but kick extra points. Since time is out when the conversion is tried, Costa finished his career in the Rose Bowl with a total of only twenty-eight seconds' official playing time. Yet he had scored in every game Georgia had played for three years, since no team ever kept Sinkwich and Company from scoring at least one touchdown.

Coach Whitworth, who once kicked an Alabama field goal in the Rose Bowl, is the extra-point instructor. To cure the kicker from watching the flight of the ball, much as a golfer raises his head to watch a drive, Whitworth makes the specialists pick up blades of grass before they look up. Costa always contended that he never saw one of his kicks split the uprights. By the end of the season there is a bare spot in front of each goal post at Athens, where Georgia kickers snatch up the grass after each boot, practice or game.

Billy Bryan kicked twenty-nine conversions in 1944. Then came George Jernigan, the Springfield, Tennessee, rifle. Jernigan was the conference's fourth-leading scorer in 1946 with a record number of conversions, forty-seven. He missed only five. The year before, he kicked thirty-seven out of forty-four.

Whitworth didn't come up with a specialist in 1947 and 1948. Joe Geri, his best kicker, was also one of the best ball carriers. Geri kicked twenty-four out of twenty-eight two years ago, and last season was the S.E.C.'s highest scorer with thirty-six extra points in forty attempts, plus nine touchdowns. This year Butts and Whitworth have another boy who does nothing for his bread and butter but sock that extra point. His name is Wayne Haskins, a 136-pound Lewisburg, Tennessee, sophomore whose right arm was permanently damaged in a hunting accident. Butts, who is extra sympathetic to any crippled person, because his youngest daughter Nancy once suffered paralysis, gave Haskins a scholarship. At first the boy only knew how to kick wearing G.I. shoes.

"He'll make it," Coach Whitworth emphasizes. "He's a game little rascal and he's finally got used to those shoes with the cleats."

Butts' daughter Nancy is twelve. He is the father of two other girls, Winifred Faye, nineteen, and Martha Jean, seventeen. "They all look like their mother, thank goodness," he exclaims. Mrs. Butts is the former Winifred Kaye Taylor, a home-town girl whom Wally married in 1929.

Most football fans, including hundreds of rabid Georgia alumni, see Wally only when he is on the banquet circuit or at civic-club meetings. Here he is a showman. He wails about poor Georgia's inferior material, brags about the fine players other schools are getting; then, after this bit of sabotage, tells delightful stories.

"Sinkwich never would have done anything without my coaching," he lulls his listeners. "Why, in 1941 he ran the same play wrong three times against Florida. I yanked him out of there, gave him the devil and told him what he was doing wrong. Then I let him go back in there. On the first play he ran for a touchdown. That's what great coaching will do." Before the crowd can react to such shameless egotism, Butts adds, "Oh, yes, that's what great coaching will do. He ran the darn play wrong again. But he scored."

Wally Butts is a controversial and a contradictory figure. He has on three occasions kicked outstanding players off the squad for smoking, then turned around and restored their scholarships in order that they might finish their education. But they never played another minute of football. In one such case of a war veteran, Butts attempted to sell the press the idea that the boy had quit football because of ulcers. The boy spilled the beans.

Wally's first contract at Georgia has never expired. The athletic board keeps adding years and dollars to his original pact, and he now has ten seasons to go at what is estimated to be a salary of $17,500. He will, of course, say the figure is much lower.

Butts never misses an opportunity to low-rate his prospects, as he did in 1946 when the Washington Touchdown Club honored him and Trippi. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, then West Point superintendent, told the Washington audience that football would be de-emphasized at Army.

When Butts arose to speak, he turned to General Taylor and said, "I don't blame you, general. If I had lost Blanchard, Davis and Tucker, I'd de-emphasize football too. In fact I am just losing Trippi, and I think Georgia might be better off to quit entirely."

Nobody expects Butts to change his ways. He will continue, during the progress of a game, to chew grass, moan when a player drops a pass, throw his arms heavenward when the quarterback calls the wrong play, and frantically wave on the ball carrier when he breaks into the open field.

His players will be disciplined to the point of permanency. Spec Landrum, now an assistant coach at Atlanta's Roosevelt High, tells how indelible an impression Butts makes on his players. "Allen Bloodworth played for Coach Butts at Georgia Military," Spec relates. "Bloodworth later played for Mercer, then became a businessman at Macon. One day he saw Coach Butts walk onto the practice field at Mercer. Coach Butts then was at Georgia and had absolutely no connection in any way with Bloodworth. But when he saw Butts, Bloodworth quickly ground out his cigarette."

Later joshed about it, Bloodworth said, "I knew Coach Butts wasn't in charge of me any more, but I had been one of his boys and I was afraid that he might think he was still in charge. I'd never smoke in front of him."

THE END

"Darn! Just when I get situated, they call the half."

Dear J. D.:

I enjoyed riding to the game with you and Kathryn.

By way of explanation, I did not get back to your car because I was sick at the game—a nervous stomach or something related. Red Leathers came by the press box, to see Harry Mehre and I caught a ride with him.

I was sorry I did not make a better contribution to recruiting but did not feel up to the occasion.

I was sorry about the game. Our first drive was great to watch. The Bulldogs will be alright if all of us "Keep the faith".

Sincerely,

I think it an unfair deal for you to turn down my expense account to General Neyland's funeral.

He is one of the outstanding men developed in the Southeastern Conference. If I had not gone to the funeral, Johnny had planned to send two members of the coaching staff and their expenses would have been paid by the University of Georgia.

GEORGIA VERSUS ALABAMA

THE STORY OF A COLLEGE FOOTBALL FIX

A SHOCKING REPORT OF HOW WALLY BUTTS AND "BEAR" BRYANT RIGGED A GAME LAST FALL

By FRANK GRAHAM JR.

Not since the Chicago White Sox threw the 1919 World Series has there been a sports story as shocking as this one. This is the story of one fixed game of college football.

Before the University of Georgia played the University of Alabama last September 22, Wally Butts, athletic director of Georgia, gave Paul (Bear) Bryant, head coach of Alabama, Georgia's plays, defensive patterns, all the significant secrets Georgia's football team possessed.

The corrupt here were not professional ballplayers gone wrong, as in the 1919 Black Sox scandal. The corrupt were not disreputable gamblers, as in the scandals continually afflicting college basketball. The corrupt were two men Butts and Bryant employed to educate and to guide young men.

How prevalent is the fixing of college football games? How often do teachers sell out their pupils? We don't know yet. For now we can only be appalled. THE EDITORS

On Friday morning, September 14, 1962, an insurance salesman in Atlanta, Georgia, named George Burnett picked up his telephone and dialed the number of a local public-relations firm. The number was Jackson 5-3536. The line was busy, but Burnett kept trying. On the fourth or fifth attempt he had just dialed the final number when he heard what he later described as "a series of harsh electronic sounds," then the voice of a telephone operator said:

"Coach Bryant is out on the field, but he'll come to the phone. Do you want to hold, Coach Butts, or shall we call you back?"

And then a man's voice: "I'll hold, operator."

Like most males over the age of four in Atlanta, George Burnett is a football fan. He realized that he had been hooked by accident into a long-distance circuit and that he was about to overhear a conversation between two of the colossi of Southern football. Paul (Bear) Bryant is the head coach and athletic director of the University of Alabama, and Wallace "Wally" Butts was for 22 years the head coach of the University of Georgia and, at the time of this conversation, the university's athletic director. Burnett ("I was curious, naturally") kept the phone to his ear. Through this almost incredible coincidence he was to make the most important interception in modern football history.

After a brief wait Burnett heard the operator say that Coach Bryant was on the phone and ready to speak to Coach Butts.

"Hello, Bear," Butts said.

"Hello, Wally. Do you have anything for me?"

As Burnett listened, Butts began to give Bryant detailed information about the plays and formations Georgia would use in its opening game eight days later. Georgia's opponent was to be Alabama.

Butts outlined Georgia's offensive plays for Bryant and told him how Georgia planned to defend against Alabama's attack. Butts mentioned both players and plays by name. Occasionally Bryant asked Butts about specific offensive or defensive maneuvers, and Butts either answered in detail or said, "I don't know about that. I'll have to find out."

"One question Bryant asked," Burnett recalled later, "was 'How about quick kicks?' And Butts said, 'Don't worry about quick kicks. They don't have anyone who can do it.'

"Butts also said that Rakestraw [Georgia quarterback Larry Rakestraw] tipped off what he was going to do by the way he held his feet. If one foot was behind the other it meant he would drop back to pass. If they were together it meant he was setting himself to spin and hand off. And another thing he told Bryant was that Woodward [Brigham Woodward, a defensive back] committed himself fast on pass defense."

As the conversation ended, Bryant asked Butts if he would be at home on Sunday. Butts answered that he would.

"Fine," Bryant said. "I'll call you there Sunday."

Listening to this amazing conversation, Burnett began to make notes on a scratch pad he kept on his desk. Some of the names were strange to him—tackle Ray Rissmiller's name he jotted down as "Ricemiller," and end Mickey Babb's as "Baer"—and some of the jargon stranger still, but he recorded all that he heard. When the two men had hung up Burnett still sat at his desk, stunned, and a little bit frightened.

Suddenly he heard an operator's voice: "Have you completed your call, sir?"

Burnett started. "Yes, operator. By the way, can you give me the number I was connected with?"

The operator supplied him with a number in Tuscaloosa, Alabama, which he later identified as that of the University of Alabama. The extension was that of the athletic department. Burnett then dialed Jackson 5-3536—the number he originally wanted. This time the call went through normally, and he reached a close friend and former business associate named Milton Flack.

"Is Wally Butts in your office now, Milt?" Burnett asked.

"Well, he's in the back office—making a phone call, I think. Here he comes now."

"Don't mention that I asked about him," Burnett said hurriedly. "I'll talk to you later."

Through some curious electronic confusion, George Burnett, calling his friend Milt Flack, had hooked into the call Wally Butts was making from a rear office in Flack's suite. He was the third man, the odd man. But he was not out.

Putting the pieces together

In the next few hours Burnett tried to piece together what he knew of Georgia football. Butts, a native of Milledgeville, Georgia, had joined the university coaching staff as an assistant in 1938. A year later he was named head coach. For 20 years he was one of the most popular and successful coaches in the South. Then prominent University of Georgia alumni abruptly soured on him, and on January 6, 1961, he was replaced by a young assistant coach named Johnny Griffith. Butts, filed away in the position of Georgia's athletic director (which he had held along with his coaching job for some years), was outspokenly bitter about his removal from the field.

Burnett knew, too, that Butts recently had been involved in a disastrous speculation in Florida orange groves. Butts had lost over $70,000 because, as someone put it, "you couldn't grow cactus on that land." One of his partners in the deal was also an associate of Milt Flack at a public-relations firm called Communications International, the office Burnett had been trying to call when he hooked into the Butts-Bryant conversation.

That afternoon Burnett told Flack what he had overheard. Both of them, though only slightly acquainted with the high-spirited, gregarious Butts, liked him, and they decided to forget the whole thing. Burnett went home in the evening and stuffed his notes away in a bureau drawer. He felt a great sense of relief. The matter, as far as he was concerned, was closed.

Eight days later, on September 22, the Georgia team traveled to Birmingham to play Alabama before a crowd of 54,000 people at Legion Field. Alabama hardly needed any "inside" information to handle the outmanned Bulldogs. Bryant, one of the country's most efficient and most ruthless coaches—he likes his players to be mean, and once wrote that football games are won by "outmeaning" the other team—had built a powerhouse that was in the middle of a 26-game winning streak. Alabama was the defending national champion, combining a fast-charging and savage-tackling defense with an effective attack built around a sensational sophomore quarterback named Joe Namath. The Georgia team was composed chiefly of unsensational sophomores.

Various betting lines showed Alabama favored by from 14 to 17 points. If a man were to bet on Alabama he would want to be pretty sure that his team could win by more than 17 points, a very uncertain wager when two major colleges are opening the season together and supposedly have no reliable line on the other's strengths and weaknesses.

Bryant, before the game, certainly did not talk to the press like a man who was playing with a stacked deck.

"The only chance we've got against Georgia is by scratching and battling for our life," he said, managing to keep a straight face. "Put that down so you can look at it next week and see how right it is."

The game itself would have been enjoyed most by a man who gets kicks from attending executions. Coach Bryant (he neglected to wear a black hood) snapped every trap. The first time Rakestraw passed, Alabama intercepted. Then Alabama quickly scored on a 52-yard pass play of its own. The Georgia players, their moves analyzed and forecast like those of rats in a maze, took a frightful physical beating.

"The Georgia backfield never got out of its backfield," one spectator said afterward. And reporter Jesse Outlar wrote in Atlanta's Sunday Journal the following day: "Every time Rakestraw got the ball he was surrounded by Alabama's All-American center Lee Roy Jordan and his eager playmates."

Georgia made only 37 yards rushing, completed only 7 of 19 passes for 79 yards, and made its deepest penetration (to Alabama's 41-yard line) on the next to the last play of the game. Georgia could do nothing right, and Alabama nothing wrong. The final score was 35–0, the most lopsided score between the two teams since 1923.

It was a bitter defeat for Georgia's promising young team. The 38-year-old Johnny Griffith, who was beginning his second season as head coach, was stunned. Asked about the game by reporter Jim Minter, he said: "I figured Alabama was about three touchdowns better than we were. So that leaves about fifteen points we can explain only by saying we didn't play any football."

Quarterback Rakestraw came even closer to the truth. "They were just so quick and mobile," he told Minter. "They seemed to know every play we were going to run."

Later other members of the Georgia squad expressed their misgivings to Furman Bisher, sports editor of the Atlanta Journal. "The Alabama players taunted us," end Mickey Babb told him. "'You can't run Eighty-eight Pop [a key Georgia play] on us,' they'd yell. They knew just what we were going to run, and just what we called it."

And Sam Richwine, the squad's trainer, told Bisher: "They played just like they knew what we were going to do. And it seemed to me a lot like things were when they played us in 1961 too." (Alabama walloped Georgia in 1961 by a score of 32–6.)

Only one man in the Georgia camp did not despair that day. Asked by reporter

Wally Butts, former athletic director of Georgia: He gave away Georgia plays, defense patterns.

Head coach Paul (Bear) Bryant of Alabama. He took plays for his defending national champions.

George Burnett of Atlanta: He overheard critical long-distance call.

Solemnly Wally Butts leads a Georgia football team in locker-room prayer.

Downcast coach Griffith slouches near bench as Georgia team is slaughtered.

John Logue about Georgia's disappointing performance, ex-coach Wally Butts nodded wisely and set him straight. "Potential is the word for what I saw," he said. "Unlimited potential."

The whole matter weighed heavily on George Burnett. He began to wonder if he had done the right thing when he had put the notes aside and kept his mouth shut. Now 41 years old, he was still struggling to support his large family. Among his five children were a couple of boys who played football. "How would I feel," Burnett asked himself, "if my boys were going out on the field to have their heads banged in by a stronger team, and then I discovered they'd been sold out?" He began to wake up at night and lie there in the dark, thinking about it.

In one sense Burnett knew it would be easiest to keep the notes in the drawer. While every citizen is encouraged to report a crime to authorities, the penalties against the man who talks are often more severe than those against the culprit. Burnett wasn't worried about physical retaliation. But there might be social and economic ones. Football is almost a religion in the South; the big-name coaches there are minor deities.

Butts no longer had his old-time stature, but many people were still intensely loyal to him (and he was a director of the small Atlanta insurance agency where Burnett worked). Bear Bryant was a national figure who had made impressive records at Texas A&M and Kentucky, and had more recently transformed Alabama from pushovers to national champions.

Burnett, protective toward his family, fearful of challenging deities, was troubled by a drive to do what was right. But what was right? To talk? To create furore, perhaps even national scandal? Or should he remain silent, ignoring wrong? That was a safe course, but one that might sit heavily on his conscience for all the rest of his days.

Living in his private misery, he thought about his past. Burnett himself had played high-school football in San Antonio, Texas, where he was born. During World War II he became a group navigator aboard a Martin B-26. On January 14, 1945, when his plane was shot down over Saint-Vith, Belgium, he was the only survivor. He lost part of his left hand, and spent the rest of the war in a German prison camp. Articulate and personable, he was now the division manager of the insurance agency.

On January 4 of this year he sat in his office with Bob Edwards, a longtime friend who was also an employee of the agency. Burnett knew that Edwards had played football with Johnny Griffith at South Georgia, a junior college.

"You know, Bob," Burnett said, after they had talked business for a while, "there's something that's been eating me up for a long while. I was going to tell you about it at the time, and then I decided to keep quiet. But I think you should know this, being a friend of Johnny Griffith."

After Edwards heard the story of the phone call, he asked if he could report it to Griffith. Burnett, still reluctant to get seriously involved, told Edwards to go ahead but to try to keep his name out of it. Powerful men in Georgia might be offended if Wally Butts was hurt, and Burnett did not want to jeopardize his own career just when things were beginning to break nicely for him.

But like so many others, Burnett found that there is no such thing as a little involvement. Griffith pressed to meet him, and nervously Burnett agreed. In the middle of January he met with Edwards and Griffith in the Georgia coach's room at Atlanta's Biltmore Hotel. Simultaneously a general meeting of the Southeastern Conference coaches was taking place at the Biltmore.

The Georgia-Alabama game had been forgotten by most of the coaches and athletic officials present. A popular topic of conversation was a late-season game between Alabama and Georgia Tech, in which Bryant's long winning streak had been broken.

Alabama, a five-point favorite, had trailed 7–6 with only a little more than a minute to play. Then Alabama made a first down on the Georgia Tech 14-yard line. Since Bryant had a competent field-goal kicker, the classic strategy would have been to pound away at the middle of Tech's line, keeping the ball between the goalposts and, on third or fourth down, order a field-goal try. (Alabama had defeated Georgia Tech on a last-minute field goal in 1961.) Instead, Bryant's quarterback passed on first down. The pass was intercepted, and Georgia Tech held the ball during the game's waning seconds, thus scoring last season's greatest upset.

During the January conference at the Biltmore, Bryant was frequently kidded about that first-down pass.

Away from the bars and the crowds, in Griffith's room the talk was only of Georgia-Alabama. Griffith listened grimly to Burnett's story, then read his notes. Suddenly he looked up.

"I didn't believe you until just this minute," he told Burnett. "But here's something in your notes that you couldn't possibly have dreamed up . . . this thing about our pass patterns. I took this over from Wally Butts when I became coach, and I gave it a different name. Nobody uses the old name for this pattern but one man. Wally Butts."

Suspicions confirmed

Griffith finished reading the notes, then asked Burnett if he could keep them. Burnett nodded.

"We knew somebody'd given our plays to Alabama," Griffith told him, "and maybe to a couple of other teams we played too. But we had no idea it was Wally Butts. You know, during the first half of the Alabama game my players kept coming to the sidelines and saying, 'Coach, we been sold out. Their linebackers are hollering out our plays while we're still calling the signals.'"

Griffith has since spoken of his feelings when he had finished reading Burnett's notes, and Burnett and Edwards had left. "I don't think I moved for an hour—thinking what I should do. Then I realized I didn't have any choice."

Griffith went to university officials, told them what he knew and said that he would resign if Butts was permitted to remain in his job. On January 28 a report reached the newspapers that Butts had resigned. At first it was denied by Butts and the university. A few days later it was confirmed with the additional news—that Butts would remain as athletic director until June 1 so that he could qualify for certain pension benefits. Rumors flooded Atlanta. One of the wildest was that Butts was mysteriously and suddenly ill and had entered the state hospital at Athens. This was quickly scotched when Georgia University officials maintained that Butts merely went for the physical checkup required for his pension records. Shortly afterward he was seen in Atlanta at a Georgia Tech basketball game.

But if Butts was seen publicly, events involving him remained closely guarded secrets. Burnett was asked to come to the Atlanta office of M. Cook Barwick, an attorney representing the University of Georgia. There he met Dr. O. C. Aderhold, the university president. Burnett's story was carefully checked. He then agreed to take a lie-detector test, which was administered by polygraph expert Sidney McMain, in the Atlanta Federal building. Burnett passed the test to everybody's satisfaction.

Phone-company check

Next an official of the Southern Bell Telephone Company checked and found that a call had been made from the office of Communications International to the University of Alabama extension noted by Burnett on his scratch pad. This information corroborated Burnett's statement that the call had been made at about 10:25 in the morning and had lasted 15 or 16 minutes.

"I jotted down the time when the call was completed," Burnett said. "It was 10:40. This is an old navigator's habit, I guess. For instance, I know that I was shot down over Saint-Vith at exactly 10:21, because when the bombardier called 'Bombs away!' I looked at my watch and wrote down the time. A few seconds later we got hit."

University officials still nursed reservations about Burnett's story because of the fantastic coincidence that had enabled him to overhear Butts's call. Then, during one of the many conferences he attended in attorney Barwick's office in the Rhodes-Haverty Building, a second coincidence, equally odd, cleared the air. Barwick placed a call to Doctor Aderhold at the university. Suddenly, Barwick and Aderhold found themselves somehow braided into a four-way conversation with two unknown female voices. The two men burst into nervous laughter. Burnett's story gained a little more credence.

February 21 was a painful day for George Burnett. He was summoned once more to Barwick's office, because Bernie Moore, the commissioner of the Southeastern Conference, "wanted to ask some questions." On Burnett's arrival he found not only Moore but Doctor Aderhold, two members of the university's board of regents, and another man identified as Bill Hartman, a friend of Wally Butts.

From the start, Burnett sensed a mood of hostility in the air. The ball was carried by one of the members of the Georgia board of regents, who confronted Burnett with a report that he had been arrested two years before for writing bad checks and that he was still on probation when he overheard the conversation between Butts and Bryant.

"Is there anything else in your past you're trying to cover up?" the regents official demanded.

Burnett was frightened and angry. "I didn't realize that I was on trial," he said. He went on to say that he had nothing to hide, that he had given university officials permission to look into his background, and that he had taken a lie-detector test, signed an affidavit that his testimony was true and permitted his statements to be recorded on tape. His notes had been taken from him and placed by Barwick in the safety-deposit vault of an Atlanta bank.

"I was arrested on a bad-check charge," Burnett admitted. "I was way behind on my bills and two of the checks I wrote—one was for twenty-five dollars and the other for twenty dollars—bounced. I was fined one hundred dollars and put on probation for a year. I think that anybody who is fair will find I got into trouble because I've always had trouble handling my financial affairs and not because I acted with criminal intent."

Burnett was shaken by this meeting. He felt that he had been candid with the university but that he had also angered many friends of Wally Butts. He signed a paper at the officials' request which gave the university permission to have his war records opened and examined. He cared about his reputation. He was proud to have been a navigator.

"Doctor Aderhold was always very kind to me at those meetings," Burnett said later, "but I didn't like the attitude of some of the others. I began to feel that I'd be hurt when and if these people decided to make this mess public. That's when I went to my lawyer, and we agreed that I should tell my story to The Saturday Evening Post."

Now the net closed on Wally Butts. On February 23 the University of Georgia's athletic board met hastily in Atlanta and confronted Butts with Burnett's testimony. Challenged, Butts refused to take a lie-detector test. The next day's newspapers reported that he had submitted his resignation, effective immediately, "for purely personal and business purposes."

"I still think I'm able to coach a little," Butts told a reporter that day, "and I feel I can help a pro team."

The chances are that Wally Butts will never help any football team again. Bear Bryant may well follow him into oblivion—a special hell for that grim extrovert—for in a very real sense he betrayed the boys he was pledged to lead. The investigation by university and Southeastern Conference officials is continuing; motion pictures of other games are being scrutinized; where it will end no one so far can say. But careers will be ruined, that is sure. A great sport will be permanently damaged. For many people the bloom must pass forever from college football.

"I never had a chance, did I?" Coach Johnny Griffith said bitterly to a friend the other day. "I never had a chance."

When a fixer works against you, that's the way he likes it. THE END

Butts and Bryant meet as friends, exchange warm greetings before the Georgia-Alabama game at Legion Field, Birmingham, Alabama, in 1960.

Mr. James H. Therrell
Assistant Attorney General
For the State of Georgia

After viewing the alleged notations made by George Burnett while listening to an alleged telephone conversation between Wallace Butts and Bear Bryant on September 13, 1962, it is my opinion, as one of the coaches of the University of Georgia football team, that if such information was given to Coach Bryant before the opening game of the season, it conveyed vital and important information with respect to the offensive and defensive plays, patterns and formations that could have been of value to the University of Alabama football team and could have affected the outcome of the game on September 22, 1962.

Dear Dr. Aderhold:

During the past two years, I have developed business interests. I find that I am having to devote more time to these interests. It is for this reason that I submit my resignation as Athletic Director of the University of Georgia, effective February 29, 1963.

I am grateful to you and the members of the Athletic Board for your cooperation through the years.

Yours very truly,

Confidential

Dear Dr. Aderhold:

I have spent a great deal of time investigating thoroughly the questions that were raised during our meeting in Birmingham and have talked with Coach Bryant at least on two occasions. As best as I can ascertain, this is the information that I have received.

Coach Butts has been serving on the football rules committee, and at a meeting held last summer the Rules Committee the defenses used by Coach Bryant, L.S.U. and Tennessee were discussed at length and new rules were drawn up that would severely penalize these three teams unless the defenses were changes, particularly on certain plays.

Coach Butts had discussed this with Coach Bryant and the two were together at some meeting where Coach Butts told Coach Bryant that the University of Georgia had plays that would severely penalize the Alabama team and not only would cause LeRoy Jordan, an Alabama player, to be [fol. 1421] expelled from the game, but could severely injure one of the offensive players on the Georgia team.

Coach Bryant asked Coach Butts to let him know what the plays were, and on September 14 he called Coach Bryant and told him. There was a question about another one of the offensive plays of the Georgia team that could seriously penalize the Alabama team and bring on additional injury to a player. Coach Bryant asked Coach Butts to check on that play, which he did, and called back on September 16.

It was then that Coach Bryant changed his defenses and invited Mr. George Gardner, Head of the Officials of the Southeastern Conference, to come to Tuscaloosa and interpret for him the legality of his defenses. This Mr. Gardner did the following week. The defenses were changed and Coach Bryant was grateful to Coach Butts for calling this to his attention.

Coach Bryant informs me that calling this to his attention may have favored the University of Alabama football team, but that he doubts it seriously. He did say that it prevented him from using illegal plays after the new change of rules.

I have checked into other matters that were discussed and can find no grounds for Mr. Bisher's accusations, and as I understand it he has now decided for lack of information to drop the matter.

Dr. Aderhold, this continues to be a serious matter with me, and if you have any additional information I would appreciate your furnishing me with it as I am not only anxious to work with you but to satisfy my own mind.

[fol. 1422] Thanking you for coming to Birmingham to meet with me and for sharing this information, I am

Most cordially yours,

DEFENDANT'S EXHIBIT No. 34

The following portion of the Constitution and By-Laws of The National Collegiate Athletic Association was introduced in evidence without objection and admitted as Defendant's Exhibit No. 34:

Section 6 (a) of Article III which is as follows:

"Section 6. Principles of Ethical Conduct.

(a) Individuals employed by or associated with member institutions for the administration, the conduct or the coaching of intercollegiate athletics, and students competing in intercollegiate athletics shall deport themselves with honesty and sportsmanship at all times to the end that intercollegiate athletics, as a whole, their institutions and they, as individuals, shall stand for the honor and dignity of fair play, and the generally recognized high standards associated with wholesome competitive sports. (Adopted: 1/11/52)."

[fol. 1423] Also the following paragraph of the Official Procedure Governing The National Collegiate Athletic Association Enforcement Program, which was likewise introduced as a part of Defendant's Exhibit No. 34, which was admitted without objection:

"Individuals employed by or associated with member institutions for the administration, the conduct or the coaching of intercollegiate athletics are, in the final analysis, teachers of young people. Their responsibility is an affirmative one and they must do more than avoid improper conduct or questionable acts. Their own moral values must be so certain and positive that those younger and more pliable will be influenced by a fine example. Much more is expected of them than of the less critically placed citizen."

ATLANTA DIVISION
Civil Action No. 8311

versus

THE CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY, Defendant.

DEFENDANT'S MOTIONS FOR NEW TRIAL PURSUANT TO FEDERAL RULE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE 60(b)—Filed February 28, 1964

I.

Defendant, having recently discovered evidence, which, although in existence at the time of trial, could not have been discovered by the exercise of due diligence, and which bears directly on the crucial issue in this case and is so significant that it would probably change the result if a new trial were granted, hereby moves this Court pursuant to Rule 60(b) (2) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure to vacate the judgment entered against defendant in this action and to grant a new trial for the following reasons:

1. As more specifically set forth in paragraphs 2 through 11 hereof, it is now established that the testimony of two key witnesses of plaintiff, given in the trial of this action, was false in that:

[fol.1429] (a) Dr. Frank A. Rose, in a deposition taken in an action then pending in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Alabama, entitled Paul Bryant v. Curtis Publishing Company, Civil Action No. 63-166, has, under oath, recanted and contradicted his testimony in this action that he dictated the letter dated March 6, 1963, to Dr. O. C. Aderhold (Exhibit D-21), a copy of which is attached hereto and made a part hereof as "Exhibit A", hastily, because he was catching the 8:40 A. M. flight to Washington, D. C. in order to attend a meeting of the American Council on Education.

(b) Dr. Frank A. Rose's testimony in this action that Exhibit D-21 was a hastily dictated, error-laden letter, has been shown to be false by the testimony, under oath of his secretary, Marian Park, given by deposition in said Bryant action, and corroborated by her shorthand notes contemporaneously made, that Exhibit D-21 was the fifth in order of thirty-two (32) letters "slowly and thoughtfully" dictated by Rose on the morning of March 5, 1963, and by a typed draft of a letter from Rose to Aderhold, dated March 5, 1963, found in the files of Rose, which is substantially but not entirely the letter identified as Exhibit D-21.

(c) The trial testimony of both Dr. Frank A. Rose and Paul Bryant that Bryant at no time remembered the telephone call to Butts of September 16, 1962, has been shown to be false by a letter from Bryant to Rose, dated February 28, 1963, which Rose has admitted, [fol. 1430] under oath, in the aforesaid deposition that he received. In said letter Bryant stated he remembered said telephone call "very well", as well as the subject matters of the call.

2. At the trial of this cause, defendant contended that the allegedly libelous statements contained in an article published in its publication THE SATURDAY EVENING POST entitled "The Story of a College Football Fix" were true and that in fact Wallace Butts, Athletic Director and former football coach of the University of Georgia, had given information on Georgia football plays to Paul Bryant, Athletic Director and football coach of the University Alabama, immediately prior to the September 22, 1962, Georgia-Alabama football game.

3. Defendant introduced uncontradicted records of the Southern Bell Telephone Company which established that Butts and Bryant prior to the football game between the University of Georgia and the University of Alabama, were participants in a fifteen-minute telephone conversation on Thursday, September 13, 1963, and a sixty-seven minute telephone conversation on Sunday, September 16, 1962.

4. Defendant then called George Burnett, a witness who testified that he overheard the telephone conversation on Thursday, September 13, 1962, and that during said conversation Butts in fact gave information on Georgia football plays to Bryant.

5. Defendant then called J. D. Bolton, Comptroller of the University of Georgia, a witness who testified that during the course of the University of Georgia's investigation, Butts, when confronted with the evidence of George [fol. 1431] Burnett, said: "No doubt the guy heard what he said he heard."

6. In their testimony at trial, both Butts and Bryant refused to admit that they had engaged in said telephone conversations, and thus that no information concerning Georgia football plays had passed from Butts to Bryant.

7. As further proof of the fact that Butts had indeed given information concerning Georgia's football plays to Bryant, defendant produced Exhibit D-21, the letter dated March 6, 1963, from Dr. Frank A. Rose, President of the University of Alabama, to Dr. O. C. Aderhold, President of the University of Georgia, wherein Rose stated that Bryant admitted that Butts had given him information on Georgia football plays during the two telephone conversations.

8. Plaintiff then called Rose as a witness in an effort to explain away the damaging effect of Exhibit D-21.

9. The recently discovered evidence which is the basis for this motion completely repudiates the trial testimony of both Bryant and Rose on the following points:

a. At trial, Rose testified that Exhibit D-21 was not an accurate representation of Bryant's statements because the letter was dictated hurriedly on the morning of March 6, 1963, and was not corrected by anyone since Rose had to catch an 8:40 A. M. airplane to Washington, D. C. for a meeting of the American Council on Education. Rose's unequivocal testimony was:

> "A. . . . I told Dr. Aderhold that I would be unable to give him an immediate report of my conversation [fol. 1432] with Coach Bryant, as I had to go to New York City to attend a meeting of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, would be gone most of the week, which I was. I returned on Thursday evening, was tied up in conferences all day Friday, and then had to leave again Monday morning to go to Washington for a meeting of the American Council on Education, and I wrote to Dr. Aderhold that morning before I left.

> "Q. There was identified here yesterday a document, Exhibit No. D.21, being a letter to Dr. O. C. Aderhold, dated March 6, 1963, signed Frank A. Rose, from the office of the President, University of Alabama. The original at the moment is not available. I want to ask you some questions about that, if you recognize it as a letter from you to Dr. Aderhold—
>
> "A. Yes, sir.

> "Q. —or a copy of a letter?
> "A. This is a copy of the letter I dictated to my secretary on the morning of March the 6th, before I left to go to Washington. I had to catch a plane at 8:40 and hurriedly dictated this letter. I did not have time to read it after dictating it. She signed it, was to confer with Coach Bryant and ask him if this was a good interpretation of the conversations that we had. Coach Bryant was out of the City, and she signed it and sent it on to Dr. Aderhold." R. 1415-1416.

• • • • •

[fol. 1433] "Q. Is it your testimony—is it your testimony or is it not that you dictated the letter and your secretary signed it before you saw the letter written? Is that right?

"A. Yes, sir. And she was to check it with Coach Bryant to see if this was a good representation of our discussion.

"Q. Did she check it?

"A. No, sir. He was out of town, and I had told her to get it off that day, and she went ahead and sent it." R. 1457-1458.

Subsequent to trial, the deposition of Rose (filed contemporaneously herewith and made a part hereof) and his secretary, Marian Park, were taken in the action brought by Bryant referred to above. At said depositions, Rose and his secretary testified that Exhibit D-21 was not dictated on March 6, 1963, and Rose admitted that he was incorrect in testifying at trial that he had to catch an 8:40 A. M. airplane for Washington, D. C. on March 6, 1963:

"Q. Now, you stated previously in your testimony in Atlanta that the letter was dictated in a hurry on the morning of March 6th as you had to catch an 8:40 plane to Washington; is that correct?

"A. That's what I stated, but I didn't have my date book there with me previous to leaving here." Dep. 90.

• • • • • •

"A. Well, on checking my calendar before leaving here to go to Atlanta, I looked at March 6th and saw Washington there on my calendar, and took it that that was the destination. The plane leaves here in the [fol. 1434] morning at 8:40 to go to Washington and New York and other places. But I am not positive that this was where I went; I am not positive that I dictated the letter that morning. Now, also, in my testimony, I said on Monday, Monday is the 4th. But, I didn't have my date book with me at the trial to check out the dates, and as I told you, I was going through two crises at that time as far as the University was concerned, and all I did was quickly refer to my calendar and saw that Washington was on March 6th; but, that meeting probably had been changed to our Friday meeting in Washington, which I met with Mr. Bennett, or it could have been that I went to Washington. I don't know, but during that period, during the period of January—of February, March, April, May, June, I took many trips to Washington, and over the State of which there are no records. Nothing on my calendar to designate that, because many of them were confidential trips to try to work out some of these problems that we have here at the University.

"Q. Doctor, is it fair to say that you cannot state, under oath, that you went to Washington on the morning of March 6th?

"A. I am saying that I am not sure.

"Q. And that when you said under oath in Atlanta that you did that, that it may be incorrect?

"A. It could be incorrect because I didn't have my date book. But, to me it is immaterial. I dictated the letter to my secretary hurriedly. I told her to check with Coach Bryant. I left this office to go somewhere, and during the interval, she typed the letter and tried [fol. 1435] to get in touch with Coach Bryant. He was out of town. She went ahead and mailed the letter. I didn't sign it, I didn't read it before it went out, and I left this office and I don't know exactly where I went. My calendar said March 6th I went to Washington.

"Q. Let's go back for a moment.

When did you dictate the letter?

"A. I am not sure when I dictated the letter.

"Q. Now—

"A. I thought looking on my calendar in August that I dictated the letter on Monday morning, March 6th; but, March 6th was Wednesday morning, and all I did was look at March 6th in August before I went over to Atlanta. I saw Washington there, and I thought that was the morning that I dictated the letter and went to Washington. On checking my secretary's notes, she had there that I dictated the letter on Tuesday morning. She states that she could be in error, that it could have been Monday morning. But, apparently now it looks as though I dictated the letter on Tuesday morning and left to go somewhere.

"Q. And Tuesday would be March 5th?

"A. Yes, sir." Dep. 91-93.

"Q. Am I correct that it is now your best recollection that the letter was dictated on Tuesday, March 6th [5th]?

"A. I don't have any recollection about it at all. I don't know when it was dictated. Now, my secretary's notes show that it was dictated Tuesday, March 5th, in the morning. She said, and Mr. Bennett says that I left here on Tuesday morning. No one knows where I was going. I have no record of it. This is not unusual, because during this period I made many confidential trips. Sometimes I would tell Mr. Bennett and [fol. 1436] sometimes I wouldn't tell him.

"Q. It is true your expense records show no trips for March 4, 5, and 6?

"A. There is no expense record for any of these confidential trips.

"Q. I understand that, but I am asking, do your records show any trips, not whether you made any trips, but do your expense records show any trips for March 4, 5, and 6?

"A. I don't think so." Dep. 104.

After a court order was secured in the Bryant case requiring Rose to answer the vital question as to his whereabouts on March 5, 1963, he testified at a subsequent deposition on January 8, 1964, a copy of which is filed contemporaneously herewith and made a part hereof:

"Q. —you were asked this question: 'This trip that commenced on the morning of March 5, do you have any idea how long it took', and I believe you answered, 'No, sir, I don't. I cannot tell you exactly.'

"'Q. Do you know how you traveled', and you answered, 'No, sir.'

Now, you previously answered you did not know where you went on this occasion, is that correct, sir?

"A. Now, where are you on here, what page?

"Q. 138.

"A. 138.

"Q. The last—

"A. Yes.

"Q. —complete answer on that page.

"A. I am not sure where I went.

[fol. 1437] "Q. I want to pick up there, if I may.

"A. All right.

"Q. Do you have any recollection, Dr. Rose, of where you went on that date on March 5th?

"A. Mr. Embry, I don't know what legal term or what a lawyer means by 'recollection.' If you are talking about a guess, I can make a guess. I have done everything I can from checking my notes, notebook, my wife's notebook and talking with members of my staff trying to ascertain exactly where I went that day." Dep. 2-3.

Rose's secretary testified in her deposition in the Bryant case (a copy of which is filed contemporaneously herewith and made a part hereof), that Exhibit D-21 was dictated slowly and thoughtfully and was the fifth letter in a series of thirty-two which took almost one hour and a half to dictate. (Dep. pp. 11-13). Rose's correspondence file contains a carbon copy of an apparent earlier draft of Exhibit D-21, dated March 5, 1963 (a copy of which is attached hereto and made a part hereof as "Exhibit B"), which differs slightly from the March 6 letter Dr. Aderhold received, and yet Rose's secretary testified at her deposition in the Alabama case that no draft was prepared:

"Q. Do you recall whether Mr. Bennett made any changes in the letter?

"A. I know of no changes that were made in the letter.

"Q. Anyone make any changes in the letter?

"A. No, sir." Dep. 18.

"Q. The letter was typed up in final form?

"A. Yes, sir. Now, right here I notice I made two sentences here. Occasionally he will dictate long in- [fol. 1438] volved sentences and I will cut it down into two shorter sentences and I may have done that in this first paragraph.

"Q. You would do that when you transcribe the letter?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. As you read from your notes, part of your secretarial job is to make slight changes necessary in grammar?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. No first draft or anything shown to anyone on this letter?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. You are absolutely certain?

"A. Yes, sir." Dep. 20.

When Mrs. Park read her stenographic notes of the March 6 letter at her deposition, they corresponded more nearly to the March 5 draft than to the actual letter of March 6. (Dep. pp. 7-10).

b. At the trial, Bryant denied that he had made the statements attributed to him in Exhibit D-21. He testified that he was unable specifically to recall either of the two telephone conversations in question and therefore did not remember what matters he and Butts had discussed. In regard to the Sunday, September 16, 1962, call, Bryant testified:

"Q. It is also related or set forth in the article that on Sunday, September 16, 1962, you and Coach Wallace Butts had another telephone conversation, which, I believe the Post states, was initiated by you. You familiar with that general statement as it appears in the Post?

[fol. 1439] "A. I am familiar with it, but I do not remember whether or not I made the call, but according to the telephone company's records, again, the call was made." R. 540.

• • • • •

"Q. Has it occurred to you to check up on the length of this telephone conversation you had with Coach Butts on September the 16th?

"A. It has.

"Q. How long was it?

"A. According to the record I got, sixty-seven minutes.

"Q. And you don't remember anything about it?

"A. I don't remember when or which one. Insofar as the football game, my vivid memory, I went over the notes up there this morning. Outside of that I hadn't even looked at them since the game or the movie.

"Q. You put this call in to Coach Butts, didn't you?

"A. I don't know.

"You don't remember whether you—

"A. I don't know the call was placed.

"Q. You don't remember whether you—don't remember anything that was said?

"A. I remember plenty of things that were said sometime, sir. I don't even know the call was made. I am not sure all these notes weren't made after the call was made." R. 593-594.

* * * * *

[fol. 1440] "Q. As a matter of fact, you called him on September 16; that is your evidence, isn't it?

"A. I don't know that I called him. According to the telephone records somebody called him, and I supposed—I probably did, but I don't know that, sir." R. 600.

Furthermore, in addition to the three excerpts from the evidence of Bryant given at the trial, in three other instances he testified that he did not remember the telephone call in question. (R. pp. 560, 582-583 and 602.) Rose testified that he had interrogated Bryant on several occasions between February 24, 1963, and March 6, 1963, and that Bryant was never able specifically to recall either of the telephone conversations or what was discussed. Concerning the Sunday call, Rose stated under oath:

"A. Coach Bryant told me that night that he didn't remember calling Coach Butts back.

"Q. Well, where did you get—where did you get the date September 16th, and who from?

"A. He told me that he could have called him back, and then I checked our records and there was a call to Athens, and I asked him if he could have made that call, and he still couldn't remember whether he made that call or not." R. 1436-1437.

However, a recently discovered letter, dated February 28, 1963, written by Bryant to Rose, states that Bryant remembered very well calling Butts on a Sunday in the middle of September and discussing the new interpretation of the piling-on rule and two pass "routes". This letter, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof as "Exhibit C", was discovered by defendant on October 2, 1963, pur-[fol. 1441] suant to a Notice to Produce in the Bryant case. It in part provides as follows:

"We were able to find a record of only three calls from me to the person in Athens. The first was on September 9th; the second on September 14th; and the third on September 16th.

• • • • •

"I like to think that these calls were fruitful so far as our program is concerned; particularly, the one the middle of September on a Sunday, because I remember very well that this gentleman discussed in detail with me the new interpretation of the piling on rule and warned us to warn our team to be very careful or either we might lose a good player early like LeRoy Jordan or some other aggressive defensive man. On that particular date, we also discussed at length some coaching points on some pass routes that although we were using we had had very little success with." (Emphasis added).

Despite the fact that Rose admitted he received the said letter, dated February 28, 1963, from Bryant prior to March 6, 1963 (Rose-Alabama Deposition, pp. 81-82), he still maintained throughout his testimony at said deposition that Bryant reported to him throughout Rose's investigation of the matter and even more recently that he had no recollection of the Sunday call:

"Q. Did you also, in the course of this meeting, ask him [Bryant] if he had called Mr. Butts on September 16th, 1962?

[fol. 1442] "A. Yes, sir.

"Q. What was his answer?

"A. And he did not recall whether he had made that call or not, but stated that he could have made the call, that there had been several calls made to Coach Butts and to other coaches and that he could look that up and find out whether he had made that call or not." Dep. 43-44.

• • • • •

"Q. Now, did he give you any explanation as to why he might have called Mr. Butts back on the 16th?

"A. He said that the only reason that he could, and he didn't recall that he had called him back, that he could have called him back, would have been that Coach Butts did not understand some of the questions that he was raising, and was to try to think about it or find out what he was talking about, and that he was to try to get in touch with him; but, he didn't recall whether that had been done, or whether that was it or not." Dep. 53.

• • • • •

"A. . . . that he [Bryant] doubted seriously that he had called Coach Butts back, though there was a telephone charge to that." Dep. 85.

• • • • •

"A. . . . it was during the period of February 24th to March 6th, that I talked to Coach Bryant on those [fol. 1443] two other occasions, but I am not certain. But, I think it was, because I was away from the office an awful lot immediately following that.

"Q. Now, during those subsequent conversations, did Mr. Bryant tell you that he had found there had been a call charged to him to Coach Butts in Athens?

"A. I believe he said that there had been a call charged to the Department, but that he did not recall talking to him specifically himself on that particular time.

"Q. Did he state to you at that time whether he knew what was discussed in that subsequent call on September 16th?

"A. No, sir, except he went over what you and I have gone over that they could have talked about, these rule interpretations, the Butt blocking and Head blocking, and so forth and so on.

"Q. In other words, what he said was there is a call, I don't know whether I made it or not, I don't know what I talked about, if I did make it, but what I might have talked about was rule interpretations, ticket sales and Continental Enterprises?

"A. Yes, sir. That's pretty much it.

"Q. How, did he later—strike that.

And was that the state of your information at the time you decided to write Mr. Aderhold?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. In other words, up to the time you wrote Dr. Aderhold, Coach Bryant had never informed you that they had made a call on September 16th; is that correct?

"A. That's correct.

[fol. 1444] "Q. And he never told you what he talked about on those dates, because he didn't remember what he talked about; is that correct?

"A. That's correct." Dep. 88-90.

* * * * *

"Q. Now, when you—you remember when you gave your deposition in the Butts case on May 27, 1963?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. You were asked about that deposition in Atlanta, and you stated at that time, that is at the time you gave the deposition, you did not know for certain if Bryant had called Butts on September 16th, or what had been talked about?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Now, is that correct, that at that time you gave your deposition you did not know for sure that Bryant had called Butts or what was talked about?

"A. I wasn't certain. I thought at that time that he had called, but I wasn't certain.

"Q. Were you certain at the time you gave your testimony in Atlanta in August of this year, or of last year?

"A. I thought so, and I am still not certain today.

"Q. In other words, you are not certain today that Coach Bryant called Coach Butts on September 16, 1962, or what they talked about?

"A. No, sir, because Coach Bryant said he is not certain." Dep. 120.

• • • • •

[fol. 1445] "Q. Did Coach Bryant tell you, before this letter was written, that he did not know whether he had made the September 16th call to Coach Butts?

"A. He said he didn't remember it, but he said he could have done it.

"Q. Did he also say he didn't remember what was discussed?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Am I correct in understanding that is what he has told you up to the present time?

"A. That is what he told me just recently again.

"Q. But he doesn't remember the calls and he doesn't remember what was said?

"A. All he remembers is that they talked many times about all of these things, but that he doesn't remember specifically.

"Q. Either the call or what was talked about?

"A. Yes, sir." Dep. 132-133.

• • • • •

"Q. Coach Bryant ever admitted to you that he did call Coach Butts on September 16, 1962?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Did he ever admit to you what he talked about on that date, September 16, 1962?

"A. No, sir, but he did tell me that he could have called him and this could have been what they talked about; but, he didn't know for sure." Dep. 137.

10. Therefore, on the crucial issue of whether Butts gave Bryant information on Georgia football plays, plaintiff was able to override Bryant's admission in Exhibit D-21 that [fol. 1446] Butts had in fact given him such information, by means of Rose's characterization of Exhibit D-21 as a hasty, error-laden letter and Bryant's total lack of recollection concerning the telephone calls, when, in fact, defendant's newly discovered evidence establishes that Bryant did specifically recall receiving information about football plays from Butts during one of the telephone calls, that Exhibit D-21 was a careful and thoughtful letter, and that someone reviewed the draft of such letter dated March 5 prior to its becoming the crucial letter of March 6.

II.

Plaintiff, having filed a document on January 30, 1964, repudiating his prior consent for a reduction in the jury's verdict, defendant hereby moves this Court pursuant to Rule 60(b) (3), (4) and (6) to vacate the judgment entered against defendant in this action and to grant a new trial for the following reasons:

1. On January 14, 1964, the Court entered an order granting the defendant's motion for a new trial "unless the plaintiff, Wallace Butts, within twenty (20) days after the service of this order, shall, in a writing filed with the Clerk of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Georgia, remit all the punitive damages awarded above the sum of $400,000."

2. On January 20, 1964, the plaintiff, Wallace Butts, filed a document entitled "Consent of Wallace Butts to Remit" pursuant to which he stated that he remitted all punitive damages awarded above the sum of $400,000.

3. The Court, on January 22, 1964, set aside the previous judgment of August 20, 1963, for the plaintiff in the amount [fol. 1447] of $3,060,000 and entered a new judgment in the amount of $460,000, based upon the plaintiff's "having filed with the Clerk of this Court a writing remitting all of the punitive damages awarded above the sum of $400,000."

4. Subsequent to the filing of defendant's notice of appeal on January 24, 1964, the plaintiff filed a document on January 30, 1964, praying that the Court of Appeals restore the original award of $3,060,000, as the plaintiff had "yielded to the mandate of the District Court and remitted in writing" all punitive damages awarded by the jury above the sum of $400,000.

5. As the plaintiff by the aforesaid document filed January 30, 1964, either revoked his consent for a reduction of the verdict by $2,600,000 filed January 20, 1964, or is maintaining by such pleading that his consent was never voluntarily given for such reduction, the judgment entered by the Court on January 22, 1964, should be vacated, since no valid consent to a reduction of the jury's verdict has been filed by the plaintiff pursuant to the Court's order of January 14, 1964, that portion of the Court's order of such date granting the defendant's motion for a new trial should be allowed to become operative.

A hearing upon these motions is respectfully requested.

Dear Dr. Aderhold:

I have spent a great deal of time investigating thoroughly the questions that were raised during our meeting in Birmingham and have talked with Coach Bryant at least on two occasions. As best as I can ascertain, this is the information that I have received.

Coach Butts has been serving on the football rules committee, and at a meeting held last summer of the Rules Committee the defenses used by Coach Bryant, L. S. U. and Tennessee were discussed at length and new rules were drawn up that would severely penalize these three teams unless the defenses were changed, particularly on certain plays.

[fol. 1450] Coach Butts had discussed this with Coach Bryant and the two were together at some meeting where Coach Butts told Coach Bryant that the University of Georgia had plays that would severely penalize the Alabama team and not only would cause LeRoy Jordan, an Alabama player, to be expelled from the game, but could severely injure one of the offensive players on the Georgia team.

Coach Bryant asked Coach Butts to let him know what the plays were, and on September 14 he called Coach Bryant and told him. There was a question about another one of the offensive plays of the Georgia team that could seriously penalize the Alabama team and bring on additional injury to a player. Coach Bryant asked Coach Butts to check on that play, which he did, and called back on September 16.

It was then that Coach Bryant changed his defenses and invited Mr. George Gardner, Head of the Officials of the Southeastern Conference, to come to Tuscaloosa and interpret for him the legality of his defenses. This Mr. Gardner did the following week. The defenses were changed and Coach Bryant was grateful to Coach Butts for calling this to his attention.

Coach Bryant informs me that calling this to his attention may have favored the University of Alabama football team, but that he doubts it seriously. He did say that it prevented him from using illegal plays after the new change of rules.

I have checked into other matters that were discussed and can find no grounds for Mr. Bisher's accusations, and as I understand it he has now decided for lack of information to drop the matter.

[fol. 1451] Dr. Aderhold, this continues to be a serious matter with me, and if you have any additional information I would appreciate your furnishing me with it as I am not only anxious to work with you but to satisfy my own mind.

Thanking you for coming to Birmingham to meet with me for sharing this information, I am

Dear Dr. Rose:

We were able to find a record of only three calls from me to the person in Athens. The first was on September 9th; the second on September 14; and the third on September 16th. He must have telephoned me some during that period because I am sure we talked more than that. As a matter of fact, over the years, I have talked with him by phone some eight or ten times per year. I might add, I have done the same thing with other coaches, Duffy Daugherty, Bud Wilkinson, Darrell Royal, and Bobby Dodd, for instance.

There were two additional calls made to Athens; one from our Publicity Department on September 11 and one by an Assistant Coach on September 27.

I like to think that these calls were fruitful so far as our program is concerned; particularly, the one the middle of September on a Sunday, because I remember very well that [fol. 1455] this gentleman discussed in detail with me the new interpretation of the piling on rule and warned us to warn our team to be very careful or either we might lose a

On that particular date, we also discussed at length some coaching points on some pass routes that although we were using we had had very little success with. This man over the years had had tremendous success with the passing game; in particular, these two routes and after leaving these coaching points we began to use the two particular passes often, including one for the clutch Touchdown against Tennessee in Knoxville the third week in October.

Again, I want to say that I have for years discussed football; ours, his football with this man and like to feel that I would still have that privilege because I have a great deal of respect for his knowledge of the game, particularly the passing game.

IN UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

PLAINTIFF'S RESPONSE TO DEFENDANT'S MOTIONS FOR NEW TRIAL UNDER FEDERAL RULE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE 60(b)—Filed March 6, 1964

In response to defendant's motions for new trial filed on February 28, 1964, plaintiff, Wallace Butts, respectfully shows:

I.

All of defendant's allegations relating to certain so-called "recently discovered evidence" are specifically denied and, at most, constitute a continuation of defendant's manifest design to trifle with this Honorable Court.

1. To argue, as defendant does, that the evidence in question "would probably change the result if a new trial was granted" is untenable and ridiculous. Said evidence and particularly the letter from Paul Bryant to Dr. Frank A. Rose dated February 28, 1963 and attached to defendant's motions as Exhibit 3, actually sustain the fact that at no time has Wallace Butts ever acquainted Paul Bryant with any plays or formations to be used by a University of Georgia football team against the University of Alabama. Arguments are supposed to be supported by fact. The facts are dead against defendant, and defendant knows it.

Furthermore, the purported significance attached by defendant to this so-called "recently discovered evidence" cannot be reconciled with defendant's action in paying Paul Bryant $300,000, tax free, to dismiss his libel suit growing [fol. 1457] out of this identical Saturday Evening Post article when at that very time defendant had all of this "recently discovered evidence" in its possession.

2. The scurrilous and unwarranted assertion that the testimony of witnesses Paul Bryant and Dr. Frank A. Rose given at the trial of this case "was false" is specifically denied and is absolutely unsupported. To thus falsely, inexcusably, and publicly accuse two innocent individuals is just another manifestation of defendant's proudly admitted editorial policy of "sophisticated muck-raking".

3. To say under oath, as defendant has in its said motions, that this alleged "recently discovered evidence" (as weak and irrelevant as it is) "could not have been discovered by the exercise of due diligence" is entirely and patently false. Defendant states on page 11 of its said motions that the aforementioned innocuous letter from Paul Bryant to Dr. Rose, dated February 28, 1963, "was discovered by defendant on October 2, 1963 pursuant to a Notice to Produce in the Bryant case". Defendant gives no reason or excuse for not using the same type process to obtain access to this letter prior to the Wallace Butts trial by exercising the same "due diligence" it boasts it used prior to the date scheduled for the Paul Bryant trial. This, for sure, clearly demonstrates that defendant exercised about as much "due diligence" in this regard as it did in attempting to ascertain the truth before it published its libelous article in the March 23rd issue of the Saturday Evening Post.

II.

Defendant's second ground in its motions for new trial is as equally lacking in merit as the first and all allegations [fol. 1458] contained therein, being purely legal conclusions, are expressly denied.

The substance of defendant's argument is this: Plaintiff's unconditional "consent" to the remittitur, i.e. the reduction in the amount of the punitive damages award, is no consent at all because plaintiff later decided to file a cross-appeal and ask the Court of Appeals to reinstate the original award or increase the amount by which the Trial Court reduced such award. But, defendant argues, one cannot file a cross-appeal in such a situation. Thus we find ourselves in the anomalous position of defendant contending that what it says is an invalid and illegal cross-appeal taking precedence over and thereby nullifying a perfectly valid and legal remittitur. We respectfully submit that if, as a matter of law, plaintiff cannot cross-appeal after accepting a remittitur, then the proper forum to urge this point is in the Court of Appeals and not here.

Wherefore, having fully responded, plaintiff prays that said motions be summarily dismissed.

[Title omitted]

DEFENDANT'S ADDITIONAL MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL PURSUANT TO FEDERAL RULE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE 60 (b)—Filed March 23, 1964

Because of the drastic change in the law of libel and the constitutional restrictions placed upon an action for libel brought about by the Supreme Court's recent decision, on March 9, 1964, in the case of New York Times Company v. Sullivan, 32 U.S. Law Week 4184 (March 10, 1964), the defendant hereby moves this Court, pursuant to Rule

[File endorsement omitted]

60 (b) (6) to vacate the judgment entered against defendant in this action and to grant a new trial for the following reasons:

1. The verdict and judgment in this case awarded plaintiff damages for injury to his reputation as a football coach on account of statements made by defendant concerning plaintiff's actions while acting as Director of Athletics of the University of Georgia. The Director of Athletics of the University of Georgia is a public official: Page v. Regents of University of Georgia, 93 F.2d 887 (5th Cir., 1937) (reversed in 304 U.S. 439 upon other grounds).

2. Said New York Times Company v. Sullivan case held that the constitutional guarantees provided by the First and Fourteenth Amendments prohibit a public official from recovering any "damages for a defamatory falsehood relating to his official conduct unless he proves that the statement was made with 'actual malice'—that is, with knowledge that it was false, or with reckless disregard of [fol. 1459b] whether it was false or not."

3. The following portions of the instruction given by the Court to the jury constitute error in that the Court stated that general damages could be recovered by the plaintiff without the plaintiff being required to prove the existence of "actual malice" on the part of the defendant:

> "I charge you that under Georgia law, a written publication which affects one injuriously in his trade or calling, such as the plaintiff Butts' coaching profession in this case under consideration, and contains imputations against his honesty and integrity, and which would, as its natural and probable consequence, occasion pecuniary loss, constitutes a cause of action and is libelous per se, and the right follows to such damages as must be presumed to proximately and necessarily result from such a publication." R. 1624.
> "As the publication was libelous per se, I charge you that malice is to be inferred. However, the existence of malice may be rebutted by proof of the defendant which, in all cases, shall go in mitigation of damages.

"At this point, I think it is well that I should explain to you the meaning of malice under the law of defamation. Malice, in the law of defamation may be used in two senses. First, in a special or technical sense to denote absence of lawful excuse or to indicate absence [fol. 1459c] of privileged occasion. Such malice is known as implied malice or malice in law. There is no imputation of ill will to injure with implied malice. Secondly, malice involving intent of mind and heart or ill will against a person is classified as express malice or malice in fact." R. 1630.

4. Applying the constitutional standards enunciated in the said New York Times Company v. Sullivan case, the proof presented in the instant case to show actual malice on the part of the defendant lacks the "convincing clarity", which such constitutional standards demand, and thus such evidence cannot sustain the judgment entered for the plaintiff. There was no evidence introduced in the instant case to prove that the statements made in the article defendant published in the March 23, 1963 issue of "The Saturday Evening Post" concerning plaintiff were made with knowledge on the part of the defendant that they were false, or with a reckless disregard of whether they were false or not. On the contrary, plaintiff proved in his own case that the Post editors responsible for the publication of the story—Blair and Thomas, R. 1024—were satisfied of the truthfulness and accuracy of the story. R. 1038, 1137-1138.

Therefore, the instant case was clearly tried upon unconstitutional assumptions, the correct principle unfortunately not being announced until after the trial by the Supreme Court's landmark decision in the New York Times Company v. Sullivan case. As Mr. Justice Goldberg recognized in that case, "we are writing upon a clean slate."

A hearing upon this Motion is respectfully requested.

NORTHERN DISTRICT OF GEORGIA

ATLANTA DIVISION

Civil Action No. 8311

WALLACE BUTTS, Plaintiff,

versus

CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY, Defendant.

OPINION AND ORDER—APRIL 7, 1964

Defendant, on February 28, 1964, under Rule 60(b) (2), Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, 28 U.S.C.A., filed a motion for a new trial upon the ground of the discovery of new evidence, contending that such evidence conclusively demonstrates the falsity of the testimony of two of the plaintiff's witnesses, Dr. Frank A. Rose and Coach Paul Bryant, and strongly supports the defense of justification. The motion is also based upon alleged conduct of plaintiff in attempting to avoid the conditions on which defendant's motion for a new trial was denied and a judgment in plaintiff's favor was granted.

Thereafter, defendant filed an additional motion for a new trial pursuant to Rule 60(b), Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, because of a change in the law of libel and the constitutional restrictions placed upon an action for libel by virtue of the United States Supreme Court decision of March 9, 1964, in the case of New York Times Company v. Sullivan.

Even though a final judgment had been entered in the case at hand and an appeal from such judgment has been perfected by the filing of a notice of appeal, this District [fol. 1461] Court retains jurisdiction to consider and deny such motions under Rule 60(b). See Ferrell v. Trailmobile, Inc. (5 C.A., 1955), 223 F. 2d 697.

The gist of Part I of the first motion is that there is substantial variance between the testimony of Dr. Rose and Coach Bryant in their testimony at the trial of this case and depositions which were later given by Dr. Rose and his secretary, Mrs. Marian H. Park, in an action pending in the Northern District of Alabama in the case of Paul Bryant v. Curtis Publishing Company, Case No. 63-166, which testimony by deposition was taken on January 8, 1964.

In attempting to sustain its plea of justification, the defendant introduced at the trial of this case a letter dated March 6, 1963, written by Dr. Rose, as President of the University of Alabama, to Dr. O. C. Aderhold, as President of the University of Georgia. The letter concerns certain telephone calls relating to conversations on new football rule changes which had transpired between Coach Bryant and plaintiff Butts. At the trial, Dr. Rose in his testimony, in attempting to explain the contents of the Aderhold letter, stated that the letter was hurriedly dictated on the morning of March 6, 1963, and signed by his secretary, Mrs. Park, as he (Dr. Rose) was attempting to catch an early morning plane for Washington, D. C., to attend a meeting of the American Council on Education.

In the depositions taken in the Bryant case, defendant shows that Dr. Rose did not go to Washington, D. C., on the date of March 6, 1963, nor was the letter hurriedly dictated as there was a previous draft of the Aderhold letter, dated March 5, 1963, which draft was substantially the same as the contents of the March 6, 1963, original letter mailed and received by President Aderhold.

[fol. 1462] The defendant further asserts that Dr. Rose, in his testimony at the trial testified that Coach Bryant told him he did not remember the call of September 16, 1962, to Coach Butts in Athens, Georgia, although he could have made it, and even though Rose had interrogated Bryant several times between February 24, 1963, and March 6, 1963. However, by a recently discovered letter, dated February 28, 1963, written by Bryant to Rose, Bryant, in this letter, informed Rose that he remembered the call to Butts in the middle of September very well, and that although Rose admitted receiving the letter dated February 28, 1963, prior to March 6, 1963, Rose still maintained throughout his testimony in said deposition that Bryant reported to him through all the investigation that he had no recollection of the Sunday, September 16, 1962, telephone call to plaintiff Butts.

Defendant contends that on the issue of the letter (Exhibit D-21) plaintiff was able to explain away the contents of the letter by means of Rose's characterization of Exhibit D-21 as a hasty, error-laden letter, and Bryant's total lack of recollection concerning the telephone call, when in fact the newly discovered evidence establishes that Bryant did recall the Sunday telephone call and that the letter was not a hasty, error-laden letter, but was a careful and thoughtful letter, and that someone received the draft of such letter dated March 5, 1963, prior to its final draft on March 6, 1963.

The phrase "newly discovered evidence" refers to evidence of facts in existence at the time of the trial of which the aggrieved party was excusably ignorant. In the case of Chemical Delinting Company v. Jackson, 193 F. 2d 123, 127, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals has held:

> [fol. 1463] "The motion must show that the evidence was discovered since the trial; must show facts from which the court may infer reasonable diligence on the part of the movant; must show that the evidence is not merely cumulative or impeaching; must show that it is material; and must show that such evidence will probably produce a different result."

See also King v. Leach (5 C.A., 1942), 131 F. 2d 8.

The evidence clearly shows that the letter from Bryant to Rose was in existence in the latter part of February, 1963. The evidence further shows that the draft of the letter from Rose to Aderhold was in existence prior to March 6, 1963. Under the liberal discovery rule provided by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the defendant could have obtained all of this evidence which it now has available prior to the trial of this case in August, 1963. No facts have been shown by the movant here from which this Court may infer reasonable diligence on its part.

Even assuming the evidence could not have been produced at the trial in August by due diligence—inferences not fairly conveyed by the record—the evidence now presented tends merely to affect the weight and credibility of the evidence of Dr. Rose and does not constitute a proper basis for a new trial. See English v. Mattson (5 C.A., 1954), 214 F. 2d 406, 409; Grant County Deposit Bank v. Greene, 200 F. 2d 835.

After considering the "newly discovered evidence" presented in the motion at hand, and from this Court's review of all the evidence presented at the trial of the case, even if all the testimony entered at this hearing on the motion [fol. 1464] had been presented at the trial in August, this new evidence affecting the credibility of Dr. Rose would not have changed the verdict in this case. See Chemical Delinting Company v. Jackson, supra, and English v. Mattson, supra.

The second ground advanced by the defendant for a new trial under Rule 60(b) is to vacate the judgment entered against the defendant and to grant a new trial because after the plaintiff had filed his written consent to the remittitur (this consent still being on file) that, to the defendant's motion for a new trial, the plaintiff has filed a notice of cross-appeal. The question of the cross-appeal and the merits thereof are not for decision by this trial Court, but is a matter to be considered on appeal. See Woodworth v. Chesbrough, 244 U.S. 79, 61 L. Ed. 1005.

The thrust of defendant's additional motion for a new trial under Rule 60(b) is based upon the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court, rendered on March 9, 1964, in the case of New York Times Company v. Sullivan. The Supreme Court's ruling in the Times case, speaking through Mr. Justice Brennan, held:

> "The constitutional guarantees require, we think, a federal rule that prohibits a public official from recovering damages for a defamatory falsehood relating to his official conduct unless he proves that the statement was made with 'actual malice'—that is, with knowledge that it was false or with reckless disregard of whether it was false or not."

The contention of the defendant is that the Times case is controlling for the case at hand, and that under this motion the previous judgment should be vacated and a new trial [fol. 1465] granted. In order that a prior decision of a court shall govern, such prior decision must be in point, and as a test in determining whether the adjudicated case is a precedent, such case should be measured by a similarity to the second case in its controlling facts. See United States v. L. A. Tucker Truck Lines, Inc., 344 U.S. 33, 97 L. Ed. 54.

In the Times case, the Supreme Court held actual malice must be proved to recover general damages in actions of libel brought by public officials against critics of their official misconduct. However, the concurring opinion of Justices Goldberg and Douglas stated:

> "Purely private defamation has little to do with the political ends of a self-governing society. The imposition of liability for private defamation does not abridge the freedom of public speech."

In the present motion at hand, the defendant contends that plaintiff's action comes under the Times ruling in that plaintiff was a public official, and that the verdict and judgment was awarded plaintiff as damages for injury to his reputation as a football coach on account of a publication made by the defendant concerning plaintiff's actions while acting as Director of Athletics at the University of Georgia. In the trial of the case, movant defended the action by entering a plea of justification, and no defense was made or evidence introduced concerning Butts' position as Athletic Director or as a public official. Georgia law provides under certain conditions communications concerning the acts of public men in their public capacity and reference therewith to be deemed privileged. Georgia Code Annotated, Section 107-709(6). Just where in the ranks of government employees the "public official" designation extends, the Supreme Court in the Times case did not de- [fol. 1466] termine.[1] The decision did determine that Sullivan, as an elected city commissioner of Montgomery, fitted into the category of public officials.

Under Georgia law, members of the Board of Regents of the University System are public officials. Georgia Sessions Laws, 1931, Pages 7, 45. The evidence presented at the trial shows that plaintiff was Director of Athletics at the University for some two years prior to February, 1963, at which time he resigned. The article complained of was published in the defendant's issue of March 23, 1963. The Board of Regents at both the University of Georgia (located at Athens) and the Georgia School of Technology (located at Atlanta) control the athletic programs of the two institutions, but the details are handled at each institution by an athletic association composed of faculty members and alumni, and each is incorporated to facilitate such business transactions as improvement of athletic grounds and equipment at the two institutions. The schedule of athletic contests for each year is approved by the faculty and by the Regents. The separate athletic associations at both institutions are wholly under the control of the Regents and are their agents. For further details of the athletic setup, see Page v. Regents of University System of Georgia, 93 F. 2d 887, 891-892. As was stated in the Page case, the "coaches" are also members of the faculty. [fol. 1467] Plaintiff Butts was Director of Athletics at the University. The Athletic Director, along with the various coaches in the Athletic Department, were employed by the separate incorporated athletic association. However, the defendant seeks by this motion to extend the category of "public officials" to one employed as agent by the University of Georgia Athletic Department. Even if plaintiff was a professor or instructor at the University, and not an agent of a separate governmental corporation carrying on "a business comparable in all essentials to those usually conducted by private owners" [2] he would not be a public officer or official. Under Georgia law, the position of a teacher or instructor in a State or public educational institution is not that of a public officer or official, but he is merely an employee thereof. Regents of the University System of Georgia v. Blanton, 49 Ga. App. 602(4); Board of Education of Doerun v. Bacon, 22 Ga. App. 72. To hold plaintiff, an employee of the University Athletic Association, a public official would, in this Court's opinion, be extending the "public official" designation beyond that contemplated by the ruling in the case of New York Times Company v. Sullivan, supra.

[1] In Footnote 23 of the majority opinion, it was stated: "We have no occasion here to determine how far down into the lower ranks of government employees the 'public official' designation would extend for purposes of this rule, or otherwise to specify categories of persons who would or would not be included. Cf. Barr v. Matteo, 360 U.S. 564, 573-575. Nor need we here determine the boundaries of the 'official conduct' concept. It is enough for the present case that respondent's position as an elected city commissioner clearly made him a public official, ..."

If it were conceded that plaintiff Butts was a "public official", the case of New York Times Company v. Sullivan would not permit the vacating of this Court's previous judgment, as the ruling in the Times case does not prohibit a public official from recovering for a defamatory falsehood where he proves "actual malice"—that is, with knowledge that it was false or with reckless disregard of whether it was false or not. (Italics supplied.) In the trial of this case, there was ample evidence from which a jury could [fol. 1468] have concluded that there was reckless disregard by defendant of whether the article was false or not. See the Court's ruling on defendant's motion for a new trial dated January 14, 1964. Butts v. Curtis Publishing Company, 225 F. Supp. 916.

[2] See Allen v. Regents of the University System of Georgia, 304 U.S. 439, 451.

For the reasons stated above, the defendant's motions under Rule 60(b) to vacate the judgment entered against the defendant are denied.

This the 7th day of April, 1964.

Lewis R. Morgan, United States District Judge.

PAUL BRYANT, Plaintiff, vs.

THE CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY, a corporation, Defendant.

Tuscaloosa, Alabama
January 8, 1964

Before: Carmen Zegarelli, Commissioner.

Appearances:

Mr. William S. Pritchard and Mr. Winston B. McCall, of the firm Pritchard, McCall & Jones, Frank Nelson Building, Birmingham, Alabama, appearing for the Plaintiff.

Mr. James Runzer of the firm Pepper, Hamilton & Scheetz, 123 South Broad Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; and Mr. Roderick MacLeod, Jr., of the firm Beddow, Embry & Beddow, 2121 Building, Birmingham, Alabama, appearing for the Defendant.

Mr. James J. Bennett, University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, Alabama, appearing for Dr. Frank A. Rose.

[fol. 1473] I, Carmen Zegarelli, Court Reporter and Notary Public, State of Alabama at Large, Acting as Commissioner, certify that on this date as provided by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure of the United States District Court and the foregoing stipulation of counsel, there came before me at the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, Alabama, beginning at 9:30 a. m., Dr. Frank A.

Rose, witness in the above cause, for oral examination, whereupon the following proceedings were had:

Mr. MacLeod: We have the usual stipulation, that it is not necessary to state objections except as to the form of questions, and any other objections can be made at the time the deposition is used at the trial?

Mr. Pritchard: We will so stipulate, except we reserve the right to object and seek a ruling by the court as to any question that we deem would be improper in a deposition at any time prior to the trial and including the time of trial.

Mr. MacLeod: All right.

Mr. Runzer: Has the witness been sworn?

The Reporter: Yes, sir.

Dr. Frank A. Rose, being duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

[fol. 1474] Examination.

By Mr. Runzer:

Q. Dr. Rose, as you are aware, you have had your deposition taken at least once before and I am here to ask you a great deal of questions about some matters we are concerned with.

If you don't understand anything I say, or you don't hear me or you feel I am going too fast, I want you to tell me that and stop me, because we all have lots of time, although I understand that you have to leave at 1 o'clock for an appointment in New York. We have plenty of time, and we don't want you to get confused or misinterpret anything I say. I want you to stop me at any point if you don't feel it is clear to you.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is also understood that you are under subpoena for this deposition and because of a previous commitment, we will adjourn at 1 o'clock, and if examination is not complete, we will continue it.

Mr. Pritchard: We do not make any such agreement as that. We want you to complete your examination now.

Mr. Runzer: Off the record.

(Off the record discussion.)

Mr. Pritchard: Let's quit talking, all of this speech making, let's ask the questions and get the answers down, that's the purpose of the deposition, you know.

Mr. Runzer: Are you finished? I said it is understood [fol. 1475] that we will adjourn at 1 o'clock if we are not through, because you have a previous commitment, and meet again Wednesday of next week at this office at 10 o'clock; is that understood?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are still under subpoena to appear here at that time, and place?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Give us your full name, please?

A. Frank A. Rose.

Q. What does the A stand for?

A. Frank Anthony Rose.

Q. Your address?

A. President's Office, University, Alabama.

Q. Your home address?

A. President's Mansion, University, Alabama.

Q. And you are the President of the University of Alabama?

A. That's correct.

Q. And you have been since what year, sir?

A. Since September 5, 1957.

Q. And prior to your employment here, where were you employed?

A. President of Transylvania College at Lexington, Kentucky.

Q. What is your educational background?

A. I graduated from Transylvania College in 1942, and Transylvania Seminary in 1946, and did Graduate Work at the University of London in 1950.

Q. You are known as Dr. Rose, do you have a PhD Degree, sir?

A. No.

Q. Is that an Honorary Degree?

A. I have five Honorary Degrees from five Universities and Colleges.

[fol. 1476] Q. But, your only degrees are from Transylvania College and Transylvania Seminary; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you get any degree from the University of London?

A. No, sir.

Q. What type of work did you do at the University of London?

A. Graduate work in Philosophy.

Q. Now, you recall back in February, 1963, you received a phone call from the President of the University of Georgia?

A. Yes.

Q. You recall the date of that?

A. No, sir. It was a few days before February 24th, I believe it was. Let me check just a minute.

Q. Let the record show the witness is referring to a calendar book?

A. It was a few days prior to Sunday, February 24th.

Q. By a few, you mean two or three days?

A. I think it was more than that, because he wanted to meet on, I believe, on a Friday, and I couldn't meet on Friday because I had agreed to go to the Alabama Press Association Meeting in Montgomery on Friday, the 22nd. So, we agreed we would meet on Sunday, February 24th.

Q. Are you certain that he asked you to meet on Friday, the 22nd?

A. Well, he wanted to meet on another date and I am pretty sure that was Friday the 22nd. That is the reason I couldn't attend, because of my commitment, and it may have been he wanted to meet on Saturday, but I was going over to Lake Martin with my family on Saturday, February 23rd.

[fol. 1477] Q. Where were you when you received this telephone call?

A. I was here in this office.

Q. And Dr. Aderhold state where he was?

A. No, he did not.

Q. I want you to tell me exactly what Dr. Aderhold told you that day?

A. I don't know that I could tell you exactly, but I can give you pretty much the meaning of the conversation.

Mr. Pritchard: I am going to interpose an objection there at this point that that is totally irrelevant and immaterial in this cause, and I want that to appear in the record.

Mr. Runzer: You certainly have the right to make your objection.

Mr. Pritchard: Thank you for your courtesy. Go ahead with your examination, if you will.

Q. Will you answer the question, please?

A. Yes. He called and asked if I could see him one day that week, and I think it was on either Friday or Saturday, but I think it was Friday, the 22nd.

I explained to him that it would be impossible because of commitments that I had, but I did inform him that I could see him on Sunday morning, February 24th. He said, well, that he would be over and meet with me in Commissioner Bernie Moore's office. I asked him what was the nature of the meeting. He said it was confidential, but that he would like to say that it might involve an ethical matter.

Q. Who suggested Mr. Moore's office as a place of the meeting?

A. He did.

[fol. 1478] Q. Did he indicate to you that Mr. Moore would be present at the meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he indicate that anyone else would be present at the meeting?

A. No, sir, he did not. It was my understanding that no one else was to be present.

Q. Is that something he told you or was that the understanding you carried away from the conversation?

A. When he said it would be a confidential meeting, it was my understanding that Commissioner Moore, Dr. Aderhold and I would be the only ones there.

Q. Did he ask you to bring anyone else to the meeting?

A. No.

Q. And gave you no indication of what it was except that it was an ethical matter?

A. That he would say it might be called an ethical matter.

Q. Have we now exhausted everything that you discussed in that telephone conversation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time was the meeting set for?

A. 9 o'clock Sunday morning.

Q. Dr. Aderhold ever call you before to set up a meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. So, this would be an unusual occurrence for you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, the meeting was held where?

A. Was held in Commissioner Moore's office in the Redmont Hotel.

Mr. Pritchard: It wasn't there, was it?

[fol. 1479] Mr. Runzer: Just a moment. It is only fair if you don't know a specific fact or don't remember, it is agreeable for you to say so.

A. Wherever Commissioner Moore's office is, I think it is the Redmont Hotel.

Q. In Birmingham?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Between the day of the telephone call and the time of the meeting, did you discuss Dr. Aderhold's phone call with anybody?

A. No, sir.

Q. When did you leave Tuscaloosa to go to Birmingham for the meeting?

A. I left about 7:30 Sunday morning, February 24th.

Q. Did you drive down there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Drive yourself or someone go with you?

A. I think I drove myself.

Q. And did you go straight to the meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. And who was present when you arrived at Commissioner Moore's office?

A. When I first arrived, no one was present. I went down and sat down in the lobby and waited and then Commissioner Moore came in and I waited until he had time to open up his office and then went up and just a few seconds after I arrived there, Dr. Aderhold and Mr. Cook Barwick came into the meeting.

Q. Just a moment.

Let's go back a moment. You were in the lobby and Commissioner Moore came in?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him in the lobby?

A. No.

[fol. 1480] Q. Did he see you?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. You waited a few moments for him to open his office?

A. That's right.

Q. What floor is his office on?

A. I can't recall.

Q. Is it upstairs?

A. Yes, it is upstairs.

Q. Did you ride up on the elevator with him?

A. No; I rode up on the elevator by myself.

Q. You went in, and sat for a few minutes; you said for a few minutes you and Commissioner Moore were there by yourselves; is that correct?

A. No. By the time I got my hat and coat off, Dr. Aderhold and Mr. Barwick came in.

Q. In the interval before Dr. Aderhold and Mr. Barwick arrived, did you have any conversation whatsoever with Mr. Moore?

A. I may have had conversation, but as far as talking about this matter, it wasn't discussed until Dr. Aderhold and Mr. Barwick came in.

Q. Do you recall now what that conversation with Mr. Moore was?

A. No, sir.

Q. All right.

A. I am not even sure that there was a conversation.

Q. Now, I assume then Dr. Aderhold and Mr. Barwick also took their coats and hats off?

A. Yes.

Q. And does Mr. Moore's office have an outer room and inner room?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you proceed from the outer room into the inner room?

[fol. 1481] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any conversation in the outer room at all prior to the meeting?

A. I don't recall. There may have been greetings, but I am sure that's all there was to it.

Q. Now, all four of you went into Mr. Moore's inner office?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that his personal office, do you know?

A. Yes.

Q. As opposed from the secretary's office?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, did Mr. Moore sit in his usual seat behind his desk?

A. I am not sure. I think he sat over to the side of his desk.

Q. Did Mr. Barwick and Dr. Aderhold sit together?

A. Yes. Well, they sat adjoining one another over to the side. I sat directly in front of the desk and took notes from the outside of the desk. Commissioner Moore, I think, was sitting over here (indicating).

Q. That would be in the left side of the desk as you face it?

A. I am sorry, I can't tell you all of those details. He would have been in my left.

Q. And Dr. Aderhold and Mr. Barwick would have been to your right?

A. Dr. Aderhold sat over there and—

Q. And also would be to your left, sir?

A. To my left (indicating).

Mr. Runzer: Off the record a minute.

(Off the record discussion.)

Q. All right, continue please.

[fol. 1482] A. Mr. Barwick sat next—between Dr. Aderhold and me.

Q. Now, who opened the meeting?

A. I believe that the first thing that was said was Commissioner Moore informed all of us that he had received a telephone call from Mr. Furman Bisher, one of the Sports Writers of one of the Atlanta papers telling him that he knew of the meeting and would like to be informed after the meeting was over of our discussion that we had had. And Commissioner Moore asked how he knew of the meeting and he did not comment.

And, at that time, I looked at Dr. Aderhold, because it had been my feeling that it was a confidential meeting and Dr. Aderhold, I think, may have been a little surprised about it, too. And, Mr. Cook Barwick said, I am sure that the finger must point to me, as I represent Mr. Furman Bisher as his personal attorney, but I do not represent him in the case for the Saturday Evening Post. This had to do with the first suit that Coach Bryant had filed against the Saturday Evening Post and Mr. Bisher for an article under the title of Speaking Out or something to that effect, that the Saturday Evening Post carried. And this upset me a great deal, because we had had over problems with Mr. Bisher and he had written some very difficult things about the University of Alabama and made some insinuations that were unjust and this disturbed me that he would know that we were going to be in this meeting, which Mr. Cook Barwick assured all of us that he had not discussed this meeting with Mr. Bisher.

Q. Now, at this point, am I correct in assuming that you still did not know what the subject matter of the meeting was?

A. No, sir.

Q. You say no, sir; you mean that I am correct in saying that?

[fol. 1483] A. I did not know what the subject of the meeting was; yes, sir.

Q. What was the next thing that was said?

A. Then, I believe that Dr. Aderhold proceeded to inform me the purpose of the meeting.

Q. What did he tell you, sir?

A. Well, I can give you, in essence, what he said to me, and that was that there had been a telephone call to Coach Bryant from Coach Butts in which it had been overheard by a man by the name of Burnett in which Coach Butts had given to Coach Bryant some of the plays and pattern plays of the University of Georgia prior to the Alabama-Georgia Football Game in September, 1962. And, that they had talked with Mr. Burnett about the matter and felt that Mr. Burnett was telling the truth. I was led to believe either by word or by insinuation that Mr. Burnett was a reputable man. There was no doubt that he had heard everything that they had told me regarding plays, two or three players, and other things relating to the game.

Q. Let me stop you there for a moment. What was your personal reaction upon hearing this?

A. Well, I was tremendously shocked and greatly disturbed because I had a lot of confidence in Dr. Aderhold.

I had a lot of confidence in just meeting Mr. Cook Barwick and being—although I must say I had some reservations about him after he informed me of his relationship with Mr. Furman Bisher and the fact that Furman Bisher knew about the meeting that we were having.

Q. Now, is it at his point that you began to take notes as you told us before?

A. I began to take notes when Dr. Aderhold began talking.

Q. Do you still have a copy of those notes?

A. No, sir, I do not.

[fol. 1484] Q. Now, going back a moment. You say you have given us the essence of the conversation because I assume you don't recall the exact words at that time?

A. No, sir, and I don't think any man could.

Q. All right.

Well, trying to distill it down, would it be fair to you to say that you were told that it had been overheard that Mr. Butts gave Mr. Bryant information about the Georgia team which might have been of some value in preparing for the Georgia-Alabama game?

A. That's right.

Q. And as you said, you were shocked or stunned by this information?

A. Yes, sir, very much so.

Q. Did Dr. Aderhold or Mr. Barwick go into any of the details of the exact information that was allegedly passed?

A. Yes, sir. They gave me essentially the information that I read later in this Saturday Evening Post article.

Q. Have you ever compared the so-called Burnett notes with the information that was given you by Dr. Aderhold and Barwick that day?

A. No, I haven't.

Q. Are you generally familiar with the contents of the Burnett notes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And would it be fair to say then that the information they gave you paralleled the information that is contained in the Burnett notes?

A. Pretty much and a little bit more.

Mr. Pritchard: I want to here and now object to the attorney using the statement the information which they gave him when, as a matter of fact, it was merely statements [fol. 1485] they made to him, and not information but merely statements that they were repeating that they had heard from someone rather than the term information, because there is no information about it. In my opinion I think that was misleading and improper.

Q. Now, I think he was saying that the information that was being passed to you by Dr. Aderhold and Mr. Barwick was a little more than was contained in the Burnett notes; is that correct?

Mr. Pritchard: I renew my objection to the use of the word information. It was merely hearsay of the purest type, it is a matter of hearsay rather than information.

Q. Would you go ahead and answer?

A. Yes, sir. Either Dr. Aderhold or Mr. Cook Barwick said that it appeared to them from the statement that they had that this was going to be a scandal that was much larger than the Black Socks Scandal.

Q. And by that I assume they were referring to the 1919 baseball scandal?

A. I suppose that was it.

Q. All right.

A. And that Mr. Barwick was in a lawyer's office in Atlanta a few days after talking with Mr. Burnett and that Furman Bisher and young Roderick Beddow came into the office and stated that they understood that there was a check, a photostatic copy of a check in the amount of $10,000.00 written by Paul Bryant to a gambler in which he supposedly bet on a football game. And I made inquiry as to what game that could have been, and Mr. Cook Barwick explained to me that it was the Georgia Tech-Alabama Football Game of 1962, in which we lost that ball game by one point. I asked—

Q. You say we, you refer to the University of Alabama?

[fol. 1486] A. University of Alabama.

Q. All right.

A. And I asked how that could be, and he said, well, Coach Bryant could have ordered his quarterback to call a field goal play rather than a passing play in which the ball was intercepted.

Q. This information that we were just discussing, namely this information relating to the Georgia Tech Game was not part of what Mr. Burnett was supposed to have overheard?

A. That is true.

Q. Now, do you remember whether Commissioner Moore said anything during this meeting?

Mr. Pritchard: That's the purest form of hearsay and I think it is a pure waste of time and money to attempt to examine a witness about—

The Witness: I don't know whether—

Mr. Runzer: I— Just a moment, Doctor. Unfortunately, as good a reporter as Mr. Zegarelli is, I don't believe he can get more than one at a time.

Mr. Pritchard: I object. It is the purest form of hearsay.

Mr. Runzer: I might add it is for the doctor's accommodation that if you wish to make a continuing objection, you certainly have the right to make any objection you want to.

[fol. 1487] Mr. Pritchard: I propose to exercise it too, so go ahead.

Mr. Runzer: Would you read the question, please.

(Question read.)

Q. Doctor, would you answer that question?

A. I do not recall what he said, but we all discussed the points that had been raised and talked about, including Commissioner Moore.

Now, did you take notes of the specifics of the information that was supposedly overheard by Mr. Burnett?

A. Yes, sir. I would say that I had about four small pages of notes contained in about four or five points that they had specifically raised which I used in my discussion with Coach Bryant when I met with him to talk to him about the accusation.

Q. Let me digress for a moment, Doctor.

Do you have any background in football at all?

A. Just sandlot football.

Q. By that, you mean you played sandlot football?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever coached a football team?

A. Yes, sir, at one time during the war they couldn't get a coach at this high school nor an acting principal nor a dramatic coach, and I assumed all of the roles. But, I don't believe that I won but one ball game.

Q. What was the name of the high school?

A. Nicholasville High School, Nicholasville, Kentucky.

Q. How many years did this situation go on?

A. I believe—let me see. That would have been two or three years; I am not sure, may have been a little longer.

Q. This was during the war years?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1488] Q. That would be in the early 40's?

A. No, sir. It would have been in the middle 40's, I believe. I think it was 1943 to 1945, or 6, somewhere right in there.

Q. And in an effort to perform this role, did you try to educate yourself in this new business?

A. Yes, sir. I tried to, but I couldn't do it. I had to rely on some of the Alumni of the school and the former coach who had to give up the job because he had additional duties, he worked out the formations for me, and the boys explained to me what they were the year before. There were only 75 boys in the high school, and they wanted to play and the superintendent of schools asked me if I would supervise it. They weren't interested in winning, they were just more interested in having recreation.

Q. Excuse me.

Was the name of that Nicholasville?

A. Yes, sir. I believe it has been changed to Jessamine County.

Q. Spell that.

A. J-e-s-s-a-m-i-n-e.

Q. That's in Tennessee?

A. No, in Kentucky.

Q. Excuse me, Kentucky.

A. Nicholasville, Kentucky.

Q. All right, Doctor.

One other question while we are digressing.

Have you ever, during the course of this event which would date sometime from the middle of February, 1963, to date, retained either Mr. McCall or Mr. Pritchard, as your attorney?

A. Well, I have talked to them on many occasions and received counsel from them. I haven't formally retained them, but I have used them as my counsel.

[fol. 1489] Q. Now, how long did this meeting on the 24th last?

A. I would have to guess, sir. But, I would say about an hour and a half, to two hours.

Q. And have we exhausted the subject matter of that meeting?

A. As much as I recall, and as well as I recall.

Q. Now, you made a statement over in Atlanta when you testified that this matter was one of the most disturbing things that had ever occurred to you in College Administration?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. And that is a true statement?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And coupling that with your remark of a few moments ago that you were upset and stunned, I assume this was a matter of great information to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, did Dr. Aderhold say or Mr. Barwick say why they were informing you of the information?

A. Well, they wanted Dr. Aderhold and wanted me to co-operate with them on making an investigation of the matter and we agreed that I would and that they would continue and that we would share information that we obtained from time to time.

Q. Then, would it be fair to say that you were asked to conduct an investigation from the point of view, from the geographical point of view from the University of Alabama?

A. I don't know that I was specifically asked to conduct an investigation, but it was expected that I would.

Q. And did you indicate that—

A. And understood that I would, and I indicated I would.

Q. In other words, regardless of whether it was a request made of you, it was agreed among the group that you would conduct an investigation here in Tuscaloosa?

[fol. 1490] A. Yes, sir.

Q. And part of your investigation would be to find out whether Coach Butts had given any significant information to Coach Bryant for the Georgia-Alabama Game; is that correct?

A. That is true; yes, sir.

Q. And that is what you set about to do when you left the meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you state any concrete steps to this group that you would take in conducting this investigation?

A. No, sir, I did not, not that I recall.

Q. Let's try to test your memory a moment.

A. We may have—no, sir, I don't believe that we did.

Q. Did you say that you would discuss it with any specific individual in the University Administration?

A. No, sir, but I think this was understood that I would talk to people about it.

Q. Would you say that it was understood or did you say that you would?

A. No, sir. I just told them that I would look into it and let them know.

Q. Did you say that you would discuss it with the University Attorneys?

A. No, sir.

Q. Are you certain about it?

A. I am not positive, but I can't imagine that I would say that. I don't see the reason at that time for saying that.

Q. Now, where did you go—strike that.

Did you leave first from the meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. All right.

A. We thought it would be best, because if we all did leave together in the event that a newspaper reporter might see us, he would begin to ask questions about it.

[fol. 1491] Q. And I assume, during the course of this meeting as you indicated, you asked questions about things, about this material?

A. Sir?

Q. You asked questions of Dr. Aderhold and Mr. Barwick?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you told that Mr. Burnett had taken a lie detector test?

A. I believe that I was told that at that meeting. If I wasn't told that at that meeting, I learned it later.

Q. You don't recall whether you learned it at that meeting or not?

A. I think I did learn it at that meeting.

Q. When you learned he had taken a lie detector test, did they also tell you that he had passed the lie detector test?

A. Yes. When I learned of the lie detector test given Mr. Burnett, I was told that he had passed it.

Q. Were you also told at this meeting that he had given an affidavit as to this information?

A. I don't recall, sir.

Q. Now, it was agreed then that you would leave separately so as to throw any newspaper man off the scent?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go directly back to Tuscaloosa?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time did you arrive back there?

A. I would say sometime between 12 and 1 o'clock.

Q. Now, during the course of this meeting, did you indicate that there would be some difficulty in your doing something in that coming week because of other commitments?

A. Yes, sir. I told them that I had to be in Washington and New York and Chicago for a meeting. Dr. Aderhold [fol. 1492] stated that he too was supposed to go to the meeting in Chicago, and that it was agreed that as soon as I got some information that I would share it with him and he would share information that he had with me.

Q. Did you make any remarks as to the whereabouts of Coach Bryant during this meeting?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Well,—

A. I didn't know what his schedule was and I didn't know whether he was here or whether he was away.

Q. So, then, you couldn't have made a remark as to where he was?

A. Sir?

Q. You couldn't have made a remark as to where Coach Bryant was?

A. It may be that I could have, yes, sir. It may have been at that time that I knew where he was. I just don't recall.

Q. You don't recall?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you drove straight home and got in Tuscaloosa some time around 12 or one o'clock; is that right?

A. Sometime between 12 and 1 o'clock.

Q. Am I also correct that during this meeting you were never shown the so-called Burnett notes?

A. No, sir.

Q. What did you do when you got home?

A. Well, I was so upset about the matter that I went upstairs and sat down and thought about it for awhile, and then my wife called me down to lunch and I went down and had a very light lunch and went back up and thought about it some more.

Then I decided the best thing for me to do was take a nap and then think about it when I was more refreshed and relaxed.

Q. And did you do that?

[fol. 1493] A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right.

A. After taking a tranquilizer and I slept for about an hour.

Q. Excuse me.

Is it your custom to take a tranquilizer?

Mr. Pritchard: We object to that. My gracious sakes alive, we are here to try a lawsuit.

Mr. Runzer: Let me finish the question, please.

Mr. Pritchard: I am going to object to the pure waste of time.

Mr. MacLeod: You have your objection.

Mr. Runzer: The question is not over yet, with all due respect to you, Colonel Pritchard.

Mr. Pritchard: I object on the grounds the question is incompetent, irrelevant, immaterial, as to whether or not he took a tranquilizer before or after he took his nap, or if he took them on any other occasion. I want to say it is merely a waste of time in an effort to get into the record testimony that has no bearing on the issues to be tried in this case.

Mr. Runzer: Do you make any objection—

[fol. 1494] Mr. Pritchard: That's my objection in the record, please.

Mr. Runzer: I am sure he has gotten it down.

Q. Doctor, I will finish the question.

Did you take a tranquilizer because of the upsetting nature of this news, or is it your custom to do that?

A. Because of the upsetting nature of the news.

Q. You answered the question, thank you, Doctor.

I assume when you awoke you began to think about this matter again?

A. Yes, sir. I thought about it from about 2:30 to 3 o'clock until about 5 and I thought of it from every angle that I possibly could. I thought about the people that I should see first, and by 5 o'clock came to the conclusion that the thing for me to do is confront the man that had been accused.

Q. That was your final conclusion of this thought process; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you run down for me in brief fashion exactly what your thought process was. You said you considered whom you would consult with, who are you speaking of?

A. Well, on most of the problems that arise at the University, I talk with Mr. Jefferson Bennett, the Administrative Vice-President of the University.

Q. And this is the gentleman that is seated to my right here?

A. Yes, sir.

And I usually, in athletic matters, usually consult Mr. Jefferson Coleman, who was former business manager of Athletics at the University, and who is now Director of Alumni affairs. I usually consult Mr. Ernest Williams who is a member of the executive committee of the Board of [fol. 1495] Trustees. And I felt, in this situation, after thinking it through, that I owed it, a thing of this serious a nature, to talk to the man that had been accused first.

Q. What, in your mind, was Coach Bryant accused of at this point?

A. In my mind he was accused of having received information from Coach Butts that would affect the outcome of the University of Georgia-Alabama Football Game.

Q. And this was an accusation that you were setting out to investigate?

A. Yes.

Q. Now—

A. And it was insinuated either consciously or unconsciously on the part of Mr. Barwick and Dr. Aderhold that it might be a great deal more serious than the receiving of information that might affect the outcome of the ball-game.

Q. Now, if you will tell me, did you then proceed to get in touch with Mr. Bryant?

A. Yes, sir. I called Mr. Bryant around 5 o'clock.

Q. Where did you reach him?

A. At home and told him that I would like to have him meet me in my office at 7 o'clock. He told me that he would be glad to do so and he came to my office at 7 o'clock.

Q. Let me stop you there a moment.

Did you give him any indication as to why you wanted to meet him?

A. No, sir.

Q. You said, just meet me at 7 o'clock at my office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he said he would?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Up to this point, how would you describe your relationship with Mr. Bryant, a friendly one?

[fol. 1496] A. Yes, it is a friendly relationship; however, it is the same relationship that exists between me and all of my staff members, personal relationship.

Q. There is a personal relationship?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, he came to your office at 7 o'clock?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By your office, you mean the room we are seated in right now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, between the time you left the meeting and the time that Coach Bryant arrived here, did you discuss the matter with anyone else?

A. Yes. I believe that I told my wife what Dr. Aderhold and Mr. Barwick had told me, and I believe that I discussed with her the people that I should talk with first and it was also her thinking that I should talk to the man first that had been accused.

Q. But, outside of your wife, you had discussed the matter with no one before the meeting with Coach Bryant?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, the two of you were alone in this room?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was anyone in the outer office?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you sit in the chair where you are sitting right now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That's the one behind the desk?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did Coach Bryant sit?

A. He sat on my left where Colonel Pritchard is sitting facing me. Over on my right facing me, I get confused; I am lefthanded.

[fol. 1497] Mr. Runzer: Off the record.

(Off the record discussion.)

Q. So, Coach Bryant sat at the corner of the desk at your right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at this time, did you have in your possession the notes that you had made?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who opened the meeting?

A. I did.

Q. What did you say?

A. I tried, as best I could, to relate to him the information or statements that Dr. Aderhold and Mr. Cook Barwick had given to me regarding his conversation with Coach Butts.

Q. Did you start off by giving it in conclusion form or did you give it—give him the specifics of information that was supposedly passed?

A. I don't recall, but I believe that I gave him the points that I had taken down of what I had considered the essence of the meeting and related it to him as best I could, the story from the beginning to the end as it had been given to me.

Q. Now, during this initial remark by you, did you tell him that he was accused of receiving information from Mr. Butts that could affect the outcome of the Georgia-Alabama Game?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he allow you to talk interrupted—uninterrupted, excuse me?

A. Well, at each point I would ask him questions about it. I wanted to know if he had talked to Coach Butts, what was the nature of the conversation, and then I went down each point talking to him about that.

[fol. 1498] Q. Did you tell him first then that he was accused of receiving information that could affect the outcome of the game?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he make any remark when you said that?

A. He was tremendously shocked and upset about it, too, and asked me to go ahead and tell him everything that had been said, and I did. And then, we discussed it point by point after that.

Q. Just so that it is clear in my mind, the first thing you told him he had been accused of receiving information from Mr. Butts that could affect the outcome of the football game; is that correct?

A. I don't know what it was exactly in that manner, sir. I did reveal to him that Coach Butts supposedly called him and called him from off of the football field and gave him information about the University of Georgia.

Q. And this was about the first thing that you said to Mr. Bryant in this office that night?

A. Yes, sir.

I got down to it rather quickly.

Q. And then, although he was shocked, he asked what was the nature of the information he was supposed to have received; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you discussed—went through the points you had taken notes of at the meeting that morning; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you finished going through the points, did he let you go through them without making any remark or did you stop on each one?

A. I don't exactly recall. I think that we discussed the overall accusation. He said that he had talked to Coach Butts on many occasions on many subjects as he did to [fol. 1499] many coaches, those with whom he played on his schedule, and those whom he didn't play.

Q. Did you ask him whether he had—whether he had received a phone call from Mr. Butts on September 13th 1962?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was his answer to that question?

A. He said he didn't know, but he would be glad to look it up, that he come to him several times in the last—during that period and he talked to several other coaches during that period, but that he was sure that his record or telephone bills would show whether he had talked, and he would be glad to look it up on that specific date.

Q. Just so we are perfectly clear, we are talking about a call on September 13th, when Mr. Butts called Mr. Bryant. Did he say his records would show that?

A. No. I believe that had to do with his call that he was supposed to have made back to him.

Q. That's what I had thought, you had misunderstood my question.

My question is, did you ask him whether he had received a call from Mr. Butts on September 13th, 1962?

A. He did not specifically remember that call though he did say that Wally Butts had called him and that he had called Wally Butts and that they had talked on several occasions about many things. But, he did not specifically remember that call.

Q. Did you also, in the course of this meeting, ask him if he had called Mr. Butts on September 16th, 1962?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was his answer?

A. And he did not recall whether he had made that call or not, but stated that he could have made the call, that there had been several calls made to Coach Butts and [fol. 1500] to other coaches and that he could look that up and find out whether he had made that call or not.

Q. That was the call he was going to check on his telephone bill record?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The September 16th call?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you discuss with him the specific points that Mr. Burnett was supposed to have overheard?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember what any of those points were?

A. I will try to recall them to the best of my ability. There has been quite a bit of time that has gone by.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. And I try—these were the points that Dr. Aderhold and Mr. Barwick had raised, and this was what I was trying to do in my letter, to the best of my ability to interpret.

Q. Did you take notes of your meeting with Coach Bryant?

A. Yes, sir. I took a few notes down on the notes I had taken up there.

Q. Of course, they are also gone now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, proceed; you were telling us what you were saying?

A. He said that they could have talked about many things, one that they talked about primarily was—that he had talked to him about a great deal about the interpretation of new football rules, that he was concerned about that. Neither he nor his staff fully understood the rules. He stated that they could have—

Q. Let me stop you at each point, sir.

I think it would be more orderly if I did. You say that [fol. 1501] Mr. Bryant said that they could have talked about rules or rule interpretations; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I want you to be sure, in your own mind, did he say they could have talked about that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or did talk about it?

A. No, sir. He said that they could have, and he was sure that they had from time to time discussed it. He said that he was greatly concerned about some of the interpretations, and that Coach Butts had been on a National Rules Committee and that he wanted to get from him as much as he could about some of these things. He said—he was trying to interpret for me the telephone call, if he had made one back, you see, or if Coach Butts had called him, that they could, at that time, have talked about Continental Enterprises.

Q. Let me stop you one minute. Let's try to stick to the rule changes or interpretations?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it correct that they could have talked about it, not that they did talk about it?

A. On these specific telephone calls?

Q. That's right.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he not say on the 13th of September, 1962, or 16th of September, 1962, that we did discuss rule interpretations?

A. No, sir, but they had discussed them during recent time, during that period there.

Q. This was presented to you as a possibility, as something that could have been discussed during the so-called telephone conversations?

A. Along with several other things.

Q. I understand that. We are dealing with one at a time. [fol. 1502] Mr. Bryant said this is one of the things that could have been discussed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the next thing that could have been discussed?

A. Could have discussed Continental Enterprises in which he had some stock and that I believe he said he had made some money and that he had lost some money on this stock and that Coach Butts probably was closer to it or knew more about it than he did and this was one of the things they could have talked about, because they had discussed this within a period of time during that time period.

Q. Did you—

Mr. Pritchard: Please, don't interrupt the witness. Go ahead, Doctor.

A. He said they could have talked about the tickets because Georgia had not sold all of the tickets they had to the football game, and that he needed tickets and was very much interested in selling all of the tickets to the game. I think this pretty much was some of the things he said they could have discussed.

Q. Now, did Coach Bryant deny to you that he had ever received any information about Georgia Football from Mr. Butts?

A. Specific techniques or plays?

Q. You told him that he was accused of receiving information from Mr. Butts about Georgia Football that could affect the outcome of the game?

A. The 1962 team?

Q. That's correct.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, did he deny that?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1503] Q. What were his words?

A. He said that's ridiculous.

Q. Now, you say then that he said they could have talked about rule changes, Continental Enterprises, and ticket sales; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, how long did this meeting take?

A. Lasted about three hours.

Q. All right.

A. And I asked him many, many questions, every question that I could possibly think about that would have any bearing on the telephone call that Coach Butts supposedly made to him and that he supposedly made to Coach Butts.

Q. Did you ask him if he and Mr. Butts ever discussed any football plays?

Mr. Pritchard: That's repetitious. We have been over it at least—the record will bear me out, we have been over it at least three times, and it is a useless waste of time to ask him the same question three times. I object, it is purely repetitious and a waste of time.

Mr. Runzer: Your objection is in the record. Would you please answer the question? Read the question, please.

(Question read.)

A. Of the 1962 Georgia team?

Q. No, just any football plays?

A. Yes.

Q. What did he say?

A. He considered himself one of the best defensive football coaches in America and he considered Coach Butts one of the best offensive coaches in America, and that on many [fol. 1504] times that he had shared defensive techniques with Coach Butts as Coach Butts had shared offensive techniques with him, just as he had the same discussions with Bud Wilkerson of Oklahoma and Coach Royal of Texas and other coaches and he named others that I have forgotten.

Q. Am I correct in saying that he said he did discuss football plays with Coach Butts?

A. Not in the telephone conversation, the plays of the Georgia 1962 team. He stated in that that he was concerned about some of the rule interpretations that had been raised at the meeting of the coaches of the Southeastern Conference sometime during the summer in Birmingham, and the statements that had come to him that Mr. Gardner had informed the officials to watch some of the techniques of some of the teams in the Southeastern Conference, including the University of Alabama, that he was primarily concerned with such things as Butt blocking and Head blocking, and that Coach Butts probably knew more about the interpretation of these things than anybody else, and that he knew that he had several discussions with Coach Butts on this.

Q. Now, my question, Doctor, is, did he admit that he discussed offensive plays with Mr. Butts?

A. No, sir.

Q. He did not admit that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you raise with him the point of information the notes that a player named Woodward committed himself too quickly?

A. I asked him—I told him that I had in my notes that Dr. Aderhold and Barwick said that this was supposedly discussed and he said he knew nothing about this. I said, well, could you try to explain to me what it would mean and he tried to explain to me what it would mean. But, he knew nothing about any individuals or anything that had to do [fol. 1505] with that. But, he said that in explaining some kind of technique they could have talked about movements of players but he said as far as any specific individuals, no.

Q. Now, my question is, did you ask him whether he heard Coach Butts say that Woodward commits himself too quickly?

A. He said he did not.

Q. He did not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You certain that is what he said in response to that question?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he ever indicate that he didn't understand the use of the phrase, Woodward commits himself too quickly?

A. Let me put it this way. I don't recall exactly what he said, but he did not recall any names or any discussion of that. But, he did try to explain to me on my further questions what it would mean.

Q. In other words, he did understand what the use of the term, Woodward commits himself too quickly means?

A. Yes, but he didn't recall that there was ever any discussion.

Q. I understand he didn't say it was discussed, but he did understand what the term, Woodward commits himself too quickly means?

A. Yes.

I think he would understand what anyone committing himself—I mean, he said to me, specifically, that no names could have been discussed, because he didn't even know anything about the name.

Q. I understand that, but he did tell you that he did understand what that term meant, that Woodward committed himself too quickly?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1506] Q. Now, did he give you any explanation as to why he might have called Mr. Butts back on the 16th?

A. He said that the only reason that he could, and he didn't recall that he had called him back, that he could have called him back, would have been that Coach Butts did not understand some of the questions that he was raising, and was to try to think about it or find out what he was talking about, and that he was to try to get in touch with him; but he didn't recall whether that had been done, or whether that was it or not.

But, he did say that there was some things they had talked about or could have talked about that he did not understand.

Q. And these things concerned what?

A. Concerned rule interpretation.

Q. Did he ever say—

A. New rule interpretation.

Q. Did he ever tell you that he called Butts back because Butts was going to check on a play that Butts had used?

A. He didn't say that specifically, but he did talk about the techniques, the interpretation of the techniques.

Q. Did he ever tell you that he called Butts back because Butts was checking on information about a play that Butts had used in the past?

A. He didn't use the word play. This was my interpretation of it, but he did talk about the techniques.

Q. In other words, he did not say that he called Butts back to get information about a play that Butts had used?

A. No, sir.

Q. Are you saying no, he did not say that?

A. No, he did not say that specifically.

Q. Did he tell you—excuse me.

In the course of this conversation, I assume Mr. Gardner's visit was also discussed?

[fol. 1507] A. Yes, sir.

In fact, he was the one that told me about it, Mr. Gardner's visit.

Q. That is, Mr. Bryant is the one that told you about that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Up to that point, until he told you, had you known that Mr. Gardner had been here?

A. No, sir.

Q. All right.

A. And there was no reason for me to know that Mr. Gardner had been here. Coach Bryant did tell me that he had gotten permission from Commissioner Moore to ask Mr. Gardner to come here and that Commissioner Moore said that he could have that permission to do it, and that the Southeastern Conference or Commissioner Moore's office would pay his expenses for the visit.

Q. Did he tell you, during the course of this meeting, that he changed his defensive techniques as a result of these conversations with Gardner and Butts?

A. Yes, sir; but he said that he and his coaches still were not clear on some of the interpretations of the new rules regarding the techniques, but that they had done the best that they could and that they sat around tables and drawing boards and that Mr. Gardner went over several of these things and that they still were not completely clear on it, but were most anxious that we not have any problems which we had had with Georgia Tech in 1961.

Q. But, you say he did tell you that as a result of talking with Mr. Gardner and Mr. Butts, he did change his defensive techniques?

A. Yes, sir, that he had made some changes in his techniques that would have penalized the Alabama team.

Q. And these were defensive techniques?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1508] Q. And these changes were made as a result of his conversation with Mr. Gardner and Mr. Butts?

A. And the meeting in Birmingham of the Southeastern Conference Coaches where this was discussed, which Commissioner Moore informed me that Coach Bryant asked more questions than all the other coaches, because he was really concerned about it, and this was the reason he consented to have Mr. Gardner come because he did not want Alabama to get any adverse publicity on penalties.

Q. Did he tell you when he made these changes on defensive techniques?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he tell you that he had learned anything different and changed his techniques from Coaches Gardner and Butts?

A. I would say if he made changes, he did. He didn't specifically say that, but that was the interpretation I got.

Q. In other words, from what he said, you understood him to say that he did learn something from Gardner and Butts that made a change in his defensive techniques?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he say that in talking to Mr. Butts that it prevented Alabama from being penalized?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Did he say that as a result of talking with Mr. Butts he got information that favored Alabama?

A. I asked him that question, and he said that he may have, but he doubted it seriously.

Q. He said that he may have, but that he doubted it seriously?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that his exact quote, as you recall it?

A. Well, I don't know that that is his exact quote, but this is my interpretation.

[fol. 1509] Q. Did he say that the visit of Gardner and his conversation with Butts prevented him from using illegal plays?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the course of the conversation, did he say that if Lee Roy Jordan had been expelled from the game, he might have lost that football game?

A. He used that as an illustration. This was the illustration that he used.

Q. Tell me what he said. What was the illustration?

A. I asked him to try to explain to me just what he was talking about in our defensive techniques and interpretation of the rules and he tried to explain to me what it might have meant if Lee Roy Jordan butt blocked or head blocked. Now, I still don't know what that means.

Q. In other words, he did say to you that if Mr. Jordan had been expelled from the football game, it could have cost Alabama the football game?

A. He said it could have. I don't know if he specifically put it in that way, but that was the interpretation that I put on it, and I think most of us that knew the team that Alabama had at that time, if we lost the best defensive man that we had on the team, that we would have been in serious trouble.

Q. Now, did he say that they discussed what could happen with the offensive plays of any school and the defensive plays of Alabama if they were illegal?

A. I don't recall specifically his just making that pointed statement, but in the overall discussion, this was what came out of it.

Q. All right.

A. That if we used any illegal defensive techniques or tactics that it could cause an injury to a boy like the Holt-Granning incident with Georgia Tech. It could cause us to be seriously penalized. It could cause us to get the bad [fol. 1510] publicity from the Georgia papers which we had been receiving for almost a year and that he was greatly concerned about that.

Q. Well, then, he did say that the discussion with Butts concerned the offensive plays of any schools and defensive plays of Alabama; is that right?

A. Yes. This would have to be in regard to the change of techniques and rules interpretation.

Q. But, he did state what I just said; is that correct?

A. I don't think he came right out and said that exactly as you put it, but this was the interpretation I got out of it.

Q. What did he say?

Mr. Pritchard: I object to that as being five times that question has been asked and the witness has answered it fully and clearly and concisely and it is a pure waste of time. It is repetitious and I object to it.

Q. Would you answer the question, now, please, sir?

A. I can't tell you exactly what he said, but I can tell you the interpretation that I got from him and the discussion that we had.

Q. By interpretation, you mean what he said?

A. I can tell you what my interpretation of the conversation with him was and that was to the effect that if he used illegal offenses that it could seriously penalize the University by bad publicity and might lead to the injury of another player.

Q. But, did he say that the conversation with Butts revolved around the offensive plays of any school and the defensive plays of Alabama if they were illegal?

A. Yes, and he said that he had to know this part of it, that he considered Coach Butts the leading offensive Coach in the country and that he considered himself the best defensive Coach.

[fol. 1511] Q. Did you discuss, during your conversation with Mr. Bryant, that Mr. Burnett said he overheard specific Georgia plays being mentioned?

A. Yes, sir. I told him, and he said that was ridiculous.

Q. He denied that happened?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you tell him that specific formations of the Georgia team were discussed by Mr. Butts?

A. No, sir.

Q. You did not say that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, if the meeting started at 7, it took about three hours, you said?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Presumably it was over in the neighborhood of 10 o'clock?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the end of your conversation, did you consider your investigation complete?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was anything left for Coach Bryant to do?

A. Yes, sir. He was to go and get from his files or to get Mr. Callahan to get from his file the telephone calls that had been made from his office from a period of August 1st until October 1st.

Q. And did you plan to do anything else yourself?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you plan to do?

A. I planned to discuss it with Mr. Bennett and with Mr. Coleman, former business manager of Athletics and a member of the Athletic Committee and with Mr. Williams, a member of our Executive Committee.

Q. Now, I understand that during the week following this Sunday meeting, you had out of town commitments in Chicago, Washington, and New York?

[fol. 1512] A. I will have to consult my book. Is that all right?

Q. Certainly, sir.

This would be the week of February 24th, 1963?

A. Yes, sir. I left for Washington on February 25th, Monday; February 25th. I attended a meeting of the Commission on Accreditation in Washington on Tuesday, February 26th.

Q. Let me stop you here a moment. You left on Monday the 25th; is that correct?

A. According to my book, I did. I couldn't swear to it, but I am sure because the meeting started at 9 o'clock on Tuesday, February 26th, and there is no other way I could have gotten there that early in the morning.

Q. Do you recall what time you left Tuscaloosa that morning?

A. Usually the plane leaves at 8:40. At that time, it was leaving at 8:40 in the morning and then it left at 2:20 in the afternoon.

Q. Are these times from Tuscaloosa or Birmingham?

A. From Tuscaloosa.

Q. And do you recall whether you caught the morning or afternoon flight this Monday?

A. I think I caught the morning flight, the 8:40 flight.

Q. And where—

A. But, I am not positive about that.

Q. Where does that flight stop? Does it stop in Birmingham?

A. I believe at that time it was stopping in Birmingham and I don't know whether I took it from Tuscaloosa to Birmingham and caught another plane out of Birmingham, of whether I went to Atlanta and caught a plane out of Atlanta.

Q. Which line is it that flies the 8:40 out of Tuscaloosa?

A. Southern. That's the only line we have coming in here. Now, it could have been I could have taken the [fol. 1513] University plane or I could have used some other plane, because—but, I think that morning I took the Southern 8:40 flight out of there.

Q. And you don't recall whether you changed planes in Birmingham or not?

A. No, sir, or Atlanta.

Q. You retain your ticket intineraries?

A. No, sir. After I make out my expense account, I throw away the papers.

Q. And your recollection is that you got into Washington what time?

A. I am sorry, I can't answer that question.

Q. Did you have any business in Washington preceding the meeting of the Commission of Accreditation?

A. I could have.

Q. Do you recall?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you say you might not have taken the Commercial Flight you might have taken the University Flight?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What type of plane is that?

A. That is a Cessna 310 Twin Engine.

Q. Who flies it?

A. Different people. Sometimes we use pilots out of Dixie Air, sometimes we use students, sometimes I get pilots that are friends.

Q. Now, I think you also said that there was another possibility as to how you could have traveled on the 25th?

A. Yes, sir. I used planes of friends of mine from time to time to go to different places. I used Gulf States Paper Company's plane.

Q. What type of plane is that?

A. That's an Aero Commander Twin Engine.

Q. Have a regular pilot for that plane?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1514] Q. All right.

A. I used Mr. Winston Blount's.

Q. Would you spell that for the Reporter, please?

A. B-l-o-u-n-t.

He is a member of our Board of Trustees.

Q. What type of plane is that?

A. Lockheed Lodestar.

Q. Who flies that plane?

A. He has pilots, he has two or three planes.

Q. All right.

A. I used Mr. Bill Sellers.

Q. How do you spell that?

A. S-e-l-l-e-r-s.

And I used single engine plane of Mr. Harry Pritchard, Neal Morgan, anybody that is an Alumnus of the University that has a plane that I can get on.

Q. Is it your recollection that on this trip you took the commercial Line?

A. I think I took the Commercial Line that morning.

Q. You attended the meeting in Washington on Tuesday of the Accreditation Committee?

A. The title is the Commission on Accreditation of Service Experiences. It has to do with courses with the Military at colleges and universities and centers, Educational Centers around the world.

Q. Now, on that Monday which would be the 25th, did you do any further work on this Butts-Bryant matter?

A. I don't recall whether I did or not.

Q. Did you discuss it with anybody that day?

A. I don't recall. It may have been that I called Mr. Luther Callahan, our comptroller, and asked him to get me the telephone records. But, I don't believe that I discussed it or the reason why with anyone.

Q. In other words, on this Monday which would be the [fol. 1515] 25th, you may have asked Mr. Callahan to forward you some telephone records?

A. Yes, sir, and have it in my office when I return.

Q. But you are not sure you did that?

A. No, sir.

Q. But, you discussed with no one else other than the possible exception of Mr. Callahan, this matter?

A. I am pretty sure I didn't, because I didn't discuss it with you, Mr. Bennett, until Friday, did I?

Q. Now, did you discuss it with anyone either in person or by correspondence or over the telephone while you were in Washington?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you in Washington all day Tuesday?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the meeting take all day?

A. I think it took until about 4 or 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

Q. Do you remember the names of any other individuals that were at the meeting?

A. No, sir, but I can get them for you.

Q. What type of individuals—

A. I know the people that were on the committee. I don't know whether they were present there or not. They were University Presidents and Deans.

Q. Was it a large committee?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About how many, roughly?

A. Again, I am going to have to guess. I would say about thirty and it was composed of Military Personnel, too, out of the Pentagon.

Q. From Washington where did you go?

A. To New York City.

Q. And when did you leave Washington, do you recall?

[fol. 1516] A. I think I left Tuesday, the 26th, but I am not sure. But, I think that is when I left.

Q. How did you get from Washington to New York?

A. I flew on a plane.

Q. Commercial Plane?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what was your business in New York?

A. I was to attend the meeting of the National Foundation which used to be the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. I am not sure they had a quorum and had a meeting at that time, because there had been several times that I had gone up and at the last minute people would have to cancel out and they wouldn't have a quorum and they would change the meeting. But, that meeting was set and that was the purpose of my going to New York.

Q. Now, is this a Committee or Commission or Board of Trustees, or what of his organization?

A. Board of Trustees.

Q. How many are on it?

A. I think twelve.

Q. Who are they?

A. Mr. Basil O'Connor is the Chairman, Mr. Tom Russell of Alexander City is on it now, I don't believe he was on it then. The Provost of the University of Chicago, is on it, and I don't recall his name. There are several others that I just don't specifically recall.

Q. Now, you don't recall whether they had a meeting on that Wednesday or not; is that correct?

A. No, sir, I don't recall. I just don't know, because there were, during this period—see, this would have been my first meeting. I had been up for four meetings and one or two of them were changed because they didn't have a quorum and I would get a call from down here at the office telling me that the telegram had come stating they couldn't [fol. 1517] have the meeting the next morning because they had cancellations.

Q. How long did you remain in New York?

A. According to my schedule, I remained there until Friday morning, March 1st. But, Mr. Bennett can help me refresh my memory on this, because instead of going to Chicago, we decided that we should have a meeting in Washington, and we met in Washington on March 1st; isn't that true?

Mr. Runzer: Off the record.

(Off the record discussion.)

Q. All right. You may answer.

A. I recall, to the best of my memory, that I came down to Washington on Friday, March 1st, and had a series of meetings in Washington.

Q. Now, these meetings were unconneeted with the Bryant-Butts affair?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And during the course of this week, had you done anything on the Bryant-Butts affair?

A. Nothing except just to think about it, and kind of organize what I had in my mind. I am pretty sure that during that week I tried to reach Dr. Aderhold and was unable to reach him.

Q. By telephone?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, the meetings on Friday, the first was Washington?

A. Well, there weren't any meetings. These were visitations to try to get some grant contracts for the University.

Q. Perhaps I should change it. This Friday, these appointments you had in Washington—

A. I wouldn't say they were appointments. We did see [fol. 1518] people, we got appointments, but none were set.

Q. When you refer to we, you are talking about yourself and Mr. Bennett?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the course of that day, did you discuss the Butts-Bryant affair with Mr. Bennett?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. This was the first time you discussed it with him?

A. Yes, sir, I believe it was.

Q. What did you say to him?

A. I told him of my visit with Dr. Aderhold and Mr. Cook Barwick in the office of Commissioner Moore. I told him of my three hour session with Coach Bryant. We discussed the whole thing. He asked questions, and we looked at questions and discussed how best to proceed and decided that we both would think about it further and decide where we were going to go from there.

Q. Did Mr. Bennett contribute any information to the investigation that you did not know up until that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Would it be fair to say that your meeting with Mr. Bennett was more in the line of consulting with another person's opinion that you respected to decide what should be done?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In other words, it was you that gave information to Mr. Bennett; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he was giving you his advice or opinion on how it should be handled?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you return to Tuscaloosa that day, Friday?

A. Again, I am not certain. I think that we returned on Friday evening or on Saturday, but I just don't know.

[fol. 1519] Mr. McCall: Mr. Runzer, it is now 11 o'clock. Could we have a five minute recess?

Mr. Runzer: Certainly.

(Short intermission.)

Mr. Runzer: Would you read the last question and answer, please?

(Question and answer read.)

Q. Regardless of whether you returned Friday night or Saturday morning, up to this point, you have discussed the matters with Mr. Bryant, Mr. Bennett and possibly with Mr. Callahan. Had you discussed this with anybody else up to the point you returned to Tuscaloosa?

A. I am not sure somewhere in this time period or sometime between then and my time of answering Dr. Aderhold's letter, I discussed it with some members of the Athletic Committee.

Q. Was it discussed in person?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They were not on any of these trips with you?

A. No, sir.

Q. So, then, it could not have been before you came back to Tuscaloosa?

A. I am not sure, sir. It could have been before I left Tuscaloosa or it could have been the following time that I returned to Tuscaloosa. But, sometime in there before writing Dr. Aderhold, I discussed this with members of The Athletic Committee.

Q. This trip to New York, were you alone?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I mean, were you alone?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1520] Q. I mean, other than the other people on the plane?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had no one to accompany you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, when you got back, which was either Friday evening or Saturday, which would be March 2nd—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stated that somewhere in here you believe you discussed it with members of your Athletic Board?

A. Yes, sir. Sometime either before leaving or before writing Dr. Aderhold, I just don't know when that was.

Q. Well, now, who did you discuss it with specifically?

A. I discussed it with Mr. Jeff Coleman who had been business manager of Athletics. I believe that was his correct title.

Q. All right.

A. Also Assistant and had been Assistant Athletic Director, I believe, who is now the—Secretary to the Athletic Committee. I discussed some time in that period with Mr. Ernest Williams, a member of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees, I believe. I am not sure about this, that also during this time I discussed it with Dr. Sharpton, who is Chairman of the Athletic Committee, though I am not sure.

Q. Were all of these personal discussions, that is, face to face?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Going back to Mr. Coleman for a moment—

A. Now, I am not sure that Mr. Williams—I am not sure I discussed it person to person with him, or over the telephone.

Q. You sure Dr. Sharpton and Mr. Coleman was a face to face discussion?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You certain you talked to these people before you [fol. 1521] wrote the letter to Dr. Aderhold?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That would pin it down to February 24th and March 6th, between that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you give me the discussion you had with Mr. Coleman?

A. I don't recall, frankly, what I said to him. I think my discussion was along the lines of reporting to him what Dr. Aderhold reported to me, and what Coach Bryant had reported to me, and to get their thinking about it to see just what they thought and whether—from Mr. Coleman, whether Coaches talk to other Coaches about tickets.

Q. What did he say?

A. He said he had been in charge of tickets at the University and it wasn't anything unusual for coaches to talk many times previous to any game about tickets, particularly when it wasn't a sell-out. He said that he knew that Wally Butts was an authority on football rules and football interpretations and Coaches did discuss these things.

Q. Are you speaking about rule changes when you say these things?

A. Rule changes, yes, sir. And, I don't recall whether it was then or later I asked him because of his close personal relationship to Commissioner Moore to go and talk to him about it and to get his interpretation and information that he had. But, sometime during my investigation, either before writing Dr. Aderhold, or after, I asked Mr. Coleman to do this, and he did.

Q. Did he report back to you before you wrote Dr. Aderhold?

A. I don't recall.

Q. What did he report back to you in any event?

A. He reported back to me the fact that Mr. Moore had, previous to our meeting with Dr. Aderhold and Mr. Bar- [fol. 1522] wick in his office on Sunday, February 24th, had been in a meeting in Atlanta or somewhere in Georgia, may have been Athens, with Dr. Aderhold and Mr. Barwick, and I believe a man by the name of Hardiman, who is an Alumnus of the University, but I am not positive about that. And I am not positive about this, but that also Commissioner Moore had talked with Mr. Burnett and that Commissioner Moore was continuing his investigation and had not reached any definite conclusions at that time, but would share, from time to time, information that he might get.

Q. Now, your conversation with Dr. Sharpton, what did that consist of?

A. My conversation with Dr. Sharpton was pretty much along the lines of reporting to him what had happened.

Q. Does that also hold true for Mr. Williams?

A. Yes. Mr. Williams also, and to ask him whether he thought that I should call an executive committee meeting or meeting of the Board of Trustees to discuss it with them.

Q. Now, with the exception of Mr. Coleman—strike that.

Did Dr. Sharpton or Mr. Williams give you any information which you did not already have?

— A. Mr. Williams was Treasurer of the University for ten years, and, of course, was responsible for paying all of the bills and the operation of the Athletic Department. He knew that coaches called one another often before ball games to discuss tickets and different arrangements, and that it wasn't anything unusual to him that Coach Bryant and Coach Butts would have talked.

Q. Would it then be fair to say that Mr. Williams and also Mr. Coleman corroborated the fact that Coaches do discuss matters like tickets before a football game?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1523] Q. But, did not give you any independent information that you did not already have?

A. Not on this specific thing.

Q. Did they give you any other specific independent information?

A. Nothing that I didn't already know or had learned and that is that the coaches from schools on our schedule or outside of our schedule talk to one another often.

Q. Now, when was the next time you saw or talked or heard from Mr. Bryant after your February 24th meeting?

A. When I returned to my office, I believe that was the time. I am not sure, but sometime during the period of my meeting—sometime during the period of my talking with Coach Bryant on that Sunday evening of February 24th, and my writing Dr. Aderhold, Coach Bryant furnished me with a letter in which he listed the calls that he had made to Athens.

Q. Now, did he give you that letter on the Monday after the meeting which would be the 24th—the 25th?

A. I don't know, sir.

Q. Well, was the letter predated or postdated in any way?

A. No, sir. The letter apparently, I guess, I don't recall, was dated the day he wrote it. But whether he wrote it—had it written early that morning and sent it right on over by one of the members of his staff, I don't know.

Q. What I mean to say is, the letter, for example, was dated the 27th of February. You did not receive it then on the 25th?

A. No, sir, why would I?

Q. I am trying to find out when you did receive it, Doctor, and you say you have no independent recollection; is that correct?

A. No, sir. I don't know exactly when I received it, but [fol. 1524] I received it sometime from the time I talked to him on Sunday night and before I wrote Dr. Aderhold, because it was—it was in a letter to Dr. Aderhold that I stated to him that Coach Bryant did call Coach Butts and I shouldn't have done that, because I am not sure that he did.

Q. Well,—

A. But, the phone calls from the office showed that there was a call to Athens.

Q. You got a letter, you say, sometime in the period between February 24th and March 6th, from Mr. Bryant?

A. Before I wrote the letter to Dr. Aderhold.

Q. Sometime in that period you got a letter?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Am I correct in my understanding your recollection was that you believe it was here when you got back from this trip; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Runzer: Would you mark that Defendant's Exhibit 1, please, sir.

(Whereupon, said document was received and marked "Defendant's Exhibit 1 to the Deposition of Dr. Frank A. Rose" and a photostatic copy is submitted in lieu of the original and is attached to the deposition.)

Mr. Runzer: Do you want to see it?

Mr. Pritchard: Yes, sir, if you offer it. You go right ahead.

[fol. 1525] Mr. Runzer: I would like to have the letter back.

Mr. Pritchard: Oh, I beg your pardon.

Q. Doctor, I show you a letter which is marked as Defendant's Exhibit I on stationery, I believe, of the Athletic Department of the University of Alabama under date of February 28, 1962, and ask you if that is the letter of Mr. Bryant to which you just referred? Excuse me, Doctor, but we are getting on to 1 o'clock.

Mr. Pritchard: We decided to cancel out 1 o'clock and go right on through.

Mr. Runzer: Please don't interrupt.

Mr. Pritchard: We decided to go on.

Q. Is that correct, doctor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Let's get one thing at a time. We are cancelling the 1 o'clock deadline?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Pritchard: We want to get through right now.

The Witness: I would like to get through.

Mr. Runzer: I can't blame you, Doctor. I want to make sure.

[fol. 1526] Q. Let me ask you a different question, Doctor. Let me put the letter aside.

A. I think that's the letter I received. I don't think I received another one. However, it is a longer letter than I thought.

Q. Let's ask the question this way.

Is it your opinion that when you returned from this trip which was to New York and Washington, there was a letter from Coach Bryant?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I assume you read that letter?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And also during this time it is your best recollection after you discussed the matter with Mr. Coleman, Dr. Sharpton and Mr. Williams?

A. I am pretty sure. I am not certain, but I think it was during this time that I did.

Q. All right.

Now, did you have any discussion over this week-end with Mr. Bryant?

A. I am not sure.

Q. Well, now, in your previous testimony in Atlanta, you said that you talked with Mr. Bryant twice after your initial meeting. Could you tell me when those conversations took place?

A. No, sir, I don't know when it was.

Q. Do you now recall whether you talked to him twice more or not?

A. Yes, sir. I talked to Coach Bryant twice after my Sunday evening talk, but when it was, I don't know exactly.

Q. Were these face to face meetings?

A. One was face to face, and the other one, I believe, was on the telephone. Both of them may have been face to face.

[fol. 1527] Q. Now, what was the conversation in the first subsequent conversation with Mr. Bryant?

A. I don't recall exactly. I do know that I wanted to know more about the telephone calls. I wanted to know about Coach Butts' call to him, and whether he had made a call himself to Coach Butts. And I believe it was at that time, I am not certain, that he informed me that he had discovered, since our initial talk, that he couldn't have received a telephone call in which Coach Butts called him from Athletic Field, because they didn't have practice that day and that he doubted seriously that he had called Coach Butts back, though there was a telephone charge to that.

Q. Now, when is the next time you talked to him?

A. I just don't recall.

Q. What was said?

A. I am sure it had to do further with his thinking about the telephone conversation and what they discussed.

Q. Was he any more definite as to whether the calls were or were not made?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was he any more definite as to what was or was not said?

A. No, sir, but he was—he became more and more of the opinion that it had to do with the interpretation of these rule changes, because this had been one of his real great concerns, but he wasn't positive.

Q. In other words, he still wasn't sure what was discussed?

A. No, sir.

Q. But, his opinion was now that he probably talked about rules and changes in rules?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he rule out the fact that he might have talked about the ticket sale?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 1528] Q. He did not rule that out?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did not rule out the possibility of talking about Continental Enterprises?

A. No, sir.

Q. These were the only three discussions you had with Mr. Bryant between 2-24-63 and the writing of the letter to Dr. Aderhold?

A. I am not sure whether those additional two came before the writing of the letter. They may have come even after that, I am just not sure because, you see, I was looking into this problem over a period of several weeks, and I just don't recall exactly, but, I—

Q. Doctor, I just wanted to try to jog your memory. I realize this happened sometime ago, and been a lot of things that have happened; but, on page 1414 of the record in the trial in Atlanta, you were asked this question. "Did you, after that particular meeting in your office on Sunday, February 24th, talk to Coach Bryant again on several occasions?" And your answer is recorded here as, "Yes, sir. I talked to him twice after that before I wrote to Dr. Aderhold." Now, I want you again to try to think. Did you talk to Coach Bryant three times in all between the meeting of the 24th with Mr. Moore, Mr. Barwick and Dr. Aderhold and the letter that you wrote to Dr. Aderhold on March 6th?

A. Let me look at my calendar. You see, the problem that I have, sir, is we were going to—we were under a Federal Court Injunction to integrate the University of Alabama and we had applications and this is a rather serious problem too. And during this same period we had two applications for March 23rd enrollment of two Negro students in Huntsville, Alabama, and we had applications for enrollment here in the summer for the summer term on the main campus and it was during the same period [fol. 1529] that we are talking about now, about this investigation, that I was going through all the problems, meeting with the Governor, meeting with Board members, meetings with various people on the whole problem as related to the University Student Faculty, and this is why I find it difficult to pin myself down to dates, because it is just almost impossible to carry those two burdens and remember specific times and specific dates. I would say now, looking at my calendar, that I—that it was during the period of February 24th to March 6th, that I talked to Coach Bryant on those two other occasions, but I can not certain. But, I think it was, because I was away from the office an awful lot immediately following that.

Q. Now, during those subsequent conversations, did Mr. Bryant tell you that he had found there had been a call charged to him to Coach Butts in Athens?

A. I believe he said that there had been a call charged to the Department, but that he did not recall talking to him specifically himself on that particular time.

Q. Did he state to you at that time whether he knew what was discussed in that subsequent call on September 16th?

A. No, sir, except he went over what you and I have gone over that they could have talked about, these rule interpretations, the Butt blocking and Head blocking, and so forth and so on.

Q. In other words, what he said was there is a call, I don't know whether I made it or not, I don't know what I talked about, if I did make it, but what I might have talked about was rule interpretations, ticket sales and Continental Enterprises?

A. Yes, sir. That's pretty much it.

Q. Now, did he later—strike that.

And was that the state of your information at the time you decided to write Dr. Aderhold?

[fol. 1530] A. Yes, sir.

Q. In other words, up to the time you wrote Dr. Aderhold, Coach Bryant had never informed you that he had made a call on September 16th; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And he never told you what he talked about on those dates, because he didn't remember what he talked about; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. On the basis of this information, and the telephone record, you proceeded to try to write the letter to Dr. Aderhold?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you stated previously in your testimony in Atlanta that the letter was dictated in a hurry on the morning of March 6th as you had to catch an 8:40 plane to Washington; is that correct?

A. That's what I stated, but I didn't have my date book there with me previous to leaving here.

Q. Excuse me.

Will you answer the question first?

Mr. Pritchard: I suggest that he is entitled to answer the question in his own way.

A. I am going to answer the question.

Mr. Runzer: Would you read the question. I don't think you understood the question. You can make whatever explanation you want to.

Mr. Pritchard: Don't cut him off or try to.

[fol. 1531] Mr. Runzer: Just a moment. Would you read the question back, Mr. Zegarelli?

(Question read.)

A. Yes, sir, that is what I stated.

Q. Is that a correct statement?

A. Well, on checking my calendar before leaving here to go to Atlanta, I looked at March 6th and saw Washington there on my calendar, and took it that that was the destination. The plane leaves here in the morning at 8:40 to go to Washington and New York and other places. But I am not positive that this was where I went; I am not positive that I dictated the letter that morning. Now, also, in my testimony I said on Monday, Monday is the 4th. But, I didn't have my date book with me at the trial to check out the dates, and as I told you, I was going through two crises at that time so far as the University was concerned, and all I did was quickly refer to my calendar and saw that Washington was on March 6th; but, that meeting probably had been changed to our Friday meeting in Washington, which I met with Mr. Bennett, or it could have been that I went to Washington. I don't know, but during that period, during the period of January—of February, March, April, May, June, I took many trips to Washington, and over the State of which there are no records. Nothing on my calendar to designate that, because many of them were confidential trips to try to work out some of these problems that we have here at the University.

Q. Doctor, is it fair to say that you cannot state, under oath, that you went to Washington on the morning of March 6th?

A. I am saying that I am not sure.

Q. And that when you said under oath in Atlanta that you did that, that it may be incorrect?

[fol. 1532] A. It could be incorrect because I didn't have my date book. But, to me it is immaterial. I dictated the letter to my secretary hurriedly. I told her to check with Coach Bryant. I left this office to go somewhere, and during the interval, she typed the letter and tried to get in touch with Coach Bryant. He was out of town. She went ahead and mailed the letter. I didn't sign it, I didn't read it before it went out, and I left this office and I don't know exactly where I went. My calendar said March 6th I went to Washington.

Q. Let's go back for a moment.

When did you dictate the letter?

A. I am not sure when I dictated the letter.

Q. Now—

A. I thought looking on my calendar in August that I dictated the letter on Monday morning, March 6th; but, March 6th was Wednesday morning, and all I did was look at March 6th in August before I went over to Atlanta. I saw Washington there, and I thought that was the morning that I dictated the letter and went to Washington. On checking my secretary's notes, she had there that I dictated the letter on Tuesday morning. She states that she could be in error, that it could have been Monday morning. But, apparently now it looks as though I dictated the letter on Tuesday morning and left to go somewhere.

Q. And Tuesday would be March 5th?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. March 5th, 1963?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you still saying it was dictated on a morning?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are certain of that?

A. Yes, sir, I am positive.

Q. You certain it was dictated hurriedly because you had to leave?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1533] Q. Are you saying you had to leave to catch this 8:40 plane?

A. I am not sure, but that's the time that the plane leaves, if I was going to Washington. I am not sure I went to Washington.

Q. Let's go back a moment. Where did you dictate the letter?

A. Here in this office.

Q. You were in that chair? (Indicating)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was the secretary in here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That's a Mrs. Park?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does she take hand transcription?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did not dictate to a machine?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, tell me something about the letter, Doctor? Was it a difficult letter to write?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. Would I be correct then in assuming, like most of us, you just didn't sit down and dictate a difficult letter in a hurry or right off the top of your head?

A. I had one a great deal of thinking about this and tried to organize it as a layman and from the interpretation and the conversation I had with Coach Bryant, to send a letter to another layman, a University President, to try to answer some of the questions that he had raised in the meeting that I had.

Q. Well, did you dictate it all in one uninterrupted sentence?

A. Not in one uninterrupted sentence.

Q. I said uninterrupted sitting?

A. I dictated the letter uninterrupted.

[fol. 1534] Q. In other words, it wasn't a holding dictation, you didn't stop to think about it?

A. I did the best I could in writing it, yes, sir. I just didn't go right down the line on it, I did the best I could.

Q. I am trying to find out if you did your thinking before you dictated it?

A. I did some of it to try to get it into points to interpret for Dr. Aderhold some of the questions that he had raised.

Q. Did you have, when you were doing the thinking or dictating, the notes that you had taken in the meeting with Mr. Moore, or the meeting with Mr. Bryant?

A. No, sir.

Q. You had destroyed those?

A. I don't know what I did with the notes. Apparently I had placed them in my holder here, and I just don't know. I looked for them everywhere.

Q. You did not have them at the time you dictated the letter?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or at the time you were preparing to dictate the letter?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, let me ask you again. Did you have to stop in the middle of your dictation to consider what you were going to say next?

A. I guess as you would on any letter that you are writing. You just—I am not one of these rapid fire people who dictate fast.

Q. In other words, you didn't have a prepared script with you, in effect, to read to your secretary?

A. No, sir.

Q. You were composing this as you went along?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Although you had done some organizing before hand?

[fol. 1535] A. In my own mind; yes, sir.

Q. Any written summary or outline?

A. No, sir.

Q. How long would you say it took you to dictate the letter?

A. Oh, ten or fifteen minutes.

Q. Is that an unusually long period for one letter for you?

A. Important letters, no. It is about right. I wasn't attempting to write any legal document or any letter to be used in a court trial or anything like that.

Q. It was an important matter, an important letter, wasn't it?

A. It was an important letter to try to answer some of the questions in my layman's language of what Dr. Aderhold had raised.

Q. And the question that Dr. Aderhold raised was whether or not Mr. Bryant had received information from Mr. Butts which could affect the outcome of the Georgia-Alabama Football Game?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the question you were trying to answer?

A. Yes, sir.

And I think in my letter it is quite evident, taking the letter in total, that I answered that question that at that time I was convinced that he had not received any information that affected the outcome of the game.

Q. Now, is it your testimony today that after the dictation you had to leave the office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did you remain in the office after you dictated the letter?

A. I just don't know.

Q. Was it dictated during normal business hours?

A. Early in the morning.

[fol. 1536] Q. During normal hours?

A. She usually comes, on days that I have to dictate, a few minutes early and particularly if I have got to leave. But, normally we start dictating at 8 o'clock, and this is before other people get into the office, and dictate until around 9:30 or 10 o'clock.

Q. What office hours—what are Mrs. Park's normal hours?

A. From 8 o'clock or 8:15, I forgotten exactly which, to 4:45 with an hour and a half for lunch.

Q. Did she come in early this particular day?

A. It was my recollection that she did, because of things that were piled upon the desk and other correspondence and things like that.

Q. Now, you, of course, had a chance on numerous occasions since this letter was dictated to examine the letter?

A. I don't know about numerous occasions, I think I read it four or five times.

Q. Is the letter transcribed as you dictated it regardless of whether your dictation is correct?

A. To the best of my thought, it is pretty much what I dictated to Mrs. Park.

Q. In other words, any errors in the letter were not errors of Mrs. Park?

A. Well, I haven't examined it for errors. I do think that it is unfortunate that I, as a layman, used the word plays instead of the techniques and that I didn't use more care in preparing it. But, it was, as I say, just a letter from one University President to another about a field that neither one of us are very familiar with.

Q. My question is, Doctor, if there are any errors in the letter, they are errors of the Secretary?

A. No, sir.

Q. Are there some secretarial errors?

A. I don't know.

[fol. 1537] Q. Would you examine the letter and show me any places where it was transcribed differently than you dictated?

A. I don't think I have to read it for you. I think I could say, as to the best of my memory, this is what I dictated to Mrs. Park. I can't swear that it is exactly what I dictated to her, but I think this is pretty much my dictation and at that time, my best interpretation.

Q. This refers to your letter dated March 6th, addressed to Dr. Aderhold, President of the University of Georgia?

A. That's correct.

Q. So that to the best of your recollection, any errors in the information which is recorded here were errors that were made by you or because something that happened to you and not Mrs. Park?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was the letter typed while you were in the office?

A. No, sir, I don't think so, because I think I left immediately after finishing dictation.

Q. Did you—had you ever discussed, before this letter was written, this matter with Mrs. Park?

A. Sir, I didn't get your question.

Q. Had you ever discussed the Butts-Bryant matter with Mrs. Park before this letter was dictated?

A. No, sir.

Q. By discussing, I mean dictated anything to her that would let her know what this is about?

A. No, sir, not that I recall.

It may be that she—I am pretty sure that she saw Coach Bryant's letter.

Q. Now, did you tell her that this was an important letter when you dictated it?

A. No, sir, I don't believe I did.

Q. Then, as far as she was concerned—

A. But, I did tell her that I wanted her to be sure to [fol. 1538] call Coach Bryant and ask him if this was a good interpretation of our discussion in answer to the questions of Dr. Aderhold.

Q. Had you attempted to check your thinking with Mr. Bryant before you dictated the letter?

A. No, sir.

Q. Except for the three conversations you had with him, you hadn't contacted him?

A. No, sir.

Q. No, sir; I am right, is that what you are saying?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you don't recall now where you were going when you left the office the day that this was dictated?

A. I thought, sir, I was going to Washington when I testified over in Atlanta, because, as I said, I just checked my calendar early before I left. You may recall I was called back from Mexico to testify.

Q. For the record, Doctor, I was further away from Atlanta than you were at any time during the proceeding, and I know nothing except what I read in the Record.

Would you read the last question back?

(Question read.)

A. No, sir, I don't. I thought when I testified that I was going to Washington, but I am not sure.

Q. Now, we do not know now when we said it was dictated on Monday, March 6th, that was an error; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir. Now, I know it was.

Q. Because Monday was the 4th?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does your calendar show any engagement for the 4th of March?

A. No, sir.

Q. Show any engagement for the 5th of March?

[fol. 1539] A. Yes, sir.

Q. What engagements do you have there?

A. I can't tell whether I met them or not, because as I said, during this period I had many engagements with particular individuals that I made. I met with Dean Bidgood.

Q. Would that have taken place in his office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have a time down for Dean Bidgood?

A. I have a time of 11 o'clock, but I don't think I met with Dean Bidgood that morning. I had a Staff Meeting at 2 o'clock and 4 o'clock, but I don't think I had those meetings that day.

Q. Am I correct that it is now your best recollection that the letter was dictated on Tuesday, March 6th?

A. I don't have any recollection about it at all. I don't know when it was dictated. Now, my secretary's notes show that it was dictated Tuesday, March 5th, in the morning. She said, and Mr. Bennett says that I left here on Tuesday morning. No one knows where I was going. I have no record of it. This is not unusual, because during this period I made many confidential trips. Sometimes I would tell Mr. Bennett and sometimes I wouldn't tell him.

Q. Is it true your expense records show no trips for March 4, 5, and 6?

A. There is no expense record for any of these confidential trips.

Q. I understand that, but I am asking, do your records show any trips, not whether you made any trips, but do your expense records show any trips for March 4, 5, and 6?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Have you had an opportunity to review them?

A. I believe I have asked my secretary to review them.

Q. All right.

A. And I believe I asked the comptroller to.

[fol. 1540] Q. Now, you don't recall now where you were going when you left on the day you dictated this letter?

A. No, sir, but I don't think that's important. I think the important thing is, I say it over again, I dictated that letter hurriedly. I told my secretary to call Coach Bryant and check on it and get it out to Dr. Aderhold as soon as possible.

Q. But, you don't recall where you were going when you left?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you stated in Atlanta you were going to Washington to a meeting of the American Council on Education?

A. Yes, sir. I had just returned the night before or morning before I left here from Mexico City, and then took the University plane, I think, to Atlanta to get there to testify by 11 o'clock in the morning and I believe I was up all night trying to get back from Mexico. I am not sure, but I think it was; I got a phone call to be there at 11 o'clock, I remember that.

Q. Did you have to go to a meeting on March 6th, in Washington, for the American Council on Education?

A. I was supposed to go to Washington for a meeting on March 6th. I don't know whether it was for this special committee on the Accreditation of Service Experiences or not.

But, at that time, that would have been pretty much the meeting; but looking back on my calendar, I find that I did go there on Tuesday, February 26th, for the meeting. So, apparently I had that meeting confused with the meeting I had in Washington the week before.

Q. Is the American Council on Education and this Accreditation thing the same thing?

A. The Commission on Accreditation for Service Experi-[fol. 1541] ences is a Commission of the American Council on Education.

Q. And where would the meeting take place?

A. It would be held in Washington.

Q. Where in Washington?

A. At the American Council building.

Q. Which is located where?

A. I don't know. It is on Massachusetts Avenue, I think. I can get it for you.

Q. Is it a building with a name, or do they rent offices in a large building?

A. No, sir. They have their own building.

Q. Presumably then it would be listed in the street directory in Washington?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, do you know how long you were away when you left on this trip?

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. And you don't know what you did?

A. No, sir.

Q. And do you know who you talked to?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know what you talked about?

A. No, sir.

Q. Has Mr. Bryant ever informed you that he called Mr. Butts on September 16th?

A. No, sir.

Q. You stated in Atlanta that this was a surmise because the record showed such a call; is that still your understanding?

A. Yes, sir, and I believe Coach Bryant. I believe that in talking with Coach Bryant, not long ago, that he told me he is till not sure he was the one that called.

Q. Now, when were you advised that the letter to Dr. [fol. 1542] Aderhold had been made public, or at least gotten available to the public?

A. I got a telephone call and I don't know when, but it was when the attorney general of Georgia was making his so-called investigation, a news analyst on one of the radio or television stations called me and told me he had seen the letter, and would I care to comment on it. I told him no, that I didn't have anything to say, that I was surprised that Dr. Aderhold would take a confidential letter from me and make it public and to try it in the public when it wasn't written as a legal record and wasn't written to be used for a legal purpose. It was my best interpretation, as a layman, of my discussion with Coach Bryant.

Q. Did you later discuss with Dr. Aderhold, that the letter had been subpoenaed from him?

A. I called him.

Q. Did he tell you that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, subsequently on March 23rd, 1963, the Birmingham Post carried a statement concerning that letter reportedly to be written by you; is that correct?

A. Is that statement about techniques?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in all fairness to you, Dr. Rose, I think we should make sure we are talking about the same thing.

I am referring to a statement as follows: "The substance of any letter to Dr. Aderhold is accurate and correct. This letter was my personal and first response to the first conference held between President Aderhold, Commissioner Bernie Moore and me.

It was an attempt on my part to relay in laymen's language the substance of the telephone conversations between Coach Bryant and Butts after a preliminary examination of the facts by me. It was understood by all parties that I [fol. 1543] was to continue, and I have done so, a complete, thorough and exhaustive investigation of the extremely serious charges directed against Coach Bryant and Coach Butts.

Since the latter was a purely preliminary, personal communication between Dr. Aderhold and me, I did not take the time to verify in explicit detail either the exact sequence of events or the interpretation of my layman's language as it relates to the technical phrases used by coaches and athletic directors in modern day football. The substance of my letter is accurate.

Coach Butts and Coach Bryant were discussing the impact of rules changes on the defensive and offensive techniques employed in the Southeastern Conference, particularly as they relate to the Alabama Squad in its forthcoming season, including its opener with the University of Georgia.

In my letter, I say they discussed offensive and defensive plays. The appropriate phrase should have been, and still remains, techniques.

Now, there was more to the statement than that, but is that the statement?

A. Yes, sir, and I wrote it right here by longhand on this desk.

Q. Did you consult with anybody on that?

A. Mr. Jeff Bennett.

Q. Did he assist you in the drafting of that?

A. Made two or three corrections.

Q. Obviously then, you must have learned of the publication of your letter to Dr. Aderhold prior to March 23, 1963?

A. I just don't know, sir.

Q. Well, your statement appeared in the Birmingham Post on March 23rd, 1963; is that right?

A. I am not even sure about that.

Q. It did appear on March 23, 1963?

[fol. 1544] A. Then, if it did appear, then, apparently, I wrote that statement on the 22nd, I believe; I am not sure.

Q. Certainly you would have written the statement before it appeared in the Birmingham Post?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And certainly would seem rational that you knew the Aderhold letter had been published before you wrote that statement; would that be correct?

A. I don't know whether the letter had been published, but Dr. Aderhold, I called and he informed me that afternoon that it had been.

Q. Let me rephrase it then. The statement was written after you learned that Dr. Aderhold's letter had been subpoenaed and was now apparently in the hands of the television people?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, in the interval between learning this and the writing of this statement, did you consult with Coach Bryant?

Mr. McCall: We want to interpose an objection to any question about that newspaper report which occurred after the article printed in the Saturday Evening Post of March 23rd after the article had gone to Press, which under the undisputed evidence in the case, shows that it went to Press on or about March 3rd, 1963?

A. May I, off the record, ask one question?

Mr. Runzer: Off the record.

(Off the record discussion.)

Q. Mr. McCall made an objection, which I believe was on the record. I hope so, anyway.

In the interval between learning of the publishing of the [fol. 1545] Aderhold letter or being informed by the Doctor that the letter had been subpoenaed and the dating of the statement that appeared in March 23rd Birmingham Post, March 23, 1963, did you consult with Coach Bryant?

A. I am pretty sure I did. I am not certain of it. I am pretty sure sometime in here I had—yes, sir; I think I did.

Q. Did you discuss your letter with Dr. Aderhold?

A. With Coach Bryant?

Q. Your letter to Dr. Aderhold with Coach Bryant?

A. Yes, sir, but he said he hadn't seen the letter that I sent to him.

Q. Now, the statement we just read points out, as I think you said a mistake in the letter in the use of the word plays when it should have been techniques; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the one who told you that was a mistake?

A. I believe that was at the time I called Coach Bryant and read the letter to him; I am not sure. He said that just isn't right. This isn't what I told you. He said we never talked about plays. He said we talked about techniques and we talked about things that would have been illegal in rule interpretation. I believe that that was the day that I read the letter to him.

Q. So, it was Coach Bryant that pointed out to you that there was a mistake in the letter?

A. I am not sure, but I think it was Coach Bryant.

Q. And there may be others?

A. Could have been. I just don't know. I still continue to say plays and I don't know that much difference about it.

Q. But, whether Mr. Bryant was the first or not, you did say he pointed out to you the letter was wrong?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was your subsequent statement which appeared in the Birmingham Post, March 23, 1963, drafted in reliance [fol. 1546] on the information that Mr. Bryant had given you in this recent conversation with him?

A. Partly.

Q. What other basis?

A. On my reading the letter and the information that I had gotten between that time of writing it and what I had and as I said, in consultation with Mr. Bennett.

Q. Now, in discussing this letter with Mr. Bryant, he pointed out to you there was an error in it. Did he still say he was not sure whether they talked about the rule changes?

A. He said to me, Dr. Rose, you really did not understand. I am a damn poor coach to not to be able to keep my President better informed on football than you are. That's a very poor interpretation of our conversation.

Q. Well, was he still saying that he did not recall what was talked about in the conversation with Mr. Butts?

A. He said that. He said to me that he didn't know what he talked to him about. This is what he told me that afternoon. He said, I told you it could have been and tried to explain, but he said I am a poor coach—

Q. In other words, he was still telling you he did not know specifically what was talked about and that rule changes was one of the things that could have been talked about?

A. Yes, sir, and about which he was really concerned, and that Coach Butts had the knowledge and explanation.

Q. And did he also again repeat he might have talked about the ticket sales and Continental Enterprises or other investments?

A. No, sir.

Q. In other words, he just said we could have talked about rules changes?

A. He didn't—we didn't even discuss that. He was so [fol. 1547] upset over the poor job I had done answering the letter, we just didn't talk about it.

Q. What exactly did he say then? Maybe I misunderstood you?

A. He said that the letter was all wrong, that I misinterpreted what he said to me, and tried to explain that he could understand how I got some of this misinformation, but it was a very poor interpretation of his conversation with me.

Q. When did you learn the date of—when did you learn that a call had been made from Tuscaloosa to Athens on the 16th, not who made it, but that a call had been made?

A. I still don't know who made, and I don't know exactly where I learned about the call.

Q. Who told you, Mr. Callahan or Mr. Bryant?

A. I am not sure. Mr. Callahan gave me some information; Coach Bryant gave me some information; I just don't know.

Q. Did Coach Bryant ever tell you which rule interpretation he was concerned about?

A. He tried his best to explain it to me, and even tried to show me. But, I mean, I just couldn't understand it all. I know what blocking is, and I know what tackling is, but I don't know what butt blocking is and I don't know what head blocking is, and I don't know what is legal and what is illegal, and all of the rules they have in scientific football today.

Q. Now, the statement says that Mr. Butts and Mr. Bryant were discussing the new type of rules of offensive and defensive rules?

A. This is my interpretation.

Q. Is that a correct statement? They were discussing the impact of rules on offensive and defensive plays?

A. I don't know. That's what Coach Bryant said they could have been talking about.

[fol. 1548] Q. This is what Coach Bryant said they could have been talking about?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, it would be incorrect to say that they were talking about it?

A. Yes, sir; but you have to understand the problem that we had with the Georgia Tech incident, and with the publicity that followed the Holt-Granning incident in which the Granning boy got his jaw broken. Coach Bryant was humilitated, he was castigated, nastiest things that could possibly be written about a man were written. It was a reflection upon me and my integrity and academician as University President. There was a statement to the effect, in a sports writer's column in Atlanta, that it was nothing more than a football factory, there were nasty letters written to me from prominent citizens in Atlanta who had just read and understood one side of it, and I had told Coach Bryant that I did not want another incident like this to happen again, and that I meant it. That this was a University, a good academic institution, and that this institution could not take that kind of publicity and maintain its academic standards.

Q. Well, in your opinion, were not the charges that were made against Mr. Bryant growing out of the Butts affair more serious than those growing out of the Holt-Granning incident?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Far more serious?

A. Yes, sir, but I think, sir, that the charges that grew out of the conversation between Coach Bryant and Coach Butts was started and deliberately perpetrated by the same man that started the whole fuss over the Darwin Holt-Chuck Granning incident.

Q. Now, you also say in the statement that much of the Bryant-Butts conversation related to explanations of [fol. 1549] changes which Bryant proposed to introduce to his team at the suggestion of Mr. Gardner?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you get that information?

A. This was in our discussion which he explained to me that Mr. Gardner came to the University of Alabama at his request with permission of Commissioner Bernie Moore. His reason for inviting Mr. Gardner was following a conversation he had with Coach Butts in August, and I believe in Buffalo, New York, at a Coaches meeting, a Coaching Clinic, and again at a Clinic in Atlanta; and then following a meeting of football coaches of the Southeastern Conference, and his ability to understand the new interpretations. And that when he told me that this one thing was one of the things they could have been talking about, and knowing his concern about it, this was the reason I used that statement in my letter.

Q. In other words, that information came from Coach Bryant; is that correct?

A. My interpretation of what Coach Bryant had said to me.

Q. Now, when you—you remember when you gave your deposition in the Butts case on May 27, 1963?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were asked about that deposition in Atlanta, and you stated at that time, that is at the time you gave the deposition, you did not know for certain if Bryant had called Butts on September 16th, or what had been talked about?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, is that correct, that at that time you gave your deposition you did not know for sure that Bryant had called Butts or what was talked about?

A. I wasn't certain. I thought at that time that he had called, but I wasn't certain.

[Vol. 1550] Q. Were you certain at the time you gave your testimony in Atlanta in August of this year, or of last year?

A. I thought so, and I am still not certain today.

Q. In other words, you are not certain today that Coach Bryant called Coach Butts on September 16, 1962, or what they talked about?

A. No, sir, because Coach Bryant said he is not certain.

Q. Now, prior to your deposition being taken, did you discuss the matter with anyone, that is, your deposition being taken back in May, 1963?

A. Did I discuss what, sir?

Q. The testimony or the incident with anyone in preparation for that deposition?

A. That morning we took it in your offices, didn't we?

Mr. McCall: Yes, sir.

A. And I came up to ask you—see, I never have given a deposition before and never been in court before. I wanted to know what to expect, and that's all these gentlemen told me, to try to remember, to the best of my knowledge, and that's what I tried to do.

Q. Did you ever discuss your pending testimony with Mr. Bryant?

A. No, except he was up for—to give his deposition that day and we rode up in the car together. But, we didn't discuss any details of it.

Q. Were you in the same room at the time they were going over your testimony with you?

A. I don't believe so. Were we? I just don't know.

Mr. Runzer: Excuse me again, Dr. Rose. They can't [fol. 1551] answer. If you don't know, it is perfectly proper for you to say that.

A. I don't know.

Q. You don't recall?

A. I believe that he was asked to go outside.

Q. Did you testify before the Alabama State Legislature in this investigation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall when that was?

A. No, sir. I might can look it up.

Q. Would you please, sir?

A. Would you have the date when that was?

Q. If you are asking me, the answer is no, I do not.

A. No, sir, I don't have it on my book.

Q. Prior to your deposition being taken in May, 1963, did you have any conference with Mr. McCall?

A. May when?

Q. Your deposition taken May 27, 1963?

A. Yes, sir. May 16th.

Q. Where did that conference take place?

A. I am not sure. I think here, I am not sure though.

Q. Just you and Mr. McCall present?

A. No, sir. Mr. McCall and Coach Bryant.

Q. And what was discussed? Was the letter discussed at that meeting?

A. I don't know, sir.

Q. You don't have any recollection?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you make any notes?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you subsequently get a copy of any one else's notes?

A. No, sir.

Q. Are you certain about that?

A. Well, I am not sure.

[fol. 1552] Q. I might warn you, Doctor, don't answer so hastily, it pays you to think?

A. I just don't—

Q. I will ask you the question again.

Did you receive a copy of anyone else's notes?

A. I just don't know, I may have.

Q. Did you review—

A. I do believe on one or two times after meetings that Mr. McCall sent me copies of letters or wrote me a letter, but I am not sure about that.

Q. Did you read those letters?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you read the same memos or notes that were attached to them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they accurately reflect the discussion that you had had?

A. I don't know, sir, because this was when I was really getting down to the real crisis of the integration problem.

Q. Now, getting back to the letter for a moment, the first sentence says, "I have spent a great deal of time investigating thoroughly the questions that were raised during our meeting in Birmingham and have talked with Coach Bryant at least on two occasions." Is that sentence correct?

A. I think it is.

Q. And that is your best recollection today?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Next sentence is, "As best as I can ascertain, this is the information that I have received."

Was that sentence correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. New paragraph. "Coach Butts has been serving on the football rules committee and at a meeting held last summer of the rules committee the defenses used by Coach [fol. 1553] Bryant, LSU and Tennessee were discussed at length and new rules were drawn up that would severely penalize these three teams unless the defenses were changed, particularly on certain plays."

Is that correct?

A. Now, Coach Bryant informed me later that that was not what he had told me. He said that he told me that there had been changes in rule interpretation and that Commissioner Gardner, Commissioner of the Officials had told the officials to be sure and watch Alabama, Tennessee and LSU and somebody else, because they had been violating these rules.

Q. So, that second paragraph of your letter is incorrect?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Third paragraph.

"Coach Butts had discussed this with Coach Bryant and the two were together at some meeting where Coach Butts told Coach Bryant that the University of Georgia had plays that would severely penalize the Alabama team and not only would cause Lee Roy Jordan, an Alabama player, to be expelled from the game, but could severely injure one of the offensive players on the Georgia team?"

Is that correct?

A. That is not a correct statement.

Q. In what respect is it incorrect?

A. It is incorrect there in that I was trying to reveal to Dr. Aderhold what Coach Butts was trying to explain to Coach Bryant what was wrong with his illegal defenses, were we playing any team, but I was trying to pinpoint, for Dr. Aderhold, about the University of Georgia, and he wasn't talking about the University of Georgia, he was talking about any team that Alabama would play.

Q. Let's take it apart.

[fol. 1554] Did Coach Bryant tell you that Coach Butts had discussed this, referring to rule changes, with Coach Bryant?

A. Coach Bryant said this could have been what they were talking about. They talked about it many times.

Q. One of the things they could have talked about?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did Coach Bryant tell you that the two were together where Coach Butts told Coach Bryant that the University of Georgia had plays that would severely penalize the Alabama team?

A. He told me they were at something which they discussed the illegal defenses that Coach Bryant was using, and then demonstrated to him plays or techniques, I keep saying plays, I mean techniques, offensive techniques that could cause the University of Alabama to be seriously penalized and probably lose the services of a player. Coach Bryant said a player like Lee Roy Jordan.

Q. Are you certain now that Coach Bryant told you that Coach Butts discussed offensive techniques which could cause Alabama to be penalized?

A. He wasn't talking about the University of Georgia's offenses. I used the term in there to relate it to Dr. Aderhold. He was talking about any offensive play in which Coach Bryant would use an illegal defensive play and Coach Bryant told me at that time over the years he and Butts had talked about these things.

Q. Did Coach Bryant say that Coach Butts said there were offensive techniques of any school that could cause Alabama to be penalized or cause a player like Lee Roy Jordan to be expelled?

A. In answer to Coach Bryant's wanting to know what the rule interpretation was.

Q. Oh, he did say that?

A. That was my interpretation, what Coach Bryant said to me.

[fol. 1555] Q. You heard what he said, you were sitting in the room?

A. Yes, sir, but I didn't understand it, I still don't.

Q. What I am trying to find out, did you understand Coach Bryant to say that Mr. Butts told him that there were offensive techniques of any types that could cause Alabama to be penalized or a player like Jordan to be expelled from the game?

A. Under the new rule interpretation.

Q. And that is what Coach Bryant told you that Coach Butts said?

A. That they could have been talking about it if they were discussing it over the telephone, but Coach Butts had said it to him at the meeting where they were talking about this thing.

Q. Fourth paragraph.

"Coach Bryant asked Coach Butts to let him know what the plays were, and on September 14th he called Coach Bryant and told him."

Is that a correct statement?

A. No.

Q. In what respect is it incorrect?
